and sat down where he was,
and thus addressed the Exalted One:

"Are these the five grasping-groups, lord,
to wit:

The grasping body-group,
the grasping feeling-group,
the grasping perception-group,
the grasping activities-group
the grasping consciousness-group?"

"That is so, brother.

Those are the five grasping-groups,
to wit:

The grasping body-group,
the grasping feeling-group,
the grasping perception-group,
the grasping activities-group
the grasping consciousness-group."

■

"It is well, lord,"
said that brother,
welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"But these five grasping-groups, lord, in what are they rooted?"

"These five grasping-groups, brother, have their root in desire."[3]

■

"It is well, lord,"
said that brother,
welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"Now this same grasping, lord, -
is it those five grasping-groups, or is grasping something apart from those five groups?"

"No indeed, brother,
this same grasping
is not those five grasping-groups, nor yet is it something apart from those five groups.

But where there is desire and lust, there also is grasping."

■

"It is well, lord,"
said that brother,
welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"May it be, lord,
that in the five grasping-groups there is a variety of desire and lust?"

"It may be so, brother," replied the Exalted One.

"Herein, brother, one thinks thus:

'May I be of such a body in future time:
may I have such feeling,
such perception,
such activities,
such consciousness in future time.'

In this way, brother,
in the five grasping-groups
there may be a variety of desire and lust."

■

"It is well, lord,"
said that brother,
welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"Pray, lord, how far is there a group-definition[4] of the groups?"

"Every body, brother,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
is called [86] a 'body-group.'

Every feeling, brother,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
is called a 'feeling-group.'

Every perception, brother,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
is called a 'perception-group.'

Any activity, brother,
be it past,
future

or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
is called an 'activity-group.'

Every consciousness, brother,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
is called a 'consciousness-group.'

Thus far, brother,
is there a group-definition of the groups."

■

"It is well, lord,"
said that brother,
welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"What, lord, is the condition,
what is the cause
in the designation of the body-group?[5]

What is the condition,
what is the cause
in the designation of the feeling-group?

What is the condition,
what is the cause
in the designation of the perception-group?

What is the condition,
what is the cause
in the designation of the activities-group?

What is the condition,
what is the cause
in the designation of the consciousness-group?"

"The four great essentials,[6] brother, are the condition,
the four great essentials are the cause
in the designation of the body-group.

Contact is the condition,
contact is the cause
in the designation of the feeling-group.

Contact is the condition,
contact is the cause
in the designation of the perception group.

Contact is the condition,
contact is the cause
in the designation of the activitdes-group.

Mind and body are the condition, mind and body are the cause
in the designation of the consciousness-group."

■

"It is well, lord,"
said that brother,

welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"Pray, lord, what is the individual-group view?"[7]

"Herein, brother, the untaught many-folk, who discern not those that are Ariyans, who are unskilled in the Ariyan Norm,
untrained in the Ariyan Norm,
who discern not the worthy ones,
who are unskilled in the worthy doctrine,
regards body as the Self,
regards the Self as having body, regards the body as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in the body;

regards feeling as the Self,
regards the Self as having feeling, regards feeling as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in feeling;

regards perception as the Self,
regards the Self as having perception, regards perception as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in perception;

regards the activities as the Self,
regards the Self as having activities, regards activities as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in activities;

regards consciousness as the Self,
regards the Self as having consciousness, regards consciousness as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in consciousness.

That, brother, is how the individual-group-view exists."

■

[87] "It is well, lord,"
said that brother,
welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"And how, lord, is there no individual group-view?'

"Herein, brother, the well taught Ariyan disciple, who discerns those that are Ariyans, who is skilled in the Ariyan Norm, trained in the Ariyan Norm,
who discerns the worthy ones,
who is skilled in the worthy doctrine, regards not body as the Self,
regards not the Self as having body, regards not the body as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in the body;

regards not feeling as the Self,
regards not the Self as having feeling, regards not feeling as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in feeling;

regards not perception as the Self,
regards not the Self as having perception, regards not perception as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in perception;

regards not the activities as the Self,
regards not the Self as having activities, regards not activities as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in activities;

regards not consciousness as the Self,
regards not the Self as having consciousness, regards not consciousness as being in the Self,
or the Self as being in consciousness.

That, brother, is how there is no individual group-view."

■

"It is well, lord,"
said that brother,
welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"Pray, lord, what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of body?

Wherein is there escape from body?

What is the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the way of escape from feeling?

What is the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the way of escape from perception?

What is the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the way of escape from the activities?

What is the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the way of escape from consciousness?"

"That ease,
that pleasure
which arises owing to body, - that is the satisfaction in body.

That impermanence,
that suffering,
that instability,
that is in body, -
that is the misery of body.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that putting away of desire and lust
which are in body,
that is the way of escape from body.

That ease,
that pleasure
which arises owing to feeling, - that is the satisfaction in feeling.

That impermanence,
that suffering,
that instability,
that is in feeling, -
that is the misery of feeling.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that putting away of desire and lust
which are in feeling, that is the way of escape from feeling.

That ease,
that pleasure
which arises owing to perception, - that is the satisfaction in perception.

That impermanence,
that suffering,
that instability,
that is in perception, -
that is the misery of perception.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that putting away of desire and lust
which are in perception, that is the way of escape from perception.

That ease,
that pleasure
which arises owing to the activities, - that is the satisfaction in the activities.

That impermanence,
that suffering,
that instability,
that is in the activities, -
that is the misery of the activities.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that putting away of desire and lust
which are in the activities, that is the way of escape from the activities.

That ease,
that pleasure
which arises owing to consciousness, - that is the satisfaction in consciousness.

That impermanence,
that suffering,
that instability,
that is in consciousness, -
that is the misery of consciousness.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that putting away of desire and lust
which are in consciousness, that is the way of escape from consciousness."

■

"It is well, lord,"
said that brother,
welcoming and gladly hearing
the word of the Exalted One,
and put another question:

"How, lord, should one know,
how should one see,
so that in this body,
together with its consciousness,
and likewise in all outward objects,
there be no idea of
'I' or 'mine,'
no leanings to conceit therein?"[8]

"Whatsoever body,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
of every body he knows: -

'This is not mine:
this am not I:
this is not the Self of me.'

Thus with right insight
he beholds things as they really are.

Whatsoever feeling,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
of every body he knows: -

'This is not mine:
this am not I:
this is not the Self of me.'

Thus with right insight
he beholds things as they really are.

Whatsoever perception,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
of every body he knows: -

'This is not mine:
this am not I:
this is not the Self of me.'

Thus with right insight
he beholds things as they really are.

Whatsoever activity,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
of every body he knows: -

'This is not mine:
this am not I:
this is not the Self of me.'

Thus with right insight
he beholds things as they really are.

Whatsoever consciousness,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
of every body he knows: -

'This is not mine:
this am not I:
this is not the Self of me.'

Thus with right insight
he beholds things as they really are.

Thus brother, should one know, thus should one see,
so that in this body,

together with its inner consciousness,
and [88] likewise in all outward objects,
there be no idea of
'I' or 'mine,'
no leanings to conceit therein."

§

At that moment there arose in a certain brother this train of thought:[9]

"So then you say that body is not the Self;
feeling is not the Self,
perception is not the Self,
the activities are not the Self,
and consciousness is not the Self,

Then what self can those acts affect
which are not self-wrought?"

Thereupon the Exalted One, with his thought reading the thoughts of that brother's mind,
said to the brethren:

"It is possible, brethren, that some senseless fellow, sunk in ignorance
and led astray by craving, may think to go beyond the Master's teaching thus:

'So then you say that body is not the Self;
feeling is not the Self,
perception is not the Self,
the activities are not the Self,
and consciousness is not the Self,

Then what self can those acts affect
which are not self-wrought?'

That question, brethren, I have already answered thus and thus in those teachings that I have given you.

Now what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Therefore, brethren, every body whatever,
be it past,
future

or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every body should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every feeling whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every feeling should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every perception whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every activity whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every activity should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every consciousness whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Cf. S. i, 77; S. v, 216, 270. She was Visākhā. Cf. K.S. i, 104 n.

[2] Comy. asks, 'Why was he told to sit down in his place? It was because this bhikkhu was the teacher of five hundred disciples who were present (?). If he stood up and asked a question, while they sat still, it would show respect for the Master, but their sitting would be disrespectful to their own teacher Whereas if they stood up too, it would be disrespectful to their own teacher, but not to the Master. Moreover, their attention would be distracted from what he said, if they kept standing.' Comy. adds that, of course, the bhikkhu knew the answer to these questions. He merely asked for the sake of his disciples, who might thus get an answer ex cathedra.

[3] Chanda.

[4] Khandhādivacana.

[5] Cf. Expos., ii, 399.

[6] Or elements. Cattāro mahābhūtā.

[7] Sakkāya-diṭṭhi (= the first 'fetter'). Rendered above, p. 38, 'bodyhood,' p. 72, 'person.' [A difficult term to translate. Lit., view [as to] group plus 'sa'; and so is either for 'sat,' 'being,' or 'given,' in the sense of datum or postulate, or for 'sayaṃ,' 'sakaṃ,' one's self. So the Comy. on the Dhammasangaṇi, § 1002 (p. 348). In other words. 'sakkāya' means either 'given the group reckoneoed as fivefold (of body and mind),' or 'one's self, so-ayaṃ, this one (being given), the view as to that group.' Kaya may mean

'body' as opposed to mind, 'citta' but in this formula rūpa is used for body. It is best to roserve 'self' for Attā.-(original)Ed.]

[8] Cf. S. ii, 253.

[9] = M. iii, 19 f.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 83

Ānanda Suttaṃ

Ānanda

---

[105] [89]

Thus have I heard:—

Once the venerable Ānanda was staying near Sāvatthī in Jeta Grove,
at Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Ānanda addressed the brethren thus:

"Brethren! Friends!"

"Yes, brother!"
they replied to the venerable Ānanda.

The venerable Ānanda thus spoke:

"Puṇṇa,[1] friends, the venerable son of Mantānī was very helpful to us
when we were novices.

With this instruction he instructed us:

'Owing to a cause[2]
comes the conceit
"I am," friend Ānanda,
and not without a cause.

And how comes the conceit
"I am"
by a cause
and not without a cause?

Owing to body
comes the conceit
"I am"
by a cause
and not without a cause.

Owing to feeling
comes the conceit
"I am"
by a cause
and not without a cause.

Owing to perception
comes the conceit
"I am"

by a cause
and not without a cause.

Owing to the activities
comes the conceit
"I am"
by a cause
and not without a cause.

Owing to consciousness
comes the conceit
"I am"
by a cause
and not without a cause.

■

Suppose, friend Ānanda, that a woman or a man or a young lad
fond of self-adornment, should gaze at the image of his face in a minor that is clean and spotless, or in a bowl of clear water, - he would behold it
owing to a cause
and not otherwise.

Even so, friend Ānanda, through the cause 'body'
comes the conceit 'I am,'
not otherwise.

Through the cause 'feeling'
comes the conceit 'I am,'
not otherwise.

Through the cause 'perception'
comes the conceit 'I am,'
not otherwise.

Through the cause 'the activities'
comes the conceit 'I am,'
not otherwise.

Through the cause 'consciousness'
comes the conceit 'I am,'
not otherwise.

■

What think you, friend Ānanda?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, friend."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, friend."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, friend."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, friend."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, friend."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, friend."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, friend."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, friend."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I

this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, friend."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, friend."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, friend."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, friend."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, friend."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, friend."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, friend."

■

"Therefore, friend Ānanda, every body whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every body should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every feeling whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,

be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every feeling should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every perception whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every activity whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every activity should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every consciousness whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Wherefore, friend Ānanda, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

"Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter."'

§

Punna, friends,
the venerable son of Mantani,
was very helpful to us
when we were novices.

And this was the instruction with which he instructed us.

When I heard the Norm-teaching of the venerable Punna, Mantani's son, I fully understood the Norm."[3]

---

[1] Proclaimed chief preacher of the Norm by the Master Cf. M. i, 146 f.; Brethren pp. 8-9; A. i, 23; S. ii, 156.

[2] Comy., Upādāya = 'āgamma, ārabbha, sandhāya, paṭicca.'

[3] 'So as to become a Stream-winner.' C.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 84

Tissa Suttaṃ

Tissa[1]

p.p. explains it all — p.p.

I to counsel (you)!

I to uphold!

I to teach."[4] [93] Thus spake the Exalted One, and the venerable Tissa was comforted and welcomed the words of the Bxalted One.

---

[1] For Tissa see S. ii, 282; Brethren, p. 43.

[2] This picturesque sentence, as a stock expression of dejection, occurs elsewhere - e.g., D. ii, 99; S. v, 153; A. iii, 69, but api-api ca generally has a concessive sense, which it has not here. Cf. Brethren, p. 356: -

'The firmament on every hand Grows dim; yea, all confusèd stand
The truths I seemed to understand.'

madhuraka-jāto, rendered in other translations 'weak as a creeper.' Cy. says: 'heavy and lumpish,' sañjāta garu-bhāvo viya akammañño. Apparently the idea to be conveyed is that of intoxication (madhura. Skt. madhula, liquor). See Pāli Dict, ad vb. At Udāna iv, 4, where Sāriputta is hit on the head by a yakkha, he says api ca me sīsaṇ thokaṇ dukkhaṇ, 'I did feel a bit dizzy,' Comy. remarks apppamattakaṇ madhuraka-jataṇ viya me sīsaṇ dukkhan ti. The word also means 'the jīvika plant.' Cf. D. ii 99; Dialogues, ii. 107.

[3] Dhammā. At D. i, 99, translated 'faculties,' I think wrongly. Here Comy. explains it as pariyatti-dhammā, 'the Norm committed to memory.'

[4] Here text has anusāsaniya. Comy. reads āmisa-dhammānuqgahena, explained as 'material and spiritual blessing.' The instrumental case here expresses purpose Cf. Udāna, 23-4, abhirama, Nanda: ahaṇ te pāṭibhogo paṭilābhāya.
[Lit 'I by (or with) counsel! I with, etc.' It is a rare and precious glimpse surviving of the strong radiant magnetic personality imparting will to the weaker brother. - (original) Ed.]

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 85

Yamaka Suttaṃ

Yamaka[1]

[6] Diṭṭh'eva dhamme.

[7] It is interesting to find the Kathāvatthu (i, 1) here verbally anticipated.

[8] Supra, § 83, where Comy. says the phrase implies stream-winning or conversion.

[9] Kiṇkāra, which Comy. explains as 'one who is always asking," What shall I do, master?"'

[10] Comy. reads saddaheyya.

[11] Comy., 'takes his meals with him.'

[12] Cf. § 79, rūpena khajjami, and below, rūpaṇ vadhakaṇ, etc. For this and other terms for body, see Vis. Magg. 479.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 86

Anurādha Suttaṃ

Anurādha[1]

---

[116] [99]

Thus have I heard:—

Once the Exalted One was staying near Vesalī,
in Great Grove,
at the Hall of the Gabled House.

At that time the venerable Anurādha was staying not far from the Exalted One in a forest hut.

Then a number of wandering heretics came to the venerable Anurādha, greeted him
and exchanged the courtesies of civil words
and sat down at one side.

So seated,
those heretic Wanderers said to the venerable Anurādha:

"Friend Anurādha, a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest gain,
is proclaimed in [one of] these four ways:

'A Tathāgata comes to be after death;
or he does not come to be after death;
or he both comes to be and does not come to be after death;
or he neither comes to be nor comes not to be after death.'"

Upon this the venerable Anuradha said to those heretic Wanderers:

"Friends, a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest gain,
is spoken of in other than those four ways,
to wit:

'A Tathāgata comes to be after death;
or he does not come to be after death;
or he both comes to be and does not come to be after death;
or he neither comes to be nor comes not to be after death.'"

Upon this those heretic Wanderers said of the venerable Anurādha:

"This brother must be a novice,
not long ordained.

Or, if he is an elder,
he is an ignorant fool."

So those heretic Wanderers, having thus abused the venerable Anurādha, by calling him "novice"
and "fool,"
rose up and went away.

Thereupon the venererable Anurādha, not long after those [100] heretic Wanderers were gone, thought thus:

"If these heretic Wanderers were to put me a further question,
how, in answering,
should I tell them the views of the Exalted One,
without misrepresenting the Exalted One
by stating an untruth?

How should I answer
in accordance with his teaching,
so that no one who agrees with his teaching
and follows his views
might incur reproach?"

Thereupon the venerable Anurādha went to the Exalted One and sat down.

Seated at one side
the venerable Anurādha thus addressed the Exalted One:

"I am staying here, lord,
in a forest hut
not far from the Exalted One.

Now a number of heretic Wanderers came to me greeted me
and exchanged the courtesies of civil words
and sat down at one side.

So seated,
those heretic Wanderers said to me:

'Friend Anurādha,
a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest gain,
is proclaimed in [one of] these fpur ways:

"A Tathāgata comes to be after death;
or he does not come to be after death;
or he both comes to be and does not come to be after death;
or he neither comes to be nor comes not to be after death."'

Upon this
I said to those heretic Wanderers:

'Friends, a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest gain,
is spoken of
in other than those four ways, to wit:

"A Tathāgata comes to be after death;
or he does not come to be after death;
or he both comes to be and does not come to be after death;
or he neither comes to be nor comes not to be after death."'

Upon this
those heretic Wanderers said of me:

'This brother must be a novice,
not long ordained.

Or, if he is an elder,
he is an ignorant fool.'

So those heretic Wanderers,
having thus abused me,
by calling me 'novice'
and 'fool,'
rose up and went away.

Thereupon, not long after those heretic Wanderers were gone, I thought thus:

'If these heretic Wanderers were to put me a further question,
how, in answering,
should I tell them the views of the Exalted One,
without misrepresenting the Exalted One
by stating an untruth?

How should I answer
in accordance with his teaching,
so that no one who agrees with his teaching
and follows his views
might incur reproach?'"

§

"Now what think you, Anurādha?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,

unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Therefore, Anurādha, every body whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every body should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every feeling whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every feeling should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every perception whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every activity whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every activity should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every consciousness whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

§

Wherefore, Anurādha, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;

by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

§

Now as to this, Anurādha, what think you?

Do you regard a Tathāgata's body
as the Tathāgata?"

[101] "Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata's feelings
as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata's perceptions
as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata's activities
as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata's consciousness
as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now as to this, Anurādha, what think you?

Do you regard a Tathāgata
as [his] body?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as apart from body?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata
as having no body?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as [his] feelings?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as apart from feelings?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as having no feelings?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata
as [his] perceptions?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as apart from perceptions?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata
as having no perceptions?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as [his] activities?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as apart from activities?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as having no activities?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as [his] consciousness?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as apart from consciousness?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Do you regard a Tathāgata as having no consciousness?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Then, Anurādha,
since in this very life
a Tathāgata is not to be regarded as existing in truth,
in reality,
is it proper for you to pronounce this of him:

"Friends, he who is a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of beings,
a winner of the highest gain,
is proclaimed in other than these four ways:

'A Tathāgata comes to be after death;
or he does not come to be after death;

or he both comes to be and does not come to be after death;
or he neither comes to be nor comes not to be after death.'"

"Surely not, lord."

"Well said!

Well said, Anurādha!

Both formerly and now also, Anurādha, it is just sorrow
and the ceasing of sorrow that I proclaim."[2]

---

[1] This sutta is repeated and expanded at S. iv, 380-6. The name is famous as that of the capital city of ancient Ceylon, Anurādha-pura.

[2] = M. i, 140. The matter is left a mystery, as not tending to edification or release. At S. iv, 385 it is said to be avyākataṇ, 'not declared.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 87

Vakkali Suttaṃ

Vakkali[1]

[6] Paṭikkam'osānaṇ paññāyati. Comy., however, interprets (paṭikkamo) sānaṇ as etāsaṇ (vedanānaṇ); lit.: 'is the end of their coming on in sight?'

[7] Cf. Buddh. Psych. 28. Here attā is the equivalent of our 'conscience.'

[8] Cf. Expos. 453; Buddh. Psych. 258-9 n.

[9] A hill-top near Rājagaha. See K.S. i, 150 n.

[10] Compare the suicide of Godhika, S. i, 119; K.S. i, 150. As often happens in the Tipiṭaka, the same story is told of different persons either in ignorance or to preserve the traditional framework free from too many details. Thus the introductory part of this story is a stock passage for describing the sick and their visiting. In the Thag. Comy. and Dhp. A. versions, Vakkali does not 'use the knife,' but rises up into the air at the call of the Master and attains arahantship on the way by an effort of self-control.

[11] It is noteworthy that devas are never described as sitting down. [Ed.: They fear contamination! This world is said to stink unbearably to Devas.]

[12] Possibly a characteristic genuine logion. Cf. S. v, 369, 371.

[13] One of the rules of Vinaya discipline.

[14] A common practice of the Japanese Samurai (clansmen) to this day. The ethics of the deed are not discussed by Comy., who says the elder was conceited and blind to his remaining faults; thought he was khīnāsavo and might rid himself of the bodily pain. However, the pain of the knife was such that, in the very moment of dying, realizing his state of puthujjano as imperfect, he made a great effort to attain and did so before actual death. Comy. adds, 'he died lying on his right side, as arahants generally do (the traditional posture of the Buddha, "on his right side, like a lion lying"), and in a decent posture.'

[15] Vivatta-kkhandhaṇ semānaṇ.

[16] Cf. K.S. i, 151 n. At Dhp. A. the story is amplified. Cf. Warren, p. 381.

[17] Parinibbuto.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 88

Assaji Suttaṃ

Assaji

---

[124] [106]

Thus have I heard:—

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha,
in Great Grove,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-Ground.

On that occasion the venerable Assaji was staying in Kassapa's Park, being sick,

afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

Now the venerable Assaji called to his attendants, saying:

"Come hither, friends!

Go ye to the Exalted One, and,
in my name worshipping at the feet of the Exalted One,
say unto him:

'Lord, the brother Assaji is sick,
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

He worships at the feet of the Exalted one.'

And thus do ye say:

'Well were it, lord,
if the Exalted One would visit brother Assaji, out of compassion for him.'"

"Even so, friend,"
replied those brethren to the venerable Assaji, and went to the Exalted One, saluted him and sat down at one side.

So seated
those brethren said to the Exalted One:

"Lord, the brother Assaji is sick
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

He worships at the feet of the Exalted one.

Well were it if the Exalted One would visit brother Assaji
out of compassion for him."

The Exalted One consented by his silence.

Thereupon the Exalted One robed himself,
and taking bowl and robe,
went to visit the venerable Assaji.

Now the venerable Assaji saw the Exalted One coming, while yet he was afar off,
and on seeing him
he stirred upon his bed.

Then said the Exalted One to the venerable Assaji:

"Enough, Assaji!

Stir not on your bed!

There are these seats made ready.

I will sit there."

And he sat down on a seat made ready.

So the Exalted One sat down
and said to the venerable Assaji:

'Well, Assaji, I hope you are bearing up.

I hope you are enduring.

Do your pains abate and not increase?

Are there signs of their abating and not increasing?"

"No, lord, I am not bearing up.

I am not enduring.

Strong pains come upon me.

They do not abate.

There is no sign of their abating,
but of their increasing."

"Have you any doubt, Assaji?

Have you any remorse?"

"Indeed, lord, I have no little doubt.

I have no little remorse."

"Have you not anything, Assaji, wherein to reproach yourself as to morals?"

"Nay, lord, there is nothing wherein I reproach myself as to morals."

"Then, Assaji, if that is so,
you must have some worry,
you must have something you regret."

"Formerly, lord, I kept trying to calm down my sickness, but I am still much troubled[1] by my breathing.

I [107] cannot win balance of mind.

But though I cannot win balance of mind,
I say to myself:

'Yet I do not fall away.'"[2]

"Those recluses and brahmins, Assaji, who deem balance of mind as all in all,
they who reverence balance of mind, - when they cannot win that balance of mind, say to themselves:

'May we not fall away!'

§

Now as to this, what think you, Assaji?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I

this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Therefore, Assaji, every body whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every body should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every feeling whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every feeling should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every perception whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every activity whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every activity should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every consciousness whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

§

Wherefore, Assaji, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

§

If one feels a pleasant feeling,
he knows it as impermanent,

he knows it as not clung to,
he knows it has no lure for him.

If he feels a painful feeling,
he knows it is impermanent,
he knows it as not clung to,
he knows it has no lure for him.

If he feels a neutral[ed1] feeling,
he knows it is impermanent,
he knows it as not clung to,
he knows it has no lure for him.

■

If he feels a pleasant feeling,
he feels it as one who is unattached.

If he feels a painful feeling,
he feels it unattached.

If he feels a neutral feeling,
he feels it unattached.

■

[ed2]If he feels a feeling that his bodily powers have reached their end, he knows that he so feels.

If he feels a feeling that life has reached its end, he knows that he so feels.

He knows that when body breaks up, henceforth,
when life has run its course,

all that he has felt,
all that had a lure for him will grow cold.'[3]

---

[1] Kāya-sankhāre. Here 'the necessary conditions of body-life' (as vāci-sanihāro and mano-sankhāro are those of percept and concept). Explained by Comy. as assāsa-passāse, 'in- and out-breathing' By restraining these he would induce the fourth jhāna, involving loss of body-consciousness, but this cannot be done easily when attention has to be paid to body or pain.

[2] Comy., sāsanato, 'from the teachings.'

[3] Cf. the same passage at S. ii, 126, which ends with 'bodies will be left aside.'

[ed1] Woodward here has 'mental'.

[ed2] Here Woodward omits the simile. Bhk. Bodhi: "Just as, Assaji, an oil lamp burns in dependence on the oil and the wick, and with the exhaustion of the oil and the wick it is extinguished through lack of fuel, so too, Assaji, when a bhikkhu feels a feeling terminating with the body ... terminating with life ...

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 89

Khemaka Suttaṃ

Khema

---

[126] [107]

Thus have I heard:—

Once a number of brethren were staying near Kosambī, in Ghosita Park.

Now at that time the venerable Khemaka was staying in Jujube Tree Park,[1]
being sick,
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

[108] Then the elder brethren, rising at eventide from their solitude, called to the venerable Dāsaka:[2]

"Come hither, friend Dāsaka!

Go you to brother Khemaka and say to him:

'Friend, the elder brethren say thus:

"We hope you are bearing up, friend.

We hope you are enduring.

Do your pains abate and not increase?

Are there signs of their abating and not increasing?"'"

■

"Even so, friends," said the venerable Dāsaka in reply to those brethren, and approaching the venerable Khemaka,
he said to him:

"Friend Khemaka, the elder brethren say thus:

'We hope you are bearing up, friend.

We hope you are enduring.

Do your pains abate and not increase?

Are there signs of their abating and not increasing?'"

To which the venerable Khemaka replied:

"No, friends, I am not bearing up.

I am not enduring.

There is no sign of my pains abating
and not increasing."

■

Thereupon the venerable Dāsaka returned to the elder brethren, and said:

"Friend Khemaka sais this:

'No, friends, I am not bearing up.

I am not enduring.

There is no sign of my pains abating
and not increasing.'"

Then said they again:

"Come hither, friend Dāsaka.

Go you again to the venerable Khemaka and say:

'Friend, the elders say thus:

'Friend, in this fivefold grasping-group,
so called by the Exalted One,
to wit:
the grasping-group of body,
the grasping-group of feeling,
the grasping-group of perception,
the grasping-group of the activities,
the grasping-group of consciousness —
in these five groups
does the venerable Khemaka discern the Self or anything pertaining to the Self?'"

■

"Even so, friends," replied the venerable Dāsaka,
and approaching the venerable Khemaka,
he said to him:

"Friend Khemaka, the elder brethren say thus:

'Friend, in this fivefold grasping-group,
so called by the Exalted One,
to wit:
the grasping-group of body,
the grasping-group of feeling,
the grasping-group of perception,
the grasping-group of the activities,
the grasping-group of consciousness —
in these five groups
does the venerable Khemaka discern the Self
or anything pertaining to the Self?'"

"In these five grasping-groups, friend," replied the venerable Khemaka,
"to wit:
the grasping-group of body,
the grasping-group of feeling,
the grasping-group of perception,
the grasping-group of the activities,
the grasping-group of consciousness —
in these five groups
I discern no Self
nor aught pertaining to the Self."

■

Then the venerable Dāsaka went back to the brethren and said:

"Friend Khemaka sais this:

'In these five grasping groups, friend,"
"to wit:
the grasping-group of body,
the grasping-group of feeling,
the grasping-group of perception,
the grasping-group of the activities,
the grasping-group of consciousness —
in these five groups
I discern no Self
nor aught pertaining to the Self.'"

■

Then said they again:

"Come hither, friend Dāsaka.

Go you again to the venerable Khemaka and say:

'Friend, the elders say thus:

"If then in the fivefold grasping-group
the venerable Khemaka discerns no Self
nor aught pertaining to the Self,
the venerable Khemaka must be arahant,
one in whom the āsavas are destroyed."'"

■

"Even so, friends," replied the venerable Dāsaka,
and approaching the venerable Khemaka,
he said to him:

"Friend Khemaka, the elder brethren say thus:

'If then in the fivefold grasping-group
the venerable Khemaka discerns no Self

nor aught pertaining to the Self,
the venerable Khemaka must be arahant,
one in whom the āsavas are destroyed.'"

"Though, friend, I discern in the fivefold grasping-group
no Self
nor aught pertaining [109] to the Self,
yet am I not arahant,
nor one in whom the āsavas are destroyed.

Though, friend, I see
that I have got the idea of 'I am'
in the fivefold grasping-group,
yet do I not discern
that I am this 'I am.'"

■

Then the venerable Dāsaka returned to the brethren and said:

"Friend Khemaka sais this:

'Though, friends, I discern
in the fivefold grasping-group
no Self
nor aught pertaining to the Self,
yet am I not arahant,
nor one in whom the āsavas are destroyed.

Though, friend, I see
that I have got the idea of "I am"
in the fivefold grasping-group,
yet do I not discern
that I am this "I am."'"

■

Then said they again:

"Come hither, friend Dāsaka.

Go you again to the venerable Khemaka and say:

'Friend, the elders say thus:

"As to this 'I am,' friend Khemaka,
of which you speak,
what do you mean by this 'I am'?

Do you speak of 'I am' as body,
or as distinct from body?

Do you speak of 'I am' as feeling,
or as distinct from feeling?

Do you speak of 'I am' as perception,
or as distinct from perception?

Do you speak of 'I am' as the activities,
or as distinct from the activities?

Do you speak of 'I am' as consciousness,
or as distinct from consciousness?

As to this 'I am,' what do you mean by it?"'"

■

"Even so, friends," replied the venerable Dāsaka,
and approaching the venerable Khemaka,
he said to him:

"Friend Khemaka, the elder brethren say thus:

'As to this "I am," friend Khemaka,
of which you speak,
what do you mean by this "I am"?

Do you speak of "I am" as body,
or as distinct from body?

Do you speak of "I am" as feeling,
or as distinct from feeling?

Do you speak of "I am" as perception,
or as distinct from perception?

Do you speak of "I am" as the activities,
or as distinct from the activities?

Do you speak of "I am" as consciousness,
or as distinct from consciousness?

As to this "I am," what do you mean by it?'"

■

"Enough, friend Dāsaka!

What boots this running to and fro?

Fetch my staff.

I will go myself to these brethren."[3]

So the venerable Khemaka, leaning on his staff,[4] came to those brethren.

When he got there,
he greeted them,

and exchanging the courtesies of civil words,
sat down at one side.

As he thus sat,
the elders thus spoke to the venerable Khemaka:

"As to this 'I am,' friend Khemaka,
of which you speak,
what do you mean by this 'I am'?

Do you speak of 'I am' as body,
or as distinct from body?

Do you speak of 'I am' as feeling,
or as distinct from feeling?

Do you speak of 'I am' as perception,
or as distinct from perception?

Do you speak of 'I am' as the activities,
or as distinct from the activities?

Do you speak of 'I am' as consciousness,
or as distinct from consciousness?

As to this 'I am,' what do you mean by it?"

■

"No, friends, I do not say 'I am body';
I do not say 'I am feeling';
I do not say 'I am perception';
I do not say 'I am the activities';
I do not say 'I am consciousness.'

Though, friends, I see
that I have got the idea of 'I am'

in the five grasping-groups,
yet I do not discern
that I am this 'I am.'

Just as, friends, in [110] the case of the scent of a blue lotus or a white lotus, -
if one should say:

'The scent belongs to the petals or the colour
or the fibres of it,'

would he be rightly describing the scent?"

"Surely not, friend."

"Then how would he be right in describing it?"

"Surely, friend, by speaking of the scent of the flower."

"Even so, friends,
I do not speak of the 'I am' as a body,
I do not speak of the 'I am' as feeling,
I do not speak of the 'I am' as perception,
I do not speak of the 'I am' as the activities,
I do not speak of the 'I am' as consciousness.

Nevertheless I see that in these five grasping-groups
I have got the idea of 'I am'
yet I do not discern
that I am this 'I am.'

Though, friends, an Ariyan disciple has put away the five lower fetters,
yet there remains in him

a subtle remnant[5]
from among the five grasping-groups,
a subtle remnant of the I-conceit,
of the I am-desire,
of the lurking tendency to think 'I am,'[6]
still not removed from him.

Later on
he lives contemplating the rise and fall
of the five grasping-groups,
seeing thus:

'Such is body,
such is the arising of body,
such is the ceasing of body.

Such is feeling,
such is the arising of feeling,
such is the ceasing of feeling.

Such is perception,
such is the arising of perception,
such is the ceasing of perception.

Such are the activities,
such is the arising of the activities,
such is the ceasing of the activities.

Such is consciousness,
such is the arising of consciousness,
such is the ceasing of consciousness.'

In this way,
as he lives in the contemplation of the five grasping-groups,
that subtle remnant of the I am-conceit,
of the I am-desire,

that lurking tendency to think 'I am,'
which was still not removed from him, -
that is now removed.

Suppose, friends,
there is a dirty soiled cloth,
and the owners give it to a washerman,
and he rubs it smooth with salt-earth,
or lye
or cowdung,
and rinses it in pure clean water.

Now, though that cloth be clean, utterly cleansed,
yet there hangs about it,
still unremoved,
the smell of the salt-earth
or lye
or cowdung.

The washerman returns it to the owners, and they lay it up in a sweet-scented coffer.[7]

Thus that smell of salt-earth
or lye
or cowdung,
that hung about it
and was not removed,
is now utterly removed.

Even so, friends
though an Ariyan disciple
has put away the five lower fetters, [111] yet there remains in him
a subtle remnant

from among the five grasping-groups,
a subtle remnant of the I-conceit,
of the I am-desire,
of the lurking tendency to think 'I am,'
still not removed from him.

Later on
he lives contemplating the rise and fall
of the five grasping-groups,
seeing thus:

'Such is body,
such is the arising of body,
such is the ceasing of body.

Such is feeling,
such is the arising of feeling,
such is the ceasing of feeling.

Such is perception,
such is the arising of perception,
such is the ceasing of perception.

Such are the activities,
such is the arising of the activities,
such is the ceasing of the activities.

Such is consciousness,
such is the arising of consciousness,
such is the ceasing of consciousness.

In this way,
as he lives in the contemplation of the five grasping-groups,
that subtle remnant of the I am-conceit,
of the I am-desire,
that lurking tendency to think 'I am,'

which was still not removed from him, -
that is now utterly removed."

■

Upon this the elders said to the venerable Khemaka:

"Indeed we did not put these questions to the venerable Khemaka from a wish to trouble him.

It was because we thought:

'The venerable Khemaka is able to expound in full
the teaching of the Exalted One,
able to teach it,
to make it known,
to set it forth,
to make it clear,
to open it up,
to analyze it,
to make it plain.'

And so the venerable Khemaka has expounded in full
the teaching of the Exalted One.

He has taught it,
made it known,
set it forth,
made it clear,
opened it up,
analyzed it,
made it plain."

■

Thus spake the venerable Khemaka.

The elders were pleased at the words of the venerable Khemaka and welcomed them.

Now when this teaching was thus expounded the hearts of as many as sixty brethren were utterly set free
from the āsavas,
and so was it also
with the heart of the venerable Khemaka.

---

[1] Comy., 'a matter of three miles [gāvuta-mattaṇ; a league] distant.'

[2] If this is the Dāsaka of Thag. 17, who, like Channa in the following section, was son of a slave, the walking exercise thus put upon him by the brethren may have been done with a purpose, for he was fat and lazy, 'sleeping much after meals.'

[3] Comy. says, 'why did they send Dāsaka to and fro four times that day, so that he covered some twenty-five miles? Becausc they were anxious to hear the doctrine from an expert. Why did they not go themselves? Because his forest hut could not hold some sixty brethren. Why did they not ask him to come? Because of his sickness. But they knew that, if thcy kept questioning him he would at last come in person. And the elder went, knowing their secret wish.'

[4] Cf. J.P.T.S., 1887, 156. Olumbha or clubbha.

[5] Anusahagato Comy. 'sukhumo' The passage is quoted at Asl. 244; Expos., ii, 326.

[6] For anusayo see K.S. ii, 167 n.

[7] Comy. says, 'the sweet-scented coffer' is the knowledge of the Arahant's Path, which removes the taints.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 90

Channa Suttaṃ

Channa[1]

p.p. explains it all — p.p.

All conditions[2] are not the Self."

Then the venerable Channa thought thus:

"Yes, I too see this.

Impermanent is body,
impermanent is feeling,
impermanent is perception,
impermanent is the activities
impermanent is consciousness.

Body is not the Self,
feeling is not the Self,
perception is not the Self,
the activities are not the Self,
consciousness is not the Self.

Impermanent are all compounded things.

All conditions are not the Self.

Nevertheless, for the calming of all activities,
for the giving up of all the bases of birth,
for the destruction of craving,
for passionlessness,
for cessation,
for Nibbāna,
my heart springs not up withm me.

It is not calmed,
it is not released from trembling.

But grasping arises,
and my mind shrinks back again
(at the thought):

'Who forsooth is the Self?'

This way[3]
I cannot see the Norm.

Who is there to teach me the Norm,
so that I may see the Norm?"

Then this thought came to the venerable Channa:

"Here is this venerable Ānanda
staying at Kosambī

in Ghosita Park.

One praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co- [113] mates
of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda
is the man to show me the Norm
so that I may see the Norm.

I put full trust
in the venerable Ānanda for this.

What if I were to go to the venerable Ānanda?"

So the venerable Channa put his lodging in order,
and taking bowl and robe,
set out for Kosambī
and Ghosita Park,
where the venerable Ānanda was staying.

When he got there
he greeted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Channa said to the venerable Ānanda:

"Of late, friend Ānanda,
I have been staying near Benares, at Isipatana,
in the Deer Park.

Then at eventide,
arising from my solitude,
I took my doorkey

and went from lodging to lodging, saying to the elder brethren:

'May the venerable elders instruct me with pious converse,
so that I may see the Norm.'

Thereupon, friend,
the elder brethren said to me:

'Body is impermanent, friend Channa.

Feeling is impermanent:
perception is impermanent,
the activities are impermanent
consciousness is impermanent.

Body is not the Self,
feeling is not the Self,
perception is not the Self,
the activities are not the Self,
consciousness is not the Self.

All compounded things are impermanent.

All conditions are not the Self.'

Then I thought thus:

'Yes, I too see this.

Impermanent is body,
impermanent is feeling,
impermanent is perception,
impermanent is the activities
impermanent is consciousness.

Body is not the Self,
feeling is not the Self,
perception is not the Self,
the activities are not the Self,
consciousness is not the Self.

Impermanent are all compounded things.

All conditions are not the Self.

Nevertheless, for the calming of all activities,
for the giving up of all the bases of birth,
for the destruction of craving,
for passionlessness,
for cessation,
for Nibbāna,
my heart springs not up withm me.

It is not calmed,
it is not released from trembling.

But grasping arises,
and my mind shrinks back again
(at the thought):

"Who forsooth is the Self?"

This way
I cannot see the Norm.

Who is there to teach me the Norm,
so that I may see the Norm?'

Then this thought came to me:

'Here is this venerable Ānanda
staying at Kosambī

in Ghosita Park.

One praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates
of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda
is the man to show me the Norm
so that I may see the Norm.

I put full trust
in the venerable Ānanda for this.

What if I were to go to the venerable Ānanda?'

May the venerable Ānanda teach and instruct me.

May the venerable Ānanda grant me pious converse
so that I may see the Norm."

"Thus far, indeed,
I am pleased with the venerable Channa.

For now the venerable Channa has made things plain and has broken np the fallow ground.[4]

Lend an ear, friend Channa.

You are fit to understand the Norm!"

And there sprang up
there and then in the venerable Channa a wondrous eagerness and joy
at the thought:

"He says I am fit to understand the Norm."

Then said the venerable Ānanda:

"From the very lips of the Exalted One, friend Channa, from his very lips
as he taught brother Kacchāna-gotta,[5] I heard this:

'On two things, Kaccāna, does this world generally base [114] its view, - on existence
and on non-existence.

Now he who
with right insight
sees the arising of the world
as it really is,
does not believe in the non-existence of the world.

But, Kaccāna, he who
with right insight
sees the ceasing of the world
as it really is,
does not believe in the existence of the world.

Grasping after systems, imprisoned by dogmas
is this world, Kaccāna, for the most part.

And he who does not go after,
does not grasp at,
does not take his stand on this system-grasping,
this dogma,
this mental bias, -
such an one does not say:

"It is my soul."[6]

He who thinks:

"That which arises
is but ill:
that which ceases,
it is ill,"[7]
such an one has no doubts, no perplexity.

In this matter,
knowledge not borrowed from others comes to him.

Thus far, Kaccāna, goes right view.

"All exists," Kaccāna, - that is one extreme.

"Nought exists," Kaccāna, - that is the other extreme.

Not approaching either extreme, Kaccāna, the Tathāgata teaches you a doctrine by the middle way:

Conditioned by ignorance come the activities:
conditioned by the activities comes consciousness,[ed1] conditioned by consciousness comes name-and-shape, conditioned by name-and-shape comes sense, conditioned by sense comes contact, conditioned by contact comes feeling, conditioned by feeling comes craving, conditioned by craving comes grasping, conditioned by grasping comes becoming,
conditioned by becoming comes birth, conditioned by birth comes decay-and-death,

grief,
suffering,
unhappiness,
despair.

Thus is the arising of this whole mass of ill.

By the utter fading away and ceasing of ignorance comes the ceasing of the activities, by the utter fading away and ceasing of the activities,
comes the ceasing of consciousness,
by the utter fading away and ceasing of consciousness, comes the ceasing of name-and-shape, by the utter fading away and ceasing of name-and-shape,
comes the ceasing of sense,
by the utter fading away and ceasing of sense, comes the ceasing of contact,
by the utter fading away and ceasing of contact,
comes the ceasing of feeling,
by the utter fading away and ceasing of feeling,
comes the ceasing of craving,
by the utter fading away and ceasing of craving, comes the ceasing of grasping,
by the utter fading away and ceasing of grasping,
comes the ceasing of becoming,
by the utter fading away and ceasing of becoming,
comes the ceasing of birth,
by the utter fading away and ceasing of birth, comes the ceasing of decay-and-death,
grief,
suffering,
unhappiness,
despair.

Thus is the ceasing of this entire mass of ill.'"[8]

"This, friend Ānanda, is what comes to those venerable ones who have such co-mates in the righteous life, compassionate,
desiring our good,
admonishers,
instructors.

Hearing this Norm-teaching from the venerable Ānanda
I am firmly established in the Norm."

---

[1] Channa may be he of Thag. 69; Brethren, p. 70. But according to the Comy. he is the very Channa of the 'renunciation' legend of the Buddha. The son of a slave, he was born on the same day as Gotama and 'went forth' with him. Apparently of small intelligence, he used to talk of 'our Buddha,' 'our Dhamma,' was secretive and jealous, and disagreeable to his follows owing to his sharp tongue. According to Comy. the events of this sutta happened after the death of the Master, who on his deathbed ordered the brethren to 'put Channa into Coventry.' Cf. D. ii, 154 (brahma-daṇḍa). Owing to this he could get no speech with them. Hence his wandering away to Benares. At S. iv, 55-60 he kills himself owing to an incurable disease. [Ed.: but this must be another Channa. And the Channa of this sutta must also be another Channa, as he is, in fact, given instructions by the bhikkhus.]

[2] Comy. asks, 'why did they speak only of two of the truths and not the usual three?' Because, they said, 'If wo say "all things are sorrowful," he will conclude that the Path and its Fruits are also sorrowful, and abstain trom striving after them.' [Ed. Further, if they said that they would be misrepresenting what the Buddha said, which was not "All Things are Dukkha" but "All that is own-made (or constructed, sankhārā) is Dukkha." for "All Things" (dhammā) he said: "All Things are not-self."]

[3] Comy. reads evaṇ for text etaṇ.

[4] Avi-akāsi, khilaṇ pabhindi, the latter phrase occurs at S. i, 193. Khila is unploughed land and here signifies mental callousness. Cf. Sn. 973.

[5] At S. ii, 17; K.S. ii, 12, where text reads Kaccāyana. Comy. here and elsewhere reads Kaccāna.

[6] Or my self: attā me ti. Cf. below, § 91."

[7] S. i, 135; K.S. i, p. 179.

[8] Cf. Pts of Contr., p. 60 n. Thus the world-process is 'a cosmos of conditions becoming.'

[ed1] Woodward abridges, the details are taken from K.S. ii, 12,

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 91

Paṭhama Rāhula Suttaṃ

Rāhula (1)[1]

---

[135] [114]

Thus have I heard:—

The Exalted One was staying at Sāvatthī
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Rāhula came to the Exalted One
and [115] sat down at one side.

So seated,
the venerable Rāhula sajd to the Exalted One:

"How, lord, should one know,
how should one see,
so that in this body,
together with its consciousness,
and likewise in all external objects,
he has no more idea of 'I' and 'mine,'
no more leanings to conceit?"

"Whatsoever material object, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
that is seeing things by right insight
as they really are.

■

"Whatsoever feeling, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,

far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
that is seeing things by right insight
as they really are.

■

"Whatsoever perception, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
that is seeing things by right insight
as they really are.

■

"Whatsoever activities, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,

far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
that is seeing things by right insight
as they really are.

■

"Whatsoever consciousness, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
that is seeing things by right insight
as they really are.

■

Thus knowing, Rāhula, thus seeing,
in this body,
together with its consciousness,
and likewise in all external objects,
one has no idea of 'I' and 'mine,'
no more leanings to conceit."

[1] This and the next sutta are reproduced from S. ii, 252-3; K.S. ii, 167 q.v. and n. Cf. Expos., ii, 302 n., and sup. 71 (Rādha).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
9. Thera Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

9. The Elders

Sutta 92

Dutiya Rāhula Suttaṃ

Rāhula (2)

---

[136] [115]

Thus have I heard:—

The Exalted One was staying at Sāvatthī
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Rāhula came to the Exalted One and down at one side.

So seated,
the venerable Rāhula sajd to the Exalted One:

"How, lord, does one know, how does one see,
so that in this material body,
together with its consciousness,
and likewise in all external objects,
his mind has gone away
from all notions of an 'I' and of 'mine,'
and from conceit,
passing beyond all ways of conceit,
and is peaceful and utterly released?

"Whatsoever material object, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
by so seeing it,
even as it is
by right insight
one is relesed from grasping.

■

"Whatsoever feeling, Rāhula,
be it past,

future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
by so seeing it,
even as it is
by right insight
one is relesed from grasping.

■

"Whatsoever perception, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
by so seeing it,
even as it is
by right insight
one is relesed from grasping.

■

"Whatsoever activities, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
by so seeing it,
even as it is
by right insight
one is relesed from grasping.

■

"Whatsoever consciousness, Rāhula,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
one regards thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the Self of me,' -
by so seeing it,

even as it is
by right insight
one is relesed from grasping.

■

[116] Even so knowing, Rāhula,
so seeing,
in this material body
one's mind has gone away from all notions of an 'I'
and of 'mine,'
and from conceit,
passing beyond all the ways of conceit,[1]
and is peaceful and utterly released."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. i, 17 n.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 93

Nadi Suttaṃ

The River

---

[137] [116]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Suppose a stream, brethren,
a mountain-torrent,
down-drawing,
rising from afar,
swift-flowing,
and on both its banks are growing grasses which overhang the stream, kusa-grass there might be that overhangs, reeds and creepers
and over-hanging shrubs;
and a man is swept away by that stream and clutches at the grasses, but they might break away,[1]
and owing to that he might come by his destruction.

He might clutch at the kusa grass,
at the reeds,
at the creepers;
he might clutch at the shrubs,
but they might break away,
and owing to that he might come by his destruction.

Even so, brethren,
the untaught manyfolk,
who discerns not those who are Ariyans;
who is unskilled in the Ariyan Norm,
untrained in the Ariyan Norm;
who discerns not the worthy ones,
who is unskilled in the worthy Norm, untrained in the worthy Norm, regard the body as the self,

or the self as having body,
or the body as being in the self,
or the self as being in the body.|| ||

Then body breaks away,
and owing to that
they come by their destruction.

■

They regard feeling as the self,
or the self as having feeling, or feeling as being in the self,
or the self as being in feeling.|| ||

Then feeling breaks away,
and owing to that
they come by their destruction.

■

They regard perception as the self,
or the self as having perception, or perception as being in the self,
or the self as being in perception.|| ||

Then perception breaks away,
and owing to that
they come by their destruction.

■

They regard the activities as the self,
or the self as having the activities,
or the activities as being in the self,
or the self as being in the activities.|| ||

Then the activities break away,
and owing to that
they come by their destruction.

■

They regard consciousness as the self,
or the self as having consciousness, or consciousness as being in the self,
or the self as being in consciousness.|| ||

Then consciousness breaks away,
and owing to that
they come by their destruction.

§

"Now as to that, what think you, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Therefore, brethren, every body whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every body should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every feeling whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every feeling should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every perception whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every activity whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every activity should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every consciousness whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

§

[117] "Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

"Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter."

---

[1] Palujeyyuṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 94

Puppha (or Vaddha) Suttaṃ

The Flower (or Growth)

---

[138] [117]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"I quarrel not with the world,[1] brethren.

It is the world that quarrels with me.

No preacher of the Norm, brethren, quarrels with anyone in the world.

That which is not upheld, brethren, in the world of sages,[2]
of that I declare:

'It is not.'

That which is upheld, brethren, in the world of the sages,
of that I declare:

'It is so.'

§

And what, brethren,
is not upheld in the world of the sages,
of which I declare:

'It is not?'

That body is permanent,
stable,

eternal,
not subject to decay.

That is not upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that I declare:

'It is not.'

That feeling is permanent,
stable,
eternal,
not subject to decay.

That is not upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that I declare:

'It is not.'

That perception is permanent,
stable,
eternal,
not subject to decay.

That is not upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that I declare:

'It is not.'

That the activities is permanent,
stable,
eternal,
not subject to decay.

That is not upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that I declare:

'It is not.'

That consciousness is permanent,
stable,
eternal,
not subject to decay.

That is not upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that I declare:

'It is not.'

§

But what, brethren, is upheld in the world of the sages?

Of what do I declare that it is so?

Body is impermanent,
woeful
and subject to decay.

That, brethren, is upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that do I declare:

'It is so.'

Feeling is impermanent,
woeful
and subject to decay.

That, brethren, is upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that do I declare:

'It is so.'

Perception is impermanent,
woeful
and subject to decay.

That, brethren, is upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that do I declare:

'It is so.'

The activities is impermanent,
woeful
and subject to decay.

That, brethren, is upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that do I declare:

'It is so.'

Consciousness is impermanent,
woeful
and subject to decay.

That, brethren, is upheld in the world of the sages,
and of that do I declare:

'It is so.'

§

There is, brethren, in the world[3] a world-condition[4]
which the Tathāgata has thoroughly penetrated and realized.|| ||

Having thoroughly penetrated and realized it,
he declares,
teaches
and defines it, opens it up
and analyzes it.

■

[118] And what, brethren, is that world-condition in the world
which the Tathāgata has thoroughly penetrated and realized,
and, having thoroughly penetrated and realized it,
what does he declare,
teach,
define,
open up
and analyze?

Body, brethren,
is that world-condition in the world
which the Tathāgata has thoroughly penetrated and realized,
and, having thoroughly penetrated and realized it,
he declares,
teachs,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes.

And whosoever, brethren,
understands not
and sees not
when the Tathāgata declares,
teaches,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes,

him, brethren, do I set at naught[5]
as a foolish worldling,
blind,
without vision,
unknowing,
unseeing.

Feeling, brethren,
is that world-condition in the world
which the Tathāgata has thoroughly penetrated and realized,
and, having thoroughly penetrated and realized it,
he declares,
teachs,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes.

And whosoever, brethren,
understands not
and sees not
when the Tathāgata declares,
teaches,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes,
him, brethren, do I set at naught
as a foolish worldling,
blind,
without vision,
unknowing,
unseeing.

Perception, brethren,
is that world-condition in the world
which the Tathāgata has thoroughly penetrated and realized,
and, having thoroughly penetrated and realized it,

he declares,
teachs,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes.

And whosoever, brethren,
understands not
and sees not
when the Tathāgata declares,
teaches,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes,
him, brethren, do I set at naught
as a foolish worldling,
blind,
without vision,
unknowing,
unseeing.

The activities, brethren,
is that world-condition in the world
which the Tathāgata has thoroughly penetrated and realized,
and, having thoroughly penetrated and realized it,
he declares,
teachs,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes.

And whosoever, brethren,
understands not
and sees not
when the Tathāgata declares,
teaches,

defines,
opens up
and analyzes,
him, brethren, do I set at naught
as a foolish worldling,
blind,
without vision,
unknowing,
unseeing.

Consciousness, brethren,
is that world-condition in the world
which the Tathāgata has thoroughly penetrated and realized,
and, having thoroughly penetrated and realized it,
he declares,
teachs,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes.

And whosoever, brethren,
understands not
and sees not
when the Tathāgata declares,
teaches,
defines,
opens up
and analyzes,
him, brethren, do I set at naught
as a foolish worldling,
blind,
without vision,
unknowing,
unseeing.

Just as, brethren, a dark blue lotus
or a white lotus,
born in the water,
come to full growth in the water,
rises to the surface
and stands unspotted by the water, even so, brethren, the Tathāgata [having been born in the world] having come to full growth in the world,[6] passing beyond the world, abides unspotted by the world."

---

[1] [Satta-]loke,' 'the world of beings.' Comy. assigns three meanings to loke in this section, of which this is the first.

[2] De La Vallée Poussin. (Journal Asiatique, 1902, p. 257) compares the passage in Madhyamakavṛtti, 111 (Candrakirti), and says the Pali version 'inserts' the word paṇḍitānaṇ here.

[3] loke = saṅkhāra-loke. Comy.

[4] Loka-dhammo. Comy. 'the five groups.' So called from lujjana, breaking, crumbling, a derivation discussed at Expos.. 63. At V.M. 683 eight loka-dhammā are described.

[5] (Kinti Karomi. 'Can anything be done with such a man? No.' Dr. Stede suggested the selected rendering. - (Original Ed.)

[6] okāsa-loke. Comy. Loke jāto is omitted here in the text, but it is found at K.V. xviii, 1 (Pts. of Controv., p. 324), where we find loke sambuddho for our loke saṇvaddho.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 95

Pheṇa-Piṇḍ'Ūpama Suttaṃ

Foam

---

[140] [118]

Thus have I heard:

On a certain occasion the Exalted One was staying at Ayojjhāya,[1] on the bank of the nver Ganges.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as if, brethren,
this river Ganges should carry down
a huge lump of foam,
and a keen-sighted man should see it,
observe it
and look close into its nature.[2]

So seeing it,
ob- [119] serving it
and looking close into its nature,
he would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.[3]

What essence, brethren,
could there be
in a lump of foam?[4]

Even so, brethren, whatsoever body,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
which a brother sees,
observes
and looks close into its nature,
he so seeing,
observing
and looking into the nature of it,

would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.

What essence, brethren,
could there be
in a body?

■

Suppose, brethren, in autumn time when the sky god rains down big drops, a bubble rises on the water and straightway bursts,
and a keen-sighted man should see it,
observe it,
look close into its nature.

So seeing it,
observing it
and looking close into its nature,
he would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.

What essence, brethren,
could there be
in a bubble on the water?

Even so, brethren, whatsoever feeling,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,

which a brother sees,
observes
and looks close into its nature,
he so seeing,
observing
and looking into the nature of it,
would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.

What essence, brethren,
could there be
in feeling?

■

Just as if, brethren,
in the last month of the dry season at high noontide
there should be a mirage,
and a keen-sighted man should see it,
observe it,
look close into its nature.

So seeing it,
observing it
and looking close into its nature,
he would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.

What essence, brethren,
could there be
in a mirage?

Even so, brethren, whatsoever perception,
be it past,

future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
which a brother sees,
observes
and looks close into its nature,
he so seeing,
observing
and looking into the nature of it,
would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.

What essence, brethren,
could there be
in perception?

■

Again, brethren, suppose a man should roam about in need of heart of wood,[5] searching for heart of wood, looking for heart of wood,
and taking a sharp axe should enter a forest.

There he sees a mighty plantain-trunk,[6] straight up,
new grown,
of towering height.[7]

He cuts it down at the root.

[120] Having cut it down at the root, he chops it off at the top.

Having chopped it off at the top,
he peels off the outer skin.[8]

When he peels off the outer skin, he finds no pith[9] inside, much less does he find heart of wood.

Then suppose a keen-sighted man sees it, observes it,
looks into the nature of it.

So seeing it,
observing it
and looking close into its nature,
he would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.

What essence, brethren, could there be in a plantain-trunk?

Even so, brethren, whatsoever activities,
be they past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near,
which a brother sees,
observes
and looks close into their nature,
he so seeing,

observing
and looking into the nature of them, would find them empty,
he would find them unsubstantial,
he would find them without essence.

What essence, brethren,
could there be
in the activities?

■

Again, brethren, suppose a juggler or a juggler's apprentice should spread a glamour[10] on the high road,
and a keen-sighted man should see it,
observe it,
look close into the nature of it.

So seeing it,
observing it
and looking close into its nature,
he would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.

What essence, brethren, could there be in a glamour?

Even so, brethren, whatsoever consciousness,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,

far or near,
which a brother sees,
observes
and looks close into its nature,
he so seeing,
observing
and looking into the nature of it,
would find it empty,
he would find it unsubstantial,
he would find it without essence.

What essence, brethren,
could there be in consciousness?

Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Thus spake the Exalted One.

When the Well-Farer had thus spoken, the Teacher added this further:

"Like to a ball of foam this body is:
Like to a bubble blown the feelings are:
[121] Like to a mirage unsubstantial Perception: pithless as a plantain-trunk
The activities: a phantom, consciousness.
Thus hath declared the Kinsman of the Sun.[11]

However one doth contemplate (this mass)
And thoroughly investigate its form, -
To him, so seeing, empty, void it is.
Beginning with this body first of all: -
By his rich subtle wisdom[12] it is shown.
'Reft of three things, life, heat and consciousness, Behold it thrown aside. When 'tis cast off, Discarded there it lies, a senseless thing,[13]
Mere food for others. Such its lineage.[14]
A babbling fantasy, a murderer:[15]
Such is its name. No essence here is seen.

Thus should a brother, with an eager will.
Regard this mass. Mindful and self-possessed
By day, yea, day and night, let him cast off
All fetters, make a refuge of himself,
And act as if his head were all ablaze,[16] Aspiring for the state that changeth not.[17]

[1] Comy. says the townsfolk built a residence for him here.

[2] Yoniso upaparikkheyya. Comy. 'causally investigate.'

[3] Sāro: see next page, n 2. [Ed. n.9]

[4] Sāro. Cf. Sisters, p. 167, 'froth without a soul.'

[5] Cf. M. i, 111: 233 (trans. Sīlācāra, ii, 43), S. iv, 94.

[6] A plantain trunk is not more than about ten feet high. The exaggeration is probably intentional. (Or is kadali not a plantain? - (original Ed.)

[7] Text akukkajāta. Read akkukukā, with Pali Dict. and S. iv, 167.

[8] Pattavaṭṭi.

[9] Phegguṇ, soft outer wood. Sāro, heart of wood.

[10] Māyaṇ vidhaṇseyya.

[11] Tracing his lineage back to the Solar Race. Cf. S. i, 186, 192.

[12] Bhūripaññena. Comy. 'Sanha-vipula-cittatā paññena,' 'Subtle and many-sided.' Cf. S. iv, 205; B. Pay. Ethics, § 16.

[13] Cf. Dhammapada, 41, 'like a senseless log.'

[14] Santāno. Perhaps the only occurrence in the Pitakas of this term much used in later Buddhism.

[15] Vadhako. See supra, § 79 [Khajjanīya] and p. 113. Also S. iv, 172-5. Comy. says the fivefold mass of aggregates mutually destroy each other, e.g, the break-up of body causcs the destruction of the other skandhas and vice versa.

[16] Āditta-sīso. Cf. Thag. 39: Brethren, p. 44. 'As one whose hair and torban are afflame' - i.e., instant action is required. Cf. Thig. 493: Sisters, p. 172, v, 7.

[17] Accutaṇ padaṇ: lit. 'un-deceasing state.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 96

Gomaya-Piṇḍ'Upama Suttaṃ

Cowdung

---

[143] [122]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to ths Exalted One
and sat down at one side.

So seated, that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, is there any body
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any feeling
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any perception
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any activities
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any consciousness
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,

unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?"

■

"No, brother, there is no material form
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no feeling
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no perception
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There are no activities
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,

like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no consciousness
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast."

§

Then the Exalted One took up a little pellet of cowdung in his hand,
and said to that brother:

"Even the getting of a selfhood[1]
so small as this, brother,
is not permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

If the getting of a selfhood
so small as this, brother,
were permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,

so that thus it would stand fast,
then the living of the holy life
for the best destruction of suffering
would not be set forth.

But inasmuch, brother,
as there is no getting of a selfhood even so small as this,
permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
therefore the living of the holy life
for the best destruction of suffering
is set forth.

§

Formerly, brother, I was a ruler, a noble crowned,[2]
and (as such) I had eighty thousand townships, chief of which [123] was the royal town, Kusāvatī.

When I was such, brother,
I had eighty thousand palaces,
chief of which was the Palace of Righteousness.

And I had eighty thousand halls, chief of which tfas the Great Assembly Hall.

And I had eighty thousand couches of solid ivory,
of solid wood,
of solid gold
of solid silver,
furnished with woollen draperies,
with white draperies,
with flower-worked coverlets and spread with choicest skins of antelopes, with canopies above
and scarlet cushions at each end.

And when I was such, brethren,
I had four and eighty thousand elephants with trappings of gold
and gilded harness,
covered, with nets of gold thread,
chief of which was the royal elephant called Sabbath.[3]

And I had four and eighty thousand steeds,
with trappings of gold
and gilded banners,
covered with nets of gold thread,
chief of which was the royal steed Thundercloud.[4]

And I had four and eighty thousand chariots,
with trappings of gold
and gilded banners,
covered with nets of gold thread,
chief which was the royal chariot The Conqueror.[5]

And I had four and eighty thousand jewels, chief of which was the Gem.

And I had four and eighty thousand women, chief of whom was Queen of Good Fortune.[6]

And I had four and eighty thousand vassals,[7] chief of whom was the Crown Prince.

And I had four and eighty thousand cows, with tethers of fine jute and silver milk-pails.[8]

And I had four and eighty myriads of garments woven of finest flax,
of finest silk,
of finest wool,
of finest cotton.

[124] And I had four and eighty myriad vessels, in which both morning and evening rice food was served.

Of those four and eighty thousand towns, brother,
this town Kusāvatī
was my royal residence in those days.

And of those four and eighty thousand palaces, brother, the Palace of Righteousness was where I dwelt in those days.

And of those four and eighty thousand halls,
the Great Hall of Assembly
was where I dwelt in those days.

And of those four and eighty thousand couches,
the couch of solid ivory,
of solid wood,
of solid gold
or of solid silver
was the one which I enjoyed.

And of the four and eighty thousand elephants, the royal elephant called Sabbath
was the one I mounted in those days.

And of those four and eighty thousand steeds, my royal steed called Thundercloud
was the one I mounted in those days.

And of those four and eighty thousand chariots, the chariot Conqueror
was the one I mounted in those days.

And of those four and eighty thousand women, Khattiyāni
or Velamikā
was the one who waited on me in those days.

And of those four and eighty myriads of garments, one suit there was I donned in those days,
made of finest flax,
of finest silk,
of finest wool,
or of finest cotton.

And of those four and eighty myriad vessels there was one from which I ate a measure of choicest rice and drank broth for seasoning thereto.

Thus all those things of the world,[9] brother, are past and gone
and perished utterly.

Thus impermanent, brother, are things of the world.

Thus mutable, brother, are they.

Thus doomed to perish, brother,
are they;
insomuch that there is enough for disgust at all things of the world, enough to be averse from them, enough to be freed from them."

---

[1] Attabhāvo: the personality in any one span of life.

[2] Muddhāvasitto, 'whose head is anointed.' His name was Mahā-Sudsssana, 'The great king of glory.' Cf. Mahā-Sudassana-Sutta, D. ii, 169 ff.: Dialog. ii, 220, Introduction: 'What we really have is a wonderful fairy tale, a gorgeous poem, in which an attempt is made to describe in set terms the greatest possible glory and majesty of the greatest possible king, in order to show that all is vanity, save only righteousness - just such a poem as a Jewish prophet might have written of Solomon in all his glory.' At D. ii, 187 the descriptive part will be found with variations.

[3] Uposatha, or sabbath day.

[4] Valāhaka-assa.

[5] The name of Sakka's palace and car. R.D. trans.: 'flag of victory.'

[6] Subhaddā.

[7] Reading anuyantāni with text Cf. A. v, 22, where, as here, there is a v.l., anuyuttāni, 'devoted (attendants).' Comy. does not notice it. D. ii. 188 reads anuyuttāni, which R.D. trans. 'yeomen.'

[8] Kaṇs'upadhāraṇāni. Comy. rajatamaya-doho-bhajanāni, 'with silver milk-pails.' At Dialog. ii, 221, R.D. trans. 'with horns tipped with bronze.' See Pāli Dict., s.v.

[9] Sankhārā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 97

Nakha-Sikh'Opama Suttaṃ

Tip of the Nail[1]

---

[147] [125]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, is there any body
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any feeling
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any perception
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any activities
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any consciousness
that is permanent,

stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?"

■

"No, brother, there is no material form
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no feeling
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no perception
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There are no activities
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,

unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no consciousness
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast."

■

Then the Exalted One took up a pinch of dust on the tip of his nail and said to that brother:

"Even thus much material form, brother,
is not permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

If even thus much material form, brother,
were permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
then the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
would not be set forth.|| ||

But inasmuch as even thus much material form, brother,
is not permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
therefore the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
is set forth.

■

If even thus much feeling, brother,
were permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
then the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
would not be set forth.|| ||

But inasmuch as even thus much feeling, brother,
is not permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
therefore the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
is set forth.

■

If even thus much perception, brother,
were permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
then the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
would not be set forth.|| ||

But inasmuch as even thus much perception, brother,
is not permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
therefore the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
is set forth.

■

If even thus much of the activities, brother,
were permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
then the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
would not be set forth.|| ||

But inasmuch as even thus much of the activities, brother,
is not permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
therefore the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
is set forth.

■

If even thus much consciousness, brother,
were permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
then the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
would not be set forth.|| ||

But inasmuch as even thus much consciousness, brother,
is not permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it would stand fast,
therefore the living of the holy life
for the utter destruction of suffering
is set forth.

■

Now as to this, what think you, brother?|| ||

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Therefore, brethren, every body whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every body should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every feeling whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every feeling should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every perception whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every activity whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every activity should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every consciousness whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

§

[117] Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;

by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

"Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter."

---

[1] Nakhasikhaṇ(for text nakhāsikaṇ). Cf. S. ii, 133, 263.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 98

Suddhika (or Samuddaka) Suttaṃ

Putitan (or Oceanic)[1]

---

[149] [126]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, is there any body
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any feeling
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any perception
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any activities
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?

Pray, lord, is there any consciousness
that is permanent,

stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast?"

§

"No, brother, there is no material form
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no feeling
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no perception
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There are no activities
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast.

There is no consciousness
that is permanent,
stable,
by nature lasting,
unchanging,
like unto the eternal,
so that thus it will stand fast."

§

[1] Suddhikaṇ or Samuddakaṇ. The name of a section at S. i, 165, so called after a fastidious brahmin, Suddhiko. But the subject of purity is not referred to here, and it is not clear why such a title is assigned. There is some confusion in the text between suddhikaṇ and suddkakaṇ. So at Bk. viii. infra we should read the former.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 99

Paṭhama Gaddūla or Baddhūla Suttaṃ

The Leash (or The Thong) (1)[1]

---

[149] [126]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Incalculable,[2] brethren, is the beginning
of this round of rebirth.[3]

No beginning is made known
of beings
wrapt in ignorance,
fettered by craving,
who run on,
who fare on the round of rebirth.

There comes a time, brethren,
when the mighty ocean dries up,
is utterly drained,
comes no more to be.

But of beings hindered by ignorance,
fettered by craving,
who run on,
who fare on the round of rebirth,
I declare no end-making.

There comes a time, brethren,
when Sineru,
monarch of mountains,
is consumed,[4] is destroyed,
comes no more to be.

But of beings hindered by ignorance,
fettered by craving,
who run for ever the round of rebirth,
I declare no end-making.

There comes a time, brethren,
when the mighty earth is consumed,
is destroyed,
comes no more to be.

But of beings hindered by ignorance,
fettered by craving,
who run on,
who fare on the round of rebirth,
I declare no end-making.

§

Just as, brethren, a dog tied up by a leash[5]
to a strong stake or pillar, keeps running round
and revolving round and round that stake or pillar,
even so, brethren,
the untaught manyfolk,
who discern not those who are Ariyans;
[127] who are unskilled in the Ariyan doctrine,
untrained in the Ariyan doctrine;
who discern not the worthy ones,
who are unskilled in the worthy doctrine,
untrained in the worthy doctrine,
regard body as the Self,
regard body as having a Self,
regard body as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in the body;

regard feeling as the Self,
regard feeling as having a Self,
regard feeling as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in feeling;

regard perception as the Self,
regard perception as having a Self,
regard perception as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in perception;

regard the activities as the Self,
regard the activities as having a Self,
regard the activities as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in the activities;

regard consciousness as the Self,
regard consciousness as having a Self,
regard consciousness as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in consciousness;

run and revolve round and round from body to body,
run and revolve round and round from feeling to feeling, run and revolve round and round from perception to perception, run and revolve round and round from activities to activities, run and revolve round and round from consciousness to consciousness.

They, running and revolving round and round from body to body, running and revolving round and round from feeling to feeling, running and revolving round and round from perception to perception, running and revolving round and round from activity to activity, running and revolving round and round from consciousness to consciousness are not released from body, are not released from feeling,

are not released from perception,

are not released from the activities,
are not released from consciousness, they are not released from rebirth,
from old age and decay,
from sorrow and grief,
from woe,
lamentation and despair;
they are not released from suffering, I declare.

§

But the well taught Ariyan disdple, brethren, who discers those who are Ariyans;
who are skilled in the Ariyan doctrine,
trained in the Ariyan doctrine;
who discern the worthy ones,
who are skilled in the worthy doctrine,
trained in the worthy doctrine,
regard not body as the Self,
regard not body as having a Self,
regard not body as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in the body;

regard not feeling as the Self,
regard not feeling as having a Self,
regard not feeling as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in feeling;

regard not perception as the Self,
regard not perception as having a Self,
regard not perception as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in perception;

regard not the activities as the Self,
regard not the activities as having a Self,
regard not the activities as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in the activities;

regard not consciousness as the Self,
regard not consciousness as having a Self,
regard not consciousness as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in consciousness;

do not run and revolve round and round from body to body, do not run and revolve round and round from feeling to feeling, do not run and revolve round and round from perception to perception, do not run and revolve round and round from activities to activities, do not run and revolve round and round from consciousness to consciousness.

They, not running and revolving round and round from body to body, not running and revolving round and round from feeling to feeling, not running and revolving round and round from perception to perception, not running and revolving round and round from activity to activity, not running and revolving round and round from consciousness to consciousness are released from body, are released from feeling,

are released from perception,
are released from the activities,
are released from consciousness, they are released from rebirth,
from old age and decay,
from sorrow and grief,
from woe,
lamentation and despair;
they are released from suffering, I declare.

---

[1] Read baddhula for text bhaddila.

[2] Ana-mata-'qga. See n. to K.S. ii, p. 118. J.P.T.S. 1906-7, p. 84. Thig. 499 and Pāli Dict., s.v., 'of which the beginning is inconceivable.'

[3] Sandhāvataṇ saaṇsarataṇ (gen plur.). Cf. Dhp. 153: Aneka jāti-saṇsāraṇ, sandhāvissaṇ anibbisaṇ.

[4] Uḍḍayhati for text dayhati.

[5] Comy. says the dog is the fool: the leash is view or opinion: the pillar is the self-body: and like a dog the many folk are tied by opinion and craving to the self-body or personality.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 100

Dutiya Gaddūla or Baddhūla Suttaṃ

The Leash (2)

---

[151] [127]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Incalculable, brethren, is the beginning
of this round of rebirth.

No beginning is made known
of beings
wrapt in ignorance,
fettered by craving,
who run on,
who fare on the round of rebirth.

■

Just like a dog, brethren, tied up by a leash to a strong stake or pillar -
if he goes,
he goes up to that stake or pillar;
if he stands still,
he stands close to that stake or pillar;
if he squats down,
he squats close to that stake or pillar;
if he lies down,
he lies dose to that stake or pillar.

■

Even so, brethren, the untaught manyfolk regard body (thus):|| ||

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me.'

They regard feeling (thus):|| ||

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me.'

They regard perception (thus):|| ||

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me.'

They regard the activities (thus):|| ||

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me.'

They regard consciousness (thus):|| ||

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me.'

■

If they go,
it is towards this fivefold grasping-group that they go.

If they stand still,
it is close to this fivefold grasping-group
that they stand still.

If they sit,
it is close to this fivefold grasping-group
that they sit.

If they lie down,
it is close to this fivefold grasping-group
that they lie down.

§

[128] Wherefore, brethren, again and again
must one regard one's own mind thus:

'For a long, long time
this mind has been tainted by lust,
by hatred,
by illusion.'

By a tainted mind, brethren,
beings are tainted.

By purity of mind beings are made pure.

Brethren, have ye ever seen a picture which they call 'a show-piece?'"[1]

"Yes, lord."

"Well, brethren, this so-called show-piece is thought out by mind.

Wherefore, brethren,
mind is even more diverse
than that show piece.[2]

Wherefore, brethren, again and again
must one regard one's own mind thus:

'For a long, long time
this mind has been tainted by lust,
by hatred,
by illusion.'

By a tainted mind, brethren,
beings are tainted.

By purity of mind beings are made pure.

§

Brethren, I see not any single group[3]
so diverse as the creatures of the animal world.

Those creatures of the animal world, brethren, are thought out by mind.[4]|| ||

Wherefore, brethren,
mind is even more diverse
than those creatures of the animal world.

Wherefore, brethren, again and again
must one regard one's own mind thus:

'For a long, long time
this mind has been tainted by lust,
by hatred,
by illusion.'

By a tainted [129] mind, brethren,
beings are tainted.

By purity of mind beings are made pure.[5]

§

Just as if, brethren,
a dyer or a painter,
if he have dye
or lac
or turmeric, indigo
or madder,
and a well-planed board or wall
or strip of cloth,
can fashion the likeness of a woman or of a man
complete in all its parts,[6]
even so, brethren,
the untaught manyfolk
creates and re-creates its body, creates and re-creates its feelings, creates and re-creates its perception, creates and re-creates its activities, creates and re-creates its consciousness.

§

Now as to this, what think you, brother?|| ||

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I

this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Therefore, brethren, every body whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every body should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every feeling whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every feeling should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every perception whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every activity whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every activity should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every consciousness whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

§

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;

by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Caraṇaṇ nāma cittaṇ. Expos.. 85 'A master-piece.' Comy., vicaraṇa-cittaṇ and adds that the artists went about (vicaranti) exhibiting their work, which, it seems, was like Hogarth's 'The Rake's Progress,' etc. Also, p. 185, 'consciousness (citta) is so called because of its variegated (citta-) nature.' 'Dazzling' or 'showy' or 'brilliant,' German 'bunt' would better express the meaning of citta (citra = μνϱιότοπος).

[2] Expos.. 86, 'Even more artistic than art itself.' Cf. Brethren, 378, 419.

[3] Eka-nikāya, Expos.. 32, 88.

[4] Comy. 'Thought out by work-of-mind. But we are not to suppose that that work-of-mind energizes thus (in the case, say, of quails and partridges) "we will become thus and thus varrgated." But it is action that leads to a birth-womb. Their varied nature has its origin in the womb.' Does this phrase of the Buddha point to a belief in a creative universal mind (cf. Mano-pubbangamā dhammā. Dhp. 1)? (It should be remembered that mind is a mode of action, i.e., karma. - original Ed.)

[5] Quoted Papañca, i, 232. where it is added that the purification must be done by the practice of the satipaṭṭhāna-maggo.

[6] Cf. S. ii, 101; K.S. ii, 71.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 101

Vāsi-Jaṭ'Opama (or Nāvā) Suttaṃ

Adze-Handle[1] (or The Ship)

---

[152] [129]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"By knowing, brethren, by seeing is, I declare,
the destruction of the āsavas,
not by not knowing,
by not seeing.

And by knowing what, brethren,
by seeing what,
is there destruction of the āsavas?

Thus:

"Such is body,
such is the arising of body,
such is the ceasing of body.

By thus knowing, brethren,
by thus seeing
is there destruction of the āsavas.

"Such is feeling,
such is the arising of feeling,
such is the ceasing of feeling.

By thus knowing, brethren,
by thus seeing
is there destruction of the āsavas.

"Such is perception,
such is the arising of perception,
such is the ceasing of perception.

By thus knowing, brethren,
by thus seeing
is there destruction of the āsavas.

"Such are the activities,
such is the arising of the activities,
such is the ceasing of the activities.

By thus knowing, brethren,
by thus seeing
is there destruction of the āsavas.

Such is consciousness,
such is the arising of consciousness,
such is the ceasing of consciousness."

By thus knowing, brethren,
by thus seeing
is there destruction of the Ãsavas.

§

Suppose, brethren,
in a brother who lives neglectful of self-training
there should arise this wish:

'0 that my heart were freed without grasping
from the āsavas.'

Yet for all that
his heart is not freed from the āsavas.

What is the cause of that?

[130] It must be said that it is his neglect of self-training.[2]

Self-training in what?

In the Four Earnest Contemplations,
in the Four Best Efforts,
in the Four Ways of Will-Power,
In the Five Controlling Faculties,
in the Five Powers,
in the Seven Limbs of Wisdom,
in the Ariyan Eightfold Path.

■

Just as if, brethren,
some eight
or ten or dozen hen's eggs
are not fully sat upon,
not fully warmed,
not fully brooded over[3]
by the hen.

Then suppose that in that hen
there arise such a wish as this:

'0 that my chicks
with foot and claw
or mouth and beak
might break through the eggshells
and so be safely hatched.'

Yet for all that
those chicks are not made fit
to break up the eggshells

with foot and claw
or mouth and beak,
and so be safely hatched.

What is the cause of that?

It is because those eight
or ten
or dozen hen's eggs, brethren, have not been fully sat upon,
fully warmed,
fully brooded over
by the hen.

■

Even so, brethren,
if in a brother who lives neglectful of self-training
there should arise this wish:

'0 that my heart were freed from the āsavas
without grasping,'
yet is his heart not freed from the āsavas
without grasping.

What is the cause of that?

It must be said:

'It is his lack of self-training.'

Training in what?

In the Four Earnest Contemplations,
in the Four Best Efforts,
in the Four Ways of Will-Power,
In the Five Controlling Faculties,

in the Five Powers,
in the Seven Limbs of Wisdom,
in the Ariyan Eightfold Path.

■

Just as if, brethren,
when some eight
or ten
or dozen hen's eggs
are fully sat upon,
fully warmed,
fully brodded over
by the hen,
such a wish as this
would not arise in her:

'0 that my chicks
with foot and claw,
with mouth and beak
might break through the eggshells
and so be safely hatched,'
and those chicks
would yet be made fit
to break up the eggshells
with foot and claw
or mouth and beak,
and so be safely hatched.

What is the cause of that?

It is because, brethren, those eight
or ten
or dozen hen's eggs
have been fully sat upon,

fully warmed,
fully brooded over
by the hen.

■

Even so, brethren,
in the brother who dwells attentive [131] to self-training there would not arise
such a wish as this:

'0 that my heart were freed from the āsavas
without grasping,'
and yet his heart is freed from them.

What is the cause of that?

It must be said it is his attention to self-training.

Training in what?

In the Four Earnest Contemplations,
in the Four Best Efforts,
in the Four Ways of Will-Power,
In the Five Controlling Faculties,
in the Five Powers,
in the Seven Limbs of Wisdom,
in the Ariyan Eightfold Path.

§

Just as if, brethren,
when a carpenter[4]
or carpenters apprentice looks upon his adze-handle and sees thereon
his thumb-mark
and his finger-marks
he does not thereby know:

'Thus and thus much of my adze-handle
has been worn away to-day,
thus much yesterday,
thus much at other times.'

But he knows the wearing away of it just by its wearing away.

Even so, brethren,
the brother who dwells attentive to self-training
has not this knowledge:

'Thus and thus much of the āsavas
has been worn away to-day,
thus much yesterday,
and thus much at other times,' but he knows the wearing away of them just by their wearing away.

§

Just as, brethren, in a sea-faring vessel, rigged with masts and stays[5]
and stranded on the bank for six months owing to the failure of water[6]

in the dry season,
its rigging is spoiled by wind and sun:
then, overstrung by a shower[7] in the rainy season, it is easily weakened
and rots away.

Even so, brethren,
in a brother who dwells attentive to self-training the fetters are easily weakened and rot away.

---

[1] Vāsijataṇ. Cf. Vin. iv, 168. The whole section occurs at A. iv, 126-7.

[2] Bhāvanā.

[3] Paribhāvitāni, 'covered by the wings of the hen.' Cf. M. i, 104, and Dialog.. 1, 86, n. [?]

[4] Comy., reading palagaṇḍo for text phalagaṇḍo, says 'carpenter' or 'knot-planer.' At A. iv, 127 the text also reads palagaṇḍo.

[5] Repeated at S. v, 51.

[6] Text, udake pariyādāya. S. v, 51 reads pariyenāya (? for pariyāyena, vicissim).

[7] Text has bandhanāni pavussakena meghena abhippavattāni; but S. v, 21 and A. iv, 127, read vuṭṭhāni, followed by Pāli Dict., wrongly I think; for this would mean 'the rigging had rained.' I take abhippavattāni to mean 'much twisted round, warped,' which would be the result of a wetting.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
10. Puppha Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

10. On Flowers

Sutta 102

Anicca-Saññā Suttaṃ aka Aniccatā (or Sañña)

Impermanence (or Perception)

---

[155] [132]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"The perceiving of impermanence, brethren,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out[1] all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust of rebirth,
all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, in the autumn season
a ploughman
ploughing with a great ploughshare, cuts through the spreading roots
as he ploughs;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, a reed-cutter cuts down a reed,
and grasping it by the end
shakes it up and down
and to and fro
and tosses it aside;[2];

even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, when a bunch of mangoes is cut from the stalk,
all the mangoes that are joined to the stalk go along with it;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, in a peaked house[3] all rafters whatsoever
go together to the peak,
slope to the peak,
join in the peak,
and of them all
the peak holds chief place;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,

wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, of all scented woods the dark sandalwood
is reckoned chief;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, of all scented heart-woods the red sandalwood
is reckoned chief;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

[133] Just as, brethren, of all scented flowers the jasmine
is reckoned chief;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, all petty princes whatsoever are subject to[4] a universal monarch;
just as the universal monarch
is reckoned chief of them;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, of all starry bodies whatsoever the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part of the moon's radiance, just as the moon
is reckoned chief of them;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,

if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

Just as, brethren, in the autumn season, when the sky[5] is opened up and cleared of clouds,
the sun,
leaping up into the firmament,[6] drives away all darkness from the heavens, and shines
and burns
and flashes forth;
even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'

And in what way, brethren,
does it so wear them out?

It is by seeing:

'Such is body,
such is the arising of body,

such is the ceasing of body,

Such is feeling,
such is the arising of feeling,
such is the ceasing of feeling,

Such is perception,
such is the arising of perception,
such is the ceasing of perception,

Such are the activities,
such is the arising the activities,
such is the ceasing the activities,

Such is consciousness,
such is the arising of consciousness,
such is the ceasing of consciousness.'

Even so, brethren,
the perceiving of impermanence,
if practised and enlarged,
wears out all sensual lust,
wears out all lust for body,
all lust for rebirth,
wears out all ignorance,
wears out,
tears out,
all conceit of 'I am.'"

---

[1] Pariyādiyati Cf. K.S. ii, 95: 'wholly finished'; Vin. Texts i, 20: 'conquers.'

[2] Nicchodtti. Cf. J.P.T.S. 1917, 53.

[3] Kūṭaninnā. Cf. do. 47 and S. v, 43.

[4] Anuyantā, 'following after.' At S. v, 44, the reading is anuyuttā, 'subject to.' We find the same interchange of readings at § 96 supra (text, 145).

[5] Devo. B. 'ākāsa' the (sky) god. Cf. S. i, 65: K.S. i, 89. At Itiv. 20 the reading is nabhe for deve.

[6] Text has abbhussukkamāno ('energizing'), but Itiv. 20 and Pāli Dict. read abbhussakamāno, 'springing up into the sky.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 103

Antā Suttaṃ

The Separates[1]

---

[134]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four separates, brethren.

What four?

The person-pack,[2]
the arising of the person-pack,
the ceasing of the person-pack,
the way to the ceasing of the person-pack.

§

And what, brethren, is the separate (called the) person-pack?

It is the five groups based on grasping.

What five?

The group based on body-grasping,
that based on feeling-grasping,
on perception-grasping,
on the activities-grasping,
on consciousness-grasping.

This, brethren, is called the separate of the person-pack.

■

And what, brethren, is the arising of the separate (called the) person-pack?

Just that craving which,
accompanied by lure and lust,
leads down to rebirth,
to wit:

the craving for feeling,
the craving for rebirth,
the craving for no rebirth.

This, brethren, is called the arising of the separate (called) person-pack.

■

And what, brethren, is the ceasing
of the separate called the person-pack?

It is the utter passionless ceasing,
the giving up,
the abandonment of,
the release from,
the freedom from
attachment to,
that craving.

This, brethren, is called the ceasing of the separate (called) person-pack.

■

And what, brethren,
is the way going to
the ceasing of the person-pack?

It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, to wit:

[135] Right view,
right aims,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

This, brethren, is called the way going to the ceasing of the separate (called) person-pack.

These, brethren are the Four Separates.

---

[1] Antā. Comy., 'koṭṭhāsā,' divisions: not 'extremes' here, as in the dveantā of K.S. ii, p. 13. Cf. Sum. Vilās, p. 103. Childers, 8. Sakkāyo suggests 'goals of doctrine.' The Sangīti S. (Dialogues iii, 210) has three 'limits,' omitting the fourth.

[2] Sak-kāya, i.e., the pack or group or cluster (kāya: derivation probably from ci, to heap up, Pāli Dict.) of one's self. Cf. nikāya, and other renderings supra, p. 86, etc. -[original] Ed.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 104

Dukkha Suttaṃ

Suffering

---

[135]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, I will teach you suffering,
the arising of suffering,
the ceasing of suffering,
the way leading to the ceasing of suffering.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, brethren, is suffering?

It is to be called the five grasping groups.

What five?

The body-grasping-group,
the feeling-grasping-group,
the perception-grasping-group,
the the activities-grasping-group,
the consciousness-grasping-group.

This, brethren, is called suffering.

■

And what, brethren, is the arising of suffering?

It is that craving which,
accompanied by lure and lust,
leads downward to rebirth,
to wit:

the craving for feeling,
the craving for rebirth,
the craving for no rebirth.

This, brethren, is called the arising of suffering.

■

And what, brethren, is the ceasing of suffering?

It is the utter passionless ceasing,
the giving up,
the abandonment of,
the release from,
the freedom from
attachment to,
that craving.

This, brethren, is called the ceasing of suffering.

■

And what, brethren,
is the way going to
the ceasing of suffering?

It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, to wit:

[135] Right view,
right aims,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

This, brethren, is called the way going to the ceasing of suffering."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 105

Sakkāya Suttaṃ

The Person-pack

---

[135]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, brethren,
the person-pack,
the arising of the person-pack,
the ceasing of the person-pack,
the way to the ceasing of the person-pack.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, brethren, is the person-pack?

It is the five groups based on grasping.

What five?

The group based on body-grasping,
that based on feeling-grasping,
on perception-grasping,
on the activities-grasping,
on consciousness-grasping.

This, brethren, is called the person-pack.

■

And what, brethren, is the arising of the person-pack?

Just that craving which,
accompanied by lure and lust,
leads down to rebirth,
to wit:

The craving for feeling,
the craving for rebirth,
the craving for no rebirth.

This, brethren, is called
the arising of the person-pack.

■

And what, brethren, is the ceasing
of the person-pack?

It is the utter passionless ceasing,
the giving up,
the abandonment of,
the release from,
the freedom from
attachment to,
that craving.

This, brethren, is called
the ceasing of the person-pack.

■

And what, brethren,
is the way going to
the ceasing of the person-pack?

It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, to wit:

Right view,
right aims,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

This, brethren, is called
the way going to the ceasing of the person-pack."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 106

Pariññeyya Suttaṃ

Things to be Understood[1]

---

[136]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, I will tell you of the things to be understood,
of understanding,
and of the person who has understood.

§

And what, brethren, are the things[2] to be understood?

Body, brethren, is a thing to be understood,
feeling, is a thing to be understood,
perception, is a thing to be understood,
the activities, is a thing to be understood,
consciousness is a thing to be understood.

These, brethren, are the things to be understood.

■

And what, brethren, is understanding?

It is the destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion.

This, brethren, is called understanding.

■

And who, brethren, is the person who has understood?

Such and such a venerable one,
of such a name,
of such a clan.

This one, brethren, is the person who has understood.

---

[1] Supra § 23, text p. 26.

[2] Dhammā Cf. Mrs. Rh. D. on Prof. Th. Stcherbatzky's Vasabandhu. Bulletin of the School of Oriental Studies, 1924.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 107

Paṭhama Samaṇa Suttaṃ

Recluses (1)

---

[136]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, there are these five grasping-groups.

What five?

The body-grasping group,
the feeling-grasping-group,
the perception-grasping-group,
the activities-grasping-group,
the consciousness-grasping-group.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins, brethren,
understand not as they really are
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the five grasping-groups[1]
they, for me, are not approved of among recluses as recluses
nor among brahmins as brahmins,
nor have those venerable ones come
even in this life
fully to know of themselves,
to realize,
to live
in the attainment of,
the good of
being recluse or brahmin.

But whatsoever recluses or brahmins, brethren, understand as they really are
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the five grasping-groups
they, for me, are approved of among recluses as recluses

and among brahmins as brahmins,
and those venerable ones have come
even in this life
fully to know of themselves,
to realize,
to live
in the attainment of,
the good of
being recluse or brahmin."

---

[1] Cf. S. ii, § 37 (8): K.S. ii, 117; above, pp. 108, 127.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 108

Dutiya Samaṇa Suttaṃ

Recluses (2)

---

[135]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, there are these five grasping-groups.

What five?

The body-grasping group,
the feeling-grasping-group,
the perception-grasping-group,
the activities-grasping-group,
the consciousness-grasping-group.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins, brethren,
understand not as they really are
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the five grasping-groups
they, for me, are not approved of among recluses as recluses
nor among brahmins as brahmins,
nor have those venerable ones come
even in this life
fully to know of themselves,
to realize,
to live
in the attainment of,
the good of
being recluse or brahmin.

But whatsoever recluses or brahmins, brethren,
understand as they really are
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the five grasping-groups
they, for me, are approved of among recluses as recluses
and among brahmins as brahmins,

and those venerable ones have come
even in this life
fully to know of themselves,
to realize,
to live
in the attainment of,
the good of
being recluse or brahmin."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 109

Sot'Āpanna Suttaṃ

Stream-Winner

---

[137]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, there are these five grasping-groups.

What five?

The body-grasping group,
the feeling-grasping-group,
the perception-grasping-group,
the activities-grasping-group,
the consciousness-grasping-group.

And when, brethren, the Ariyan disciple understands
as they really are
both the arising and the ending,
and the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
and the escape from
the five grasping-groups,
this one, brethren,
is called an Ariyan disciple
who is a stream-wmner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 110

Arahanta Suttaṃ

The Arahant

---

[137]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, there are these five grasping-groups.

What five?

The body-grasping group,
the feeling-grasping-group,
the perception-grasping-group,
the activities-grasping-group,
the consciousness-grasping-group.

And when, brethren, a brother, having seen as they really are both the arising and the ending of,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
and the escape from
the five grasping-groups,
is released without grasping, -
this one, brethren, is called || ||

'A brother who is an arahant, in whom the āsavas are destroyed,
who has lived the life,
done the task,
lifted the burden,
won his own welfare,[1]
worn out the fetters of rebirth, and is released by perfect insight.'"

---

[1] Anuppattā-sad'attho.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 111

Paṭhama Chanda-Rāga Suttaṃ

Desirous-Lusful[1] (1)

---

[137]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving there be concerning body, do ye abandon that.

Thus will that body be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

[138] Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving there be
concerning feeling, do ye abandon that.

Thus will that feeling be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

"Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving there be
concerning perception, do ye abandon that.

Thus will that perception be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

"Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving there be
concerning the activities, do ye abandon that.

Thus will activities be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

"Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving there be
concerning consciousness, do ye abandon that.

Thus will that consciousness be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

[1] Trans. Warren, p. 163. [sic his translation is of the very similar §112] Cf. § 25.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
11. Anta Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

11. On Separates

Sutta 112

Dutiya Chandarāga Suttaṃ

Desirous-Lustful (2)

---

[138]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving,
whatsoever grasping after systems,
addiction to dogma
and mental bias there be concerning body, do ye abandon them.

Thus will that body be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving,
whatsoever grasping after systems,
addiction to dogma
and mental bias there be
concerning feeling, do ye abandon that.

Thus will that feeling be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

"Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving,
whatsoever grasping after systems,
addiction to dogma
and mental bias there be
concerning perception, do ye abandon that.

Thus will that perception be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

"Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,
whatsoever craving,
whatsoever grasping after systems,
addiction to dogma
and mental bias there be
concerning the activities, do ye abandon that.

Thus will activities be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

"Whatsoever desire, brethren,
whatsoever lust,
whatsoever lure,

whatsoever craving,
whatsoever grasping after systems,
addiction to dogma
and mental bias there be
concerning consciousness, do ye abandon that.

Thus will that consciousness be abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 113

Paṭhama Avijjā (or Bhikkhu) Suttaṃ

Ignorance (or The Brother)

---

[138]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"'Ignorance, ignorance,' 'tis said, lord.

Pray, lord, what is ignorance,
and how far is one ignorant?"

"Herein, brother, the untaught manyfolk know not body, know not the arising of body,
know not the ceasing of body,
know not the way going to the ceasing of body.

■

They know not feeling,
know not the arising of feeling,
know not the ceasing of feeling,
know not the way going to the ceasing of feeling.

■

They know not perception,
know not the arising of perception, know not the ceasing of perception, know not the way going to the ceasing of perception.

■

They know not the activities,
know not the arising of the activities,
know not the ceasing of the activities, know not the way going to the ceasing of the activities.

■

They know not consciousness,
know not the arising of consciousness, know not the ceasing of consciousness, know not the way going to the ceasing of consciousness.

This, brother, is called ignorance,
and thus far is one ignorant."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 114

Vijjā (or Bhikkhu) Suttaṃ

Wisdom (or The Brother)

---

[139]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"'Wisdom, wisdom,' 'tis said, lord.

Pray, lord, what is wisdom,
and how far has one wisdom?"

"Herein, brother, the well-taught Ariyan disciple understands body, understands the arising of body, understands the ceasing of body, understands the way going to the ceasing of body.

■

He understands feeling, understands the arising of feeling, understands the ceasing of feeling, understands the way going to the ceasing of feeling.

■

He understands perception, understands the arising of perception, understands the ceasing of perception, understands the way going to the ceasing of perception.

■

He understands the activities, understands the arising of the activities, understands the ceasing of the activities, understands the way going to the ceasing of the activities.

■

He understands consciousness, understands the arising of consciousness, understands the ceasing of consciousness, understands the way going to the ceasing of consciousness.

This, brother, is called wisdom,
and thus far has one wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 115

Paṭhama Kathika Suttaṃ

The Teacher (1)[1]

---

[139]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"'Norm-teacher, Norm-teacher,' is the saying, lord.

How far, lord, is one a Norm-teacher?"

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from body,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from body,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'[2]

If a brother,
by revulsion from body
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'

■

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from feeling,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,

well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from feeling,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from feeling
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'

■

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from perception,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from perception,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from perception
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'

■

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from the activities,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from the activities,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from the activities
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'

■

[140] "If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from consciousness,

of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from consciousness,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from consciousness
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'[3]

---

[1] Cf. S. ii, 18: K.S. ii, 14.

[2] Dhamm-ā-nu-Dhamma paṭipanno.

[3] Comy. says the first is a preacher, the second (sekha) one on the Paths, the third (asekha) is Arahant.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 116

Dutiya Kathika Suttaṃ

The Preacher (2)

---

[140]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"'Norm-teacher, Norm-teacher,' is the saying, lord.

How far, lord, is one a Norm-teacher?

How far is one a teacher of what conforms with the Norm?

How far has a brother won Nibbāna?"

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from body,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from body,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from body
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'

■

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from feeling,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from feeling,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from feeling
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'

■

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from perception,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from perception,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,

well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from perception
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'

■

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from the activities,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from the activities,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from the activities
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'

■

"If a brother teaches a doctrine
of revulsion from consciousness,
of its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'Norm-teacher,' brother.

If a brother be apt
for revulsion from consciousness,
for its fading away,
its ceasing,
well may he be called
'one apt in teaching
what conforms with the Norm.'

If a brother,
by revulsion from consciousness
be released from grasping
by making it to fade away,
by making it to cease,
well may he be called
'a brother who in this very life hath won Nibbāna.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 117

Bandhanā Suttaṃ

Bonds

---

[140]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Herein, brethren, the untaught manyfolk,
who discern not those who are Ariyans;
who are unskilled in the Ariyan doctrine,
untrained in the Ariyan doctrine;
who discern not the worthy ones,
who are unskilled in the worthy doctrine,
untrained in the worthy doctrine,
regard body as the Self,
regard body as having a Self,
regard body as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in the body.

Such an one is called
one of the untaught manyfolk,
one fettered by the bonds of body,
one bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has not sighted the (further) shore,[1]
one who has not sighted the beyond,[2]
one who is born bound,
who dies bound,
one who from this world
goes to the world beyond.

■

He regards feeling as the Self,
regard feeling as having a Self,
regard feeling as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in feeling.

Such an one is called
one of the untaught manyfolk,

one fettered by the bonds of feeling,
one bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has not sighted the (further) shore,
one who has not sighted the beyond,
one who is born bound,
who dies bound,
one who from this world
goes to the world beyond.

■

He regards perception as the Self,
regard perception as having a Self,
regard perception as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in perception.

Such an one is called
one of the untaught manyfolk,
one fettered by the bonds of perception,
one bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has not sighted the (further) shore,
one who has not sighted the beyond,
one who is born bound,
who dies bound,
one who from this world
goes to the world beyond.

■

He regards the activities as the Self,
regard the activities as having a Self,
regard the activities as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in the activities.

Such an one is called
one of the untaught manyfolk,
one fettered by the bonds of the activities,

one bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has not sighted the (further) shore,
one who has not sighted the beyond,
one who is born bound,
who dies bound,
one who from this world
goes to the world beyond.

■

He regards consciousness as the Self,
regard consciousness as having a Self,
regard consciousness as being in the Self,
regard the self as being in consciousness;

Such an one is called
one of the untaught manyfolk,
one fettered by the bonds of consciousness,
one bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has not sighted the (further) shore,
one who has not sighted the beyond,
one who is born bound,
who dies bound,
one who from this world
goes to the world beyond.

§

[141] But, brethren the well taught Ariyan disdple, brethren, who discers those who are Ariyans;
who are skilled in the Ariyan doctrine,
trained in the Ariyan doctrine;
who discern the worthy ones,

who are skilled in the worthy doctrine,
trained in the worthy doctrine,
regard not body as the Self,
regard not body as having a Self,
regard not body as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in the body.

This one, brethren, is called
a well-taught Ariyan disciple,
not fettered by the bonds of body,
not bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has sighted the (further) shore,
one who has sighted the beyond.

Released is he,
I declare,
from suffering.

■

He regards not feeling as the Self,
regard not feeling as having a Self,
regard not feeling as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in feeling.

This one, brethren, is called
a well-taught Ariyan disciple,
not fettered by the bonds of feeling,
not bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has sighted the (further) shore,
one who has sighted the beyond.

Released is he,
I declare,
from suffering.

■

He regards not perception as the Self,
regard not perception as having a Self,
regard not perception as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in perception.

This one, brethren, is called
a well-taught Ariyan disciple,
not fettered by the bonds of perception,
not bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has sighted the (further) shore,
one who has sighted the beyond.

Released is he,
I declare,
from suffering.

■

He regards not the activities as the Self,
regard not the activities as having a Self,
regard not the activities as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in the activities.

This one, brethren, is called
a well-taught Ariyan disciple,
not fettered by the bonds of the activities,
not bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has sighted the (further) shore,
one who has sighted the beyond.

Released is he,
I declare,
from suffering.

■

He regards not consciousness as the Self,
regard not consciousness as having a Self,
regard not consciousness as being in the Self,
regard not the self as being in consciousness.

This one, brethren, is called
a well-taught Ariyan disciple,
not fettered by the bonds of consciousness,
not bound to the inner and the outer,
one who has sighted the (further) shore,
one who has sighted the beyond.

Released is he,
I declare,
from suffering."

---

[1] A-tīra-dassī. Cf. A. iii, 368.

[2] A-pāra-dassī.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 118

Paṭhama Parimucchita Suttaṃ

Infatuated[1] (1)

---

[141]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"As to this, what think ye, brethren?

Do ye regard body as

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard body:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

■

Do ye regard feeling as

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard feeling:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

■

Do ye regard perception as

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard perception:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

■

Do ye regard the activities as

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard the activities:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

■

Do ye regard consciousness as

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard consciousness:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

§

So seeing, brethren, one conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Parimucchita, in this sense [Ed.: mucchita] at Udāna, 75.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 119

Dutiya Parimucchita Suttaṃ

Infatuated (2)

---

[141]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"As to this, what think ye, brethren?

Do ye regard body as

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me'?"

[142] "Even so, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard body:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

■

Do ye regard feeling as

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me'?"

"Even so, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard feeling:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

■

Do ye regard perception as

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me'?"

"Even so, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard perception:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

■

Do ye regard the activities as

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me'?"

"Even so, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard the activities:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

■

Do ye regard consciousness as

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me'?"

"Even so, lord."

"Well said, brethren!

Thus to regard consciousness:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me' -

that is how it should be seen
with perfect insight.

§

So seeing, brethren, one conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 120

Saṇyojaniya Suttaṃ

The Fetter

---

[142]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"I will show you, brethren,
the things that make for bondage[1]
and the fetter.

Do ye Usten to it.

And what, brethren,
are the things that make for bondage,
and what is the fetter?

Body, brethren,
is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust of body
are the fetter of body.

Feeling, brethren,
is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust of feeling
are the fetter of body.

Perception, brethren,
is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust of perception
are the fetter of body.

The activities, brethren,
is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust of the activities
are the fetter of body.

Consciousness, brethren,
is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust of consciousness
are the fetter of body.

These, brethren, are called:
'The things that make for bondage'
and these are
'the fetters.'"

---

[1] Saññojanīya-dhammā. Cf. S. ii, 86.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Upādāniya Suttaṃ

Grasping

Sutta 121

---

[142]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"I will show you, brethren,
the things that make for grasping,[1]
and grasping.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, brethren, are the things that make for grasping,
and what is grasping?

Body, brethren,
is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust therein are grasping.

Feeling, brethren,
is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust therein are grasping.

Perception, brethren,
is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust therein are grasping.

The activities, brethren,
is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust therein are grasping.

Consciousness, brethren,
[143] is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust therein are grasping.

These, brethren,
are the things that make for grasping.

This is grasping."

---

[1] Upadaniya dhammā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 122

Sīla Suttaṃ

Virtue

---

[143]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita[1]
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"Friend Sāriputta,
what are the conditions
that should be pondered with method[2]
by a virtuous brother?"

"The five grasping-groups, friend Koṭṭhita,
are the conditions
which should be pondered with method
by a virtuous brother,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,[3]
as a dart,[4]
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,[5]
empty
and soulless.

■

What five groups?

The group of body-grasping,
the group of feeling-grasping,

the group of perception-grasping,
the group of activities-grasping,
the group of consciousness-grasping.

■

By a virtuous brother, friend Koṭṭhita, these five groups of grasping should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

■

Indeed,[6] friend, it is possible for a virtuous brother
pondering these five groups of grasping with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless
to realize the fruits of stream-winning."

§

"But, friend Sāriputta,
what are the things that should be pondered with method
by a brother who is a stream-winner?"

[144] "By a brother who is a stream-winner, friend Koṭṭhita,
it is these same five groups of grasping
that should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

Indeed, friend, it is possible for a brother who is a stream-winner
pondering these five groups of grasping with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,

empty
and soulless
to realize the fruits of once-returning."

§

"But, friend Sāriputta,
what are the things that should be pondered with method
by a brother who is a once-returner?

"By one who is a once-returner, friend Koṭṭhita,
it is these same five groups of grasping
that should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

Indeed, friend, it is possible for a brother who is a once-returner,
pondering these five groups of grasping with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,

as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless
to realize the fruits of never-returning."

§

"But, friend Sāriputta,
what are the things that should be pondered with method
by one who is a never-returner?

"By one who is a never-returner, friend Koṭṭhita,
it is these same five groups of grasping
that should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

Indeed, friend, it is possible for a brother who is a never-returner,
pondering these five groups of grasping with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,

as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless
to realize the fruits of arahantship."

§

"But what, friend Sāriputta,
are the things that should be pondered with method
by one who is arahant?"

"By one who is an arahant, friend Koṭṭhita,
it is these same five groups of grasping
that should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

For the arahant, friend,
there is nothing further to be done,

nor is there return to upheaping of what is done.[7]

Nevertheless, these things,
if practised and enlarged,
conduce to a happy existence
and to self-possession
even in this present life."

---

[1] Cf. S. ii, 112-5.

[2] Yoniso manasikattabbā. Cf. K.S. ii, 6, n.

[3] Gaṇḍato, def at S. iv, 83, as at Dialog. i, 87, 'the four-element built, of parents sprung, by rice and gruel supported, by nature impermanent, liable to be broken up, crushed, shattered, to crumble away.' Comy. anto-dos'atthena (? as an inward sore).

[4] Sallato, a synonym for kāma, S. ii, 230: A. iv, 289.

[5] Palokato. Cf. S. iv, 53 (paluṭjana-dhammaṇ 'crumbling').

[6] The text almost suggests that a further question, put here, has been omitted or lost.

[7] N'atthi paṭicayo. The phrase is used at Ud. 35, where Comy. says pahīna-kilesānaṇ puna pahāṇe na kiccaṇ atthi, 'there is nothing to be done in striking-off for one who has put off the taints.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 123

Sutava Suttaṃ

The Well-Taught

---

[144]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"Friend Sāriputta,
what are the conditions
that should be pondered with method
by a well-taught brother?"

"The five grasping-groups, friend Koṭṭhita,
are the conditions
which should be pondered with method
by a well-taught brother,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

■

What five groups?

The group of body-grasping,
the group of feeling-grasping,
the group of perception-grasping,

the group of activities-grasping,
the group of consciousness-grasping.

§

By a well-taught brother, friend Koṭṭhita, these five groups of grasping should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

Indeed, friend, it is possible for a well-taught brother
pondering these five groups of grasping with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty

and soulless
to realize the fruits of stream-winning."

■

"But, friend Sāriputta,
what are the things that should be pondered with method
by a brother who is a stream-winner?"

"By a brother who is a stream-winner, friend Koṭṭhita,
it is these same five groups of grasping
that should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

Indeed, friend, it is possible for a brother who is a stream-winner
pondering these five groups of grasping with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty

and soulless
to realize the fruits of once-returning."

■

"But, friend Sāriputta,
what are the things that should be pondered with method
by a brother who is a once-returner?

"By one who is a once-returner, friend Koṭṭhita,
it is these same five groups of grasping
that should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

Indeed, friend, it is possible for a brother who is a once-returner,
pondering these five groups of grasping with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty

and soulless
to realize the fruits of never-returning."

■

"But, friend Sāriputta,
what are the things that should be pondered with method
by one who is a never-returner?

"By one who is a never-returner, friend Koṭṭhita,
it is these same five groups of grasping
that should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

Indeed, friend, it is possible for a brother who is a never-returner,
pondering these five groups of grasping with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty

and soulless
to realize the fruits of arahantship."

■

"But what, friend Sāriputta,
are the things that should be pondered with method
by one who is arahant?"

"By one who is an arahant, friend Koṭṭhita,
it is these same five groups of grasping
that should be pondered with method,
as being impermanent,
suffering,
sick,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as ill-health,
as alien,
as transitory,
empty
and soulless.

For the arahant, friend,
there is nothing further to be done,
nor is there return to upheaping of what is done.

Nevertheless, these things,
if practised and enlarged,
conduce to a happy existence
and to self-possession
even in this present life."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 124

Paṭhama Kappa Suttaṃ

Kappa[1] (1)

---

[145]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Kappa,
came to the Exalted One
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Kappa thus addressed the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, how should one know,
how should one see,
so that in this body,
with its consciousness
as well as ia all external objects,
he has no more thought of
'I' and 'mine,'
no leanings to conceit?"

"Whatsoever bodily form, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,'

Whatsoever feeling, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,

whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,'

Whatsoever perception, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,'

Whatsoever activities, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,'

Whatsoever consciousness, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,

-to you so knowing,
so seeing, Kappa,
in this body
with its consciousness
as well as ia all external objects, there is no thought of 'I' and 'mine,' no leaning to conceit."

---

[1] Cf. Thag. 567: Brethren, p. 259. A dissolute young prince who renounced the world after hearing a discourse from the Master on the asubhāni (foul things) and became arahant, even while his head was being shaved for ordination. These two sections are the same as at S. ii, 253. For mān'anusayo see K.S. ii 167, n., and sup. Rādha-sutta § 71, 92 Rāhula-sutta.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
12. Dhamma-Kathika Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

12. On Pious Converse

Sutta 125

Dutiya Kappa Suttaṃ

Kappa (2)

---

[145]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Kappa,
came to the Exalted One
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Kappa thus addressed the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, how should one know,
how should one see,
so that in this body,[1]
together with its consciousness
and in all external objects,
the mind has gone away from all thought of
'I' and 'mine,'
gone from conceit,
has passed beyond the ways of conceit,
is calmed,
and utterly released?"

"Whatsoever bodily form, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
[146] this is not the self of me,'

Whatsoever feeling, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,

gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,'

Whatsoever perception, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,'

Whatsoever activities, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form

you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,'

Whatsoever consciousness, Kappa,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near,
whatsoever bodily form
you see as it really is
by perfect insight thus:

'This is not mine;
this am not I;
this is not the self of me,

-to you so knowing,
so seeing, Kappa,
as to this body,
together with its consciousness
and in all external objects,
the mind has gone away from all thought of
'I' and 'mine,'
gone from conceit,
has passed beyond the ways of conceit,
is calmed,
and utterly released."

[1] Kāyo, lit.: this group or 'pack.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 126

Paṭhama Samudaya-Dhamma Suttaṃ

Of A Coming-to-Pass-Nature (1)

---

[146]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"'Ignorance, ignorance!' is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, what is ignorance,
and to what extent is one ignorant?"

"Herein, brother, the untaught manyfolk know not as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to come to pass!

The nature of body is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to pass away!

The nature of body is to pass away!'[1]

They know not as it really is that:[ed1]

'The nature of body is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of body is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to come to pass!

The nature of feeling is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to pass away!

The nature of feeling is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of feeling is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to come to pass!

The nature of perception is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to pass away!

The nature of perception is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of perception is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to come to pass!

The nature of the activities is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to pass away!

The nature of the activities is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of the activities is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to come to pass!

The nature of consciousness is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to pass away!

The nature of consciousness is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of consciousness is to come to pass and pass away!'

This, brother is called ignorance, and thus far is one ignorant."

§

[than]

Whereupon that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"'Wisdom! Wisdom!'[2] is the saying, Lord.

Pray, lord, what is wisdom,
and how far has one wisdom?'

Herein, brother, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows [147] as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to come to pass!

The nature of body is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to pass away!

The nature of body is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of body is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to come to pass!

The nature of feeling is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to pass away!

The nature of feeling is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of feeling is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to come to pass!

The nature of perception is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to pass away!

The nature of perception is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of perception is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to come to pass!

The nature of the activities is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to pass away!

The nature of the activities is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of the activities is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to come to pass!

The nature of consciousness is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to pass away!

The nature of consciousness is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of consciousness is to come to pass and pass away!'

This, brother is called wisdom, and thus far has one wisdom."

---

[1] Cf. Dialogues ii, 26 f.

[2] Cf. supra, p. 139

[ed1] The third clause is left out by Woodward throughout the first series but is included in the second series.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 127

Dutiya Samudaya-Dhamma Suttaṃ

Of A Coming-to-Pass-Nature (2)

---

[147]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"'Ignorance, ignorance!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend Sāriputta what is ignorance,
and to what extent is one ignorant?"

"Herein, friend Koṭṭhita, the untaught manyfolk know not as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to come to pass!

The nature of body is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to pass away!

The nature of body is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of body is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to come to pass!

The nature of feeling is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to pass away!

The nature of feeling is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of feeling is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to come to pass!

The nature of perception is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to pass away!

The nature of perception is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of perception is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to come to pass!

The nature of the activities is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to pass away!

The nature of the activities is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of the activities is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to come to pass!

The nature of consciousness is to come to pass!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to pass away!

The nature of consciousness is to pass away!'

They know not as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of consciousness is to come to pass and pass away!'

This, friend Koṭṭhita, is called ignorance,
and thus far is one ignorant."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 128

Tatiya Samudaya-Dhamma Suttaṃ

Of A Coming-to-Pass-Nature (3)

---

[147]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"'Wisdom, wisdom!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend Sāriputta what is wisdom,
and to what extent has one wisdom?"

"Herein, friend Koṭṭhita, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to come to pass!

The nature of body is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to pass away!

The nature of body is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of body is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of body is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to come to pass!

The nature of feeling is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to pass away!

The nature of feeling is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of feeling is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of feeling is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to come to pass!

The nature of perception is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to pass away!

The nature of perception is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of perception is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of perception is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to come to pass!

The nature of the activities is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to pass away!

The nature of the activities is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of the activities is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of the activities is to come to pass and pass away!'

■

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to come to pass!

The nature of consciousness is to come to pass!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to pass away!

The nature of consciousness is to pass away!'

Knows as it really is that:

'The nature of consciousness is to come to pass and pass away!

The nature of consciousness is to come to pass and pass away!'

This, friend Koṭṭhita, is called wisdom,
and thus far has one wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 129

Paṭhama Assāda Suttaṃ

Satisfaction (1)

---

[147]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"'Ignorance! Ignorance!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend Sāriputta what is ignorance,
and to what extent is one ignorant?"

"Herein, friend, the untaught manyfolk know not
as it [148] really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from body.

They know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from feeling.

They know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from perception.

They know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the activities.

They know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from consciousness.

This, friend, is ignorance,
and thus far is one ignorant."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 130

Dutiya Assāda Suttaṃ

Satisfaction (2)

---

[148]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"'Wisdom! Wisdom!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend Sāriputta what is wisdom,
and to what extent has one wisdom?"

"Herein, friend, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from body.

Knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from feeling.

Knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from perception.

Knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the activities.

Knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from consciousness.

This, friend, is wisdom,
and thus far has one wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 131

Paṭhama Samudaya Suttaṃ

Coming to Pass (1)

---

[148]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"'Ignorance! Ignorance!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend Sāriputta what is ignorance,
and to what extent is one ignorant?"

"Herein, friend, the untaught manyfolk know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from body.

■

They know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from feeling.

■

They know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,

the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from perception.

■

They know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from activities.

■

They know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from consciousness.

This, friend, is ignorance,
and thus far is one ignorant."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 132

Dutiya Samudaya Suttaṃ

Coming-to-Pass (2)

---

[148]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"'Wisdom! Wisdom!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend Sāriputta what is wisdom,
and to what extent has one wisdom?"

"Herein, friend, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows
as it really is that:

"Herein, friend, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from body.

■

They know
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from feeling.

■

They know
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from perception.

■

They know
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from activities.

■

They know
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,,
the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from consciousness.

This, friend, is wisdom,
and thus far has one wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 133

Paṭhama Koṭṭhita Suttaṃ

Koṭṭhita

---

[148]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Sāriputta
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta:

"'Ignorance! Ignorance!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend Sāriputta what is ignorance,
and to what extent is one ignorant?"

"Herein, friend, the untaught manyfolk know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from body.

They know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from feeling.

They know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from perception.

They know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the activities.

They know not
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from consciousness.

This, friend, is ignorance,
and thus far is one ignorant."

"'Wisdom! Wisdom!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend Sāriputta what is wisdom,
and to what extent has one wisdom?"

"Herein, friend, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from body.

Knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from feeling.

Knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from perception.

Knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the activities.

Knows
as it really is
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from consciousness.

This, friend, is wisdom,
and thus far has one wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Sutta 134

Dutiya Koṭṭhita Suttaṃ

Koṭṭhita (2)

---

[148]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita:

"'Ignorance! Ignorance!' is the saying, friend Koṭṭhita.

Pray, friend Koṭṭhita what is ignorance,
and to what extent is one ignorant?"

"Herein, friend, the untaught manyfolk know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from body.

They know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from feeling.

They know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from perception.

They know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the activities.

They know not
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from consciousness.

This, friend, is ignorance,
and thus far is one ignorant."

§

"'Wisdom! Wisdom!' is the saying, friend Koṭṭhita.

Pray, friend Koṭṭhita what is wisdom,
and to what extent has one wisdom?"

"Herein, friend, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from body.

Knows
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from feeling.

Knows
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from perception.

Knows
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from the activities.

Knows
as it really is
the coming-to-pass,
the passing-away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from consciousness.

This, friend, is wisdom,
and thus far has one wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
13. Avijjā Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

13. On Ignorance

Tatiya Koṭṭhita Suttaṃ

Sutta 135

Koṭṭhita (3)

---

[148]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta
and the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
in the Deer-Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
came to the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
he thus addressed the venerable Mahā-Koṭṭhita:

"'Ignorance! Ignorance!' is the saying, friend Koṭṭhita.

Pray, friend Koṭṭhita what is ignorance,
and to what extent is one ignorant?"

"Herein, friend, the untaught manyfolk know not body,
know not the coming-to-pass of body,
know not the passing-away of body, know not the way leading to the ceasing of body.[ed1]

They know not feeling,
know not the coming-to-pass of feeling,
know not the passing-away of feeling,
know not the way leading to the ceasing of feeling.

They know not perception,
know not the coming-to-pass of perception, know not the passing-away of perception, know not the way leading to the ceasing of perception.

They know not the activities,
know not the coming-to-pass of the activities,
know not the passing-away of the activities, know not the way leading to the ceasing of the activities.

They know not consciousness,
know not the coming-to-pass of consciousness, know not the passing-away of consciousness, know not the way leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

This, friend, is ignorance,
and thus far is one ignorant."

§

"'Wisdom! Wisdom!' is the saying, friend Koṭṭhita.

Pray, friend Koṭṭhita what is wisdom,
and to what extent has one wisdom?"

"Herein, friend, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows body, knows the coming-to-pass of body, knows the passing-away of body, knows the way leading to the ceasing of body.

Knows feeling,
knows the coming-to-pass of feeling,
knows the passing-away of feeling,
knows the way leading to the ceasing of feeling.

Knows perception,
knows the coming-to-pass of perception,
knows the passing-away of perception, knows the way leading to the ceasing of perception.

Knows the activities,
knows the coming-to-pass of the activities,
knows the passing-away of the activities,
knows the way leading to the ceasing of the activities.

Knows consciousness,
knows the coming-to-pass of consciousness, knows the passing-away of consciousness, knows the way leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

This, friend, is wisdom,
and thus far has one wisdom."

---

ed1 Woodward here in his abridgment has 'the way going to the passing away of body'. What I have used is his translation elsewhere. It is not the 'passing away' of body that is the knowledge required here, but the 'ending' (his 'cessation') of body such as to end it's further arisings and passings-away.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 136

Kukkula Suttaṃ

Glowing Embers[1]

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Body, brethren, is (a mass of) glowing embers.

Feeling is a mass of glowing embers.

Perception is a mass of glowing embers.

The activities is a mass of glowing embers.

Consciousness is a mass of glowing embers.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple feels aversion[ed1] from body,
from feeling,
from perception,
from the activities,
from consciousness.

Being averse
he is disgusted by them;
by that disgust he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Kukkuḷa. Cf. K.S. i, 268, n.: K.V. ii, 8: Pts. of Contr. 127.

[ed1] Note differences from his version of this at SN 3.22.100 and elsewhere.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 137

Paṭhama Anicca Suttaṃ

By the Impermanent (1)

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is impermanent, brethren,
there desire should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is impermanent?

Body, brethren, is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire there.

Feeling is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire there.

Perception is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire there.

The activities are impermanent.

Ye should put away desire there.

Consciousness is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is impermanent,
there ye should put away desire."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Dutiya Anicca Suttaṃ

Sutta 138

By the Impermanent (2)

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is impermanent, brethren,
there lust should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is impermanent?

Body, brethren, is impermanent.

Ye should put away lust there.

Feeling is impermanent.

Ye should put away lust there.

Perception is impermanent.

Ye should put away lust there.

The activities is impermanent.

Ye should put away lust there.

Consciousness is impermanent.

Ye should put away lust there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is impermanent,
there ye should put away lust."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 139

Tatiya Anicca Suttaṃ

By the Impermanent (3)

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is impermanent, brethren,
there desire and lust should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is impermanent?

Body, brethren, is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Feeling is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Perception is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

The activities is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Consciousness is impermanent.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is impermanent,
there ye should put away desire and lust."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 140

Paṭhama Dukkha Suttaṃ

By Suffering (1)

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is suffering, brethren,
there desire should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is suffering?

Body, brethren, is suffering.

Ye should put away desire there.

Feeling is suffering.

Ye should put away desire there.

Perception is suffering.

Ye should put away desire there.

The activities is suffering.

Ye should put away desire there.

Consciousness is suffering.

Ye should put away desire there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is suffering,
there ye should put away desire."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 141

Dutiya Dukkha Suttaṃ

By Suffering (2)

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is suffering, brethren,
there lust should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is suffering?

Body, brethren, is suffering.

Ye should put away lust there.

Feeling is suffering.

Ye should put away lust there.

Perception is suffering.

Ye should put away lust there.

The activities is suffering.

Ye should put away lust there.

Consciousness is suffering.

Ye should put away lust there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is suffering,
there ye should put away lust."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 142

Tatiya Dukkha Suttaṃ

By Suffering (3)

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is suffering, brethren,
there desire and lust should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is suffering?

Body, brethren, is suffering.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Feeling is suffering.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Perception is suffering.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

The activities is suffering.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Consciousness is suffering.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is suffering,
there ye should put away desire and lust."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 143

Paṭhama Anatta Suttaṃ

By Without A Self (1)

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is without a self, brethren,
there desire should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is without a self?

Body, brethren, is without a self.

Ye should put away desire there.

Feeling is without a self.

Ye should put away desire there.

Perception is without a self.

Ye should put away desire there.

The activities is without a self.

Ye should put away desire there.

Consciousness is without a self.

Ye should put away desire there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is without a self,
there ye should put away desire."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Dutiya Dukkha Suttaṃ

Sutta 144

By Without A Self (2)

---

[149]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is without a self, brethren,
there lust should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is without a self?

Body, brethren, is without a self.

Ye should put away lust there.

Feeling is without a self.

Ye should put away lust there.

Perception is without a self.

Ye should put away lust there.

The activities is without a self.

Ye should put away lust there.

Consciousness is without a self.

Ye should put away lust there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is without a self,
there ye should put away lust."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 145

Tatiya Anicca Suttaṃ

By Without A Self (3)

---

[149]

[1][than] Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For that which is without a self, brethren,
there desire and lust should be put away by you.

And what, brethren, is without a self?

Body, brethren, is without a self.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Feeling is without a self.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Perception is without a self.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

The activities is without a self.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Consciousness is without a self.

Ye should put away desire and lust there.

Whatsoever, brethren, is without a self,
there ye should put away desire and lust."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 146

Nibbidā-Bahula (aka Kula-Puttena Dukkhā) Suttaṃ

By the Clansman from Suffering (1)

---

[150]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For a clansman, brethren,
who has gone forth in faith
this is the proper way:[1]

Let him live much in aversion from body.

Let him live much in aversion from feeling.

Let him live much in aversion from perception.

Let him live much in aversion from the activities.

Let him live much in aversion from consciousness.

So living much averse from body,
so living much averse from feeling,
so living much averse from perception,
so living much averse from the activities, so living much averse from consciousness
he fully understands body,
he fully understands feeling,
he fully understands perception,
he fully understands the activities,
he fully understands consciousness.

Fully understanding body,
fully understanding feeling,
fully understanding perception,
fully understanding the activities,
fully understanding consciousness
he is fully released from body,
he is fully released from feeling,
he is fully released from perception,

he is fully released from the activities,
he is fully released from consciousness;
he is fully released from birth,
from old age and death,
grief,
lamentation,
suffering,
woe
and despair.

He is fully released, I declare,
from suffering."

---

[1] Anudhamma, 'conformity to rule'.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 147

Aniccānupassanā (aka Kula-Puttena Dukkhā) Suttaṃ

By the Clansman from Suffering (2)

---

[150]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For a clansman, brethren,
who has gone forth in faith
this is the proper way:

Let him live seeing impermanence in body.

Let him live seeing impermanence in feeling.

Let him live seeing impermanence in perception.

Let him live seeing impermanence in the activities.

Let him live seeing impermanence in consciousness.

So living seeing impermanence in body,
so living seeing impermanence in feeling,
so living seeing impermanence in perception,
so living seeing impermanence in the activities, so living seeing impermanence in consciousness
he fully understands body,
he fully understands feeling,
he fully understands perception,
he fully understands the activities,
he fully understands consciousness.

Fully understanding body,
fully understanding feeling,
fully understanding perception,
fully understanding the activities,
fully understanding consciousness
he is fully released from body,
he is fully released from feeling,
he is fully released from perception,

he is fully released from the activities,
he is fully released from consciousness;
he is fully released from birth,
from old age and death,
grief,
lamentation,
suffering,
woe
and despair.

He is fully released, I declare,
from suffering."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 147a

Dukkh-Ā-nupassanā (aka Kula-Puttena Dukkhā) Suttaṃ

By the Clansman from Suffering (2a)

---

[150]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For a clansman, brethren,
who has gone forth in faith
this is the proper way:

Let him live seeing suffering in body.

Let him live seeing suffering in feeling.

Let him live seeing suffering in perception.

Let him live seeing suffering in the activities.

Let him live seeing suffering in consciousness.

So living seeing suffering in body,
so living seeing suffering in feeling,
so living seeing suffering in perception,
so living seeing suffering in the activities, so living seeing suffering in consciousness
he fully understands body,
he fully understands feeling,
he fully understands perception,
he fully understands the activities,
he fully understands consciousness.

Fully understanding body,
fully understanding feeling,
fully understanding perception,
fully understanding the activities,
fully understanding consciousness
he is fully released from body,
he is fully released from feeling,
he is fully released from perception,

he is fully released from the activities,
he is fully released from consciousness;
he is fully released from birth,
from old age and death,
grief,
lamentation,
suffering,
woe
and despair.

He is fully released, I declare,
from suffering."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
14. Kukkuḷa Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

14. Glowing Embers

Sutta 148

Anatt-ā-nupassanā (aka Kula-Puttena Dukkhā) Suttaṃ

By the Clansman from Suffering (3)

---

[150]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"For a clansman, brethren,
who has gone forth in faith
this is the proper way:

Let him live seeing no soul in body.

Let him live seeing no soul in feeling.

Let him live seeing no soul in perception.

Let him live seeing no soul in the activities.

Let him live seeing no soul in consciousness.

So living seeing no soul in body,
so living seeing no soul in feeling,
so living seeing no soul in perception,
so living seeing no soul in the activities, so living seeing no soul in consciousness
he fully understands body,
he fully understands feeling,
he fully understands perception,
he fully understands the activities,
he fully understands consciousness.

Fully understanding body,
fully understanding feeling,
fully understanding perception,
fully understanding the activities,
fully understanding consciousness
he is fully released from body,
he is fully released from feeling,
he is fully released from perception,

he is fully released from the activities,
he is fully released from consciousness;
he is fully released from birth,
from old age and death,
grief,
lamentation,
suffering,
woe
and despair.

He is fully released, I declare,
from suffering."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 149

Ajjhatta Suttaṃ

Personal[1] (Inward)

---

[150]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
clinging to what,[2]
does one's own weal-and-woe arise?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root[3]
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
one's [151] own weal-and-woe arise.

"There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
one's own weal-and-woe arise.

"There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
one's own weal-and-woe arise.

"There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
one's own weal-and-woe arise.

"There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
one's own weal-and-woe arise.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?|| ||

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable —
could one's own weal-and-woe arise
without a clinging to that?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable —
could one's own weal-and-woe arise
without a clinging to that?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable —
could one's own weal-and-woe arise
without a clinging to that?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable —
could one's own weal-and-woe arise
without a clinging to that?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable —
could one's own weal-and-woe arise
without a clinging to that?'"

"Surely not, lord."

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Ajjhattikaṇ, as opposed to bahiraṇ, 'external.'

[2] Kismiṇ nu sati, kim upādāya.

[3] Bhagavā-mmūlakā no dhammā. Cf. K.S. ii, 18, n. [pg 19, §19 n. 1]

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 150

Etaṃ Mama Suttaṃ

This is Mine

---

[151]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what, adhering[1] to what does one hold the view:
'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
one holds the view:
'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
one holds the view:
'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
one holds the view:
'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
one holds the view:
'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
one holds the view:
'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?|| ||

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;

by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Abhinivissa = abhinivisitvā: paccayan katvā. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

So Attā (aka Eso Attā) Suttaṃ

Sutta 151

This is the Self of Me[1]

---

[151]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
depend ing upon what,
does this view arise:

'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter[2] shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable?'"

[152] "For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
one holds the view:
'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
one holds the view:
'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
one holds the view:
'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
one holds the view:
'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

"There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
one holds the view:
'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
can such a view as:

'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'

arise without a clinging to that?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
can such a view as:

'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'

arise without a clinging to that?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
can such a view as:

'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'

arise without a clinging to that?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
can such a view as:

'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'

arise without a clinging to that?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
can such a view as:

'That is the self,
that is the world,
that hereafter shall I become,
permanent,
lasting,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'

arise without a clinging to that?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Title in text omits the 'me' of the refrain.

[2] Pecca (gerund), sup. § 81, 'after death.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 152

No ca Me Siyā Suttaṃ

And If It Be Not Mine[1]

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 153

Micchā-Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

Wrong

---

[153]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
depend ing upon what,
does wrong view arise?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
wrong view arises.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
wrong view arises.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
wrong view arises.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
wrong view arises.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
wrong view arises.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could wrong view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could wrong view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could wrong view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could wrong view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could wrong view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,

at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 154

Sakkāya-Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

The Person-Pack

---

[153]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
depend ing upon what,
does the person-pack view arise?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
the person-pack view arises.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
the person-pack view arises.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
the person-pack view arises.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
the person-pack view arises.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
the person-pack view arises.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could the person-pack view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could the person-pack view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could the person-pack view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could the person-pack view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could the person-pack view arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,

at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 155

Sakkāya-Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

About the Self

---

[153]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
depend ing upon what,
does speculation about the self arise?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
speculation about the self arises.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
speculation about the self arises.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
speculation about the self arises.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
speculation about the self arises.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness, speculation about the self arises.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could speculation about the self arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could speculation about the self arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could speculation about the self arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could speculation about the self arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could speculation about the self arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,

at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 156

Paṭhama Abhinivesa Suttaṃ

Dependence (1)

---

[154]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
depend ing upon what,
does bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arises.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arises.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arises.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arises.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arises.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 157

Dutiya Abhinivesa Suttaṃ

Dependence (2)

---

[154]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
depend ing upon what,
does attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arises.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
bondage of,
dependence upon the fetters arises.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arises.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arises.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arises.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then without a clinging
to what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable,
could attachment to the bondage
of dependence upon the fetters arise?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Wherefore, brethren, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
22. Khandha Saṃyutta
15. Diṭṭhi Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings on Elements

15. On View

Sutta 158

Ānandena Suttaṃ

By Ānanda

---

[154]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.[ed1]

Then the venerable Ānanda came to the Exalted One.

Approaching the Exalted One he said:

"Well for me, lord,
if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine, hearing which from the Exalted One,
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"As to this, what think you, Ānanda?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"But that which is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature,
is it right to regard it thus:

'This is mine,
this am I
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Therefore, Ānanda, every body whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every body should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every feeling whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every feeling should be thus regarded,

as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every perception whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every activity whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,

low or high,
far or near, -
every activity should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

■

Every consciousness whatever,
be it past,
future
or present,
be it inward or outward,
gross or subtle,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness should be thus regarded,
as it really is,
by right insight:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not the Self of me.'

§

"Wherefore, Ānanda, he who thus sees
conceives disgust at body,
at feeling,
at perception,
at the activities,
at consciousness.

Being disgusted
he is repelled by them;
by that repulsion he is released;
by that release he is set free;
knowledge arises:
in the freed man is the freed thing,
and he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth;
lived is the righteous life;
done is the task;
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

ed1 Woodward has this located 'In the Deer Park,' which is in Benares. The Pali is Sāvatthi ārāme, which always stands for 'Jetavane Anāthapiṇḍikassa ārāme.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
23. Rādha Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

22. Kindred Sayings about Rādha

---

[155]

I

Sutta 1

Māra

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Rādha[1] came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"They say, 'Māra! Māra!' lord.

Pray, lord, how far is there Māra?"

"Where a body is, Rādha,
there would be Māra
or things of the nature of Māra,[2]
or at any rate what is perishing.

Wherefore, Rādha,
regard the body as Māra;
regard it as of the nature of Māra;
regard it as perishing,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as a source of pain.[3]

They who regard body thus rightly regard it.

■

Where feeling is, Rādha,
there would be Māra
or things of the nature of Māra,
or at any rate what is perishing.

Wherefore, Rādha,
regard feeling as Māra;
regard it as of the nature of Māra;
regard it as perishing,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,

as pain,
as a source of pain.

They who regard feeling thus rightly regard it.

■

Where perception is, Rādha,
there would be Māra
or things of the nature of Māra,
or at any rate what is perishing.

Wherefore, Rādha,
regard the perception as Māra;
regard it as of the nature of Māra;
regard it as perishing,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as a source of pain.

They who regard perception thus rightly regard it.

■

Where the activities are, Rādha,
there would be Māra
or things of the nature of Māra,
or at any rate what is perishing.

Wherefore, Rādha,
regard the activities as Māra;
regard it as of the nature of Māra;
regard it as perishing,
as an imposthume,

as a dart,
as pain,
as a source of pain.

They who regard the activities thus rightly regard it.

■

Where consciousness is, Rādha,
there would be Māra
or things of the nature of Māra,
or at any rate what is perishing.

Wherefore, Rādha,
regard consciousness as Māra;
regard it as of the nature of Māra;
regard it as perishing,
as an imposthume,
as a dart,
as pain,
as a source of pain.

They who regard consciousness thus rightly regard it."

■

"But rightly regarding, lord, —
for what purpose?"

"Rightly regarding, Rādha, for the sake of disgust."

"But disgust, lord, —
for what purpose is it?"

"Disgust, Rādha, is to bring about dispassion."

"But dispassion, lord, —
for what purpose is it?"

"Dispassion, Rādha, is to get release."

[156] "But release, lord, — what is it for?"

"Release, Rādha, means Nibbāna."

"But Nibbāna, lord, — what is the aim of that?"

"This, Rādha, is a question that goes too far.[4]

You can grasp no limit to this question.

Rooted[5] in Nibbāna, Rādha, the holy life is lived.

Nibbāna is it's goal,
Nibbāna is it's end."

§

Sutta 2

A Being[6]

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'A Being! A Being!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, how far is one called a being?"

"That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with body, —
entangled thereby,
fast entangled thereby,
therefore is one called a being.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with feeling, —
entangled thereby,
fast entangled thereby,
therefore is one called a being.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with perception, —

entangled thereby,
fast entangled thereby,
therefore is one called a being.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with the activities, —
entangled thereby,
fast entangled thereby,
therefore is one called a being.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with the consciousness, —
entangled thereby,
fast entangled thereby,
therefore is one called a being.

§

Just as when, Rādha,
boys or girls play with little sand-castles,[7]
so long as they are not rid of lust, not rid of desire,
not rid of affection,

thirst,
feverish longing
and craving for those little sand-castles, just so long do they delight in them,
are amused by them,
set store by them,[8]
are jealous of them.

But, Rādha,
as soon as those boys or girls are rid of lust, [157] of desire
and affection,
are rid of thirst,
feverish longing
and craving for those little sand-castles, straightway with hand and foot they scatter them,
break them up,
knock them down,
cease to play with them.

Even so, Rādha,
do you scatter body,
break it up,
knock it down,
cease to play with it,
apply yourself to destroy craving for it.

Verily, Rādha,
the destruction of craving
is Nibbāna.

■

Even so, Rādha,
do you scatter feeling,
break it up,
knock it down,
cease to play with it,
apply yourself to destroy craving for it.

Verily, Rādha,
the destruction of craving
is Nibbāna.

■

Even so, Rādha,
do you scatter perception,
break it up,
knock it down,
cease to play with it,
apply yourself to destroy craving for it.

Verily, Rādha,
the destruction of craving
is Nibbāna.

■

Even so, Rādha,
do you scatter the activities,
break them up,
knock them down,
cease to play with them,
apply yourself to destroy craving for them.

Verily, Rādha,
the destruction of craving
is Nibbāna.

■

Even so, Rādha,
do you scatter consciousness,
break it up,
knock it down,
cease to play with it,
apply yourself to destroy craving for it.

Verily, Rādha,
the destruction of craving
is Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 3

Leading to Becoming[9]

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'The cord of rebirth! The cord of rebirth!'
is the saying lord.

Pray, lord, what is the cord of rebirth and what is he ceasing of it?"

"That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with body,[10] —
that is called
'the cord of rebirth.'

The ceasing of that lust,
that lure,
that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with body,
is called
'the ceasing of the cord of rebirth.'

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with feeling, —
that is called
'the cord of rebirth.'

The ceasing of that lust,
that lure,

that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with feeling,
is called
'the ceasing of the cord of rebirth.'

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with perception, —
that is called
'the cord of rebirth.'

The ceasing of that lust,
that lure,
that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with perception,
is called
'the ceasing of the cord of rebirth.'

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,

that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with the activities, —
that is called
'the cord of rebirth.'

The ceasing of that lust,
that lure,
that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with the activities,
is called
'the ceasing of the cord of rebirth.'

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with consciousness, —
that is called
'the cord of rebirth.'

The ceasing of that lust,
that lure,
that craving,
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,

that dogmatic bias
which is concerned with consciousness,
is called
'the ceasing of the cord of rebirth.'

§

Sutta 4

To Be Understood[11]

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha: —

[158] "I will show you the things to be understood, and the understanding,
and the person who has understood.

Do you listen to it."

The Exalted One thus spake:

"And what Rādha,
are the things to be understood?

Body, Rādha, is a thing to be understood,
feeling is a thing to be understood,
perception is a thing to be understood,
the activities are a thing to be understood consciousness is a thing to be understood.

These, Rādha,
are the things to be understood.

And what, Rādha, is understanding?

The destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, —
this, Rādha, is called 'understanding.'

And who, Rādha, is the person who has understood?

'Worthy' should he be called,
that venerable one
of such and such a name, of such and such a clan, — that, Rādha, is the meaning of 'the person who has understood.'"

§

Sutta 5

Recluses (1)

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"There are these five groups of grasping, Rādha.

What five?

The group of-body-grasping,
the group of feeling-grasping,
the group of perception-grasping,
the group of activities-grasping,
the group of consciousness-grasping.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins, Rādha,
understand not in their true nature
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from
these five groups of grasping, —
those recluses or brahmins
are approved neither among recluses as recluses
nor among brahmins as brahmins:
nor have those venerable ones understood of themselves,
nor have they realized in this present life
the use of recluseship
or of brahminhood,
nor do they live in the attainment thereof.

But those recluses or brahmins, Rādha,
who do understand in their true nature
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from

these five groups of grasping, —
those recluses or brahmins
are approved both among recluses as recluses
and among brahmins as brahmins:
and those venerable ones have understood of themselves,
have realized in this present life
the use of recluseship
and of brahminhood,
and they do live in the attainment thereof.'[12]

§

Sutta 6

Recluses (2)

[159] At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"There are these five groups of grasping, Rādha.

What five?

The group of-body-grasping,
the group of feeling-grasping,
the group of perception-grasping,

the group of activities-grasping,
the group of consciousness-grasping.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins, Rādha,
understand not in their true nature
the coming to pass of,
the passing away of,
the escape from
these five groups of grasping, —
those recluses or brahmins
are approved neither among recluses as recluses
nor among brahmins as brahmins:
nor have those venerable ones understood of themselves,
nor have they realized in this present life
the use of recluseship
or of brahminhood,
nor do they live in the attainment thereof.

But those recluses or brahmins, Rādha,
who do understand in their true nature
the coming to pass of,
the passing away of,
the escape from
these five groups of grasping, —
those recluses or brahmins
are approved both among recluses as recluses
and among brahmins as brahmins:
and those venerable ones have understood of themselves,
have realized in this present life
the use of recluseship
and of brahminhood,
and they do live in the attainment thereof."

§

Sutta 7

Stream-Winner

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"There are these five groups of grasping, Rādha.

What five?

The group of-body-grasping,
the group of feeling-grasping,
the group of perception-grasping,
the group of activities-grasping,
the group of consciousness-grasping.

Now Rādha,
when the Ariyan disciple understands in their true nature
the coming to pass,
and the passing away,
the satisfaction in,
the misery of,
the escape from
these five groups of grasping,
this Ariyan disciple, Rādha,
is called 'stream-winner,'
'saved from disaster,'

'assured,'
'bound for enlightenment.'"

§

Sutta 8

The Arahant

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"There are these five groups of grasping, Rādha.

What five?

The group of-body-grasping,
the group of feeling-grasping,
the group of perception-grasping,
the group of activities-grasping,
the group of consciousness-grasping.

Now Rādha,
when the Ariyan disciple understands in their true nature
the coming to pass,
and the passing away,
the satisfaction in,

the misery of,
the escape from
these five groups of grasping,
this Ariyan disciple, Rādha,
is called arahant,
one in whom the Āsavas are destroyed,
one who has lived the life,
who has done his task,
who has shifted the burden,
won his own welfare,
worn out the fetters of becoming,
and by perfect insight is released."

§

Sutta 9

Desire-and-Lust (1)

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,

that craving
which is concerned with body,
put it away.

Thus put away,
this body will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with feeling,
put it away.

Thus put away,
this feeling will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with perception,
put it away.

Thus put away,
this perception will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with the activities,
put it away.

Thus put away,
the activities will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
which is concerned with consciousness,
put it away.

Thus put away,
this consciousness will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future."

§

Sutta 10

Desire-and-Lust (2)

[160] At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that mental bias
which is concerned with body,
put it away.

Thus put away,
this body will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that mental bias

which is concerned with feeling,
put it away.

Thus put away,
this feeling will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that mental bias
which is concerned with perception,
put it away.

Thus put away,
this perception will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that mental bias
which is concerned with the activities,
put it away.

Thus put away,
the activities will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future.

■

That desire, Rādha,
that lust,
that lure,
that craving
those graspings after systems,
that mental standpoint,
that mental bias
which is concerned with consciousness,
put it away.

Thus put away,
this consciousness will become cut down at the root,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot grow up again in the future."

II

Sutta 11

Māra

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'Māra! Māra!'[13] they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is Māra?"

"Body, Rādha, is Māra.

Feeling, Rādha, is Māra.

Perception, Rādha, is Māra.

The activities, Rādha, is Māra.

Consciousness, Rādha, is Māra.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Sutta 12

Of the Nature of Māra[14]

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'Of the nature of Māra! Of the nature of Māra!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is of the nature of Māra?"

"Body, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Feeling, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Perception, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

The activities, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Sutta 13

Impermanent (1)

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'Impermanent! Impermanent!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is impermanent?"

"Body, Rādha, is impermanent.

Feeling, Rādha, is impermanent.

Perception, Rādha, is impermanent.

The activities, Rādha, are impermanent.

Consciousness, Rādha, is impermanent.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,

feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Sutta 14

Impermanent (2)

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'By nature Impermanent! By nature Impermanent!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is by nature impermanent?"

"Body, Rādha, is by nature impermanent.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature impermanent.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature impermanent.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature impermanent.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature impermanent.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Suttas 15

Suffering (1)

[161] At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'Suffering! Suffering!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is suffering?"

"Body, Rādha, is suffering.

Feeling, Rādha, is suffering.

Perception, Rādha, is suffering.

The activities, Rādha, are suffering.

Consciousness, Rādha, is suffering.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Suttas 16

Suffering (2)

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'By nature suffering! By nature suffering!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is by nature suffering?"

"Body, Rādha, is by nature suffering.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature suffering.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature suffering.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature suffering.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature suffering.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Suttas 17

Without A Self (1)

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'Without a self! Without a self!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is without a self?"

"Body, Rādha, is without a self.

Feeling, Rādha, is without a self.

Perception, Rādha, is without a self.

The activities, Rādha, are without a self.

Consciousness, Rādha, is without a self.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Suttas 18

Without A Self (2)

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'By nature without a self! By nature without a self!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is by nature without a self?"

"Body, Rādha, is by nature without a self.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature without a self.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature without a self.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature without a self.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature without a self.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Sutta 19

Perishing

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'By nature perishable! By nature perishable!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is by nature perishable?"

"Body, Rādha, is by nature perishable.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature perishable.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature perishable.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature perishable.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature perishable.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Sutta 20

Life[15]

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'By nature transitory! By nature transitory!' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is by nature transitory?"

"Body, Rādha, is by nature transitory.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature transitory.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature transitory.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature transitory.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature perishable.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Sutta 21

Coming to Pass

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'Of a nature to come to pass! Of a nature to come to pass' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is of a nature to come to pass?"

"Body, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Feeling, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Perception, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

The activities, Rādha, are of a nature to come to pass.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,
feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

§

Sutta 22

Ceasing

At Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Rādha came to the Exalted One.

Having done so, he saluted the Exalted One and sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Rādha thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"'By nature doomed to cease! By nature doomed to cease' they say, lord.

Pray, lord, what is by nature doomed to cease?"

"Body, Rādha, is by nature doomed to cease.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature doomed to cease.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature doomed to cease.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature doomed to cease.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature doomed to cease.

So seeing, Rādha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
feels aversion from body,
feels aversion from feeling,
feels aversion from perception,
feels aversion from the activities,

feels aversion from consciousness;
so that he knows:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'"

III. Requests

Sutta 23

Māra

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."[16]

"That which is Māra, Rādha,
desire for that must be put away by you.

And what, Rādha, is Māra?

Body, Rādha, is [162] Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are Māra.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is Māra.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 24

Of the Nature of Māra

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is of the nature of Māra, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra?

Body, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of the nature of Māra.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 25

Impermanent (1)

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is impermanent, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is impermanent?

Body, Rādha, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are impermanent.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 26

Impermanent (2)

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is of the nature of impermanence, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence?

Body, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 27

Suffering (1)

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is sufiering, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is sufiering?

Body, Rādha, is sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are sufiering.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 28

Suffering (2)

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is of the nature of sufiering, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering?

Body, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 29

Without a Self (1)

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is without a self, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is without a self?

Body, Rādha, is without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are without a self.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is without a self.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 30

Without a Self (2)

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is naturally without a self, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is naturally without a self?

Body, Rādha, is naturally without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is naturally without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is naturally without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are naturally without a self.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is naturally without a self.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 31

Destruction

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is by nature perishing, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is by nature perishing?

Body, Rādha, is by nature perishing.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature perishing.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature perishing.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature perishing.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature perishing.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 32

Transience

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is by nature transient, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is by nature transient?

Body, Rādha, is by nature transient.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature transient.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature transient.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature transient.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature transient.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 33

Coming to Pass

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,
strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is of a nature to come to pass, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass?

Body, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 34

Of a Nature to Cease

At Sāvatthī.

Seated at one side the venerable Rādha, thus addressed the Exalted One: —

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One were to teach me a doctrine in brief, hearing which from the Exalted One
I might dwell remote,

strenuous,
ardent
and intent."

"That which is of a nature to cease, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

[163] And what, Rādha, is of a nature to cease?

Body, Rādha, is of a nature to cease.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of a nature to cease.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of a nature to cease.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of a nature to cease.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of a nature to cease.

Desire for that must be put away."

IV. Confidential[17]

Sutta 35

Māra (1)

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is Māra, Rādha,
desire for that must be put away by you.

And what, Rādha, is Māra?

Body, Rādha, is Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are Māra.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is Māra.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 36

Māra (2)

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is of the nature of Māra, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra?

Body, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of the nature of Māra.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of the nature of Māra.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 37

Impermanent (1)

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is impermanent, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is impermanent?

Body, Rādha, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are impermanent.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 38

Impermanent (2)

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is of the nature of impermanence, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence?

Body, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of the nature of impermanence.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 39

Suffering (1)

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is sufiering, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is sufiering?

Body, Rādha, is sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are sufiering.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 40

Suffering (2)

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is of the nature of sufiering, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering?

Body, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of the nature of sufiering.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 41

Without a self (1)

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is without a self, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is without a self?

Body, Rādha, is without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are without a self.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is without a self.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 42

Without a self (2)

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is naturally without a self, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is naturally without a self?

Body, Rādha, is naturally without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is naturally without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is naturally without a self.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are naturally without a self.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is naturally without a self.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 43

Destruction

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is by nature perishing, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is by nature perishing?

Body, Rādha, is by nature perishing.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature perishing.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature perishing.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature perishing.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature perishing.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 44

Transience

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is by nature transient, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is by nature transient?

Body, Rādha, is by nature transient.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is by nature transient.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is by nature transient.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are by nature transient.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is by nature transient.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 45

Coming to Pass

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is of a nature to come to pass, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass?

Body, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of a nature to come to pass.

Desire for that must be put away."

§

Sutta 46

Of a Nature to Cease

At Sāvatthī.

As he sat at one side the Exalted One thus addressed the venerable Rādha:

"That which is of a nature to cease, Rādha, —
desire for that must be put away by you.

Lust must be put away,
desire and lust must be put away.

And what, Rādha, is of a nature to cease?

Body, Rādha, is of a nature to cease.

Desire for that must be put away.

Feeling, Rādha, is of a nature to cease.

Desire for that must be put away.

Perception, Rādha, is of a nature to cease.

Desire for that must be put away.

The activities, Rādha, are of a nature to cease.

Desire for them must be put away.

Consciousness, Rādha, is of a nature to cease.

Desire for that must be put away."

---

[1] Cf. § 22.71 and Brethren, 115 [Ed.: see: Appendixes, Proper Names, Rādha Thera]

[2] Māra = death. Māretā, 'killer' = maraṇaṇ. Comy. Infra, p.160.

[3] Sup. § 122.

[4] Text has assa only. Comy. reads accasavāyo and says atikkanto ti. [Ed.: Our text "Accasarā"] The phrase occurs in similar questions and answers at S. v, 218, where text reads ajjha-param, brāhmaṇa, pañhaṇ, na sakkhi. ... Cf. M. i, 304.

[5] Ogadhaṇ. Comy. 'Nibbāne patiṭṭhitaṇ.'

[6] For Satto see S. i,135: K.S. i,169, n. At Nidd. i,24 (satto guhāyaṇ)-satto, visatto, asatto, laggo, laggito, palibuddho; all synonyms of 'something caught, entangled, hindered.' Comy. lagga-pucchā. For Bodhisatto see Papañca, 113 (bodhiyaṇ satto, laggo). [Commentators were not philologists, and confused the root sat, existent with saj, to cling. — Ed.]

[7] Paṇsvāgārakehi.

[8] Text reads manāyanti. I read dhanāyanti with Comy., which paraphrases dhanaṇ viya maññanti.

[9] Bhava-netti. Comy. rajju (the cord). Buddh. Psych. Eth. 279, n. 2nd ed. 256, n. 10.

[10] Cf. S. ii, 17: K.S. ii, 13

[11] Supra, § 106

[12] Cf. K.S. ii, 11, etc.; supra, p. 28-9.

[13] Cf. supra, p. 155.

[14] Māra-dhammo, i.e., perishable.

[15] Vayo, life or age: vaya-dhammo, 'aging.'

[16] Cf. supra, pp. 32, 155.

[17] The chapter is called Upanisinna, 'seated near,' implying a special teaching, with perhaps an implication of an upanisa, 'secret doctrine' of the brahminical method. Comy. says, 'The first two chapters are about questions; the third is about requests (for teaching). The fourth is a "seated near" talk. The whole section is to be understood as a teaching with the object of ripening his emancipation.' It is thus seen that the teaching might be called 'special or intimate,' not for the general, but for the individual, which is the meaning of secret doctrine. Cf. Upaniṣad.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 1

Vāta Suttaṃ

Wind

---

[164]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"[1]

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,

depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

[165] "Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points[2] is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] Comy. says 'it is not winds that blow, but a wind-atom, they say' (vāta-leso). In reality the wind is fixed like a mountain peak. Nor does the water carry down sticks and straws, but a water-atom. The water is really immovable as a post or pillar. Perhaps a glimpse of the fact that, in a wave, not the water of itself moves. (It is reasonable to assume that a stock saying of some current theory is here quoted, not more irrational when pbilosophically explained than, say, Berkeley's view of matter, or Zeno's tortoise Cf. e.g. infra, p. 170.-(original)Ed.)

[2] Chasu ṭhānesu. It is not clear how six are made out. Bm. ed. reads ca.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 2

Etaṃ Mama Suttaṃ

This is Mine

---

[165]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

"There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

"There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

"There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

"There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'This is mine;
this am I;

this is the self of me'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'"?

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the self of me'"?

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 3

So Attā Suttaṃ

That is the Self

---

[166]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,

eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,

permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable' ti"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable' ti"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable' ti"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable' ti"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,
permanent,

stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable' ti"?

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'That self,
that world,
that hereafter I shall become,

permanent,
stable,
eternal,
by nature unchangeable' ti"?

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called:

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 4

No ca Me Siyā Suttaṃ

It May Not Be Mine[1]

---

[166]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'".

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'".

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'".

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'".

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.
I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'".

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'I may not be,
and mine it may not be.

I shall not be,
and mine it shall not be'".

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called:

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] Cf. § 152 supra.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 5

N'atthi Suttaṃ

There is Not[1]

---

[166]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.[2]

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.[3]

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.[4]

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

[167] His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,[5]
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.[6]

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.[7]

Instituted by fools[8]
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not.'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:

for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,

retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,

retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,

depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not.'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
reached,
sought [168] after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no alms-giving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not, the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves have won and realized
both this world and the world beyond
and proclaim it.

Of the Four Great Elements
is a man composed.

When he makes an end,
his body,
earth to earth,
retumeth,
to earth goes back.

His body,
water to water,
retumeth,
to water goes back.

His body,
fire to fire,
returneth,
to fire goes back.

His body,
air to air,
retumeth,
to air goes back.

His faculties
rejoin the element of space.

Then bearers four,
with him upon the bier as fifth,
take up the dead,
and on the way to the burning-ground
men sound his praises forth.

His bones are bleached
and the funeral offerings turn to ashes.

Instituted by fools
is this alms-giving:
it is empty idle talk
to say there is profit therein:
for fools and wise alike,
when body breaks up,
are cut down and perish.

After death they are not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points[9] is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called:

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] The annihilationist doctrine of Ajita, of the hair-shirt. Cf. D. i, 55, § 23; M. i, 515; Dialog. i, 73, where the passage comes; and again at S. iv, 348.

[2] Opapātika, unprocreated.

[3] Catu-mmahābhūtiko ayaṃ puruo.

[4] Text has anupagacchati. Comy. reads anuvigacchati.

[5] Text has ayanti; pañcamā purisa. Comy. āsandi pañcamā. So also D. i, 55.

[6] Yāva āḷāhanā padāni (stanzas) paññāpenti. Comy. guṇāguṇa padāni, 'verses about his virtues or vices.'

[7] Bhasmantāhutiyo. Comy. 'and have no further results.'

[8] Cf. Fausb. Ten Jāt. 116, datta-paññattaṇ. Comy. 'Fools give; wise men take.'

[9] The six here are also not clearly made out. Comy. is silent.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 6

Karoto Suttaṃ

For Him Who Acts[1]

---

[168]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,[2]
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,[3]
who binds
or makes others bind,[4]
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses, plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.[5]

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash[6] of flesh,
one heap of flesh,

no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.[7]

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges, [169] slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,[8]
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,

depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,

tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,

who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,

in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,

no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,

who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -

yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -

by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth

one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,

no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,

mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit'"?

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or make others enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes robbery,
who breaks into houses,
plunders on the highway,
who plunders houses,
waylays travellers,
commits adultery
and tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all living beings on earth
one mash of fiesh,
one heap of flesh,
no evil would result from that,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the right bank of the Ganges,
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing
and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit.

In charity,
in self-restraint,
in control of feeling,
in truthfulness
there is no merit,
no coming by any merit'"?

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,

as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] The heresy of Pūraṇa Kassapa, from D i, 52; Dialog. i, 52.

[2] Reading with Comy. paccato pāeapayato (for text vadhato vadhā-payato) ti = parehi pīḷapentassa.

[3] Comy. 'by starvation or imprisonment.'

[4] Comy. bandhato for text phandhato.

[5] karato na karīyate pāpaṇ. Or 'for him' or 'to him.' No demerit accrues to him.

[6] Maṇsakhalaṇ, lit. 'a flesh-paste.'

[7] Agamo.

[8] Comy. says that on the north bank men are religious devotees of the Buddha-Dhamma-Saṇgha. On the south bank they are scoundrels!

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 7

Hetu Suttaṃ

Condition[1]

---

[169]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,[2]
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,[3]
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,[4]
and [170] they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes'?"[5]

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,

all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the impurity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become impure.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
for the purity of beings.

Without condition,
without cause
do beings become pure.

There is no strength,
no energy,
no human effort,
no human vigour.

All beings,
all living creatures,
all beasts,
all lives,
are without power,
without strength,
without energy.

They are determined by destiny,
by coincidence,
by nature,
and they experience weal or woe
by birth in one of the six classes'"?

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] This section also is at D. i, 53; Dialog.. i. 71, and is the accidentalist heresy of Makkhali of the Cow-pen. Cf. above, § 60; Mrs. Rh. D., Buddhism, p. 85 ff. Comy., paccayo = hetu.

[2] Some copies of Comy have (wrongly) phalaṇ (fruit of action) for balaṇ. For 'vigour' we may also read 'progress.'

[3] Sattā, pāṇā, būtā, jīva. Comy. distinguishes these as 'animals (such as elephants, cattle, asses, etc.), creatures with one or more senses, egg-born creatures, and grain that grows (the vegetable world),' which seems a fanciful elaboration of the old, simple group of synonyms.

[4] Niyati-sangati-bhāva-pariṇatā.

[5] Chasu eva abhijātesu (in next section chalabhijātiyo). According to this Hindu system, beings are of six species, each with a colour. Cf. A. iii, 383. The classification is that of Pūraṇa Kassapa, viz.: black, blue, red, yellow, white, and radiant.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 8

Mahā Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

By the (Great) Heresy

---

[170]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created

nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.[1]

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.[2]

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.[3]

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes [171] of mankind.[4]

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.[5]

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,[6]
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:[7]
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,[8]
seven ways of birth from the knot.[9]

There are seven sorts of devas,[10]
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins[11]

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living

I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting[12] it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted[13] to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls[14] as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'"?

[172] "For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,

or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious

and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,

air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,

neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,

or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,

and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,

have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,

or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,

or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious

and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other
weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

What seven?

The elementary substances of earth,
water,
fire,
air:
weal
and woe
and life.

These seven things are neither made
nor caused to be made,
neither created
nor caused to be created,
barren (of results).

Stable as a mountain-peak,
stable as a pillar,
they move not nor change:
they clash not together,
incapable of causing each other weal,
or woe,
or weal and woe alike.

He who with a sharp sword
cuts off a head
thereby robs none of life.

It is just the sword
entering in between
the seven elementary substances.

There are (these) fourteen hundred thousand chief sorts of birth:
sixty hundred,
and again six hundred.

There are five hundred karmas,
five karmas,
and three karmas.

There is a whole karma
and a half karma.

There are sixty-two ways of conduct,
sixty-two periods (in the kalpa),
six classes of mankind.

There are eight stages
(in the life) of a man.

There are forty-nine hundred ways of life,
forty-nine hundred sorts of wanderers,
forty-nine hundred names of nagas.

There are twenty hundred sense-faculties,
thirty hundred purgatories,
six and thirty dust-heaps:
seven wombs of conscious
and seven of unconscious birth,
seven ways of birth from the knot.

There are seven sorts of devas,
seven sorts of men
and seven of goblins

There are seven lakes,
seven knots,
seven great precipices,
seven hundred precipices.

There are seven great dreams,
seven hundred dreams.

There are eighty-four hundred thousand great periods,
wherein both fools and wise,
when they have run,
have fared on,
will make an end of suffering.

Herein it is useless for one to say:

"By this virtue,
by this practice,
by this penance,
or holy living
I shall bring to ripeness
the karma that is yet unripe:"

useless to say:

"This karma that is ripe,
meeting it again and again,
I shall work out to an end."

Useless to say:

"The weal and woe of rebirth
allotted to me
have an end.

There is no waxing or waning of it,
no growing more or less."

Just as when one throws down a ball of thread,
it rolls as far as it unwinds -
even so both fools and wise alike
wander on so far as their weal or woe unwinds.'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] The view of Pakudha Kaccāyana. D. i, 56; Dialog. i, 74. The view following is ascribed to Makkhali of the Cow-pen. D. i, 54; Dialog. i, 72.

[2] Comy. takes these divisions to be according to the five senses, and again according to thought, word, and deed.

[3] Comy. says word and deed are to be reckoned as one, and thought as a half.

[4] Comy., as in the previous section, says, Under the colour black are included hunters, fishermen, robbers, etc. Under blue, bhikkhus and wanderers. Under red, ascetics of one cloth. Under yellow, naked ascetics. Under white, ājīvaka ascetics. As the view is that of Makkhali, radiant is reserved for the practiscrs of his own precepts.

[5] Comy. 'Tender (baby) stage, playtime, stage of investigation, standing erect, learning, reclusehood, victory, attainment.'

[6] Text has ājīvaka-sate, but Comy. ājīva-.

[7] ? Realms where cosmic dust gathers. Comy. merely says 'dust from hand or foot'

[8] Comy., 'of animals and vegetables and grains, by grafting.'

[9] Text pavudhā (growth period). So Comy., who says 'gaṇṭhikā' (knots). Dīgha text reads paṭuvā, where R.D. has pacuṭa. Both are unintelligible. It may refer to the seven-knotted bamboo staff of the ascetics, said to represent the seven centres or plexuses of the spinal column, awakened in yoga.

[10] Dibbā.

[11] Comy. 'whereas they are countleas.'

[12] Lit. touching. Cf. Pss. Brethren, ver. 783.

[13] Doṇamite, 'ladled out.'

[14] Reading paleti with text and Comy. Dīgha reads phaleti.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 9

Sassata Loka Suttaṃ

The World is Eternal

---

[172]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The world is eternal'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is eternal.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is eternal.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is eternal.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is eternal.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is eternal.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is eternal.'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called:

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 10

Asassata Loka Suttaṃ

The World is Not Eternal

---

[172]

[1][olds Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The world is not eternal'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is not eternal.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is not eternal.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is not eternal.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is not eternal.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The world is not eternal.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is not eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is not eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is not eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is not eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is not eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The world is not eternal'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 11

Antavā Suttaṃ

Limited (is the World)

---

[172]

[1][olds Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'Limited (is the world)'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'Limited (is the world).'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'Limited (is the world).'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'Limited (is the world).'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'Limited (is the world).'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'Limited (is the world).'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Limited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Limited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Limited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Limited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Limited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Limited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 12

Anantavā Suttaṃ

Unlimited (is the World)

---

[172]

[1][olds Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'Unlimited (is the world)'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'Unlimited (is the world).'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'Unlimited (is the world).'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'Unlimited (is the world).'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'Unlimited (is the world).'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'Unlimited (is the world).'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Unlimited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Unlimited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Unlimited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Unlimited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Unlimited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Unlimited (is the world)'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 13

Taṃ Jīvan, Taṃ Sarīra Suttaṃ

What the Life Is, That Is the Body[1]

---

[172]

[1][olds Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'What the life is, that is the body'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'What the life is, that is the body.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'What the life is, that is the body.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'What the life is, that is the body.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'What the life is, that is the body.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'What the life is, that is the body.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'What the life is, that is the body'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'What the life is, that is the body'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'What the life is, that is the body'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'What the life is, that is the body'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'What the life is, that is the body'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'What the life is, that is the body'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] Text Taṃ jīvan, taṃ sarīraṇ. Jīva is the animating principle, 'animal-soul.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 14

Aññaṃ Jīvan, Aññaṃ Sarīra Suttaṃ

The Life is One Thing, the Body is Another

---

[172]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The life is one thing, the body is another'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The life is one thing, the body is another.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The life is one thing, the body is another.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The life is one thing, the body is another.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The life is one thing, the body is another.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The life is one thing, the body is another.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The life is one thing, the body is another'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The life is one thing, the body is another'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The life is one thing, the body is another'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The life is one thing, the body is another'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The life is one thing, the body is another'"?

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The life is one thing, the body is another'"?

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 15

Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Exists

---

[172]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 16

Na Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Exists Not

---

[172]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists not'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

§

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists not.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists not.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists not.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists not.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata exists not.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 17

Hoti ca na ca Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata both Exists and Exists Not

---

[172]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
1. Sotāpatti Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

1. On Stream-Winning

Sutta 18

Neva hoti na na Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata neither Exists nor Exists Not

---

[172]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'"?

[173] "For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
2. Purimagamanam (Aṭṭhārasa-Veyyā-Karaṇāni)

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

2. First Repetition (of the Eighteen Instructions)

Suttas 19-36

[Note: As this Chapter is identical to the previous (Suttas 1-18) it has been abridged here by the inclusion of the first and last suttas (19 and 36) in their complete form and Suttas 20-35 are given by title only but are linked to their corresponding sutta in the previous Chapter.]

Sutta 19

Vāta Suttaṃ

Winds

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,

sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

§

20. Etaṃ Mama Suttaṃ,

This is Mine,

21. So Attā Suttaṃ

That is the Self,

22. No ca Me Siyā Suttaṃ,

It May Not Be Mine,

23. N'atthi Suttaṃ,

There is Not,

24. Karoto Suttaṃ,

PTS: For Him Who Acts,

25. Hetu Suttaṃ,

Condition,

26. Mahā Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

By the (Great) Heresy,

27. Sassata Loka Suttaṃ,

The World is Eternal,

28. Asassata Loka Suttaṃ,

The World is Not Eternal,

29. Antavā Suttaṃ

Limited (is the World),

30. Anantavā Suttaṃ

Unlimited (is the world),

31. Taṇ Jīvan, Taṇ Sarīra Suttaṃ

What the Life Is, That Is the Body,

32. Aññaṇ Jīvan, Aññaṇ Sarīra Suttaṃ

PTS: The Life is One Thing, the Body is Another,

33. Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Exists,

34. Na Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Exists Not,

35. Hoti ca na ca Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata both Exists and Exists Not,

§

Sutta 36

Neva hoti na na Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata neither Exists nor Exists Not

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'"?

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The Tathāgata neither exists nor exists not'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

3. Second Repetition

Sutta 37

Rūpī Attā Suttaṃ

The Self Has Form

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self has form,[1]
it is without sickness, after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,

depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self has form, it is without sickness, after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] Or has a body ((rūpī)

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

3. Second Repetition

Sutta 38

Arūpī Attā Suttaṃ

The Self Is Formless

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

§

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,

as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

3. Second Repetition

Sutta 39

Rūpī ca Arūpī Attā Suttaṃ

The Self Both has Form and Is Formless

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,

after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self both has form and is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

3. Second Repetition

Sutta 40

N'eva Rūpī N'ārūpī Attā Suttaṃ

The Self Neither has Form Nor Is Formless

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,

after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self neither has form nor is formless,
it is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

3. Second Repetition

Sutta 41

Ekanta-Sukhī Suttaṃ

The Self Is Sheer Bliss

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,

after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer bliss,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

3. Second Repetition

Sutta 42

Ekanta-Dukkhī Suttaṃ

The Self Is Sheer Suffering

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,

after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is sheer suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

3. Second Repetition

Sutta 43

Sukha-Dukkhī Suttaṃ

The Self Is Bliss and Suffering

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,

after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is both bliss and suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

Sutta 44

Adukkha-m-Asukhī Suttaṃ

Adapted from the 1995 edition of the digital version of the Sri Lanka Buddha Jayanti Tripitaka Series.

---

[220]

Evaṃ me sutaṃ:॥ ॥

Ekaṃ samayaṃ Bhagavā Sāvatthiyaṃ viharati Jetavane Anāthapiṇḍikassa ārāme.॥ ॥

Tatra kho Bhagavā bhikkhu āmantesi:॥ ॥

"Bhikkhavo" ti.॥ ॥

"Bhadante" ti
te bhikkh Bhagavato paccassosuṃ॥ ॥

Bhagavā etad avoca:॥ ॥

"Kismiṃ nu kho bhikkhave, sati
kiṃ upādāya
kiṃ abhinivissa
evaṃ diṭṭhi uppajjati:॥ ॥

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti" ti?|| ||

"Bhagavaṃ-mulakā no bhante, dhammā.|| ||

Bhagavaṃ-nettikā Bhagavam-paṭisaraṇā.|| ||

Sādhu vata bhaṇte,
Bhagavantaṃ yeva paṭibhātu etassa bhāsitassa attho,
Bhagavato sutvā bhikkhu dhāressan" ti.|| ||

§

"Rūpe kho bhikkhave, sati
rūpaṃ upādāya
rūpaṃ abhinivissa
evem diṭṭhi uppajjati:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti.|| ||

Vedanāya sati
vedanaṃ upādāya
vedanā abhinivissa
evem diṭṭhi uppajjati:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti.|| ||

Saññāya sati
saññaṃ upādāya
saññā abhinivissa
evem diṭṭhi uppajjati:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti.|| ||

Saṅkhāresu sati
saṅkhāre upādāya
saṅkhāre abhinivissa
evem diṭṭhi uppajjati:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti.|| ||

Viññāṇe sati
viññāṇaṃ upādāya
viññāṇaṃ abhinivissa
evem diṭṭhi uppajjati:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti.|| ||

§

Taṃ kiṃ maññasi bhikkhave?|| ||

Rūpaṃ niccaṃ vā aniccaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Aniccaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vā taṃ sukhaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Dukkhaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vipariṇāma-dhammaṃ,
api nu taṃ anupādāya evaṃ diṭṭhi uppajjeyya:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti" ti?|| ||

"No h'etaṃ bhante."|| ||

■

"Vedanā niccaṃ vā aniccaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Aniccaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vā taṃ sukhaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Dukkhaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vipariṇāma-dhammaṃ,
api nu taṃ anupādāya evaṃ diṭṭhi uppajjeyya:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti" ti?|| ||

"No h'etaṃ bhante."|| ||

■

"Saññā niccaṃ vā aniccaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Aniccaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vā taṃ sukhaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Dukkhaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vipariṇāma-dhammaṃ,
api nu taṃ anupādāya evaṃ diṭṭhi uppajjeyya:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti" ti?|| ||

"No h'etaṃ bhante."|| ||

■

"Saṅkhārā niccaṃ vā aniccaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Aniccaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vā taṃ sukhaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Dukkhaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vipariṇāma-dhammaṃ,
api nu taṃ anupādāya evaṃ diṭṭhi uppajjeyya:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti" ti?|| ||

"No h'etaṃ bhante."|| ||

■

"Viññāṇaṃ niccaṃ vā aniccaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Aniccaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vā taṃ sukhaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Dukkhaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vipariṇāma-dhammaṃ,
api nu taṃ anupādāya evaṃ diṭṭhi uppajjeyya:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti" ti?|| ||

"No h'etaṃ bhante."|| ||

■

"Yam pidaṃ diṭṭhaṃ,
sutaṃ,
mutaṃ,
viññātaṃ,
pattaṃ,
pariyesitaṃ,
anuvicaritaṃ manasā
tam pi niccaṃ vā aniccaṃ vāti?

"Aniccaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vā taṃ sukhaṃ vā" ti?|| ||

"Dukkhaṃ bhante."|| ||

"Yaṃ panāniccaṃ dukkhaṃ vipariṇāma-dhammaṃ,
api nu taṃ anupādāya evaṃ diṭṭhi uppajjeyya:|| ||

'Adukkham-asukhī attā hoti arogo param maraṇā' ti" ti?|| ||

"No h'etaṃ bhante."|| ||

§

Yato kho bhikkhave, ariya-sāvakassa imesu chasu ṭhānesu kaṇkhā pahīnā hoti, dukkhe pissa kaṇkhā pahīnā hoti, dukkha-samudaye pissa kaṇkhā pahīnā hoti, dukkha-nirodhe pissa kaṇkhā pahīnā hoti,
dukkha-nirodha-gāminiy'āpaṭi-padāya pissa kaṇkhā pahīnā hoti.|| ||

Ayaṃ vuccati bhikkhave, ariya-sāvako Sotāpanno
avinipāta-dhammo niyato
sambodhi-parāyano" ti.|| ||

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
24. Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
3. Dutiya Gamanam or Dutiya Vāro Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

3. Second Repetition

Sutta 44

Adukkha-m-Asukhī Suttaṃ

The Self Is without Bliss or Suffering

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,

after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
III. Khandhā Vagga:
24: Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
4. Tatiya Gamanam Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

4. Third Repetition

Suttas 45-70

[Note: As the suttas of this Chapter are identical to the previous Suttas 1-18 and 37-44 it has been abridged here by the inclusion of the first and last suttas (45 and 70) in their complete form and Suttas 46-69 are given by title only but are linked to their corresponding sutta in the previous Chapters.]

Sutta 45

Vāta Suttaṃ

Winds

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,

sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

§

46. Etaṃ Mama Suttaṃ,

This is Mine,

47. So Attā Suttaṃ

That is the Self,

48. No ca Me Siyā Suttaṃ,

It May Not Be Mine,

49. N'atthi Suttaṃ,

There is Not,

50. Karoto Suttaṃ,

PTS: For Him Who Acts,

51. Hetu Suttaṃ,

Condition,

52. Mahā Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

By the (Great) Heresy,

53. Sassata Loka Suttaṃ,

The World is Eternal,

54. Asassata Loka Suttaṃ,

The World is Not Eternal,

55. Antavā Suttaṃ

Limited (is the World),

56. Anantavā Suttaṃ

Unlimited (is the world),

57. Taṇ Jīvan, Taṇ Sarīra Suttaṃ

What the Life Is, That Is the Body,

58. Aññaṇ Jīvan, Aññaṇ Sarīra Suttaṃ

PTS: The Life is One Thing, the Body is Another,

59. Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Exists,

60. Na Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Exists Not,

61. Hoti ca na ca Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata both Exists and Exists Not,

62. N'eva Hoti na na Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Neither Exists nor Exists Not,

63. Rūpī Attā Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self has Form,

64. Arūpī Attā Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self is Formless,

65. Rūpī ca Arūpī Attā Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Both has Form and Is Formless,

66. N'eva Rūpī N'ārūpī Attā Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Neither has Form Nor Is Formless,

67. Ekanta-sukhī Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Is Sheer Bliss,

68. Ekanta-dukkhī Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Is Sheer Suffering,

69. Sukha-dukkhī Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Is Bliss and Suffering,

§

Sutta 70

Adukkha-m-Asukhī Suttaṃ

The Self Is without Bliss or Suffering

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,

as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
III. Khandhā Vagga:
24: Diṭṭhi Saṃyutta
5. Catuttha Gamanam Vagga

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

24. Kindred Sayings on Views

5. Fourth Repetition

Suttas 71-96

[Note: As the suttas of this Chapter are identical to the previous Suttas 1-18 and 37-44 it has been abridged here by the inclusion of the first and last suttas (45 and 70) in their complete form and Suttas 46-69 are given by title only but are linked to their corresponding sutta in the previous Chapters.]

---

[175]

Sutta 71

Vāta Suttaṃ

Winds

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'.

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,

moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,

sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'Winds do not blow,
rivers do not flow,
pregnant women do not bring forth,
moon and sun neither rise nor set,
but (all) are stable as a pillar'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points is put away
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,
as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

§

72. Etaṃ Mama Suttaṃ,

This is Mine,

73. So Attā Suttaṃ

That is the Self,

74. No ca Me Siyā Suttaṃ,

It May Not Be Mine,

75. N'atthi Suttaṃ,

There is Not,

76. Karoto Suttaṃ,

PTS: For Him Who Acts,

77. Hetu Suttaṃ,

Condition,

78. Mahā Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

By the (Great) Heresy,

79. Sassata Loka Suttaṃ,

The World is Eternal,

80. Asassata Loka Suttaṃ,

The World is Not Eternal,

81. Antavā Suttaṃ

Limited (is the World),

82. Anantavā Suttaṃ

Unlimited (is the world),

83. Taṇ Jīvan, Taṇ Sarīra Suttaṃ

What the Life Is, That Is the Body,

84. Aññaṇ Jīvan, Aññaṇ Sarīra Suttaṃ

PTS: The Life is One Thing, the Body is Another,

85. Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Exists,

86. Na Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Exists Not,

87. Hoti ca na ca Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata both Exists and Exists Not,

88. N'eva Hoti na na Hoti Tathāgata Suttaṃ

The Tathāgata Neither Exists nor Exists Not,

89. Rūpī Attā Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self has Form,

90. Arūpī Attā Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self is Formless,

91. Rūpī ca Arūpī Attā Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Both has Form and Is Formless,

92. N'eva Rūpī N'ārūpī Attā Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Neither has Form Nor Is Formless,

93. Ekanta-sukhī Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Is Sheer Bliss,

94. Ekanta-dukkhī Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Is Sheer Suffering,

95. Sukha-dukkhī Suttaṃ

PTS: The Self Is Bliss and Suffering,

§

Sutta 96

Adukkha-Asukhī Suttaṃ

The Self Is without Bliss or Suffering

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There being what, brethren,
by clinging to what,
by depending upon what
does such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"For us, lord, things have the Exalted One as their root
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed if the meaning of these words
should show itself in the Exalted One."

■

"There being a body, brethren,
by clinging to body,
depending on body,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being feeling, brethren,
by clinging to feeling,
depending on feeling,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being perception, brethren,
by clinging to perception,
depending on perception,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being the activities, brethren,
by clinging to the activities,
depending on the activities,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

There being consciousness, brethren,
by clinging to consciousness,
depending on consciousness,
arises such a view as this:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death.'

■

As to that, what think ye, brethren?

Is body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -

without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Now what is seen,
heard,
sensed,
known,
attained,
sought after,
thought out by mind, -
is that permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"That which is impermanent,
is it weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
without clinging to that
can such a view as this arise:

'The self is without bliss or suffering,
is without sickness,
after death'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"But when in an Ariyan disciple
doubt as to these six points
when for him doubt as to suffering is put away,
doubt as to the arising of suffering,
as to the ceasing of suffering,

as to the way going to the ceasing of suffering is put away, -
then this Ariyan disciple is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from disaster,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 1

Cakkhu Suttaṃ

The Eye

---

[177]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"The eye, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.[1]

The ear, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The body,[2], brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called:

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,[3]
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing the fruit of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,[4]
is called:

'Walker in Dhamma[ed1],
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruit of stream-winning.'

■

[178] He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,

assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] Aññathā-bhāvī. Cf. S. iv, 67 f.

[2] Kāyo, here the organ of touch sensation, the whole bodily surface.

[3] Okianto sammatta-niyāmaṇ. Cf. Pts. of Controv. 177, C. 185. Vis. Magg. 177. Sammatta is the abstract noun from samma (Lat. summa, highest, best).

[4] Mattaso nijjhānaṇ khamanti. Cf. S. v, 377; A. iv, 241.; J.P.T.S., 1913-14, p.220.

[ed1] Woodward mistakenly repeats "walker in faith".

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 2

Rūpa Suttaṃ

Body[1ed1]

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Body, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Tastes, brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

States of mind,[ed2] brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] Here rūpaṇ not kāyo

[ed1] Woodward translates 'rūpa' as body, but what is being spoken of here are the objects of the senses and that would be 'visible objects' not just the body. Rūpa is basically 'light', and it can be said that at it's most fundamental sight is the perception of light.

[ed2] 'Dhammā'. The term must mean an object of the mind sense (mano), not a state of the mind (citta). 'Things.' 'Phenomena.' It cannot be 'The Dhamma' as the use pre-dates the appearance of such. 'Form' is too narrow. The confusion may arise by the association with the fourth of the Satipatthanas where 'Living observing the Dhamma through The Dhamma' is described as observing the arising and passing away of several elements of The Dhamma.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta3

Viññāṇa Suttaṃ

Consciousness[1]

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Eye-consciousness, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Ear-consciousness, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Nose-consciousness, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Tongue-consciousness, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Body-consciousness, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Mind-consciousness, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

[1] S. ii, 140; K.S. ii, 101.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 4

Phassa Suttaṃ

Contact

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Eye-contact, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Ear-contact, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Nose-contact, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Tongue-contact, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Body-contact, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Mind-contact, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 5

Vedanāya Suttaṃ

Feeling

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Feelings, brethren, that arise from eye-contact, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Feelings, brethren, that arise from ear-contact, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Feelings, brethren, that arise from nose-contact, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Feelings, brethren, that arise from tongue-contact, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Feelings, brethren, that arise from body-contact, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Feelings, brethren, that arise from mind-contact, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 6

Saññā Suttaṃ

Perception

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Perception of body,[ed1] brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Perception of sound, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Perception of scent, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Perception of savour, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Perception of tangibles, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Perception of phenomena,[ed2] brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

ed1 As with §2, Woodward translates 'rūpa' as body, but what is being spoken of here are the objects of the senses and that would be 'visible objects' not just the body.

ed2 'Dhammā'. Here Woodward changes his translation from 'state of mind' which he used in §2.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 7

Cetanā Suttaṃ

Volition[1]

---

[179]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Volitional acts occasioned by body,[ed1] brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Volitional acts occasioned by sound, brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Volitional acts occasioned by scent, brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Volitional acts occasioned by savour, brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Volitional acts occasioned by tangibles, brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Volitional acts occasioned by ideas,[ed2] brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] Cf. Pts. of Contr. 225

[ed1] As with §2, Woodward translates 'rūpa' as body, but what is being spoken of here are the objects of the senses and that would be 'visible objects' or 'sights' not just the body.

[ed2] 'Dhammā'. Here Woodward changes his translation from 'state of mind' which he used in §2. and again from 'phenomenon' which he used in §6.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 8

Taṇhā Suttaṃ

Craving

---

[179]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Craving for body,[ed1] brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Craving for sounds, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Craving for scents, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Craving for savours, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Craving for tangibles, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Craving for ideas, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

ed1 As with §2, Woodward translates 'rūpa' as body, but what is being spoken of here are the objects of the senses and that would be 'visible objects' or 'sights' not just the body.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 9

Dhātu Suttaṃ

Element[1]

---

[179]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"The element of earth, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The element of water, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The element of heat, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The element of air, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The element of space, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The element of consciousness, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,

one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

[1] Of earth, water, fire, air and space (ākāsa) Text omits viññāṇa-dhātu, but it occurs in the formula at D. iii, 247, at M. iii, 31, 62, 240, and infra, §9 of Book. V. and V.M. 486.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
25. Okkantika Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

25. Kindred Sayings on Entering

Sutta 10

Khandhena Suttaṃ

By the (Fivefold) Group

---

[179]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Body, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Feeling, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Perception, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

The activities,[1] brethren, are impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

Consciousness, brethren, is impermanent,
changeable,
becoming otherwise.

§

He who has faith and confidence, brethren,
in these doctrines,
such an one is called

'Walker in faith,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,

or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, by whom these doctrines
by his insight
are moderately approved,
is called

'Walker in Dhamma,
one who enters on assurance of perfection,
one who enters on the state of the worthy,
one who has escaped the state of the manyfolk;
one incapable of doing a deed
by which he would be reborn in purgatory
or in the womb of an animal,
or in the realm of Petas;
one incapable of dying without realizing
the fruita of stream-winning.'

■

He, brethren, who thus knows,
thus sees
these doctrines,
is called

'Stream-winner,
saved from destruction,
assured,
bound for enlightenment.'"

---

[1] Text omits sankhārā here.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis[1]

Sutta 1

Cakkhu Suttaṃ

Eye

---

[180]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of eye, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of ear, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of nose, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of tongue, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of body, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of mind, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of eye, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of ear, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of nose, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,

the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of tongue, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of body, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of mind, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.'"

---

[1] Uppāda.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 2

Rūpa Suttaṃ

Material Form

---

[180]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of material forms, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of sounds, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of scents, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of savours, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of tangibles, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of phenomena, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of material forms, -
that is the [181] ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of sounds,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of scents, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of savours, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of tangibles, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of phenomena, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 3

Viññāṇa Suttaṃ

Consciousness

---

[181]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of eye-consciousness, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of ear-consciousness, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of nose-consciousness, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of tongue-consciousness, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of body-consciousness, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of mind-consciousness, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of eye-consciousness, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of ear-consciousness, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of nose-consciousness, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,

the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of tongue-consciousness, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of body-consciousness, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of mind-consciousness, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 4

Phassa Suttaṃ

Contact

---

[181]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of contact by the eye, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of contact by the ear, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of contact by the nose, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of contact by the tongue, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of contact by the body, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of contact by the mind, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of contact by the eye, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of contact by the ear, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of contact by the nose, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,

the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of contact by the tongue, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of contact by the body, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of contact by the mind, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 5

Vedanāya Suttaṃ

Feeling

---

[181]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of feeling born of contact by the eye, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of feeling born of contact by the ear, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of feeling born of contact by the nose, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of feeling born of contact by the tongue, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of feeling born of contact by the body, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of feeling born of contact by the mind, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of feeling born of contact by the eye, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of feeling born of contact by the ear, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of feeling born of contact by the nose, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,

the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of feeling born of contact by the tongue, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of feeling born of contact by the body, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of feeling born of contact by the mind, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 6

Saññāya Suttaṃ

By Perception

---

[181]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of perception[ed1] of body, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of perception of sounds, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of perception of scents, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of perception of savours, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of perception of tangibles, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of perception of phenomena, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of perception of body, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of perception of sounds,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of perception of scents, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of perception of savours, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of perception of tangibles, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of perception of phenomena, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death."

---

ed1 Here Woodward has apparently mistakenly used 'consciousness' for 'perception.' This must be just a careless oversight as he uses 'perception' for the title, 'consciousness' for §3 here and 'perception' for §6 in the previous set. Doubt remains however because he has again repeated this translation in SN 3.27.6 and there has changed his translation of 'rūpa' to 'visible shape' which means he must have at least looked at his translation. I have changed the translation or corrected the mistake because it is pretty much a consensus opinion that the translation is 'perception.' See Glossology: Saññā

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 7

Cetanā Suttaṃ

Volition

---

[182]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of volitional acts through body, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of volitional acts through sounds, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of volitional acts through scents, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of volitional acts through savours, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of volitional acts through tangibles, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing volitional acts through things, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of volitional acts through body, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of volitional acts through sounds,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of volitional acts through scents, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of volitional acts through savours, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of volitional acts through tangibles, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of volitional acts through things, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 7

Taṇhā Suttaṃ

Craving

---

[182]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of craving for body, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of craving for sounds, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of craving for scents, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of craving for savours, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of craving for tangibles, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing craving for things, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of craving for body, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of craving for sounds,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of craving for scents, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of craving for savours, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of craving for tangibles, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of craving for things, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 9

Dhātu Suttaṃ

Element

---

[182]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of the element of earth, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of the element of water, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of the element of heat, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of the element of air, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of the element of space, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of the element of consciousness, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of the element of earth, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of the element of water,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of the element of heat, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of the element of air, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of the element of space, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of the element of consciousness, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
26. Uppāda Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

26. Kindred Sayings on Genesis

Sutta 10

Khandhena Suttaṃ

The Fivefold Mass

---

[182]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of body, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of feeling, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of perception, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of the activities, -
this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

The arising,
the establishing,
the rebirth,
the appearing of consciousness, -

this is the arising of suffering,
the establishing of diseases,
the appearing of decay-and-death.

§

Moreover, brethren, the ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of body, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of feeling,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of perception, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of the activities, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

The ceasing,
the calming,
the coming to an end of consciousness, -
that is the ceasing of suffering,
the calming of disease,
the coming to an end of decay-and-death.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions[1]

Sutta 1

Cakkhu Suttaṃ

The Eye

---

[183]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust that is in the eye
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in the ear
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in the nose
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in the tongue
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in the body
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in the mind
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about[2] with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable[3]
for penetrating those things that are to be realized.'[4]

---

[1] Ten kilesa's are given in Abhidhamma (Bud. Psy. Eth., § 1229 f.); greed, hate, dullness, conceit, speculative opinion, perplexity, stolidity, distraction, unconscientiousness, indiscretion.

[2] Paribhāvitaṇ. Cf. supra, xxii, § 101.

[3] At S. v, 92-3 the corruptions or flaws of the different metals are enumerated, which make them incapable of perfect workmanship. Then the five corruptions or faults of the heart are given: failure to be soft, pliable, shining, delicate and capable of perfect moulding. So we read in cases where the Master is turning an enquirer to salvation, he questions, exhorts, chides, calms, fires and arouses him. Then, seeing that his heart is pliable, he opens up the deeper matters of the Norm.

[4] Abhiññā sacchikaraṇīyesu dhammesu.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 2

Rūpa Suttaṃ

Material Form

---

[183]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust that is in material form
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is [184] in sounds
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in scents
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in savours
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in tangibles
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in things
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 3

Viññāṇa Suttaṃ

Consciousness

---

[184]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust that is in eye-consciousness
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in ear-consciousness
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in nose-consciousness
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in tongue-consciousness
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in body-consciousness
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in mind-consciousness
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 4

Phassa Suttaṃ

Contact

---

[184]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust that is in eye-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in ear-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in nose-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in tongue-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in body-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in mind-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 5

Vedanā Suttaṃ

By Feeling

---

[184]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust that is in feeling born of eye-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in feeling born of ear-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in feeling born of nose-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in feeling born of tongue-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in feeling born of body-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in feeling born of mind-contact
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 6

Saññā Suttaṃ

By Perception

---

[184]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust that is in perception[ed1] of visible shape
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in perception of sound
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in perception of scent
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in perception of savour
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in perception of tangibles
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in perception of things
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

[ed1] As in SN 3.26.6, here Woodward has apparently mistakenly used 'consciousness' for 'perception.' This must be just a careless oversight as he uses 'perception' for the title, 'consciousness' for §3 here and 'perception' for §6 in the previous set. Doubt remains however because of the use here where he has changed his translation of 'rūpa' to 'visible shape' which means he must have at least looked at this translation. I have changed the translation or corrected the mistake because it is pretty much a consensus opinion that the translation is 'perception.' See Glossology: Saññā

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 7

Cetanā Suttaṃ

Volition

---

[184]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust that is in will concerning visible shape
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in will concerning sound
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in will concerning scent
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in will concerning savour
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in will concerning tangibles
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust that is in will concerning things
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 8

Taṇhā Suttaṃ

Craving

---

[184]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust for craving for visible shape
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for[ed1] craving for sound
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for craving for scent
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for craving for savour
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for craving for tangibles
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for craving for things
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

[ed1] Woodward here omits for craving for, perhaps intentionally, but there certainly is the phenomena of having lust for lust.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 9

Dhātu Suttaṃ

Element

---

[185]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust for the element of earth
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for the element of water
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for the element of heat
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for the element of air
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for the element of space
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for the element of consciousness
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these six points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
27. Kilesa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

27. Kindred Sayings on the Corruptions

Sutta 10

Khandena Suttaṃ

The Fivefold Mass

---

[185]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the desire-and-lust for visible shape
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for feeling
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for perception
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for the activities
is a corruption of the heart.

The desire-and-lust for consciousness
is a corruption of the heart.

But, brethren, when in a brother
the heart's corruption
in these five[ed1] points
is put away,
and his heart is bent on renunciation,
then, compassed about with renunciation,
his heart is seen to be pliable
for penetrating those things
that are to be realized."

[ed1] Woodward retains 'six' and the BJT Pali 'chasu'. Everyone else noticed.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 1

Viveka Suttaṃ

Solitude

---

[186]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

"Friend, I have been dwelling aloof from passions, aloof from things evil,
with my thought applied and sustained in first Jhāna
which is born of solitude and full of zest and happiness.[1]

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining first Jhāna,'

or

'It is I
who have attained first Jhāna.'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from first Jhāna.'".

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,[2]
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the vener- [187] able Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining first Jhāna,'

or

'It is I
who have attained first Jhāna.'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from first Jhāna.'".

---

[1] See Mrs. Rh.D., Buddh. Psychol., pp. 99, 107-19; Buddhism, p. 215.

[2] Cf. S. ii, 275. On the term ahaṇkāra cf. Garbe, Sānkhyā Philosophie, p. 68.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 2

Avitakka Suttaṃ

Without Applied Thought[1]

---

[187]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

"Friend, owing to the calming down
of thought applied and sustained,
I have attained
and been dwelling in second Jhāna,
that inward calming,
that single-mindedness,[2] of will,
apart from thought applied and sustained,

born of mental balance,
full of zest and happiness.

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining second Jhāna,'

or

'It is I
who have attained second Jhāna.'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from second Jhāna.'".

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the venerable Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining second Jhāna,'

or

'It is I
who have attained second Jhāna.'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from second Jhāna.'".

---

[1] Cf. S. ii, 211; K.S. ii, 142, etc. The Second Jhāna.

[2] Ekodibhāvo, trans. by Sīlācāra (in Majjhima) as 'mind emerging sole,' by Mrs. Rh. D., 'self-contained and uplifting' (Bud. Psy., 110); 'the mind grows calm and sure, dwelling on high,' B. Psy. Eth., § 161. Cf. Expositor, p. 226. It is one-pointedness.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 3

Pīti Suttaṃ

Zest

---

[187]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

[188] "Friend, from the fading away of zest,
I have attained
and have been dwelling in third Jhāna, disinterested,[1]
mindful
and self-possessed,
well aware in the body

of that happiness
of which the Ariyans declare:
'Disinterested and alert he dwelleth happily'.

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining third Jhāna,'

or

'It is I
who have attained third Jhāna.'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from third Jhāna.'".

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the venerable Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining third Jhāna,'

or

'It is I
who have attained third Jhāna.'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from third Jhāna.'".

---

[1] Upekkhako.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 4

Upekkhā Suttaṃ

Equanimity

---

[188]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

"Friend, by putting aside weal and woe, by the ending of both joy and sorrow felt before,
I have attained
and have been dwelling in fourth Jhāna, a state wherein is neither pleasure nor pain, an equanimity
of utter purity.

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining fourth Jhāna,'

or

'It is I
who have attained fourth Jhāna.'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from fourth Jhāna.'".

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the venerable Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining fourth Jhāna,'

or

'It is I
who have attained fourth Jhāna.'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from fourth Jhāna.'".

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 5

Akāsa Suttaṃ

Space[1]

---

[188]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

"Friend, passing utterly beyond the consciousness of shape and form, by the ending of the consciousness of resistance,[2]
by not attending to the consciousness of diversity, I have attained
and have been dwelling in the sphere of the infinity of space, realizing:
'Infinite is space.'

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining the sphere of the infinity of space, realizing:
"Infinite is space."'

or

'It is I
who have attained the sphere of the infinity of space, realizing:
"Infinite is space."'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the sphere of the infinity of space, realizing:
"Infinite is space."'"

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the venerable Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining the sphere of the infinity of space, realizing:
"Infinite is space."'

or

'It is I
who have attained the sphere of the infinity of space, realizing:
"Infinite is space."'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the sphere of the infinity of space, realizing:
"Infinite is space."'"

---

[1] The full title ākāsānañcāyatanaṇ 'the sphere of unbounded space.' Cf. Mrs. Rh. D., B. Psy. 117 f.; Buddh. Psych.Ethics, §§ 265-8, nn. for this and following sections.

[2] Paṭigha-saññā 'awareness of opposition' (generally used of ethical opposition or dislike, but) here, perhaps, the subtle resistance of a separative force by which individuality is experienced.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 6

Viññāṇa Suttaṃ

Consciousness

---

[188]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

"Friend, passing utterly beyond the sphere of unbounded space, I have attained and have been dwelling in the sphere of infinite consciousness,
realizing:
'Infinite is consciousness.'

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining the sphere of infinite consciousness,
realizing:
"Infinite is consciousness."'

or

'It is I
who have attained the sphere of infinite consciousness,
realizing:
"Infinite is consciousness."'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the sphere of infinite consciousness,
realizing:
"Infinite is consciousness."'"

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the venerable Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining the sphere of infinite consciousness,
realizing:
"Infinite is consciousness."'

or

'It is I
who have attained the sphere of infinite consciousness,

realizing:
"Infinite is consciousness."'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the sphere of infinite consciousness,
realizing:
"Infinite is consciousness."'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 7

Akiñcaññā Suttaṃ

Nothingness[1]

---

[189]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

"Friend, passing utterly beyond the sphere of infinity of consciousness,
I have attained
and have been dwelling in the sphere of nothingness,
realizing:
'There is nothing.'

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining the sphere of nothingness,
realizing:
"There is nothing."'

or

'It is I
who have attained the sphere of nothingness,
realizing:
"There is nothing."'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the sphere of nothingness,
realizing:
"There is nothing."'"

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the venerable Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining the sphere of nothingness,
realizing:
"There is nothing."'

or

'It is I
who have attained the sphere of nothingness,

realizing:
"There is nothing."'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the sphere of nothingness,
realizing:
"There is nothing."'

---

[1] Ākiñcaññāyatanaṇ 'the sphere of nothingness.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 8

N'eva-Saññā-nā-Saññ'Āyatana (aka Saññī) Suttaṃ

Having Neither Perception nor non-perception[1]

---

[189]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

"Friend, passing utterly beyond the sphere of nothingness,
I have attained
and have been dwelling in the sphere of neither perception nor non-perception.

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining the sphere of neither perception nor non-perception'

or

'It is I
who have attained the sphere of neither perception nor non-perception'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the sphere of neither perception nor non-perception'"

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the venerable Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining the sphere of neither perception nor non-perception'

or

'It is I
who have attained the sphere of neither perception nor non-perception'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the sphere of neither perception nor non-perception'

[1] Neva-saññā-nāsaññāyatanaṇ Text reads simply saññī.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 9

Saññā-Vedayita-Nirodho (aka: Nirodha Samāpatti) Suttaṃ

Cessation[1]

---

[189]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at early dawn,
robed himself,
took bowl and robe
and entered Sāvatthī to beg for alms.

After going his begging-rounds in Sāvatthī
and returning from begging
he ate his meal
and drew near Dark Grove
for noonday rest.

Plunging into Dark Grove,
he sat down at the foot of a tree
for noonday rest.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now the venerable Ānanda
saw the venerable Sāriputta coming,
while yet he was far off,
and beholding the venerable Sāriputta
he thus spake to him:

"Calm are your senses, friend Sāriputta,
clear and translucent
the colour of your face.

In what mood
has the venerable Sāriputta
been spending this day?"

"Friend, passing utterly beyond the feeling of neither perception nor non-perception,
I have attained
and have been dwelling in the state of cessation of perception and feeling.

To me thus, friend,
the thought never came:

'It is I
who am attaining the state of cessation of perception and feeling'

or

'It is I
who have attained the state of cessation of perception and feeling'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the state of cessation of perception and feeling'"

"Surely for a long time
have leanings to I-making,
to mine-making
and to vanity
been well rooted out from the venerable Sāriputta.

That is why it occurs not
to the venerable Sāriputta:

'It is I
who am attaining the state of cessation of perception and feeling.'

or

'It is I
who have attained the state of cessation of perception and feeling'

or

'It is I
who have emerged from the state of cessation of perception and feeling'

---

[1] Saññāvedayita-nirodho.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
28. Sāriputta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

28. Kindred Sayings on Sāriputta

Sutta 10

Sūci-Mukhī Suttaṃ

Pure-Face[1]

---

[189]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Rājagaha
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
rising up at early dawn, [190] robed himself,
and taking bowl and robe
entered Rājagaha to beg for alms.

After begging straight on from house to house[2] in Rājagaha
he was eating his meal, leaning against a certain wall.

Then the wandering sister Pure-Face came up to the venerable Sāriputta and addressed him thus:

"0 recluse, why do you eat looking downwards?"

"I do nñt eat looking downwards, sister."

"Then, recluse, you are eating looking upwards."

"I do not eat looking upwards, sister."

"Then, recluse, you are eating looking to the four quarters."

"I do not eat looking to the four quarters, sister."

"Then, recluse, you are eating looking to the points between the four quarters."

"I do not eat, sister, looking to the points between the four quarters."

"Then how, forsooth, how are you eating, recluse?

For when I question you
'0 recluse, why do you eat looking downwards?'
you answer:
'I do nñt eat looking downwards, sister.'

When I question you
'Then, recluse, you are eating looking upwards.'
you answer:
'I do not eat looking upwards, sister.'

When I question you
'Then, recluse, you are eating looking to the four quarters.'
you answer:
'I do not eat looking to the four quarters, sister.'

When I question you
'Then, recluse, you are eating looking to the points between the four quarters.'
you answer:
'I do not eat, sister, looking to the points between the four quarters.'"

"Whatsoever recluses and brahmins, sister,
get their living in a wrong way
by the practice of divination and of such low arts, -
these, sister, are called
'recluses and brahmins who eat looking downwards.'

Whatsoever recluses and brahmins, sister,
get their living in a wrong way
by the practice of star-gazing and such low arts,[3] -
such as these, sister, are called
'recluses and brahmins who eat looking upward.'

Whatsoever recluses and brahmins, sister,
get their living in a wrong way
by the practice of sending messages and going errands,[4] -
such as these, sister, are called
'recluses and brahmins who eat looking to the four quarters.'

[191] Whatsoever recluses and brahmins, sister,
get their living in a wrong way
by the practice of palmistry
and such low arts, -

these, sister, are called
'recluses and brahmins who eat looking to the points between the four quarters.'

But I, sister, am one who gets his living in no one of these ways.

Rightly do I seek my food, and rightly do I eat my food
when I have sought it."

Thereupon the wanderer Pure-Face roamed from street to street and from crossways to crossways in Rājagaha
and thus proclaimed:

"Rightly do the recluses who are sons of the Sakyan
win their food.

Blamelessly do the recluses
who are sons of the Sakyan
win their food.

Do ye give alms
to the recluses
who are sons of the Sakyan."

---

[1] Suci-mukhī.

[2] Sapadānaṇ. See Words in Pali Dictionary. The derivation is uncertain.

[3] Vatthu. and tiracchāna-vijjā. Comy. says 'such as, by the mean occupation of divination of the best plots for 'growing gourds, pumpkins and radishes.' Cf. Vin. ii, 139; D. i, 9. The practice of such arts was forbidden to the Order.

[4] Cf. Dialog. i, 15; there is a certain word-play in bhuñjanti (eat). It means both enjoying food, and enjoying generally; thus 'are maintained by.' Cf. K.S. i, 15 n. 1.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 1

Suddhika Suttaṃ

According to Scheme[1]

---

[192]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four sorts of birth, brethren,
as nāgas.

What four?

The egg-born,
the womb-born[2]
the sweat-born,[3]
those born without parents.

These, brethren, are the four sorts of birth as nāgas.

---

[1] Suddhikaṇ. On this term see B Psy Eth., 2nd ed. only, § 505, n. 1. In the next section the text reads suddhakaṇ. Asking why the Master chose such a subject as nāga-births (i.e., among the gnomes and elves) for his discourse, Comy. says it was to explain the desire (ukkcaṇṭhat'atthaṇ) for such births.

[2] Jalabujā, 'water-born.' Comy. says vatthikose jātā.

[3] Sanseda-jā. They are exuded from the pores; the last class, opapātikā, 'just come to be.' Cf. Comy. on D. iii, 107, in Dialogues, iii, 103, n. 2; and Comy. on Puggala-Paññatti, J.P.T.S. 1913, p. 197.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 2

Paṇīta-Tara Suttaṃ

Pre-Eminent

---

[192]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four sorts of birth, brethren,
as nāgas.

What four?

The egg-born,
the womb-born
the sweat-born,
those born without parents.

§

Herein, brethren, the womb-born,
the sweat-born
and those born without parents
are better than[1] the egg-born.

The sweat-born[ed1]
and those born without parents are better than the womb-born and the egg-born.

Those born without parents,
are better than the sweat-born
the womb-born,
and the egg-born.

Such, brethren, are the four sorts of births as nāgas."

---

[1] Paṇītatara

---

ed1 Woodward abridges as follows:

Herein, brethren, the womb-born,
the sweat-born
and those born without parents
are better than the egg-born.

The two latter sorts
are better than the two former,
and the last three
are better than the egg-born.

which would repeat the first sequence for the last sequence.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 3

Paṭhama Uposatha Suttaṃ

Sabbath

---

[192]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One, and salut- [193] ing him
sat down at one side.

So seated that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause

why some egg-born nāgas keep the Sabbath
and divest themselves of their nāga-forms?"[1]

"Herein, brother, certain egg-born nāgas think thus:

'Formerly we were double-dealing in speech,
double-dealing in act,
double-dealing in thought.

Thus in three ways being double-dealers,
when body breaks up after death
we shall be reborn in the company of egg-born nāgas.

Now if we were to practise virtuous deeds,
virtuous words
and virtuous thoughts,
when body breaks up after death
we might be reborn in the happy state,
in the heaven world.

Come now,
let us practise virtuous deeds,
virtuous words
and virtuous thoughts.'

This, brethren, is the reason,
this is the cause
why certain egg-born nāgas
keep the Sabbath
and divest themselves of their nāga-forms."

---

[1] (V)ossaṭṭha-kāyā bhavanti. Cf. Jātaka iv, 460 (Campeyya-Jātaka).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 4

Dutiya Uposatha Suttaṃ

Sabbath (2)

---

[193]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One, and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause

why some womb-born nāgas keep the Sabbath
and divest themselves of their nāga-forms?"

"Herein, brother, certain womb-born nāgas think thus:

'Formerly we were double-dealing in speech,
double-dealing in act,
double-dealing in thought.

Thus in three ways being double-dealers,
when body breaks up after death
we shall be reborn in the company of womb-born nāgas.

Now if we were to practise virtuous deeds,
virtuous words
and virtuous thoughts,
when body breaks up after death
we might be reborn in the happy state,
in the heaven world.

Come now,
let us practise virtuous deeds,
virtuous words
and virtuous thoughts.'

This, brethren, is the reason,
this is the cause
why certain womb-born nāgas
keep the Sabbath
and divest themselves of their nāga-forms."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 5

Tatiya Uposatha Suttaṃ

Sabbath (3)

---

[193]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One, and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause

why some sweat-born nāgas keep the Sabbath
and divest themselves of their nāga-forms?"

"Herein, brother, certain sweat-born nāgas think thus:

'Formerly we were double-dealing in speech,
double-dealing in act,
double-dealing in thought.

Thus in three ways being double-dealers,
when body breaks up after death
we shall be reborn in the company of sweat-born nāgas.

Now if we were to practise virtuous deeds,
virtuous words
and virtuous thoughts,
when body breaks up after death
we might be reborn in the happy state,
in the heaven world.

Come now,
let us practise virtuous deeds,
virtuous words
and virtuous thoughts.'

This, brethren, is the reason,
this is the cause
why certain sweat-born nāgas
keep the Sabbath
and divest themselves of their nāga-forms."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 6

Catuttha Uposatha Suttaṃ

Sabbath (4)

---

[193]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One, and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause

why some nāgas born without parents keep the Sabbath
and divest themselves of their nāga-forms?"

"Herein, brother, certain nāgas born without parents think thus:

'Formerly we were double-dealing in speech,
double-dealing in act,
double-dealing in thought.

Thus in three ways being double-dealers,
when body breaks up after death
we shall be reborn in the company of nāgas. born without parents

Now if we were to practise virtuous deeds,
virtuous words
and virtuous thoughts,
when body breaks up after death
we might be reborn in the happy state,
in the heaven world.

Come now,
let us practise virtuous deeds,
virtuous words
and virtuous thoughts.'

This, brethren, is the reason,
this is the cause
why certain nāgas born without parents
keep the Sabbath
and divest themselves of their nāga-forms."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 7

Paṭhama Tassa (aka Suta) Suttaṃ

Hearsay (1)

---

[193]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

[194] "What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nagas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought
is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 8

Dutiya Tassa (aka Suta) Suttaṃ

Hearsay (2)

---

[194]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nagas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought
is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 9

Tatiya Tassa (aka Suta) Suttaṃ

Hearsay (3)

---

[194]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nagas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought
is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Sutta 10

Catuttha Tassa (aka Suta) Suttaṃ

Hearsay (4)

---

[194]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought
is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Suttas 11-20

---

[194]

Sutta 11

Annadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of food.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 12

Pānadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of drink.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 13

Vatthadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of clothing.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company

of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 14

Yānadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of carriage.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 15

Mālādāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of flowers.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 16

Gandhadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of scents.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 17

Vilepanadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Ointment Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of ointment.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 18

Seyyadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a seat.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 19

Āvasathadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a lodging.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

Sutta 20

Padīpeyyadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of lamps and oil.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the egg-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born nāgas."

---

[1] Dān'upakārā

[ed1] The title in PTS is 'Dānupakāra'; in CSCD 'Aṇḍajadānūpakārasuttadasakaṃ'. The PTS Woodward translation does not give titles to the individual suttas.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Suttas 21-30

---

[194]

Sutta 21

Annadāyaka Jalābu-ja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of food.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 22

Pānadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of drink.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 23

Vatthadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of clothing.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company

of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 24

Yānadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of carriage.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 25

Mālādāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of flowers.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 26

Gandhadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of scents.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 27

Vilepanadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Ointment Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of ointment.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 28

Seyyadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a seat.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 29

Āvasathadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a lodging.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Sutta 30

Padīpeyyadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of lamps and oil.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the womb-born nāgas!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born nāgas."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Suttas 31-40

Sutta 31

Annadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of food.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 32

Pānadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of drink.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 33

Vatthadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of clothing.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company

of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 34

Yānadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of carriage.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 35

Mālādāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of flowers.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 36

Gandhadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of scents.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 37

Vilepanadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Ointment Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of ointment.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 38

Seyyadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a seat.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 39

Āvasathadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a lodging.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 40

Padīpeyyadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of lamps and oil.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born nāgas are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

"0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the sweat-born nāgas!"

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the sweat-born nāgas.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
29. Nāga Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

29. Kindred Sayings on Nāgas

Suttas 41-50

---

[194]

Sutta 41

Annadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of food.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 42

Pānadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of drink.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 43

Vatthadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of clothing.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company

of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 44

Yānadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of carriage.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 45

Mālādāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of flowers.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 46

Gandhadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of scents.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 47

Vilepanadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Ointment Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of ointment.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 48

Seyyadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a seat.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 49

Āvasathadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a lodging.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Sutta 50

Padīpeyyadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the nāgas born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of lamps and oil.

He hears it said:

'The nāgas born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the nāgas born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the nāgas born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born nāgas."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
30. Supaṇṇa Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

30. Kindred Sayings on Harpies[1]

Suttas 1-46

---

[195]

Sutta 1

Suddhika Suttaṃ

According to Scheme[2]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four sorts of birth, brethren,
as harpies

What four?

The egg-born,
the womb-born
the sweat-born,
those born without parents.

These, brethren, are the four sorts of birth as harpies."

Sutta 2

Suddhika Suttaṃ

They Carry Off

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four sorts of birth, brethren,
as harpies

What four?

The egg-born,
the womb-born
the sweat-born,
those born without parents.

Then, brethren, the egg-born harpies carry off the egg-born harpies, but not the womb-born harpies, the sweat-born harpies
nor the harpies born without parents.

Then, brethren, the womb-born harpies carry off the egg-born
and the womb-born harpies, but not the sweat-born harpies nor the nagas born without parents.

Then, brethren, the sweat-born harpies
carry off the egg-born,
the womb-born
and the sweat-born harpies,
but not those harpies born without parents.

These, brethren, are the four sorts of birth as harpies."

---

[196]

Sutta 3

Paṭhama Dvayakāri Suttaṃ

Double-Dealer (1)[3]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought
is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 4

Dutiya Dvayakāri Suttaṃ

Double-Dealer (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought
is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 5

Tatiya Dvayakāri Suttaṃ

Double-Dealer (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought
is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 6

Catuttha Dvayakāri Suttaṃ

Double-Dealer (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
a double-dealer in act,

a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought
is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Suttas 7-16

Paṭhavma Dān'Upakārā Sutta Dasakaṃ
or Aṇḍajadānūpakāra Sutta Dasakaṃ

Supporters by Gifts (1)

["The First Group of Ten 'Supported by Giving' Suttas",
or
"The Ten Egg-Born Supported by Giving Suttas"]

Sutta 7

Annadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of food.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 8

Pānadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of drink.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 9

Vatthadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of clothing.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 10

Yānadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of carriage.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 11

Mālādāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of flowers.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 12

Gandhadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of scents.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 13

Vilepanadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Ointment Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of ointment.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 14

Seyyadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a seat.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 15

Āvasathadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a lodging.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Sutta 16

Padīpeyyadāyaka Aṇḍaja Suttaṃ

The Egg-born Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of lamps and oil.

He hears it said:

'The egg-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the egg-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the egg-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the egg-born harpies."

Suttas 17-26

Dutiya Dān'Upakārā Sutta Dasakaṃ
or Jalābujadānūpakāra Sutta Dasakaṃ

Supporters by Gifts

["The Second Group of Ten 'Supported by Giving' Suttas",
or
"The Ten Womb-Born Supported by Giving Suttas"]

Sutta 17

Annadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of food.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 18

Pānadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of drink.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 19

Vatthadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of clothing.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 20

Yānadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of carriage.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 21

Mālādāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of flowers.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company

of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 22

Gandhadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of scents.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 23

Vilepanadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Ointment Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of ointment.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 24

Seyyadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a seat.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 25

Āvasathadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a lodging.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Sutta 26

Padīpeyyadāyaka Jalābuja Suttaṃ

The Womb-born Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of lamps and oil.

He hears it said:

'The womb-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the womb-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the womb-born harpies.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the womb-born harpies."

Suttas 27-36

Tatiya Dān'Upakārā Sutta Dasakaṃ
or Saṇsedajadānūpakāra Sutta Dasakaṃ

Supporters by Gifts

["The Second Group of Ten 'Supported by Giving' Suttas",
or
"The Ten Womb-Born Supported by Giving Suttas"]

Sutta 27

Annadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of food.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company

of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 28

Pānadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of drink.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 29

Vatthadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of clothing.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 30

Yānadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of carriage.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 31

Mālādāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of flowers.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 32

Gandhadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of scents.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 33

Vilepanadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Ointment Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of ointment.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 34

Seyyadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a seat.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 35

Āvasathadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a lodging.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Sutta 36

Padīpeyyadāyaka Saṇsedaja Suttaṃ

The Sweat-born Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of lamps and oil.

He hears it said:

'The sweat-born harpies are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the sweat-born harpies!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the sweat-born harpies."

Suttas 37-46

Catuttha Dān'Upakārā Sutta Dasakaṃ
or Opapātikadānūpakāra Sutta Dasakaṃ

Supporters by Gifts

["The Second Group of Ten 'Supported by Giving' Suttas",
or
"The Ten Womb-Born Supported by Giving Suttas"]

Sutta 37

Annadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of food.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 38

Pānadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of drink.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company

of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 39

Vatthadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of clothing.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 40

Yānadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of carriage.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 41

Mālādāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of flowers.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 42

Gandhadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of scents.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 43

Vilepanadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Ointment Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of ointment.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 44

Seyyadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a seat.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 45

Āvasathadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of a lodging.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company

of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

Sutta 46

Padīpeyyadāyaka Opapātika Suttaṃ

The Born without Parents Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one is
a double-dealer in act,
a double-dealer in word
a double-dealer in thought.

Such a one gives an offering of lamps and oil.

He hears it said:

'The harpies born without parents are long-lived,
fair to see
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be born in the company
of the harpies born without parents!'

When body breaks up after death
he is born in the company
of the harpies born without parents.

This is the reason, brother,
this is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the harpies born without parents."

---

[1] Supaṇṇā, 'fairwiāg,' a mythical bird, Garuḷa, or Garuḍa, the roc or harpy, which makes war on snakes or nāgas. Cf. S. i, 148: K.S., 185. Cf. D. ii, 259: Dialog. ii, 289:

'They who, twice-born, winged and keen Of sight, the heavenly harpies, who
With violence prey on Nāga chiefs:
"Gaudy" and "Well-winged" are their names.'

[2] For title see supra, Bk. viii, I.

[3] Dvaya-kārī. Comy., 'Kusalākusala-kārī' It is noticeable that 'double-dealors' aspire to be reborn as nāgas and harpies; but further on they are omitted. Only the honest can aspire to rebirth among the Gandharva devas.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
31. Gandhabba-Kāya Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

31. Kindred Sayings on Gandharvas[1]

Suttas 1-112

---

[197]

Sutta 1

Suddhika Suttaṃ

According to Scheme

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, brethren, of the devas belonging to the Gandharva group.

Do ye listen to it.

"And which, brethren, are the devas belonging to the Gandharva group?

They are those devas, brethren, that dwell in the fragrance of root-wood,
those that dwell in the fragrance of heart-wood,
those that dwell in the fragrance of pith,
those that dwell in the fragrance of bark,
those that dwell in the fragrance of sap,
those that dwell in the fragrance of leaves, those that dwell in the fragrance of fruit,[ed1]
those that dwell in the fragrance of flowers, those that dwell on the fragrance of savours, those that dwell in the fragrance of scents.

These, brethren, are called

'The devas belonging to the Gandharva group.'"

Sutta 2

Sucarita Suttaṃ

Good Conduct[2]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
saluted him,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas belonging to the Gandharva group?"

[198] "Herein, brother, a certain one practises good conduct
in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas belonging to the Gandharva group
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas belonging to the Gandharva group!'

After death he is reborn in the company
of the devas belonging to the Gandharva group.

That, brother, is the reason,
that is the cause
why a certain one is reborn in the company
of the devas belonging to the Gandharva group."

Suttas 3-12

Dātā

Givers 1-10

Sutta 3

Mūla-Gandha or Dātā (1) Suttaṃ

Givers (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of root-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 4

Sāra-Gandha or Dātā (2) Suttaṃ

Givers (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of heart-wood-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 5

Pheggu-Gandha or Dātā (3) Suttaṃ

Givers (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of pith-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 6

Taca-Gandha or Dātā (4) Suttaṃ

Givers (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of bark-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 7

Papatika-Gandha or Dātā (5) Suttaṃ

Givers (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of sap-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 8

Patta-Gandha or Dātā (6) Suttaṃ

Givers (6)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of leaves-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 9

Puppha-Gandha or Dātā (7) Suttaṃ

Givers (7)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flowers-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flowers-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flowers-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flowers-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flowers-fragrance."

Sutta 10

Phala-Gandha or Dātā (8) Suttaṃ

Givers (8)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of fruit-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 11

Rasa-Gandha or Dātā (9) Suttaṃ

Givers (9)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of savours-fragrance,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 12

Gandha-Gandha or Dātā (10) Suttaṃ

Givers (10)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scents-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scents-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scents-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents-fragrance,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scents-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scents-fragrance."

---

[199]

Suttas 13-112

Dān'upakāra

Supporters by Offerings 1-100

Sutta 13

Anna-Dāna Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 14

Pānadāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 15

Vatthadāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him

sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause

why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 16

Yānadāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 17

Mālādāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 18

Gandhadāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (6)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 19

Vilepanadāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (7)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 20

Seyyadāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (8)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 21

Āvasathadāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (9)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 22

Padīpeyyadāyaka Mūla-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (10)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in root-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in root-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in root-fragrance."

Sutta 23

Anna-Dāna Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (11)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 24

Pānadāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (12)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 25

Vatthadāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (13)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 26

Yānadāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (14)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 27

Mālādāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (15)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 28

Gandhadāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (16)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 29

Vilepanadāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (17)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 30

Seyyadāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (18)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 31

Āvasathadāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (19)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 32

Padīpeyyadāyaka Sāra-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (20)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in heart-wood-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in heart-wood-fragrance."

Sutta 33

Anna-Dāna Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (21)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 34

Pānadāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (22)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 35

Vatthadāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (23)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 36

Yānadāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (24)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 37

Mālādāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (25)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 38

Gandhadāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (26)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 39

Vilepanadāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (27)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 40

Seyyadāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (28)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 41

Āvasathadāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (29)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 42

Padīpeyyadāyaka Pheggu-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (30)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in pith-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in pith-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in pith-fragrance."

Sutta 43

Anna-Dāna Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (31)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 44

Pānadāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (32)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 45

Vatthadāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (33)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 46

Yānadāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (34)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 47

Mālādāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (35)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 48

Gandhadāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (36)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 49

Vilepanadāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (37)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 50

Seyyadāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (38)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 51

Āvasathadāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (39)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 52

Padīpeyyadāyaka Taca-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (40)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in bark-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in bark-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in bark-fragrance."

Sutta 53

Anna-Dāna Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (41)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 54

Pānadāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (42)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 55

Vatthadāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (43)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 56

Yānadāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (44)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 57

Mālādāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (45)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 58

Gandhadāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (46)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 59

Vilepanadāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (47)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 60

Seyyadāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (48)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 61

Āvasathadāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (49)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 62

Padīpeyyadāyaka Papatika-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (50)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in sap-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in sap-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in sap-fragrance."

Sutta 63

Anna-Dāna Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (51)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 64

Pānadāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (52)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 65

Vatthadāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (53)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 66

Yānadāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (54)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 67

Mālādāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (55)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 68

Gandhadāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (56)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 69

Vilepanadāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (57)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 70

Seyyadāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (58)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 71

Āvasathadāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (59)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 72

Padīpeyyadāyaka Patta-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (60)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in leaves-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in leaves-fragrance."

Sutta 73

Anna-Dāna Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (61)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 74

Pānadāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (62)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 75

Vatthadāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (63)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 76

Yānadāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (64)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 77

Mālādāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (65)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 78

Gandhadāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (66)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 79

Vilepanadāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (67)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 80

Seyyadāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (68)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 81

Āvasathadāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (69)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 82

Padīpeyyadāyaka Puppha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (70)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in flower-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in flower-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in flower-fragrance."

Sutta 83

Anna-Dāna Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (71)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 84

Pānadāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (72)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 85

Vatthadāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (73)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 86

Yānadāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (74)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 87

Mālādāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (75)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of fruits,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 88

Gandhadāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (76)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 89

Vilepanadāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (77)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 90

Seyyadāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (78)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 91

Āvasathadāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (79)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 92

Padīpeyyadāyaka Phala-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (80)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in fruit-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in fruit-fragrance."

Sutta 93

Anna-Dāna Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (81)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 94

Pānadāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (82)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 95

Vatthadāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (83)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 96

Yānadāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (84)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 97

Mālādāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (85)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of savourss,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 98

Gandhadāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (86)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 99

Vilepanadāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (87)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 100

Seyyadāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (88)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 101

Āvasathadāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (89)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 102

Padīpeyyadāyaka Rasa-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (90)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in savours-fragrance
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in savours-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in savours-fragrance."

Sutta 103

Anna-Dāna Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (91)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 104

Pānadāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (92)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 105

Vatthadāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (93)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 106

Yānadāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (94)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death

is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 107

Mālādāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (95)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,

in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scemtss,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 108

Gandhadāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (96)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company

of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 109

Vilepanadāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (97)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 110

Seyyadāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (98)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 111

Āvasathadāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (99)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

Sutta 112

Padīpeyyadāyaka Gandha-Gandha Suttaṃ

Supporters by Offerings (100)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the devas that dwell in scemts-fragrance.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas
who dwell in scemts-fragrance."

---

[1] For the sub-title see supra, xxix, § 1. Gandhabbakāya and Gandhabbakāyikā devā. These sayings, like the two preceding sections, are curious instances of the annexing by Buddhism of Vedic folk-lore. These devas were by it reckoned lowest of all devas. See Dialogues ii, 246. [Presence of a Gandharva was essential to conception, M. i, 265; MP. 123. Cf. Edmunds, Buddhist and Christian Gospels, i, 167-8, n.]

[2] Sucaritaṇ.

[ed1] Woodward omits 'fruit'.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
32. Valāha Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

32. Kindred Sayings on Cloud-Spirits

Suttas 1-57

---

[200]

Sutta 1

Suddhika Suttaṃ

Exposition

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, brethren, about the devas belonging to the cloud-groups[1].

Do ye listen to it.

"And which, brethren, are the devas belonging to the cloud-groups?

They are devas (embodied) in cool-clouds, devas (embodied) in hot clouds, devas (embodied) in thunder clouds,[2] devas (embodied) in wind clouds, devas (embodied) in rain clouds.

These, brethren, are called

'The devas belonging to the cloud-groups.'"

Sutta 2

Sucarita Suttaṃ

Honesty

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
saluted him,

and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one,
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the devas belonging to the cloud group?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one practises good conduct
in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The devas belonging to the cloud-group
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the devas belonging to the cloud-group!'

After death he is reborn in the company
of the devas belonging to the cloud-group.

That, brother, is the reason,
that is the cause
why a certain one is reborn in the company
of the devas belonging to the cloud-group."

Suttas 3-52

Dānupakāra

Supporters by Offerings 1-50

Sutta 3

Anna-dāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 4

Pānadāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,

beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 5

Vatthadāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 6

Yānadāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 7

Mālādāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 8

Gandhadāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause

why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 9

Vilepanadāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Unguents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 10

Seyyadāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 11

Āvasathadāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 12

Padīpeyyadāyaka Sītavalāhaka Suttaṃ

Cool-cloud Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The cool-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the cool-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the cool-cloud devas."

Sutta 13

Anna-dāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 14

Pānadāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 15

Vatthadāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 16

Yānadāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 17

Mālādāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 18

Gandhadāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 19

Vilepanadāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Unguents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 20

Seyyadāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 21

Āvasathadāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 22

Padīpeyyadāyaka Uṇhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Hot-cloud Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The hot-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the hot-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the hot-cloud devas."

Sutta 23

Anna-dāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 24

Pānadāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 25

Vatthadāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 26

Yānadāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 27

Mālādāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 28

Gandhadāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 29

Vilepanadāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Unguents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 30

Seyyadāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 31

Āvasathadāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 32

Padīpeyyadāyaka Abbhavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Thunder-cloud Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The thunder-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the thunder-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the thunder-cloud devas."

Sutta 33

Anna-dāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 34

Pānadāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 35

Vatthadāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 36

Yānadāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 37

Mālādāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 38

Gandhadāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 39

Vilepanadāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Unguents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 40

Seyyadāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 41

Āvasathadāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 42

Padīpeyyadāyaka Vātavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Wind-cloud Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The wind-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the wind-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the wind-cloud devas."

Sutta 43

Anna-dāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Food Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of food,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 44

Pānadāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Drink Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of drink,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 45

Vatthadāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Clothing Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of clothing,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 46

Yānadāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Carriage Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of carriage,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 47

Mālādāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Flowers Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of flowers,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 48

Gandhadāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Scents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one

when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of scents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 49

Vilepanadāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Unguents Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of unguents,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 50

Seyyadāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Seat Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of seats,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 51

Āvasathadāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Lodging Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lodgings,
and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 52

Padīpeyyadāyaka Vassavalāhakā Suttaṃ

Rain-cloud Lamps and Oil Giver

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas?"

"Herein, brother, a certain one
practises good conduct in deed,
in word
and thought.

Then he hears it said:

'The rain-cloud devas
are long-lived,
beauteous,
and have much happiness.'

Then he thinks thus:

'0 that when body breaks up after death
I might be reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas!'

Then he becomes a giver
of offerings of lamps and oil,

and alter death he is reborn in the company
of the rain-cloud devas.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why a certain one
when body breaks up after death
is reborn in the company of the rain-cloud devas."

Sutta 53

Sīta Suttaṃ

Cool

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

[201] "What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why at one time it is cool?"

"There are devas, brother, who are called
'cool-clouds'.

When those devas think:

'What if we were to revel in the delight of bodies.'[3]

Then to them according to their heart's desire it becomes cool.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why at one time it is cool."

Sutta 54

Uṇha Suttaṃ

Hot

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why at one time it is hot?"

"There are devas, brother, who are called
'hot-clouds'.

When those devas think:

'What if we were to revel in the delight of bodies.'

Then to them according to their heart's desire it becomes hot.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why at one time it is hot."

Sutta 55

Abbha Suttaṃ

Thunder

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why at one time there is a thunder-cloud?"

"There are devas, brother, who are called
'thunder-cloudy'.

When those devas think:

'What if we were to revel in the delight of bodies.'

Then to them according to their heart's desire there is a thunder-cloud.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why at one time there is thunder."

Sutta 56

Vātā Suttaṃ

Winds

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why at one time it is windy?"

"There are devas, brother, who are called
'wind-clouds'.

When those devas think:

'What if we were to revel in the delight of bodies.'

Then to them according to their heart's desire there is wind.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why at one time it is windy."

Sutta 57

Vassa Suttaṃ

Rain

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and saluting him
sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, lord,
what is the cause
why at one time the (sky) god rains?"

"There are devas, brother, who are called
'rain-cloudy'.

When those devas think:

'What if we were to revel in the delight of bodies.'

Then to them according to their heart's desire the sky-god rains.

This, brother, is the reason,
this is the cause
why at one time the (sky) god rains."

---

[1] Valāhaka-kāyikā.

[2] Abbha-valākaka, generally in the sense of a cumulus.

[3] Sakāya-ratiyā rameyyāma, lit. 'revel (either) in our own company, (or) our own body' (or) 'in embodied delight."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
33. Vacchagotta Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

33. Kindred Sayings on Vacchagotta

Suttas 1-55

---

[202]

Sutta 1

Rūpa Aññāṇā Suttaṃ

Through Ignorance (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him

and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,[1]
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through ignorance of body, Vaccha, through ignorance of the arising of body,
through ignorance of the ceasing of body,
through ignorance of the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'"

Sutta 2

Vedanā Aññāṇā Suttaṃ

Through Ignorance (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or

'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through ignorance of feeling, Vaccha, through ignorance of the arising of feeling,
through ignorance of the ceasing of feeling,
through ignorance of the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'"

Sutta 3

Saññā Aññāṇā Suttaṃ

Through Ignorance (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through ignorance of perception, Vaccha, through ignorance of the arising of perception, through ignorance of the ceasing of perception,
through ignorance of the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'"

---

[203]

Sutta 4

Saṅkhāra Aññāṇā Suttaṃ

Through Ignorance (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through ignorance of the activities, Vaccha, through ignorance of the arising of the activities,
through ignorance of the ceasing of the activities,
through ignorance of the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'"

Sutta 5

Viññāṇa Aññāṇā Suttaṃ

Through Ignorance (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through ignorance of consciousness, Vaccha, through ignorance of the arising of consciousness, through ignorance of the ceasing of consciousness,
through ignorance of the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 6

Rūpa Adssana Suttaṃ

By Not Seeing (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not seeing of body, Vaccha, through not seeing of the arising of body,
through not seeing of the ceasing of body,
through not seeing of the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 7

Vedanā Adssana Suttaṃ

By Not Seeing (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not seeing of feeling, Vaccha, through not seeing of the arising of feeling,
through not seeing of the ceasing of feeling,

through not seeing of the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 8

Saññā Adssana Suttaṃ

By Not Seeing (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not seeing of perception, Vaccha, through not seeing of the arising of perception, through not seeing of the ceasing of perception,
through not seeing of the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause

why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 9

Saṅkhāra Adssana Suttaṃ

By Not Seeing (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not seeing of the activities, Vaccha, through not seeing of the arising of the activities,
through not seeing of the ceasing of the activities,
through not seeing of the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 10

Viññāṇa Adssana Suttaṃ

By Not Seeing (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not seeing of consciousness, Vaccha, through not seeing of the arising of consciousness, through not seeing of the ceasing of consciousness,
through not seeing of the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 11

Rūpa Anabhisamaya Suttaṃ

By Not Comprehending (1)[2]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not comprehending body, Vaccha, through not comprehending the arising of body,
through not comprehending the ceasing of body,
through not comprehending the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 12

Vedanā Anabhisamaya Suttaṃ

By Not Comprehending (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not comprehending feeling, Vaccha, through not comprehending the arising of feeling,
through not comprehending the ceasing of feeling,
through not comprehending the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 13

Saññā Anabhisamaya Suttaṃ

By Not Comprehending (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not comprehending perception, Vaccha, through not comprehending the arising of perception, through not comprehending the ceasing of perception,

through not comprehending the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 14

Saṅkhāra Anabhisamaya Suttaṃ

By Not Comprehending (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not comprehending the activities, Vaccha, through not comprehending the arising of the activities, through not comprehending the ceasing of the activities,
through not comprehending the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause

why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 15

Viññāṇa Anabhisamaya Suttaṃ

By Not Comprehending (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not comprehending consciousness, Vaccha, through not comprehending the arising of consciousness, through not comprehending the ceasing of consciousness,
through not comprehending the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 16

Rūpa Ananubodha Suttaṃ

By Not Understanding (1)[3]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not understanding body, Vaccha, through not understanding the arising of body,
through not understanding the ceasing of body,
through not understanding the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 17

Vedanā Ananubodha Suttaṃ

By Not Understanding (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not understanding feeling, Vaccha, through not understanding the arising of feeling,
through not understanding the ceasing of feeling,
through not understanding the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 18

Saññā Ananubodha Suttaṃ

By Not Understanding (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not understanding perception, Vaccha, through not understanding the arising of perception, through not understanding the ceasing of perception,
through not understanding the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 19

Saṅkhāra Ananubodha Suttaṃ

By Not Understanding (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not understanding the activities, Vaccha, through not understanding the arising of the activities, through not understanding the ceasing of the activities,

through not understanding the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 20

Viññāṇa Ananubodha Suttaṃ

By Not Understanding (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not understanding consciousness, Vaccha, through not understanding the arising of consciousness, through not understanding the ceasing of consciousness,
through not understanding the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause

why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 21

Rūpa Appaṭivedha Suttaṃ

By Not Penetrating (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not penetrating body, Vaccha, through not penetrating the arising of body,
through not penetrating the ceasing of body,
through not penetrating the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 22

Vedanā Appaṭivedha Suttaṃ

By Not Penetrating (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not penetrating feeling, Vaccha, through not penetrating the arising of feeling,
through not penetrating the ceasing of feeling,
through not penetrating the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 23

Saññā Appaṭivedha Suttaṃ

By Not Penetrating (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not penetrating perception, Vaccha, through not penetrating the arising of perception, through not penetrating the ceasing of perception,
through not penetrating the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 24

Saṅkhāra Appaṭivedha Suttaṃ

By Not Penetrating (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not penetrating the activities, Vaccha, through not penetrating the arising of the activities,
through not penetrating the ceasing of the activities,
through not penetrating the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 25

Viññāṇa Appaṭivedha Suttaṃ

By Not Penetrating (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not penetrating consciousness, Vaccha, through not penetrating the arising of consciousness, through not penetrating the ceasing of consciousness,

through not penetrating the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 26

Rūpa Asallakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discerning (1)[4]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discerning body, Vaccha, through not discerning the arising of body,
through not discerning the ceasing of body,
through not discerning the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause

why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 27

Vedanā Asallakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discerning (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discerning feeling, Vaccha, through not discerning the arising of feeling,
through not discerning the ceasing of feeling,
through not discerning the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 28

Saññā Asallakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discerning (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discerning perception, Vaccha, through not discerning the arising of perception, through not discerning the ceasing of perception,
through not discerning the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 29

Saṅkhāra Asallakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discerning (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discerning the activities, Vaccha, through not discerning the arising of the activities,
through not discerning the ceasing of the activities,
through not discerning the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 30

Viññāṇa Asallakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discerning (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discerning consciousness, Vaccha, through not discerning the arising of consciousness, through not discerning the ceasing of consciousness,
through not discerning the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 31

Rūpa Anupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discriminating (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discriminating body, Vaccha, through not discriminating the arising of body,
through not discriminating the ceasing of body,

through not discriminating the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 32

Vedanā Anupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discriminating (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discriminating feeling, Vaccha, through not discriminating the arising of feeling,
through not discriminating the ceasing of feeling,
through not discriminating the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause

why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 33

Saññā Anupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discriminating (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discriminating perception, Vaccha, through not discriminating the arising of perception, through not discriminating the ceasing of perception,
through not discriminating the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 34

Saṅkhāra Anupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discriminating (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discriminating the activities, Vaccha, through not discriminating the arising of the activities, through not discriminating the ceasing of the activities,
through not discriminating the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 35

Viññāṇa Anupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Discriminating (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not discriminating consciousness, Vaccha, through not discriminating the arising of consciousness, through not discriminating the ceasing of consciousness,
through not discriminating the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 36

Rūpa Apaccupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Differentiating (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not differentiating body, Vaccha, through not differentiating the arising of body,
through not differentiating the ceasing of body,
through not differentiating the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 37

Vedanā Apaccupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Differentiating (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not differentiating feeling, Vaccha, through not differentiating the arising of feeling,
through not differentiating the ceasing of feeling,

through not differentiating the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 38

Saññā Apaccupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Differentiating (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not differentiating perception, Vaccha, through not differentiating the arising of perception, through not differentiating the ceasing of perception,
through not differentiating the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause

why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 39

Saṅkhāra Apaccupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Differentiating (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not differentiating the activities, Vaccha, through not differentiating the arising of the activities, through not differentiating the ceasing of the activities,
through not differentiating the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 40

Viññāṇa Apaccupalakkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Differentiating (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not differentiating consciousness, Vaccha, through not differentiating the arising of consciousness, through not differentiating the ceasing of consciousness,
through not differentiating the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 41

Rūpa Asamapekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Considering (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not considering body, Vaccha, through not considering the arising of body,
through not considering the ceasing of body,
through not considering the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 42

Vedanā Asamapekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Considering (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not considering feeling, Vaccha, through not considering the arising of feeling,
through not considering the ceasing of feeling,
through not considering the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death..'

Sutta 43

Saññā Asamapekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Considering (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not considering perception, Vaccha, through not considering the arising of perception, through not considering the ceasing of perception,

through not considering the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 44

Saṅkhāra Asamapekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Considering (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not considering the activities, Vaccha, through not considering the arising of the activities,
through not considering the ceasing of the activities,
through not considering the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause

why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 45

Viññāṇa Asamapekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Considering (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not considering consciousness, Vaccha, through not considering the arising of consciousness, through not considering the ceasing of consciousness,
through not considering the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 46

Rūpa Apaccupekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Looking Into (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not looking into body, Vaccha, through not looking into the arising of body,
through not looking into the ceasing of body,
through not looking into the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 47

Vedanā Apaccupekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Looking Into (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not looking into feeling, Vaccha, through not looking into the arising of feeling,
through not looking into the ceasing of feeling,
through not looking into the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 48

Saññā Apaccupekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Looking Into (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not looking into perception, Vaccha, through not looking into the arising of perception, through not looking into the ceasing of perception,
through not looking into the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 49

Saṅkhāra Apaccupekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Looking Into (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not looking into the activities, Vaccha, through not looking into the arising of the activities,
through not looking into the ceasing of the activities,

through not looking into the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 50

Viññāṇa Apaccupekkhaṇa Suttaṃ

By Not Looking Into (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not looking into consciousness, Vaccha, through not looking into the arising of consciousness, through not looking into the ceasing of consciousness,
through not looking into the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause

why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

---

[204]

Sutta 51

Rūpa Apaccakkhakamma Suttaṃ

By Not Making Clear (1)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,

body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not making clear body, Vaccha, through not making clear the arising of body,
through not making clear the ceasing of body,
through not making clear the way
leading to the ceasing of body.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 52

Vedanā Apaccakkhakamma Suttaṃ

By Not Making Clear (2)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or

'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not making clear feeling, Vaccha, through not making clear the arising of feeling,
through not making clear the ceasing of feeling,
through not making clear the way
leading to the ceasing of feeling.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or

'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'

or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 53

Saññā Apaccakkhakamma Suttaṃ

By Not Making Clear (3)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not making clear perception, Vaccha, through not making clear the arising of perception, through not making clear the ceasing of perception,
through not making clear the way
leading to the ceasing of perception.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'

or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'

or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 54

Saṅkhāra Apaccakkhakamma Suttaṃ

By Not Making Clear (4)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,

what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not making clear the activities, Vaccha, through not making clear the arising of the activities,
through not making clear the ceasing of the activities,
through not making clear the way
leading to the ceasing of the activities.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or

'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

Sutta 55

Viññāṇa Apaccakkhakamma Suttaṃ

By Not Making Clear (5)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the wanderer of the Vaccha clan
came to the Exalted One,
exchanged friendly greetings with him
and courteous compliments,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the wanderer Vacchagotta thus addressed the Exalted One:

Pray, Master Gotama,
what is the reason,
what is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world?

Such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death'?"

"Through not making clear consciousness, Vaccha, through not making clear the arising of consciousness, through not making clear the ceasing of consciousness,

through not making clear the way
leading to the ceasing of consciousness.

That is how those divers opinions arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or
'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'

This Vaccha, is the reason,
this is the cause
why these divers opinions
arise in the world,
such as:

'The world is eternal,'
or

'the world is not eternal,'
or
'the world is finite,'
or
'the world is infinite,'
or
'what is the life,
that is the body,'
or
'life is one thing,
body is another,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata exists not after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata does and does not exist after death,'
or
'the Tathāgata neither exists nor not exists after death.'"

---

[1] Cf. xxiv, §§ 13, 14.

[2] For abhisamaya see S. ii, 133: Pts. of Conr. p. 381.

[3] Ananubodhā.

[4] Asallakkhanā. Cf. Buddh Psych. Eth., p. 17, n. 'By non-discernment of sense-objects and the Three Marks (impermanence, suffering, lack of reality).' For the following terms see this page and § 292 of the same work.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
3. Khandha Vagga
34. Jhāna Saṃyutta

3. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the Elements of Sensory Existence and other Subjects

34. Kindred Sayings on Jhāna (or Samādhi)

Suttas 1-55

---

[205]

I

Sutta 1

Samādhi-Samāpatti Suttaṃ

Attainment in Concentration[1]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren,
who practise the Jhānas.

What four?

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but is not skilled in the attainment thereof.

Again, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the attainments of concentration,
but is not skilled in concentration (itself).

Again, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in the attainments thereof.

Again, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation is both skilled in concentration and skilled in the fruits thereof.

Of the four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration and skilled in the attainments thereof, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as,[2] brethren,
from the cow comes milk,

from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation he who is [206] both skilled in concentration and skilled in the attainments thereof, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 2

Ṭhiti Kusala Suttaṃ

Steadfastness[3]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in steadfastness therein.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in steadfastness therein.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in steadfastness therein, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,

and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in steadfastness therein, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 3

Vuṭṭhāna Kusala Suttaṃ

Emerging[4]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in emerging therefrom.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration
nor in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in emerging therefrom.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in emerging therefrom, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in emerging therefrom, -

he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 4

Kallavā Kusala Suttaṃ

Thorough[5]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,

but not fully expert in skill therein[ed1].

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is fully expert in skills of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor fully expert in skills of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and fully expert in skills of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and fully expert in skills of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and fully expert in skills of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,

supreme
and most excellent."

---

[207]

Sutta 5

Ārammaṇa Kusala Suttaṃ

Object[6]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration
nor skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 6

Gocara Kusala Suttaṃ

Range[7]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration
nor skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 7

Abhinīhāra Kusala Suttaṃ

Resolve[8]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in the resolve of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in the resolve of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the resolve of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the resolve of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the resolve of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 8

Sakkaccakāri Suttaṃ

Zeal[9]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled[ed2] in the zeal of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the zeal of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in the zeal of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the zeal of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the zeal of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the zeal of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 9

Sātacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Persevering[10]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in perseverance in concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration
nor skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,

pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 10

Sappāya-kārī Suttaṃ

Profit[11]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in the fitness of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the fitness of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in the fitness of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the fitness of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the fitness of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the fitness of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

II

Sutta 11

Samāpattiṭhiti Kusala Suttaṃ

Steadfastness in Attainment

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in steadfastness in attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation is skilled in steadfastness in attainment of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in steadfastness in attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in steadfastness in attainment of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in steadfastness in attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,

from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in steadfastness in attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

■

Sutta 12

Samāpattivuṭṭhāna Kusala Suttaṃ

Emerging from Attainment

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in emerging from attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from attainment of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in emerging from attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in emerging from attainment of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in emerging from attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in emerging from attainment of concentration, -

he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 13

Samāpattikallita Suttaṃ

Ease in Attainment[12]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,

but not skilled in ease of attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease of attainment of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in ease of attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in ease of attainment of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in ease of attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in ease of attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,

supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 14

Samāpatti Ārammaṇa Kusala Suttaṃ

Object of Attainment

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in the object of attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of attainment of concentration,

but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in the object of attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the object of attainment of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the object of attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the object of attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

[208]

Sutta 15

Samāpatti Gocara Kusala Suttaṃ

Range of Attainment

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in the range of attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of attainment of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in the range of attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the range of attainment of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the range of attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the range of attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 16

Samāpatti Abhinīhāra Kusala Suttaṃ

Resolve for Attainment

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not skilled in the resolve for attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for attainment of concentration,
but not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor skilled in the resolve for attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the resolve for attainment of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the resolve for attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and skilled in the resolve for attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 17

Samāpatti Sakkacca Kusala Suttaṃ

Zeal for Attainment

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not in the zeal for attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
has zeal for attainment of concentration,
but is not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor the zeal for attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
and in the zeal for attainment of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and in the zeal for attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,

pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and in the zeal for attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 18

Samāpatti Sātacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Perseverance in Attainment

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in concentration,
but not in perseverance in attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
has perseverance in attainment of concentration,
but is not skilled in concentration (itself).

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in concentration nor in perseverance in attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in concentration
has perseverance in attainment of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in concentration
and in perseverance in attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in concentration
and in perseverance in attainment of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 19

Samāpatti Sappāya-kāri Suttaṃ

Profiting by Attainment[13]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in attainment of concentration, but not in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
profits by concentration,
but is not skilled attainment of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation is neither skilled attainment of concentration nor profits by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation is both skilled in attainment of concentration and profits by concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in attainment of concentration
and profits by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,

from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in attainment of concentration
and profits by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

III

Sutta 20

Ṭhiti-Vuṭṭhāna Suttaṃ

Emerging from Steadfastness

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but not in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but not in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in steadfastness in concentration
nor in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and in emerging from concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and in emerging from concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,

and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and in emerging from concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 21

Ṭhiti Kallita Suttaṃ

Steadfastness in the Object (Ease)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but is not skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease in concentration,
but is not skilled in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in steadfastness in concentration
nor skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in ease in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in ease in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in ease in concentration, -

he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 22

Ṭhiti Ārammaṇa Suttaṃ

Steadfastness in the Object (Object)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but is not skilled the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but is not skilled in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in steadfastness in concentration
nor skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 23

Ṭhiti Gocara Suttaṃ

Steadfastness in the Object (Range)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but is not skilled the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,
but is not skilled in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in steadfastness in concentration
nor skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 24

Ṭhiti Abhinihāra Suttaṃ

Steadfastness in the Object (Resolve)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but is not skilled the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for concentration,
but is not skilled in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in steadfastness in concentration
nor skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in resolve for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 25

Ṭhiti Sātacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Steadfastness in the Object (Zeal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but is not skilled the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the zeal for concentration,
but is not skilled in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in steadfastness in concentration
nor skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in zeal for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 26

Ṭhiti Sātacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Steadfastness in the Object (Perseverance)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but is not skilled the perseverance for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the perseverance for concentration,
but is not skilled in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in steadfastness in concentration nor skilled in the perseverance for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in perseverance for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in perseverance for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,

pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in perseverance for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 27

Ṭhiti Sappāya-kārī Suttaṃ

Steadfastness in the Object (Profit)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in steadfastness in concentration,
but is not skilled profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in profiting by concentration,
but is not skilled in steadfastness in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in steadfastness in concentration
nor skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in steadfastness in concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

IV

Sutta 28

Vuṭṭhāna Kallita Suttaṃ

Ease in Emerging (Ease)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but is not skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease in concentration,
but is not skilled in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in emerging from concentration
nor skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in ease in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in ease in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,

from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in ease in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 29

Vuṭṭhāna Ārammaṇa Suttaṃ

Emerging (Object)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but is not skilled the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but is not skilled in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in emerging from concentration
nor skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,

and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 30

Vuṭṭhāna Gocara Suttaṃ

Emerging (Range)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but is not skilled the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,
but is not skilled in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in emerging from concentration
nor skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -

he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 31

Vuṭṭhāna Abhinīhāra Suttaṃ

Emerging (Resolve)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but is not skilled the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for concentration,
but is not skilled in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in emerging from concentration
nor skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 32

Vuṭṭhāna Sakkacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Emerging (Zeal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but is not skilled the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the zeal for concentration,
but is not skilled in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in emerging from concentration
nor skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 33

Vuṭṭhāna Sāttacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Emerging (Perseverance)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but is not skilled the perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the perseverance in concentration,
but is not skilled in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in emerging from concentration nor skilled in the perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the perseverance in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in the perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 34

Vuṭṭhāna Sappāya-kārī Suttaṃ

Emerging (Profit)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
[209] is skilled in emerging from concentration,
but is not skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in profiting by concentration,
but is not skilled in emerging from concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in emerging from concentration
nor skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in emerging from concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

V

Sutta 35

Kalalita Ārammaṇa Suttaṃ

Ease and Object

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease in concentration,
but is not skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but is not skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in ease in concentration
nor skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration

and skilled in the object of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the object of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 36

Kallitā Gocara Suttaṃ

Ease (Range)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease in concentration,
but is not skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,
but is not skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in ease in concentration
nor skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,

supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 37

Kallita Abhinīhāra Suttaṃ

Ease (Resolve)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease in concentration,
but is not skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for concentration,
but is not skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in ease in concentration
nor skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,

from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 38

Kallita Sakkacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Ease (Zeal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease in concentration,
but is not skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the zeal for concentration,
but is not skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in ease in concentration
nor skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,

and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 39

Kallita Sātaccakāri Suttaṃ

Ease (Perseverance)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease in concentration,
but is not skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in perseverance in concentration,
but is not skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in ease in concentration
nor skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -

he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 40

Kallita Sappāyakāri Suttaṃ

Ease (Profit)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in ease in concentration,
but is not skilled in the profit of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the profit of concentration,
but is not skilled in ease in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in ease in concentration nor skilled in the profit of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the profit of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the profit of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in ease in concentration
and skilled in the profit of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

VI

Sutta 41

Ārammaṇa Gocara Suttaṃ

Object (Range)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but is not skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,

but is not skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the object of concentration
nor skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the range of concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 42

Ārammaṇa Abhinihāra Suttaṃ

Object (Resolve)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but is not skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for concentration,
but is not skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the object of concentration
nor skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 43

Ārammaṇa Sakkacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Object (Zeal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but is not skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the zeal for concentration,
but is not skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the object of concentration
nor skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 44

Ārammaṇa Sātacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Object (Perseverance)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but is not skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in perseverance in concentration,
but is not skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the object of concentration
nor skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,

pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 45

Ārammaṇa Sappāyakāri Suttaṃ

Object (Profit)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the object of concentration,
but is not skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in profiting by concentration,
but is not skilled in the object of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the object of concentration
nor skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the object of concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

VII

Sutta 46

Gocara Abhinīhāra Suttaṃ

Range and Resolve

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,
but is not skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for concentration,
but is not skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the range of concentration
nor skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,

from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in the resolve for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 47

Gocara Sakkaccakāri Suttaṃ

Range (Zeal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,
but is not skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the zeal for concentration,
but is not skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the range of concentration
nor skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,

and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in the zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 48

Gocara Sātacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Range (Perseverance)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,
but is not skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in perseverance in concentration,
but is not skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the range of concentration
nor skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -

he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 49

Gocara Sappāya-kārī Suttaṃ

Range (Profit)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the range of concentration,
but is not skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in profiting by concentration,
but is not skilled in the range of concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the range of concentration
nor skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the range of concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

[210]

VIII

Sutta 50

Abhinihāra Sakkaccakāri Suttaṃ

Resolve

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for concentration,
but is not skilled in zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in zeal for concentration,

but is not skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the resolve for concentration nor skilled in zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in zeal for concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in zeal for concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 51

Abhinihāra Sātaccakāri Suttaṃ

Resolve and Perseverance

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for concentration,
but is not skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in perseverance in concentration,
but is not skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the resolve for concentration
nor skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 52

Abhinīhāra Sappāya-kāri Suttaṃ

Resolve and Profit

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the resolve for concentration,
but is not skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in profiting by concentration,
but is not skilled in the resolve for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the resolve for concentration
nor skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the resolve for concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

IX

Sutta 53

Sakkacca Sātacca-kārī Suttaṃ

Zeal and Perseverance

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the zeal for concentration,
but is not skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in perseverance in concentration,
but is not skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the zeal for concentration
nor skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the zeal for concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the zeal for concentration

and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,
supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the zeal for concentration
and skilled in perseverance in concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

Sutta 54

Sakkacca Sappāya-kārī Suttaṃ

Zeal and Profit

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in the zeal for concentration,
but is not skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in profiting by concentration,
but is not skilled in the zeal for concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is neither skilled in the zeal for concentration
nor skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is both skilled in the zeal for concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in the zeal for concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,

supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in the zeal for concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

§

X

Sutta 55

Sātacca Sappāya-kārī Suttaṃ

Persevering and Profiting

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī
at the Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

And there the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren!"

"Master!" responded those brethren.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these four, brethren, who practise meditation.

What four?

Herein' brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in persevering in concentration,
but is not skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation
is skilled in profiting by concentration,
but is not skilled in persevering in concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation is neither skilled in persevering in concentration
nor skilled in profiting by concentration.

Herein, brethren, a certain one who practises meditation is both skilled in persevering in concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration.

Of these four, brethren, who practise meditation,
he who is both skilled in persevering in concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the best,
pre-eminent,

supreme,
most excellent.

Just as, brethren,
from the cow comes milk,
from milk cream,
from cream butter,
from butter ghee,
from ghee come the skimmings of ghee,
and that is reckoned the best, -
even so, brethren, of these four who practise meditation
he who is both skilled in persevering in concentration
and skilled in profiting by concentration, -
he is the topmost,
he is the beat,
pre-eminent,
supreme
and most excellent."

---

[1] Samādhi-samapatti. See Buddh. Psych. Eth., § 1329 f., n 4. Comy., 'the first jhāna has five stages, the second three. Thus he is skilled in eight in all.'

[2] Cf. A. ii, 95.

[3] Ṭhiti. See Dhs., § 11 (Buddh Psych. Eth. 11. Cittassa ṭhiti saṇthiti avaṭṭhiti, or 'stability, solidity, absorbed steadfastness of thought.'

[4] (V)uṭṭāna 'ability in rising up or emerging from the jhāna or breaking it up at will.' Cf. M. i, 302; A. iii, 311. Dhs. loc. cit. supra.

[5] Kallavā (kalla is soundness or fitness in anything).

[6] Arammaṇa, the object of concentration, e.g., the kasina or device.

[7] Gocaro, the sphere or field of his exercise. Cf. Compendium, 206, n. 1. Comy., kammaṭṭhāna-gocara.

[8] Abhinīhara

[9] Sakkacca.

[10] Sātaccakāra, one who makes continuous or keeps the concentration going.

[11] Sappāyaṇ.

[12] Samāpatti-kallita.

[13] Sappāya-kārī Comy. 'samādhissa sappāye upakāraka-dhamme puretuṇ.

[ed1] Woodward's abridgment if followed literally would read: "...but not skilled in fully expert therein." The Pali: 'Kallavā Kusala' is 'fittingly skilled' or 'of sound skill'.

[ed2] §§ 8, 9, and 10 do not use 'skilled' here.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

---

[1] [1]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye,[2] brethren,
is impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.[3]

What is [2] ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The ear is impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The nose is impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The tongue is impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The body is impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The mind is impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

§

So seeing, brethren,
the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by eye,
ear,
nose,
tongue,
body,
and mind.

Being repelled by them,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting,
he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight of being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"[4]

---

[1] Ajjhattaṇ, lit. 'what refers to self,' personal, interior, as opposed to bāhiraṇ, external or objective.

[2] 'There are two eyes: the eye of cognition (ñāṇa) and the eye of the flesh (maṇsa). The eye of cognition is fivefold, to wit: the Buddha eye, the Norm eye, the all-seeing eye, the divine eye and the wisdom eye. ... The eye of the flesh is twofold: that composed of the elements (sasambhāra) and that of the sensitive surface (pasāda).' (Buddhaghosa's Commentary on Saṃyutta Nikāya, called Sārattha Pakāsinī, an edition of which I am now preparing. - F.L.W.)

[3] Cf. K.S. iii, 21 n., and Buddhist Psychology (Mrs. Khys Davids), 2nd ed., chap. 4.

[4] Cf. K.S. iii, 20 and n.* [n2].

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 2

Ajjhatta Dukkha Suttaṃ (Dukkham 1; Ajjhattam)

Ill (i): The Personal

---

[2] [2]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye, brethren,
is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The ear is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The nose is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The tongue is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The body is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The mind is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

§

So seeing, brethren,
the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by eye,
ear,
nose,
tongue,

body,
and mind.

Being repelled by them,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting,
he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight of being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 3

Ajjhatta Anattā Suttaṃ (Anattā 1; Ajjhattam)

Void of the Self (i): The Personal

---

[2] [2]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye, brethren,
is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The ear is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The nose is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:

I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The tongue is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The body is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

The mind is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

§

So seeing, brethren,
the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by eye,
ear,
nose,
tongue,
body,
and mind.

Being repelled by them,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting,
he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight of being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 4

Bāhira Anicca Suttaṃ (Aniccam 2; Bāhiram)

Impermanent (ii): The External

---

[2] [2]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects,[1] brethren,
are impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Sounds are impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:

I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Scents are impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Savours are impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:

I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Things tangible are impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Mind-states[2] are impermanent.

What is impermanent,
that is ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

§

[3]

So seeing, brethren,
the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by objects,
sounds,
scents,
savours,
things tangible,
and mind-states.

Being repelled by them,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting,
he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight of being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Rūpa, here means 'things seen.' Cf. K.S. ii 75, 97. [Ed.: but neither of these references relate to Rūpa. Perhaps Woodward meant SN ii pages 75, 97, where two close KS suttas are at least related to the topic. See: SN 2.12.43 and SN 2.12.61.]

[2] Dhammā. Tebhūmaka-dhammārammaṇaṇ - 'base for the thought in the three worlds.' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 5

Bāhira Dukkha Suttaṃ (Dukkham 2; Bāhiram)

Ill (ii): The External

---

[3] [3]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects, brethren,
are ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Sounds are ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Scents are ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Savours are ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Things tangible are ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Mind-states are ill.

What is ill,
that is void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

§

So seeing, brethren,
the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by objects,
sounds,
scents,
savours,

things tangible,
and mind-states.

Being repelled by them,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting,
he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight of being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 6

Bāhira Anattā Suttaṃ (Anattā 2; Bāhiram)

Void of the Self (ii): The External

---

[3] [3]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects, brethren,
are void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Sounds are void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Scents are void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:

I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Savours are void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Things tangible are void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

■

Mind-states are void of the self.

What is void of the self,
that is not mine:
I am not it:
it is not my self.

That is how it is to be regarded
with perfect insight
of what it really is.

§

So seeing, brethren,
the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by objects,
sounds,
scents,
savours,
things tangible,
and mind-states.

Being repelled by them,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting,
he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight of being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 7

Dutiya Ajjhatta Anicca Suttaṃ (Aniccam 3; Ajjhattam)

Impermanent (iii): The Personal

---

[4] [3]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye, brethren, is impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,[1]
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an eye that is past,
is not in love with an eye to be,
and, for the present eye,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The ear, brethren, is impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an ear that is past,
is not in love with an ear to be,
and, for the present ear,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The nose, brethren, is impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a nose that is past,
is not in love with a nose to be,
and, for the present nose,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a tongue that is past,
is not in love with a tongue to be,
and, for the present tongue,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The body,[2] brethren, is impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a body that is past,
is not in love with a body to be,
and, for the present body,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The mind, brethren, is impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a mind that is past,
is not in love with a mind to be,
and, for the present mind,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 18.

[2] Here kāya.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 8

Dutiya Ajjhatta Dukkha Suttaṃ (Dukkham 3; Ajjhattam)

Ill (iii): The Personal

---

[4] [3]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye, brethren, is ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an eye that is past,
is not in love with an eye to be,
and, for the present eye,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The ear, brethren, is ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an ear that is past,
is not in love with an ear to be,
and, for the present ear,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The nose, brethren, is ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a nose that is past,
is not in love with a nose to be,
and, for the present nose,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The tongue, brethren, is ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a tongue that is past,
is not in love with a tongue to be,
and, for the present tongue,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The body, brethren, is ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a body that is past,
is not in love with a body to be,
and, for the present body,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The mind, brethren, is ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a mind that is past,
is not in love with a mind to be,
and, for the present mind,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 9

Dutiya Ajjhatta Anatta Suttaṃ (Anattām 3; Ajjhattam)

Void of the Self (iii): The Personal

---

[4] [3]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye, brethren, is void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an eye that is past,
is not in love with an eye to be,
and, for the present eye,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The ear, brethren, is void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an ear that is past,
is not in love with an ear to be,
and, for the present ear,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The nose, brethren, is void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a nose that is past,
is not in love with a nose to be,
and, for the present nose,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The tongue, brethren, is void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a tongue that is past,
is not in love with a tongue to be,
and, for the present tongue,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The body, brethren, is void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a body that is past,
is not in love with a body to be,
and, for the present body,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

The mind, brethren, is void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a mind that is past,
is not in love with a mind to be,
and, for the present mind,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 10

Dutiya Bāhira Anicca Suttaṃ (Aniccam 4; Bāhiram)

Impermanent (iv): The External

---

[4]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects, brethren, are impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an object that is past,
is not in love with an object to be,
and, for a present object,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a sound that is past,
is not in love with a sound to be,
and, for a present sound,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Scents, brethren, are impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a scent that is past,
is not in love with a scent to be,
and, for a present scent,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Savours, brethren, are impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a savour that is past,
is not in love with a savour to be,
and, for a present savour,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Things tangible, brethren, are impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for things tangible that are past,
is not in love with things tangible to be,
and, for the present things tangible,
seeks to be repelled by them,
seeks dispassion for them,
seeks the ceasing of them.

■

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for mind-states that are past,
is not in love with mind-states to be,
and, for present mind-states,
seeks to be repelled by them,
seeks dispassion for them,
seeks the ceasing of them."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 11

Dutiya Bāhira Dukkha Suttaṃ (Dukkham 4; Bāhiram)

Ill (iv): The External

---

[4]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects, brethren, are ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an object that is past,
is not in love with an object to be,
and, for a present object,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Sounds, brethren, are ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a sound that is past,
is not in love with a sound to be,
and, for a present sound,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Scents, brethren, are ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a scent that is past,
is not in love with a scent to be,
and, for a present scent,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Savours, brethren, are ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a savour that is past,
is not in love with a savour to be,
and, for a present savour,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Things tangible, brethren, are ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for things tangible that are past,
is not in love with things tangible to be,
and, for the present things tangible,
seeks to be repelled by them,
seeks dispassion for them,
seeks the ceasing of them.

■

Mind-states, brethren, are ill,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for mind-states that are past,
is not in love with mind-states to be,
and, for present mind-states,
seeks to be repelled by them,
seeks dispassion for them,
seeks the ceasing of them."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
1. Anicca Vagga Paṭhama

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

1. The First Chapter on Impermanence

Sutta 12

Dutiya Bāhira Anatta Suttaṃ (Anattā 4; Bāhiram)

Void of the Self (iv): The External

---

[4]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects, brethren, are void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for an object that is past,
is not in love with an object to be,
and, for a present object,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Sounds, brethren, are void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a sound that is past,
is not in love with a sound to be,
and, for a present sound,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Scents, brethren, are void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a scent that is past,
is not in love with a scent to be,
and, for a present scent,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Savours, brethren, are void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for a savour that is past,
is not in love with a savour to be,
and, for a present savour,
seeks to be repelled by it,
seeks dispassion for it,
seeks the ceasing of it.

■

Things tangible, brethren, are void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for things tangible that are past,
is not in love with things tangible to be,
and, for the present things tangible,
seeks to be repelled by them,
seeks dispassion for them,
seeks the ceasing of them.

■

Mind-states, brethren, are void of the self,
both in the past and in the future,
not to speak of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
cares not for mind-states that are past,
is not in love with mind-states to be,
and, for present mind-states,
seeks to be repelled by them,
seeks dispassion for them,
seeks the ceasing of them."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs[1]

Sutta 13

Sambodha Suttaṃ

By Enlightenment

---

[6] [4]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Before my enlightenment, brethren,
while I was yet unenlightened and a Bodhisat,
I had this thought:[2]

'Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of the eye?

What is the way of escape from the eye?

Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of the ear?

What is the way of escape from the ear?

Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of the nose?

What is the way of escape from the nose?

Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of the tongue?

What is the way of escape from the tongue?

Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of the body?

What is the way of escape from the body?

Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of the mind?

What is the way of escape from the mind?'

§

Then, brethren, I thought thus:

'That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to the eye, - that is the satisfaction of the eye.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is the eye, -
that is the misery of the eye.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in the eye, -
that is the way of escape from the eye.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to the ear, - that is the satisfaction of the ear.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is the ear, -
that is the misery of the ear.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in the ear, -
that is the way of escape from the ear.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to the nose, - that is the satisfaction of the nose.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is the nose, -
that is the misery of the nose.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in the nose, - that is the way of escape from the nose.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to the tongue, - that is the satisfaction of the tongue.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is the tongue, -
that is the misery of the tongue.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in the tongue, - that is the way of escape from the tongue.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to the body, - that is the satisfaction of the body.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is the body, -
that is the misery of the body.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in the body, - that is the way of escape from the body.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to the mind, -
that is the satisfaction of the mind.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is the mind, -
that is the misery of the mind.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in the mind, - that is the way of escape from the mind.'

§

[5] Now so long, brethren, as I did not thoroughly understand,
as they really are,
the satisfaction of this sixfold internal[3] sphere of sense as such,
the misery of it as such,
the way of escape from it as such, -
so long, brethren, was I doubtful
whether I was enlightened
with that supreme enlightenment,
unsurpassed in the world
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
among the host of recluses and brahmins
and of devas and men.

But as soon, brethren, as I did thoroughly understand,
as they really are,
the satisfaction of this sixfold internal sphere of sense as such,
the misery of it as such,

the way of escape from it as such, -
no longer, brethren, was I doubtful
whether I was enlightened
with that supreme enlightenment,
unsurpassed in the world
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
among the host of recluses and brahmins
and of devas and men.[ed1]

Then indeed the knowledge arose in me
and insight arose in me:

'Sure is my release.

This is my last birth.

There is no more rebirth for me now.'"

---

[1] Yamaka-vagga. There are two sayings on each subject in this section.

[2] Sambodhena. Cf. Dialogues, i, 193 n.

[3] Cf. K.S. iii, 27. Here Comy. likens the personal passions to the inside of a house, the externals to the approach to it. When the house is full of children, wives, wealth, grain, etc., and the passions are very strong, they allow of no approach to anyone. Even if they hear the rattle of a pot, they ask, 'What is that?'

---

ed1 This paragraph Woodward omits to translate or indicate that it is abridged.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 14

Dutiya Sambodha Suttaṃ

By Enlightenment (ii)

---

[5]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Before my enlightenment, brethren,
while I was yet unenlightened and a Bodhisat,
I had this thought:

'Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of objects?

What is the way of escape from objects?

'Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of the sounds?

What is the way of escape from sounds?

'Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of scents?

What is the way of escape from scents?

'Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of savours?

What is the way of escape from savours?

'Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of things tactile?

What is the way of escape from things tactile?

'Now what is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of mind-states?

What is the way of escape from mind-states?'

Then, brethren, I thought thus:

'That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to objects, - that is the satisfaction of objects.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is objects, -
that is the misery of objects.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in objects, - that is the way of escape from objects.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to sounds, - that is the satisfaction of sounds.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is sounds, -
that is the misery of sounds.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in sounds, -
that is the way of escape from sounds.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to scents, - that is the satisfaction of scents.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is scents, -
that is the misery of scents.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in scents, -
that is the way of escape from scents.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to the savours, - that is the satisfaction of savours.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is savours, -
that is the misery of savours.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in savours, - that is the way of escape from savours.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to things tangible, - that is the satisfaction of things tangible.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is things tangible, - that is the misery of things tangible.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in things tangible, - that is the way of escape from things tangible.

■

That ease,
that pleasure
that arises owing to mind-states, - that is the satisfaction of mind-states.

That impermanence,
that ill,
that instability
which is mind-states, -
that is the misery of mind-states.

That restraint of desire and lust,
that renouncing of desire and lust
which are in mind-states, - that is the way of escape from mind-states.'

§

Now so long, brethren, as I did not thoroughly understand,
as they really are,
the satisfaction of this sixfold external sphere of sense as such,
the misery of it as such,
the way of escape from it as such, -
so long, brethren, was I doubtful
whether I was enlightened
with that supreme enlightenment,
unsurpassed in the world
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
among the host of recluses and brahmins
and of devas and men.

But as soon, brethren, as I did thoroughly understand,
as they really are,
the satisfaction of this sixfold external sphere of sense as such,
the misery of it as such,
the way of escape from it as such, -
no longer, brethren, was I doubtful
whether I was enlightened
with that supreme enlightenment,
unsurpassed in the world
with its devas,

its Māras,
its Brahmas,
among the host of recluses and brahmins
and of devas and men.

Then indeed the knowledge arose in me
and insight arose in me:

'Sure is my release.

This is my last birth.

There is no more rebirth for me now.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 15

Assāda-Pariyesana (Assādena 1) Suttaṃ

By Satisfaction[1]

---

[8] [5]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in the eye,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of the eye,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in the eye,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of the eye,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from the eye,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from the eye,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in the ear,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of the ear,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in the ear,

and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of the ear,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from the ear,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from the ear,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in the nose,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of the nose,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in the nose,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of the nose,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from the nose,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from the nose,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in the tongue,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of the tongue,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in the tongue,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of the tongue,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from the tongue,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from the tongue,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in the body,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of the body,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in the body,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of the body,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from the body,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from the body,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in the mind,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of the mind,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in the mind,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of the mind,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from the mind,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from the mind,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

[6] So long, brethren, as I did not thoroughly understand,
as they really are,
the satisfaction of this sixfold internal sphere of sense as such,
the misery of it as such,
the way of escape from it as such, -

so long, brethren, was I doubtful
whether I was enlightened
with that supreme enlightenment,
unsurpassed in the world
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
among the host of recluses and brahmins
and of devas and men.

But as soon, brethren, as I did thoroughly understand,
as they really are,
the satisfaction of this sixfold internal sphere of sense as such,
the misery of it as such,
the way of escape from it as such, -
no longer, brethren, was I doubtful
whether I was enlightened
with that supreme enlightenment,
unsurpassed in the world
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
among the host of recluses and brahmins
and of devas and men.

Then indeed the knowledge arose in me
and insight arose in me:

'Sure is my release.

This is my last birth.

There is no more rebirth for me now.'"

---

[1] K.S. iii, 28.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 16

Dutiya Assāda-Pariyesana (Assādena 2) Suttaṃ

By Satisfaction 2

---

[6]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in objects,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of objects,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in objects,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of objects,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from objects,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from objects,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in sounds,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of sounds,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in sounds,

and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of sounds,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from sounds,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from sounds,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in scents,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of scents,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in scents,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of scents,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from scents,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from scents,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

"Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in savours,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of savours,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in savours,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of savours,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from savours,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from savours,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in things tangible,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of things tangible,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in things tangible,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of things tangible,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from things tangible,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from things tangible,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

■

Brethren, I practised the search after
the satisfaction which is in mind-states,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is satisfaction of mind-states,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after the misery which is in mind-states,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is misery of mind-states,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

Brethren, I practised the search after
the way of escape from mind-states,
and to this conclusion I came:

'In so far as there is a way of escape from mind-states,
that by insight have I rightly seen.'

§

So long, brethren, as I did not thoroughly understand,
as they really are,

the satisfaction of this sixfold external sphere of sense as such,
the misery of it as such,
the way of escape from it as such, -
so long, brethren, was I doubtful
whether I was enlightened
with that supreme enlightenment,
unsurpassed in the world
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
among the host of recluses and brahmins
and of devas and men.

But as soon, brethren, as I did thoroughly understand,
as they really are,
the satisfaction of this sixfold external sphere of sense as such,
the misery of it as such,
the way of escape from it as such, -
no longer, brethren, was I doubtful
whether I was enlightened
with that supreme enlightenment,
unsurpassed in the world
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
among the host of recluses and brahmins
and of devas and men.

Then indeed the knowledge arose in me
and insight arose in me:

'Sure is my release.

This is my last birth.

There is no more rebirth for me now.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 17

No Ve Assāda (No Cetena 1) Suttaṃ

Without satisfaction (i)[1]

---

[10] [6]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from the eye, beings would not lust after the eye.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in the eye, therefore beings lust after the eye.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to the eye, beings would not be repelled by the eye.

But inasmuch as there is misery in the eye, beings are repelled by the eye.

If there were no way of escape from the eye, beings could not escape from the eye.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from the eye, beings do escape from the eye.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from the ear, beings would not lust after the ear.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in the ear, therefore beings lust after the ear.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to the ear, beings would not be repelled by the ear.

But inasmuch as there is misery in the ear,
beings are repelled by the ear.

If there were no way of escape from the ear, beings could not escape from the ear.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from the eye, beings do escape from the ear.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from the nose, beings would not lust after the nose.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in the nose, therefore beings lust after the nose.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to the nose, beings would not be repelled by the nose.

But inasmuch as there is misery in the nose,
beings are repelled by the ear.

If there were no way of escape from the nose, beings could not escape from the nose.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from the nose, beings do escape from the nose.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from the tongue, beings would not lust after the tongue.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in the tongue, therefore beings lust after the tongue.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to the tongue, beings would not be repelled by the tongue.

But inasmuch as there is misery in the tongue, beings are repelled by the tongue.

If there were no way of escape from the tongue, beings could not escape from the tongue.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from the tongue, beings do escape from the tongue.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from the body, beings would not lust after the body.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in the body, therefore beings lust after the body.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to the body, beings would not be repelled by the body.

But inasmuch as there is misery in the body, beings are repelled by the body.

If there were no way of escape from the body, beings could not escape from the body.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from the body, beings do escape from the body.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from the mind, beings would not lust after the mind.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in the mind, therefore beings lust after the mind.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to the mind, beings would not be repelled by the mind.

But inasmuch as there is misery in the mind, beings are repelled by the mind.

If there were no way of escape from the mind, beings could not escape from the mind.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from the mind, beings do escape from the mind.

§

So long, Brethren, as beings have not understood,
as they really are,
the satisfaction as such,
the misery as such,
the way of escape as such,
in this sixfold personal sphere of sense,
so long, Brethren, beings have not remained aloof,
detached,
separated,
with the barriers to the mind[2] done away with,
nor have the world
and its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
nor the host of recluses and brahmins,
of devas and mankind.

[7] But so soon, Brethren, as beings thoroughly understand,
as they really are

the satisfaction as such,
the misery as such,
the way of escape as such,
in this sixfold personal sphere of sense,
then, Brethren, beings and the world
and its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
and the host of recluses and brahmins,
of devas and mankind
do remain aloof,
detached,
separated,
with the barriers to the mind done away with.

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 29.

[2] Vimariyādi-katena cetasā. Mariyādā is a dyke or boundary, so a check or hindrance. Asekhas or adepts, says Comy., live free from these barriers. Cf. Pts. ii., 206; VM. 386; UdA. 186.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 18

Dutiya No Ve Assāda (No Cetena 2) Suttaṃ

Without satisfaction (ii)

---

[7]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from objects, beings would not lust after objects.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in objects, therefore beings lust after objects.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to objects, beings would not be repelled by objects.

But inasmuch as there is misery in objects, beings are repelled by objects.

If there were no way of escape from objects, beings could not escape from objects.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from objects, beings do escape from objects.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from sounds, beings would not lust after sounds.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in sounds, therefore beings lust after sounds.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to sounds, beings would not be repelled by sounds.

But inasmuch as there is misery in sounds, beings are repelled by sounds.

If there were no way of escape from sounds, beings could not escape from sounds.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from sounds, beings do escape from sounds.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from scents, beings would not lust after scents.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in scents, therefore beings lust after scents.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to scents, beings would not be repelled by scents.

But inasmuch as there is misery in scents, beings are repelled by scents.

If there were no way of escape from scents, beings could not escape from scents.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from scents, beings do escape from scents.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from savours, beings would not lust after savours.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in savours, therefore beings lust after savours.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to savours, beings would not be repelled by savours.

But inasmuch as there is misery in savours, beings are repelled by savours.

If there were no way of escape from savours, beings could not escape from savours.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from savours, beings do escape from savours.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from things tactile, beings would not lust after things tactile.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in things tactile, therefore beings lust after things tactile.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to things tactile, beings would not be repelled by things tactile.

But inasmuch as there is misery in things tactile, beings are repelled by things tactile.

If there were no way of escape from things tactile, beings could not escape from things tactile.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from things tactile, beings do escape from things tactile.

■

Brethren, if there were not this satisfaction which comes from mind-states, beings would not lust after mind-states.

But inasmuch as there is satisfaction in mind-states, therefore beings lust after mind-states.

If misery, Brethren, pertained not to mind-states, beings would not be repelled by mind-states.

But inasmuch as there is misery in mind-states, beings are repelled by mind-states.

If there were no way of escape from mind-states, beings could not escape from mind-states.

But inasmuch as there is a way of escape from mind-states, beings do escape from mind-states.

■

So long, Brethren, as beings have not understood,
as they really are,
the satisfaction as such,
the misery as such,
the way of escape as such,
in this sixfold external sphere of sense,
so long, Brethren, beings have not remained aloof,
detached,
separated,
with the barriers to the mind nor have the world
and its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
nor the host of recluses and brahmins,
of devas and mankind.

But so soon, Brethren, as beings thoroughly understand,
as they really are
the satisfaction as such,
the misery as such,
the way of escape as such,
in this sixfold external sphere of sense,
then, Brethren, beings and the world

and its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
and the host of recluses and brahmins,
of devas and mankind
do remain aloof,
detached,
separated,
with the barriers to the mind done away with."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 19

Paṭhama Abhinanda Suttaṃ

By Taking Delight In (i)

---

[13] [7]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in the eye,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

■

"Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in the ear,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

■

"Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in the nose,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

■

"Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in the tongue,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,

I declare.

■

"Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in the body,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

■

"Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in the mind,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

§

But whoso takes not delight in the eye,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in the ear,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in the nose,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in the tongue,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in the body,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in the mind,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,

I declare."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 20

Dutiya Abhinanda Suttaṃ

By Taking Delight In (ii)

---

[7]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in objects,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

■

Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in sounds,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

■

Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in scents,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

■

Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in savours,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,

I declare.

■

Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in things tactile,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

■

Whoso, Brethren, takes delight in mind-states,
takes delight in ill.

Whoso takes delight in ill,
is not released from ill,
I declare.

§

But whoso takes not delight in objects,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in sounds,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in scents,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in savours,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in things tactile,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,
I declare.

■

But whoso takes not delight in mind-states,
takes no delight in ill.

Whoso takes no delight in ill,
is released from ill,

I declare."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 21

Paṭhama Uppāda Suttaṃ

By the Uprising (i)[1]

---

[14] [7]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of the eye, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of the ear, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of the nose, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of the tongue, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of the body, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of the mind, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

§

But that, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the [8] going out of the eye, -

that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of the ear, -
that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of the nose, -
that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of the tongue, -
that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of the body, -
that is the ceasing of ill,

the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of the mind, -
that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death."

---

[1] Cf. K.S.iii, 30.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
2. Yamaka Vagga

4. The Book Called the Khandhā-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

2. The Second Chapter on the Pairs

Sutta 22

Dutiya Uppāda Suttaṃ

By the Uprising (ii)

---

[8]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of objects, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

"That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of sounds, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

"That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of scemts, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

"That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of savours, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

"That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of things tactile, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

■

"That, Brethren, which is the uprising,
the persisting,
the rebirth,
the manifestation of mind-states, -
that is the uprising of ill,
the persisting of diseases,
the manifestation of decay and death.

§

But that, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of objects, -

that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of sounds, -
that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of scents, -
that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of savours, -
that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of things tactile, -
that is the ceasing of ill,

the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death.

■

That, Brethren, which is the ceasing,
the quelling,
the going out of mind-states, -
that is the ceasing of ill,
the quelling of diseases,
the going out of decay and death."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 23

Sabba Suttaṃ

The All[1]

---

[15] [8]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, I will teach you the all.

Do you listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the all?

It is eye and object,
ear and sound,
nose and scent,
tongue and savour,
body and things tangible,
mind and mind-states.

That, Brethren, is called 'the all.'

Whoso, Brethren, should say:

'Rejecting this all,
I will proclaim another all', -
it would be mere talk[2] on his part,
and when questioned
he could not make good his boast,
and further would come to an ill pass.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, it would be beyond his scope[3] to do so."

---

[1] See Buddh. Psych., 74; Pts of Controv., 85 n. At K.S. ii, 52, sabbaṃ means 'the universe ' (as existing in reality).

[2] Vāca-vatthu, 'based on talk.' Vācāya vattabba vatthu-mattakam eva bhaveyya. Comy.

[3] 'He might just as well try to lift a roof-pinnacle on his head, or ford a deep water, or pull down sun and moon.' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 24

Paṭhama Pahāna Suttaṃ

Abandoning 1

---

[15] [8]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will show you a teaching, Brethren,
for the abandoning the all.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the teaching
for the abandoning of the all?

[9] The eye, Brethren, must be abandoned,
objects must be abandoned,
eye-consciousness must be abandoned
eye-contact must be abandoned.

That weal
or woe
or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to eye-contact, -
that also must be abandoned.|| ||

■

The ear, Brethren, must be abandoned,
sounds must be abandoned,
ear-consciousness must be abandoned
ear-contact must be abandoned.

That weal
or woe
or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to ear-contact, -
that also must be abandoned.|| ||

■

The nose, Brethren, must be abandoned,
scents must be abandoned,
nose-consciousness must be abandoned nose-contact must be abandoned.

That weal
or woe
or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to nose-contact, -
that also must be abandoned.|| ||

■

The tongue, Brethren, must be abandoned,
savours must be abandoned,
tongue-consciousness must be abandoned tongue-contact must be abandoned.

That weal
or woe
or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to tongue-contact, -
that also must be abandoned.|| ||

■

The body, Brethren, must be abandoned, things tactile must be abandoned,
body-consciousness must be abandoned body-contact must be abandoned.

That weal
or woe
or neutral state experienced

which arises owing to body-contact, -
that also must be abandoned.|| ||

■

The mind, Brethren, must be abandoned,
mind-states must be abandoned,
mind-consciousness must be abandoned
mind-contact must be abandoned.

That weal
or woe
or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to mind-contact, -
that also must be abandoned.|| ||

This, Brethren, is the teaching for the abandoning of the all."[1]

---

[1] Cf. S. v, 364. Sabbattha-gāmini-patipadā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 25

Dutiya Pahāna Suttaṃ

Abandoning (ii)

---

[16] [9]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will show you a teaching, Brethren,
for the abandoning the all
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the teaching
for the abandoning of the all
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it?

The eye, Brethren, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Objects, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending them.

Eye-consciousness, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Eye-contact, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact -
that also must be abandoned

by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

■

The ear, Brethren, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Sounds, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending them.

Ear-consciousness, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Ear-contact, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact -
that also must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

■

The nose, Brethren, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Scents, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending them.

Nose-consciousness, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Nose-contact, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact -
that also must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

■

The tongue, Brethren, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Savours, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending them.

Tongue-consciousness, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Tongue-contact, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact -
that also must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

■

The body, Brethren, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Things tangible, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending them.

Body-consciousness, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Body-contact, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact -
that also must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

■

The mind, Brethren, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Mind-states, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending them.

Mind-consciousness, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

Mind-contact, must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact -
that also must be abandoned
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it.

That, brethren, is the teaching
for the abandoning the all
by fully knowing,
by comprehending it."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 26

Paṭhama Aparijāna Suttaṃ

Comprehension (i)[1]

---

[17] [9]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Without fully knowing,
without comprehending the all, Brethren,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning the all,
a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

Without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning what (all)
is a man incapable of extinguishing ill?

■

[10] It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning the eye
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning objects
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning eye-consciousness
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning eye-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

■

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning the ear
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning sounds
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning ear-consciousness
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,

without abandoning ear-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

■

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning the nose
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning scents
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning nose-consciousness
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning nose-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

■

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning the tongue
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning savours
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning tongue-consciousness
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning tongue-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,

which arises owing to tongue-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

■

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning the body
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning things tactile
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning body-consciousness
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning body-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

■

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning the mind
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning mind-states
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning mind-consciousness
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning mind-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

It is without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact
that a man is incapable of extinguishing ill.

■

This is the all, Brethren, which without fully knowing,
without comprehending,
without detaching himself from,

without abandoning
a man is so incapable of extinguishing ill.

§

But by fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the all,
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.'

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning what (all)
is a man capable of extinguishing ill?

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the eye
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning objects
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,

by detaching himself from,
by abandoning eye-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning eye-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the ear
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning sounds
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning ear-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning ear-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the nose
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning scents
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning nose-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,

by abandoning nose-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the tongue
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning savours
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning tongue-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning tongue-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the body
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning things tactile
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning body-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning body-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,

which arises owing to body-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the mind
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning mind-states
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning mind-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning mind-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

This is the all, Brethren, which by fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
a man is capable of extinguishing ill."

---

[1] Cf. Pts. of Controv., 117 and n. The three parinnā, says Comy., are here referred to.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 27

Dutiya Aparijāna Suttaṃ

Comprehension (ii)

---

[18] [10]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the all,
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.'

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning what (all)
is a man capable of extinguishing ill?

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the eye
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning objects
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning eye-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning eye-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the ear
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning sounds
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning ear-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,

by abandoning ear-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the nose
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning scents
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning nose-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning nose-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the tongue
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning savours
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning tongue-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning tongue-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,

which arises owing to tongue-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the body
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning things tactile
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning body-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning body-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning the mind
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning mind-states
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning mind-consciousness
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning mind-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

By fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact
a man is capable of extinguishing ill.

■

This is the all, Brethren, which by fully knowing,
by comprehending,
by detaching himself from,

by abandoning
a man is capable of extinguishing ill."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 28

Āditta-Pariyāya Suttaṃ

On Fire

---

[19] [10]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Gaya on Gaya Head[1]
with a thousand brethren.

Then the Exalted One said to the brethren:

"Brethren, the all is on fire.

What all, brethren, is on fire?

The eye, brethren, is on fire,
objects are on fire,
eye-conseiousness, is on fire,
eye-contact, is on fire,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact,-
that also is on fire.

On fire with what?

On fire with the blaze of lust,
on fire with the blaze of ill-will,
on fire with the blaze of infatuation,
on fire with the blaze of birth,
on fire with decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The ear, brethren, is on fire, sounds are on fire,
ear-conseiousness, is on fire,
ear-contact, is on fire,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact,-
that also is on fire.

On fire with what?

On fire with the blaze of lust,
on fire with the blaze of ill-will,
on fire with the blaze of infatuation,
on fire with the blaze of birth,
on fire with decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The nose, brethren, is on fire,
scents are on fire,
nose-conseiousness, is on fire,
nose-contact, is on fire,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact,-
that also is on fire.

On fire with what?

On fire with the blaze of lust,
on fire with the blaze of ill-will,
on fire with the blaze of infatuation,
on fire with the blaze of birth,
on fire with decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The tongue, brethren, is on fire,
savours are on fire,
tongue-conseiousness, is on fire,
tongue-contact, is on fire,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact,-
that also is on fire.

On fire with what?

On fire with the blaze of lust,
on fire with the blaze of ill-will,
on fire with the blaze of infatuation,
on fire with the blaze of birth,
on fire with decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The body, brethren, is on fire, things tangible are on fire,
body-conseiousness, is on fire,
body-contact, is on fire,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact,-
that also is on fire.

On fire with what?

On fire with the blaze of lust,
on fire with the blaze of ill-will,
on fire with the blaze of infatuation,
on fire with the blaze of birth,
on fire with decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The mind, brethren, is on fire,
mind-states are on fire,
mind-conseiousness, is on fire,
mind-contact, is on fire,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact,-
that also is on fire.

On fire with what?

On fire with the blaze of lust,
on fire with the blaze of ill-will,
on fire with the blaze of infatuation,
on fire with the blaze of birth,
on fire with decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,

is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Thus spake the Exalted One,
and those brethren were pleased at the words of the Exalted One and welcomed them.

[11] And when the teaching was thus expounded the hearts of those thousand brethren were utterly set free from the āsavas.

---

[1] Vin. 1, 34. This is the third recorded address of Gotama. His little band of fellow-teachers was now expanded and constituted as a monk-community. Cf. Psalms of the Brethren, 207; KhpA. i, 202; PvA. 19.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 29

Andha-Bhūtam aka Aḍḍha-Bhūtaṃ Suttaṃ

Afflicted[1]

---

[20] [11]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Rājagaha, in Bamboo Grove, at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Brethren, the all is afflicted.

What all, Brethren, is afflicted?

The eye, brethren, is afflicted,
objects are afflicted,
eye-conseiousness, is afflicted,
eye-contact, is afflicted,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact,-
that also is afflicted.

Afflicted with what?

Afflicted with birth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The ear, brethren, is afflicted,
sounds are afflicted,
ear-conseiousness, is afflicted,
ear-contact, is afflicted,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,

which arises owing to ear-contact,-
that also is afflicted.

Afflicted with what?

Afflicted with birth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The nose, brethren, is afflicted,
scents are afflicted,
nose-conseiousness, is afflicted,
nose-contact, is afflicted,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact,-
that also is afflicted.

Afflicted with what?

Afflicted with birth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The tongue, brethren, is afflicted,
savours are afflicted,
tongue-conseiousness, is afflicted,
tongue-contact, is afflicted,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact,-
that also is afflicted.

Afflicted with what?

Afflicted with birth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The body, brethren, is afflicted, things tangible are afflicted, body-conseiousness, is afflicted,
body-contact, is afflicted,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact,-
that also is afflicted.

Afflicted with what?

Afflicted with birth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

■

The mind, brethren, is afflicted,
mind-states are afflicted,
mind-conseiousness, is afflicted,
mind-contact, is afflicted,
that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact,-
that also is afflicted.

Afflicted with what?

Afflicted with birth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.

So I declare.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

[1] Reading Aḍḍha-Bhūtaṇ with Comy. MSS., for andha - of text.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 30

Sāruppa-Paṭipadā Suttaṃ

Proper

---

[21] [11]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will show you, Brethren,
the proper way of approach to the uprooting of all conceits.[1]

Do ye listen to it carefully.

Apply your minds
and I will speak.

And what, Brethren,
is the proper way of approach
to the uprooting of all conceits?

Here,[2] Brethren,
a brother has no conceits of being the eye
or in the eye
or coming from the eye.

He imagines not:

'I have an eye.'

He has no conceits of being an object
or in an object
or coming from an object.

He imagines not:

'I have an object.'

He has no conceits of being eye-consciousness
or in eye-consciousness
or coming from eye-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have eye-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being eye-contact
or in eye-contact
or coming from eye-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have eye-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through eye-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He has no conceits of being the ear
or in the ear
or coming from the ear.

He imagines not:

'I have an ear.'

He has no conceits of being a sound
or in a sound
or coming from a sound.

He imagines not:

'I have a sound.'

He has no conceits of being ear-consciousness
or in ear-consciousness
or coming from ear-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have ear-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being ear-contact
or in ear-contact
or coming from ear-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have ear-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through ear-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He has no conceits of being the nose
or in the nose
or coming from the nose.

He imagines not:

'I have an nose.'

He has no conceits of being a scent
or in a scent
or coming from a scent.

He imagines not:

'I have a scent.'

He has no conceits of being nose-consciousness
or in nose-consciousness
or coming from nose-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have nose-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being nose-contact
or in nose-contact
or coming from nose-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have nose-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through nose-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He has no conceits of being the tongue
or in the tongue
or coming from the tongue.

He imagines not:

'I have an tongue.'

He has no conceits of being a savour
or in a savour
or coming from a savour.

He imagines not:

'I have a savour.'

He has no conceits of being tongue-consciousness
or in tongue-consciousness
or coming from tongue-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have tongue-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being tongue-contact
or in tongue-contact
or coming from tongue-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have tongue-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through tongue-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He has no conceits of being the body
or in the body
or coming from the body.

He imagines not:

'I have a body.'

He has no conceits of being a thing tactile
or in a thing tactile
or coming from a thing tactile.

He imagines not:

'I have a thing tactile.'

He has no conceits of being body-consciousness
or in body-consciousness
or coming from body-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have body-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being body-contact
or in body-contact
or coming from body-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have body-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through body-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He has no conceits of being the mind
or in the mind
or coming from the mind.

He imagines not:

'I have a mind.'

He has no conceits of being a mind-state
or in a mind-state
or coming from a mind-state.

He imagines not:

'I have a mind-state.'

He has no conceits of being mind-consciousness
or in mind-consciousness
or coming from mind-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have mind-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being mind-contact
or in mind-contact
or coming from mind-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have mind-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through mind-contact, -

he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He has no conceit of being the all
or in the all
or coming from the all.

He thinks not:

'The all is mine'.

§

Thus having no conceits
he grasps at nothing in the world.

Being free from grasping he is not troubled.

Being untroubled [12]
he is by himself set free.[3]

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

This, Brethren, is the proper approach
to the uprooting of all conceits."

---

[1] Sabba-maññita-, generally given as nine in number, such, as 'I am,' 'I am not,' 'this is mine,' etc. Cf. K.S. iii, 3, 75 ff. and infra. § 90. Comy. says taṇhā-diṭṭhi The section is repeated at § 90.

[2] Idha = imasmiṇ sāsane 'in the Buddha-rule.' Comy.

[3] Paccattaṇ yeva parinibbāyati. Cf. K.S. iii, 17.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 31

Paṭhama Sappāya-Paṭipadā Suttaṃ

Helpful[1] (i)

---

[23] [12]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will show you, Brethren,
a way that is helpful
for uprooting all conceits.

Do ye listen to it.

What is that way
that is helpful
for uprooting all conceits?

Here, Brethren,
a brother has no conceits of being the eye
or in the eye
or coming from the eye.

He imagines not:

'I have an eye.'

He has no conceits of being an object
or in an object
or coming from an object.

He imagines not:

'I have an object.'

He has no conceits of being eye-consciousness
or in eye-consciousness
or coming from eye-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have eye-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being eye-contact
or in eye-contact
or coming from eye-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have eye-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through eye-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change, because it is entangled in becoming.[2]

■

He has no conceits of being the ear
or in the ear
or coming from the ear.

He imagines not:

'I have an ear.'

He has no conceits of being a sound
or in a sound
or coming from a sound.

He imagines not:

'I have a sound.'

He has no conceits of being ear-consciousness
or in ear-consciousness
or coming from ear-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have ear-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being ear-contact
or in ear-contact
or coming from ear-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have ear-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through ear-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,

in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He has no conceits of being the nose
or in the nose
or coming from the nose.

He imagines not:

'I have an nose.'

He has no conceits of being a scent
or in a scent
or coming from a scent.

He imagines not:

'I have a scent.'

He has no conceits of being nose-consciousness
or in nose-consciousness
or coming from nose-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have nose-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being nose-contact
or in nose-contact
or coming from nose-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have nose-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through nose-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He has no conceits of being the tongue
or in the tongue
or coming from the tongue.

He imagines not:

'I have an tongue.'

He has no conceits of being a savour
or in a savour
or coming from a savour.

He imagines not:

'I have a savour.'

He has no conceits of being tongue-consciousness
or in tongue-consciousness
or coming from tongue-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have tongue-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being tongue-contact
or in tongue-contact
or coming from tongue-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have tongue-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through tongue-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He has no conceits of being the body
or in the body
or coming from the body.

He imagines not:

'I have a body.'

He has no conceits of being a thing tactile
or in a thing tactile
or coming from a thing tactile.

He imagines not:

'I have a thing tactile.'

He has no conceits of being body-consciousness
or in body-consciousness
or coming from body-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have body-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being body-contact
or in body-contact
or coming from body-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have body-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through body-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He has no conceits of being the mind
or in the mind
or coming from the mind.

He imagines not:

'I have a mind.'

He has no conceits of being a mind-state
or in a mind-state
or coming from a mind-state.

He imagines not:

'I have a mind-state.'

He has no conceits of being mind-consciousness
or in mind-consciousness
or coming from mind-consciousness.

He imagines not:

'I have mind-consciousness.'

He has no conceits of being mind-contact
or in mind-contact
or coming from mind-contact.

He imagines not:

'I have mind-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through mind-contact, -
he has no conceit of being that,
or in that
or coming from that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

§

So far as there is
'aggregate,' (or)
'condition,' (or)
'sphere,'[3]
a brother has no conceit of being that,
or in or from that, -
no conceit of:

That is mine.

Thus having no conceits
he grasps at nothing in the world.

Being free from grasping he is not troubled.

Being untroubled
he is by himself set free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

This, Brethren, is the way
helpful for the uprooting of all conceits."

---

[1] Sappāya. Cf. infra. §§ 146-9.

[2] Bhava-satto. Comy. explains satto exegetically thus: bhavesu laggo laggito palibuddho ayaṇ loko bhavaṇ yeva abhinandati: 'hanging, hung on to rebirths, this world delights in rebirth (lit. 'bccoinmg'). satto means (a) having being, (b) attached to.

[3] The basis of birth of the pañca-kkhandhā (fivefold personality) in the eighteen dhātus (physical elements) and the twelve āyatanas (spheres of sense). Read 'khandha-dhātu-āyatanaṇ.' Cf. Pss. Sisters, ver. 73.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
3. Sabba Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

3. The Chapter on The All

Sutta 32

Dutiya Sappāya-Paṭipadā Suttaṃ

Helpful (ii)

---

[24] [12]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will show you, Brethren,
a way that is helpful
for uprooting all conceits.

Do ye listen to it.

What is that way
that is helpful
for uprooting all conceits?

[13] Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from eye-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

"Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from ear-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are things tactile permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are mind-states permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from mind-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

[14] "So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

This, Brethren, is the way
helpful for the uprooting of all conceits."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
4. Jāti-Dhamma Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

4. The Chapter on Quality of Rebirth[1]

Suttas 33-42

---

[14]

Sutta 33

Jāti Suttaṃ

Birth

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to rebirth.[1]

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to rebirth,
objects are subject to rebirth,
eye-consciousness is subject to rebirth, eye-contact is subject to rebirth

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to rebirth.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to rebirth,
sounds are subject to rebirth,
ear-consciousness is subject to rebirth, ear-contact is subject to rebirth

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to rebirth.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to rebirth,
scents are subject to rebirth,
nose-consciousness is subject to rebirth, nose-contact is subject to rebirth

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to rebirth.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to rebirth,
savours are subject to rebirth,
tongue-consciousness is subject to rebirth, tongue-contact is subject to rebirth

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to rebirth.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to rebirth,
things tactile are subject to rebirth,
body-consciousness is subject to rebirth, body-contact is subject to rebirth

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to rebirth.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to rebirth,
mind-states are subject to rebirth,
mind-consciousness is subject to rebirth, mind-contact is subject to rebirth

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to rebirth.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 34

Jarā Suttaṃ

Age

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to age.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to age,
objects are subject to age,
eye-consciousness is subject to age, eye-contact is subject to age

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to age.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to age,
sounds are subject to age,
ear-consciousness is subject to age, ear-contact is subject to age

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to age.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to age,
scents are subject to age,
nose-consciousness is subject to age, nose-contact is subject to age

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to age.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to age,
savours are subject to age,
tongue-consciousness is subject to age, tongue-contact is subject to age

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to age.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to age,
things tactile are subject to age,
body-consciousness is subject to age, body-contact is subject to age

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to age.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to age,
mind-states are subject to age,
mind-consciousness is subject to age, mind-contact is subject to age

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to age.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 35

Vyādhi Suttaṃ

Sickness

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to sickness.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to sickness,
objects are subject to sickness,
eye-consciousness is subject to sickness, eye-contact is subject to sickness

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to sickness.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to sickness,
sounds are subject to sickness,
ear-consciousness is subject to sickness, ear-contact is subject to sickness

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to sickness.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to sickness,
scents are subject to sickness,
nose-consciousness is subject to sickness, nose-contact is subject to sickness

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to sickness.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to sickness,
savours are subject to sickness,
tongue-consciousness is subject to sickness, tongue-contact is subject to sickness

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to sickness.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to sickness,
things tactile are subject to sickness,
body-consciousness is subject to sickness, body-contact is subject to sickness

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to sickness.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to sickness,
mind-states are subject to sickness,
mind-consciousness is subject to sickness, mind-contact is subject to sickness

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to sickness.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 36

Maraṇa Suttaṃ

Death

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to death.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to death,
objects are subject to death,
eye-consciousness is subject to death, eye-contact is subject to death

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to death.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to death,
sounds are subject to death,
ear-consciousness is subject to death,
ear-contact is subject to death

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to death.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to death,
scents are subject to death,
nose-consciousness is subject to death, nose-contact is subject to death

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to death.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to death,
savours are subject to death,
tongue-consciousness is subject to death, tongue-contact is subject to death

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to death.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to death,
things tactile are subject to death,
body-consciousness is subject to death, body-contact is subject to death

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to death.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to death,
mind-states are subject to death,
mind-consciousness is subject to death, mind-contact is subject to death

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to death.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 37

Soko Suttaṃ

Sorrow

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to sorrow.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to sorrow,
objects are subject to sorrow,
eye-consciousness is subject to sorrow, eye-contact is subject to sorrow

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to sorrow.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to sorrow,
sounds are subject to sorrow,
ear-consciousness is subject to sorrow, ear-contact is subject to sorrow

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to sorrow.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to sorrow,
scents are subject to sorrow,
nose-consciousness is subject to sorrow, nose-contact is subject to sorrow

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to sorrow.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to sorrow,
savours are subject to sorrow,
tongue-consciousness is subject to sorrow, tongue-contact is subject to sorrow

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to sorrow.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to sorrow,
things tactile are subject to sorrow,
body-consciousness is subject to sorrow, body-contact is subject to sorrow

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to sorrow.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to sorrow,
mind-states are subject to sorrow,
mind-consciousness is subject to sorrow, mind-contact is subject to sorrow

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to sorrow.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 38

Saṃkilesa Suttaṃ

Impurity

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to impurity.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to impurity,
objects are subject to impurity,
eye-consciousness is subject to impurity, eye-contact is subject to impurity

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to impurity.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to impurity,
sounds are subject to impurity,
ear-consciousness is subject to impurity, ear-contact is subject to impurity

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to impurity.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to impurity,
scents are subject to impurity,
nose-consciousness is subject to impurity, nose-contact is subject to impurity

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to impurity.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to impurity,
savours are subject to impurity,
tongue-consciousness is subject to impurity, tongue-contact is subject to impurity

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to impurity.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to impurity,
things tactile are subject to impurity, body-consciousness is subject to impurity, body-contact is subject to impurity

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to impurity.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to impurity,
mind-states are subject to impurity, mind-consciousness is subject to impurity, mind-contact is subject to impurity

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to impurity.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 39

Khaya Suttaṃ

Dissolution

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to dissolution.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to dissolution,
objects are subject to dissolution,
eye-consciousness is subject to dissolution, eye-contact is subject to dissolution

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to dissolution.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to dissolution,
sounds are subject to dissolution,
ear-consciousness is subject to dissolution, ear-contact is subject to dissolution

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to dissolution.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to dissolution,
scents are subject to dissolution,
nose-consciousness is subject to dissolution, nose-contact is subject to dissolution

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to dissolution.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to dissolution,
savours are subject to dissolution, tongue-consciousness is subject to dissolution, tongue-contact is subject to dissolution

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to dissolution.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to dissolution,
things tactile are subject to dissolution,
body-consciousness is subject to dissolution, body-contact is subject to dissolution

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to dissolution.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to dissolution,
mind-states are subject to dissolution,
mind-consciousness is subject to dissolution, mind-contact is subject to dissolution

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to dissolution.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 40

Vaya Suttaṃ

Growing Old

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to growing old.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to growing old,
objects are subject to growing old,
eye-consciousness is subject to growing old, eye-contact is subject to growing old

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to growing old.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to growing old,
sounds are subject to growing old,
ear-consciousness is subject to growing old, ear-contact is subject to growing old

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to growing old.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to growing old,
scents are subject to growing old,
nose-consciousness is subject to growing old, nose-contact is subject to growing old

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to growing old.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to growing old,
savours are subject to growing old,
tongue-consciousness is subject to growing old, tongue-contact is subject to growing old

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to growing old.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to growing old,
things tactile are subject to growing old,
body-consciousness is subject to growing old, body-contact is subject to growing old

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to growing old.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to growing old,
mind-states are subject to growing old,
mind-consciousness is subject to growing old, mind-contact is subject to growing old

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to growing old.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 41

Samudaya Suttaṃ

Uprising

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to uprising.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to uprising,
objects are subject to uprising,
eye-consciousness is subject to uprising, eye-contact is subject to uprising

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to uprising.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to uprising,
sounds are subject to uprising,
ear-consciousness is subject to uprising, ear-contact is subject to uprising

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to uprising.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to uprising,
scents are subject to uprising,
nose-consciousness is subject to uprising, nose-contact is subject to uprising

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to uprising.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to uprising,
savours are subject to uprising,
tongue-consciousness is subject to uprising, tongue-contact is subject to uprising

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to uprising.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to uprising,
things tactile are subject to uprising,
body-consciousness is subject to uprising, body-contact is subject to uprising

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to uprising.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to uprising,
mind-states are subject to uprising,
mind-consciousness is subject to uprising, mind-contact is subject to uprising

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to uprising.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 42

Nirodha Suttaṃ

Ceasing to Be

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is subject to ceasing to be.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is subject to ceasing to be,
objects are subject to ceasing to be,
eye-consciousness is subject to ceasing to be,
eye-contact is subject to ceasing to be

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is subject to ceasing to be.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is subject to ceasing to be,
sounds are subject to ceasing to be,
ear-consciousness is subject to ceasing to be,
ear-contact is subject to ceasing to be

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is subject to ceasing to be.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is subject to ceasing to be,
scents are subject to ceasing to be,
nose-consciousness is subject to ceasing to be,
nose-contact is subject to ceasing to be

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is subject to ceasing to be.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is subject to ceasing to be,
savours are subject to ceasing to be,
tongue-consciousness is subject to ceasing to be,
tongue-contact is subject to ceasing to be

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is subject to ceasing to be.

■

The body, Brethren,
is subject to ceasing to be,
things tactile are subject to ceasing to be,
body-consciousness is subject to ceasing to be,
body-contact is subject to ceasing to be

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is subject to ceasing to be.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is subject to ceasing to be,
mind-states are subject to ceasing to be,
mind-consciousness is subject to ceasing to be,
mind-contact is subject to ceasing to be

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is subject to ceasing to be.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Jāti-dhammo: - dhamma = having the quality of, the rule of; hence 'subject to,' 'liable to.'
Supra, p. 11, n. 3. For the Ātmaṇ-view of the Hindus see Deussen, Philosophy of the Upanishads (the Ātman and the organs), p. 265. Comy.'s comment on 'the all' evidently refers to that view.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ I: Mūla-Paññāsa
5. Sabbā Aniccā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ I: The First Fifty Suttas

5. The Chapter on Impermanence

Suttas 43-52

---

[28] [14]

Sutta 43

Anicca Suttaṃ

Impermanent

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is impermanent.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is impermanent,
objects are impermanent,
eye-consciousness is impermanent,
eye-contact is impermanent

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is impermanent.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is impermanent,
sounds are impermanent,
ear-consciousness is impermanent,
ear-contact is impermanent

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is impermanent.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is impermanent,
scents are impermanent,
nose-consciousness is impermanent,
nose-contact is impermanent

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is impermanent.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is impermanent,
savours are impermanent,
tongue-consciousness is impermanent,
tongue-contact is impermanent

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is impermanent.

■

The body, Brethren,
is impermanent,
things tactile are impermanent,
body-consciousness is impermanent,
body-contact is impermanent

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is impermanent.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is impermanent,
mind-states are impermanent,
mind-consciousness is impermanent,
mind-contact is impermanent

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is impermanent.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 44

Dukkha Suttaṃ

Woeful

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is woeful.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is woeful,
objects are woeful,
eye-consciousness is woeful,
eye-contact is woeful

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is woeful.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is woeful,
sounds are woeful,
ear-consciousness is woeful,
ear-contact is woeful

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is woeful.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is woeful,
scents are woeful,
nose-consciousness is woeful,
nose-contact is woeful

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is woeful.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is woeful,
savours are woeful,
tongue-consciousness is woeful,
tongue-contact is woeful

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is woeful.

■

The body, Brethren,
is woeful,
things tactile are woeful,
body-consciousness is woeful, body-contact is woeful

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is woeful.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is woeful,
mind-states are woeful,
mind-consciousness is woeful,
mind-contact is woeful

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is woeful.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 45

Anattā Suttaṃ

Void of Self

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is void of self.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is void of self,
objects are void of self,
eye-consciousness is void of self,
eye-contact is void of self

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is void of self.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is void of self,
sounds are void of self,
ear-consciousness is void of self,
ear-contact is void of self

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is void of self.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is void of self,
scents are void of self,
nose-consciousness is void of self,
nose-contact is void of self

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is void of self.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is void of self,
savours are void of self,
tongue-consciousness is void of self,
tongue-contact is void of self

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is void of self.

■

The body, Brethren,
is void of self,
things tactile are void of self,
body-consciousness is void of self,
body-contact is void of self

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is void of self.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is void of self,
mind-states are void of self,
mind-consciousness is void of self,
mind-contact is void of self

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is void of self.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 46

Abhiññeyya Suttaṃ

To Be Fully Known

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is to be fully known.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is to be fully known,
objects are to be fully known,
eye-consciousness is to be fully known, eye-contact is to be fully known

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is to be fully known.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is to be fully known,
sounds are to be fully known,
ear-consciousness is to be fully known, ear-contact is to be fully known

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is to be fully known.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is to be fully known,
scents are to be fully known,
nose-consciousness is to be fully known, nose-contact is to be fully known

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is to be fully known.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is to be fully known,
savours are to be fully known,
tongue-consciousness is to be fully known, tongue-contact is to be fully known

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is to be fully known.

■

The body, Brethren,
is to be fully known,
things tactile are to be fully known,
body-consciousness is to be fully known, body-contact is to be fully known

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is to be fully known.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is to be fully known,
mind-states are to be fully known,
mind-consciousness is to be fully known, mind-contact is to be fully known

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is to be fully known.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 47

Pariññeyya Suttaṃ

To Be Comprehended

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is to be comprehended.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is to be comprehended,
objects are to be comprehended,
eye-consciousness is to be comprehended, eye-contact is to be comprehended

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is to be comprehended.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is to be comprehended,
sounds are to be comprehended,
ear-consciousness is to be comprehended, ear-contact is to be comprehended

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is to be comprehended.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is to be comprehended,
scents are to be comprehended,
nose-consciousness is to be comprehended, nose-contact is to be comprehended

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is to be comprehended.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is to be comprehended,
savours are to be comprehended,
tongue-consciousness is to be comprehended, tongue-contact is to be comprehended

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is to be comprehended.

■

The body, Brethren,
is to be comprehended,
things tactile are to be comprehended, body-consciousness is to be comprehended, body-contact is to be comprehended

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is to be comprehended.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is to be comprehended,
mind-states are to be comprehended, mind-consciousness is to be comprehended, mind-contact is to be comprehended

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is to be comprehended.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 48

Pahātabba Suttaṃ

To Be Abandoned

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is to be abandoned.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is to be abandoned,
objects are to be abandoned,
eye-consciousness is to be abandoned, eye-contact is to be abandoned

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is to be abandoned.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is to be abandoned,
sounds are to be abandoned,
ear-consciousness is to be abandoned, ear-contact is to be abandoned

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is to be abandoned.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is to be abandoned,
scents are to be abandoned,
nose-consciousness is to be abandoned, nose-contact is to be abandoned

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is to be abandoned.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is to be abandoned,
savours are to be abandoned,
tongue-consciousness is to be abandoned, tongue-contact is to be abandoned

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is to be abandoned.

■

The body, Brethren,
is to be abandoned,
things tactile are to be abandoned,
body-consciousness is to be abandoned, body-contact is to be abandoned

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is to be abandoned.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is to be abandoned,
mind-states are to be abandoned,
mind-consciousness is to be abandoned, mind-contact is to be abandoned

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is to be abandoned.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 49

Sacchikātabba Suttaṃ

To Be Realized

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is to be realized.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is to be realized,
objects are to be realized,
eye-consciousness is to be realized, eye-contact is to be realized

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is to be realized.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is to be realized,
sounds are to be realized,
ear-consciousness is to be realized, ear-contact is to be realized

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is to be realized.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is to be realized,
scents are to be realized,
nose-consciousness is to be realized, nose-contact is to be realized

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is to be realized.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is to be realized,
savours are to be realized,
tongue-consciousness is to be realized, tongue-contact is to be realized

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is to be realized.

■

The body, Brethren,
is to be realized,
things tactile are to be realized,
body-consciousness is to be realized, body-contact is to be realized

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is to be realized.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is to be realized,
mind-states are to be realized,
mind-consciousness is to be realized, mind-contact is to be realized

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is to be realized.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 50

Abhiññāpariññeyya Suttaṃ

To Be Comprehended by Full Knowledge

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge,
objects are to be comprehended by full knowledge, eye-consciousness is to be comprehended by full knowledge, eye-contact is to be comprehended by full knowledge

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge,
sounds are to be comprehended by full knowledge, ear-consciousness is to be comprehended by full knowledge, ear-contact is to be comprehended by full knowledge

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge,
scents are to be comprehended by full knowledge, nose-consciousness is to be comprehended by full knowledge, nose-contact is to be comprehended by full knowledge

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge,
savours are to be comprehended by full knowledge, tongue-consciousness is to be comprehended by full knowledge, tongue-contact is to be comprehended by full knowledge

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge.

■

The body, Brethren,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge,
things tactile are to be comprehended by full knowledge, body-consciousness is to be comprehended by full knowledge, body-contact is to be comprehended by full knowledge

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge,
mind-states are to be comprehended by full knowledge, mind-consciousness is to be comprehended by full knowledge, mind-contact is to be comprehended by full knowledge

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is to be comprehended by full knowledge.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 51

Upadduta Suttaṃ

Oppressed

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is oppressed.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is oppressed,
objects are oppressed,
eye-consciousness is oppressed,
eye-contact is oppressed

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is oppressed.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is oppressed,
sounds are oppressed,
ear-consciousness is oppressed,
ear-contact is oppressed

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is oppressed.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is oppressed,
scents are oppressed,
nose-consciousness is oppressed,
nose-contact is oppressed

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is oppressed.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is oppressed,
savours are oppressed,
tongue-consciousness is oppressed, tongue-contact is oppressed

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is oppressed.

■

The body, Brethren,
is oppressed,
things tactile are oppressed,
body-consciousness is oppressed,
body-contact is oppressed

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is oppressed.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is oppressed,
mind-states are oppressed,
mind-consciousness is oppressed,
mind-contact is oppressed

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is oppressed.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 52

Upassaṭṭha Suttaṃ

Afflicted

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The all, Brethren,
is afflicted.

What all?

The eye, Brethren,
is afflicted,
objects are afflicted,
eye-consciousness is afflicted,
eye-contact is afflicted

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from eye-contact,
is afflicted.

■

The ear, Brethren,
is afflicted,
sounds are afflicted,
ear-consciousness is afflicted,
ear-contact is afflicted

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from ear-contact,
is afflicted.

■

The nose, Brethren,
is afflicted,
scents are afflicted,
nose-consciousness is afflicted,
nose-contact is afflicted

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from nose-contact,
is afflicted.

■

The tongue, Brethren,
is afflicted,
savours are afflicted,
tongue-consciousness is afflicted,
tongue-contact is afflicted

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from tongue-contact,
is afflicted.

■

The body, Brethren,
is afflicted,
things tactile are afflicted, body-consciousness is afflicted,
body-contact is afflicted

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from body-contact,
is afflicted.

■

The mind, Brethren,
is afflicted,
mind-states are afflicted,
mind-consciousness is afflicted,
mind-contact is afflicted

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
that arises from mind-contact,
is afflicted.

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 53

Avijjā-Pahāna Suttaṃ

Ignorance

---

[15]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated that brother said this:

"By how knowing, lord,
by how seeing
does ignorance vanish
and knowledge arise?"

"In him that knows and sees the eye as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees objects as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees eye-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through eye-contact
as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

■

In him that knows and sees the ear as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees sounds as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees ear-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through ear-contact
as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

■

In him that knows and sees the nose as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees scents as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees nose-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees nose-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through nose-contact
as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

■

In him that knows and sees the tongue as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees savours as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees tongue-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through tongue-contact
as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

■

In him that knows and sees the body as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees things tactile as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees body-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees body-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through body-contact
as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

■

In him that knows and sees the mind as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees mind-states as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees mind-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees mind-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through mind-contact
as impermanent, brother,
ignorance vanishes
and knowledge arises.

This is how knowing,
how seeing
that ignorance vanish
and knowledge arises."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 54

Saṇyojana-Pahāna Suttaṃ

Fetters (i)

---

[15]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated that brother said this:

"By how knowing, lord,
by how seeing
are the fetters abandoned?"

"In him that knows and sees the eye as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees objects as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees eye-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through eye-contact
as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the ear as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees sounds as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees ear-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through ear-contact
as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the nose as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees scents as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees nose-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees nose-contact as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through nose-contact
as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the tongue as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees savours as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees tongue-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through tongue-contact
as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the body as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees things tactile as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees body-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees body-contact as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through body-contact
as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the mind as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-states as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-contact as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through mind-contact
as impermanent, brother,
are the fetters abandoned.

This is how knowing,
how seeing
that the fetters are abandoned."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 55

Saṇyojana Samugghāta Suttaṃ

Fetters (ii)

---

[15]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated that brother said this:

"By how knowing, lord,
by how seeing
do the fetters come to be uprooted?"

"In him that knows and sees the eye as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees objects as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees eye-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through eye-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the ear as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees sounds as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees ear-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through ear-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the nose as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees scents as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees nose-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees nose-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through nose-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the tongue as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees savours as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees tongue-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through tongue-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the body as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees things tactile as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees body-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees body-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through body-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the mind as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-states as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through mind-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the fetters come to be uprooted.

This is how knowing,
how seeing
that the fetters come to be uprooted."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 56

Āsava-Pahāna Suttaṃ

The Āsavas (i)

---

[15]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated that brother said this:

"By how knowing, lord,
by how seeing
do the āsavas come to be abandoned?"

"In him that knows and sees the eye as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees objects as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees eye-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through eye-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the ear as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees sounds as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees ear-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through ear-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the nose as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees scents as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees nose-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees nose-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through nose-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the tongue as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees savours as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees tongue-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through tongue-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the body as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees things tactile as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees body-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees body-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through body-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the mind as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-states as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through mind-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be abandoned.

This is how knowing,
how seeing
that the āsavas come to be abandoned."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 57

Āsava Samugghāta Suttaṃ

The Āsavas (ii)

---

[15]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated that brother said this:

"By how knowing, lord,
by how seeing
do the āsavas come to be uprooted?"

"In him that knows and sees the eye as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees objects as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees eye-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through eye-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the ear as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees sounds as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees ear-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through ear-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the nose as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees scents as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees nose-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees nose-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through nose-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the tongue as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees savours as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees tongue-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through tongue-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the body as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees things tactile as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees body-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees body-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through body-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the mind as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-states as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through mind-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the āsavas come to be uprooted.

This is how knowing,
how seeing
that the āsavas come to be uprooted."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 58

Anusaya-Pahāna Suttaṃ

Lurking Tendency (i)

---

[15]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated that brother said this:

"By how knowing, lord,
by how seeing
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned?"

"In him that knows and sees the eye as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees objects as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees eye-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through eye-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the ear as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees sounds as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees ear-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through ear-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the nose as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees scents as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees nose-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees nose-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through nose-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the tongue as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees savours as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees tongue-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through tongue-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the body as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees things tactile as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees body-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees body-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through body-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

■

In him that knows and sees the mind as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-states as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees mind-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through mind-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned.

This is how knowing,
how seeing
that the lurking tendencies come to be abandoned."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 59

Anusaya-Samugghāta Suttaṃ

Lurking Tendency (ii)

---

[15]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated that brother said this:

"By how knowing, lord,
by how seeing
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted?"

"In him that knows and sees the eye as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees objects as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees eye-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through eye-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the ear as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees sounds as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees ear-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through ear-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the nose as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees scents as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees nose-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees nose-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through nose-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the tongue as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees savours as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees tongue-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through tongue-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the body as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees things tactile as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees body-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees body-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through body-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

■

In him that knows and sees the mind as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-states as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees mind-contact as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

In him that knows and sees
whatever weal or woe or neutral state
that arises experienced through mind-contact
as impermanent, brother,
do the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted.

This is how knowing,
how seeing
that the lurking tendencies come to be uprooted."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 60

Sabb'Ūpādāna-Pariññā Suttaṃ

Comprehension

---

[16]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will show you, Brethren, a teaching for the comprehension of all attachment.

Listen to it.

What is that teaching for the comprehension of all attachment?

Dependent on the eye and object
arises eye-consciousness.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the ear and sounds
arises ear-consciousness.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the nose and scents
arises the sense of smell.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,

is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the tongue and savours
arises the sense of taste.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the body and tangibles
arises the sense of touch.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by tangibles,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the mind and mind-states
arises mind-consciousness.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,

is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

This, Brethren, is the teaching for the comprehension of all attachment."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 61

Paṭhama Sabb'Ūpādāna-Pariyādinna Suttaṃ

Exhausting (i)

---

[16]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will show you, Brethren, a teaching for the exhausting of all attachment.

Listen to it.

What is that teaching for the exhausting of all attachment?

Dependent on the eye and object
arises eye-consciousness.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the ear and sounds
arises ear-consciousness.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the nose and scents
arises the sense of smell.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,

is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the tongue and savours
arises the sense of taste.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the body and tangibles
arises the sense of touch.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by tangibles,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

■

Dependent on the mind and mind-states
arises mind-consciousness.

The union of these three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

So seeing, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,

is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by feeling.

Being repelled by them
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting
he is set free.

By freedom he realizes:

'Attachment has been comprehended by me.'

This, Brethren, is the teaching for the exhausting of all attachment."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
1. Avijjā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Ignorance

Sutta 62

Dutiya Sabb'ūpādāna-Pariyādinna Suttaṃ

Exhausting (ii)

---

[16]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will show you, Brethren,
a way that is helpful
for exhausting of all attachments.

Do ye listen to it.

What is that way
that is helpful
for exhausting of all attachments?

Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-contact
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from eye-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

"Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from ear-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are things tactile
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-consciousness
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-contact
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are mind-states
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-contact
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from mind-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

---

[14] "So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight

that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

This, Brethren, is the way helpful for the exhausting of all attachments.

References:

see § 32

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 63

Paṭhama Migajālena Suttaṃ

By Migajāla (i)[1]

---

[35] [16]

Thus have I heard:[ed1]

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Migajāla came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated at one side
he thus addressed the Exalted One: -

[17]"'Dwelling alone! Dwelling alone!' lord, is the saying.

Pray, lord, to what extent
is one a dweller alone, and to wbat extent
is one a dweller with a mate?"[2]

"There are, Migajāla,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,[3]
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

Where there is a lure
there is infatuation.

Where there is infatuation
there is bondage.

Bound in the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller with a mate.'

■

There are, Migajāla,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

Where there is a lure
there is infatuation.

Where there is infatuation
there is bondage.

Bound in the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller with a mate.'

■

There are, Migajāla,
scents cognizable by the nose,
objects desirable,

pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

Where there is a lure
there is infatuation.

Where there is infatuation
there is bondage.

Bound in the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller with a mate.'

■

There are, Migajāla,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,

so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

Where there is a lure
there is infatuation.

Where there is infatuation
there is bondage.

Bound in the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller with a mate.'

■

There are, Migajāla,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

Where there is a lure
there is infatuation.

Where there is infatuation
there is bondage.

Bound in the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller with a mate.'

■

There are, Migajāla,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

Where there is a lure
there is infatuation.

Where there is infatuation
there is bondage.

Bound in the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller with a mate.'|| ||

A brother so dwelling, Migajāla, though he frequent jungle glades, hermitages
and lodgings in the forest, remote from sound,

remote from uproar,
free from the breath of crowds,[4]
where one lodges far from human kind, places meet for solitude, -
yet is he called
'dweller with a mate.'

Why so?

Craving is the mate he has not left behind.

Therefore is he called
'dweller with a mate.'

§

But, Migajāla, there are
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

Where there is no lure,
there is no infatuation.

Where there is no infatuation, [18] there is no bondage.

Freed from the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller alone.'

■

There are, Migajāla, sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

Where there is no lure,
there is no infatuation.

Where there is no infatuation, there is no bondage.

Freed from the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller alone.'

■

There are, Migajāla, scents cognizable by the nose,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

Where there is no lure,
there is no infatuation.

Where there is no infatuation, there is no bondage.

Freed from the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller alone.'

■

There are, Migajāla, savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,

persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

Where there is no lure,
there is no infatuation.

Where there is no infatuation, there is no bondage.

Freed from the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller alone.'

■

There are, Migajāla, tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

Where there is no lure,
there is no infatuation.

Where there is no infatuation, there is no bondage.

Freed from the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller alone.'

■

There are, Migajāla, mind-states cognizable by the mind,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

Where there is no lure,
there is no infatuation.

Where there is no infatuation, there is no bondage.

Freed from the bondage of the lure, Migajāla,
a brother is called
'dweller alone.'

■

Thus dwelling, Migajāla, a brother, though he dwell amid a village crowded with brethren and sisters, with lay-brethren and lay-sisters,

with rajahs and royal ministers, with sectarians and their followers, -
yet is he called
'dweller alone.'

Why so?

Craving is the mate he has left behind.

Therefore is he called
'dweller alone.'"

---

[1] Lit. 'huntmg-net.' This brother, or one of the same name, is found in Psalms of the Brethren, p. 216 (Theragāthā, ccxvii). He was a son of the famous patroness of the Order, Visākhā, was ordained and became Arahant.

[2] Sadutiya, 'with a second' is often used as here of one's attendant craving. Cf. K.S. i, 35-6 n., and below, § 88.

[3] K.S. iii, 15. This section is partly repeated to Punna at § 88.

[4] Pantāni. Cf. M. i, 16. Vi-jana-vātāni. Cf. Vin. ii, 158; VibhA. 251, 366; V.M. 72. Comy. says saṇsaraṇa-janassa sarīravātavirahitāni (free of the emanations of a crowd).

[ed1] Woodward notes that this sutta begins with: "Sāvatthinidānam," which he renders: "At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse" a common abridgment of the opening, here restored.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 64

Dutiya Migajālena Suttaṃ

By Migajāla (ii)

---

[37] [18]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the venerable Migajāla came to the Exalted One,
and on coming to him

saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated at one side
he thus addressed the Exalted One: -

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One should teach me a teaching in brief, hearing which I might dwell solitary, secluded,
zealous,
ardent
and aspiring."

"There are objects, Migajāla,
cognizable by the eye,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Migajala,
is the arising of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Migajala,
is the arising of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla,
scents cognizable by the nose,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,

so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Migajala,
is the arising of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Migajala,
is the arising of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Migajala,
is the arising of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Migajala,
is the arising of ill,
so I declare.

§

There are objects, Migajāla,
cognizable by the eye,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

The fading away of the lure, Migajāla,
is the fading away of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla, sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,

persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

The fading away of the lure, Migajāla,
is the fading away of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla, scents cognizable by the nose,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

The fading away of the lure, Migajāla,
is the fading away of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla, savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

The fading away of the lure, Migajāla,
is the fading away of ill,
so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla, tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

The fading away of the lure, Migajāla,
is the fading away of ill,

so I declare.

■

There are, Migajāla, mind-states cognizable by the mind,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
in him not so enamoured of them,
not welcoming them,
not so persisting in clinging to them,
the lure fades away.

The fading away of the lure, Migajāla,
is the fading away of ill,
so I declare."

Thereupon the venerable Migajāla welcomed the words of the Exalted One,
and took delight in them,
rose from his seat,
saluted the Exalted One by the right
and went away.

Thereafter the venerable Migajāla, dwelling solitary,
secluded,
zealous,
ardent
and aspiring,

in no long time attained [19] that goal
for which the clansmen rightly leave home
for the homeless life,
even that unrivalled goal of righteous living:
attained it even in that very life,
and knowing it for himself,
realizing it for himself,
abode therein,
so that he came to know:

"Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter."

And the venerable Migajāla was yet another of the Arahants.

References:

SN 4.35.63
Psalms of the Brethren, p. 216 (Theragāthā, ccxvii).
Personalities: Visākhā

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 65

Samiddhi-Māra-Pañha Suttaṃ

Samiddhi (i)

---

[19]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha,
in Bamboo Grove,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then the venerable Samiddhi[1] came to the Exalted One and thus addressed him: -

"'Māra! Māra!'
is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, to what extent is there Māra[2] or the symptoms[3] of Māra?"

"Where there is eye, Samiddhi,
objects,
eye-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the eye,
there is Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is ear, Samiddhi,
sounds,
ear-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the ear,
there is Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is nose, Samiddhi,
scents,
nose-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the nose,
there is Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is tongue, Samiddhi,
savours,
tongue-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the tongue,
there is Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is body, Samiddhi,
tangibles,
body-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the body,
there is Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is mind, Samiddhi,
mind-states,
mind-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the mind,
there is Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

§

But where there is no eye, Samiddhi,
no objects,
no eye-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the eye,
there is no Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is no ear, Samiddhi,
no sounds,
no ear-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the ear,
there is no Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is no nose, Samiddhi,
no scents,
no nose-consciousness,

and no things cognizable by the nose,
there is no Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is no tongue, Samiddhi,
no savours,
no tongue-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the tongue,
there is no Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is no body, Samiddhi,
no tangibles,
no body-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the body,
there is no Māra
or symptoms of Māra.

Where there is no mind, Samiddhi,
no mind-states,
no mind-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the mind,
there is no Māra
or symptoms of Māra."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. i, 14, 148; Psalms of the Brethren, 51; Jāt. ii, No. 167 (Jāt., text ii, pp. 56 and ff.). The name means 'prosperous' or 'lucky.' He was, says Comy., very beautiful, 'like a flower that has just bloomed.' His temptation by a devatā or nymph is described in the passage of Jātaka and S. i quoted.

[2] For Māra see K.S. iii, 155, 160. Māraṇaṇ. Comy.

[3] Paññatti, 'The realm of Māra.' Comy.

References:

SN 1.1.20
SN 1.4.22
Psalms of the Brethren, 51;
Jāt. ii, No. 167
K.S. iii, 155, 160.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 66

Samiddhi-Satta-Pañha Suttaṃ

Samiddhi (ii)

---

[20]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha,
in Bamboo Grove,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then the venerable Samiddhi came to the Exalted One and thus addressed him: -

"'A being! A being!'
is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, to what extent is there a being,
or the symptoms of a being?"

"Where there is eye, Samiddhi,
objects,
eye-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the eye,
there is a being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is ear, Samiddhi,
sounds,
ear-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the ear,
there is a being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is nose, Samiddhi,
scents,
nose-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the nose,
there is a being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is tongue, Samiddhi,
savours,
tongue-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the tongue,
there is a being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is body, Samiddhi,
tangibles,
body-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the body,
there is a being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is mind, Samiddhi,
mind-states,
mind-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the mind,
there is a being
or symptoms of a being.

§

"But where there is no eye, Samiddhi,
no objects,
no eye-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the eye,
there is no being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is no ear, Samiddhi,
no sounds,
no ear-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the ear,
there is no being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is no nose, Samiddhi,
no scents,
no nose-consciousness,

and no things cognizable by the nose,
there is no being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is no tongue, Samiddhi,
no savours,
no tongue-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the tongue,
there is no being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is no body, Samiddhi,
no tangibles,
no body-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the body,
there is no being
or symptoms of a being.

Where there is no mind, Samiddhi,
no mind-states,
no mind-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the mind,
there is no being
or symptoms of a being."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 67

Samiddhi-Dukkha-Pañha Suttaṃ

Samiddhi (iii)

---

[20]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha,
in Bamboo Grove,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then the venerable Samiddhi came to the Exalted One and thus addressed him: -

"'Ill! Ill!'
is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, to what extent is there ill,
or the symptoms of ill?"

"Where there is eye, Samiddhi,
objects,
eye-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the eye,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is ear, Samiddhi,
sounds,
ear-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the ear,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is nose, Samiddhi,
scents,
nose-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the nose,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is tongue, Samiddhi,
savours,
tongue-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the tongue,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is body, Samiddhi,
tangibles,
body-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the body,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is mind, Samiddhi,
mind-states,
mind-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the mind,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

§

"But where there is no eye, Samiddhi,
no objects,
no eye-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the eye,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is no ear, Samiddhi,
no sounds,
no ear-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the ear,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is no nose, Samiddhi,
no scents,
no nose-consciousness,

and no things cognizable by the nose,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is no tongue, Samiddhi,
no savours,
no tongue-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the tongue,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is no body, Samiddhi,
no tangibles,
no body-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the body,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill.

Where there is no mind, Samiddhi,
no mind-states,
no mind-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the mind,
there is ill
or symptoms of ill."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 68

Samiddhi-Loko-Pañha Suttaṃ

Samiddhi (iv)

---

[20]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha,
in Bamboo Grove,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then the venerable Samiddhi came to the Exalted One and thus addressed him: -

"'The world! The world!'[1]
is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, to what extent is there the world,
or the symptoms of the world?"

"Where there is eye, Samiddhi,
objects,
eye-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the eye,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is ear, Samiddhi,
sounds,
ear-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the ear,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is nose, Samiddhi,
scents,
nose-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the nose,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is tongue, Samiddhi,
savours,
tongue-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the tongue,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is body, Samiddhi,
tangibles,
body-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the body,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is mind, Samiddhi,
mind-states,
mind-consciousness,
and things cognizable by the mind,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

§

"But where there is no eye, Samiddhi,
no objects,
no eye-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the eye,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is no ear, Samiddhi,
no sounds,
no ear-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the ear,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is no nose, Samiddhi,
no scents,
no nose-consciousness,

and no things cognizable by the nose,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is no tongue, Samiddhi,
no savours,
no tongue-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the tongue,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is no body, Samiddhi,
no tangibles,
no body-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the body,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world.

Where there is no mind, Samiddhi,
no mind-states,
no mind-consciousness,
and no things cognizable by the mind,
there is the world
or symptoms of the world."

---

[1] Loka. Lujjana palujjanaṭṭhena. Comy. (The usual commentarial derivation, of the word, as meaning 'that which crumbles away.')

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 69

Upasena Suttaṃ

Upasena

---

[40] [20]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta and the venerable Upasena were staying near Rājagaha, in Cool Grove, at Snakeshood Grotto.[1]

Now at that time a snake had fallen on the venerable Upasena's body.

Then the venerable Upasena called to the Brethren, saying:

"Come hither, friends,
lift this body of mine on to a couch and take it outside
before it be scattered here and now, just like a handful of chaff."

At these words the venerable Sāriputta said to the venerable Upasena:

"But we see no change in the venerable Upasena's body, no change for the worse in his faculties."

Then the venerable Upasena repeated what he had said, adding:

"Friend Sāriputta, he who should think,
'I am the eye,' or
'the eye is mine,' or
'I am the ear,' or
'the ear is mine,' or
'I am the nose,' or
'the nose is mind,' or
'I am the tongue,' or
'the tongue is mine,' or
'I am the body,' or
'the body is mine,' or
'I am the mind,' or
'the mind is mine,' -
in him there would be a change in his body, there would be a change for the worse in his faculties.

But I, friend, have no such ideas as:
'I am the eye,' or
'the eye is mine,' or
'I am the ear,' or,

'the ear is mine,' or
'I am the nose,' or
'the nose is mind,' or
'I am the tongue,' or
'the tongue is mine,' or
'I am the body,' or
'the body is mine,' or
'I am the mind,' or
'the mind is mine.'

How then could there be any change in my body, any change for the worse in my faculties?"

■

"The venerable Upasena has long since quelled the lurking tendencies that make for 'I' and 'mine.'

Therefore the venerable Upasena has[ed1] no such ideas as,
'I am the eye,' or
'the [21] eye is mine,' or
'I am the ear,' or
'the ear is mine,' or
'I am the nose,' or
'the nose is mind,' or
'I am the tongue,' or
'the tongue is mine,' or
'I am the body,' or
'the body is mine,' or
'I am the mind,' or
'the mind is mine.'"

■

So those brethren put the venerable Upasena's body on a couch and bore it outside.

And the venerable Upasena's body there and then
was scattered just like a handful of chaff.

---

[1] Sappa-sondika-pabbhāra. Cf. Vin. ii, 76; D. ii, 116. Comy. says it was shaped like a snake's hood. Upasena was Sāriputta's younger brother. After his meal he was sitting in the shadow of the grotto, fanned by the gentle breeze, mending his outer robe. Two young snakes were sporting in the tendrils overhanging the cave. One fell on the elder's shoulder. He was bitten and the venom spread rapidly through his body.

---

ed1 Woodward has worded this: "Now the venerable Upasena had ... Therefore the venerable Upasena had..." giving the impression that this is a comment being made by the narrator, but it is a comment being made in response to Upasena by Sāriputta so I have altered it slightly to make that point clearer. Bhk. Bodhi in his translation puts this more clearly.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 70

Upavāna Suttaṃ

Upavāṇa

---

[41] [21]

Then[ed1] the venerable Upavāṇa[1] came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"'Of immediate use is the Norm!

Of immediate use is the Norm!' is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, to what extent is the Norm of immediate use,[2]
apart from time,
bidding one come and see,
leading on (to the Goal),
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise?"

§

"Now here (under my teaching), Upavāṇa,
when a brother sees an object with the eye,
he experiences objects,
conceives a passion for objects,
and of that passion for objects
which exists for him personally
he is aware:

'I have personally a passion for objects.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother sees an object with the eye,
he experiences objects,
conceives a passion for objects,
and of that passion for objects
which exists for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally a passion for objects,'

I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.[ed2]

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother hears a sound with the ear,
he experiences sounds,
conceives a passion for sounds,
and of that passion for sounds
which exists for him personally
he is aware,

'I have personally a passion for sounds.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother hears a sound with the ear,
he experiences sounds,
conceives a passion for sounds,
and of that passion for sounds
which exists for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally a passion for sounds,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother smells a scent with the nose,
he experiences scents,
conceives a passion for scents,
and of that passion for scents
which exists for him personally
he is aware,

'I have personally a passion for scents.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother smells a scent with the nose,
he experiences scents,
conceives a passion for scents,
and of that passion for scents
which exists for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally a passion for scents,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother tastes a savour with the tongue,
he experiences savours,
conceives a passion for savours,
and of that passion for savours

which exists for him personally
he is aware,

'I have personally a passion for savours.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother tastes a savour with the tongue,
he experiences savours,
conceives a passion for savours,
and of that passion for savours
which exists for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally a passion for savours,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother contacts a tangible with the body,
he experiences tangibles,
conceives a passion for tangibles,
and of that passion for tangibles
which exists for him personally
he is aware,

'I have personally a passion for tangibles.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother contacts a tangible with the body,
he experiences tangibles,
conceives a passion for tangibles,

and of that passion for tangibles
which exists for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally a passion for tangibles,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother is conscious of a mind-state with mind,
he experiences mind-states,
conceives a passion for mind-states,
and of that passion for mind-states
which exists for him personally
he is aware,

'I have personally a passion for tangibles.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother is conscious of a mind-state with mind,
he experiences mind-states,
conceives a passion for mind-states,
and of that passion for mind-states
which exists for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally a passion for mind-states,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,

to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

§

But herein, Upavāṇa,
when a brother sees an object with the eye,
he experiences objects,
but he does not conceive a [22] passion for objects.

As there is no passion for objects existing for him personally,
he is aware,

'I have personally no passion for objects.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother sees an object with the eye,
he experiences objects,
but he does not conceive a passion for objects,
and of that passion for objects
which exists not for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally no passion for objects,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother hears a sound with the ear,
he experiences sounds,
but he does not conceive a passion for sounds.

As there is no passion for sounds
existing for him personally,
he is aware,

'I have personally no passion for sounds.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother hears a sound with the ear,
he experiences sounds,
but he does not conceive a passion for sounds,
and of that passion for sounds
which exists not for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally no passion for sounds,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother smells a scent with the nose,
he experiences scents,
but he does not conceive a passion for scents.

As there is no passion for scents
existing for him personally,
he is aware,

'I have personally no passion for scents.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother smells a scent with the nose,
he experiences scents,
but he does not conceive a passion for scents,
and of that passion for scents
which exists not for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally no passion for scents,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother tastes a savour with the tongue,
he experiences savours,
but he does not conceive a passion for savours.

As there is no passion for savours
existing for him personally,
he is aware,

'I have personally no passion for savours.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother tastes a savour with the tongue,

he experiences savours,
but he does not conceive a passion for savours,
and of that passion for savours
which exists not for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally no passion for savours,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother contacts a tangible with the body,
he experiences tangibles,
but he does not conceive a passion for tangibles.

As there is no passion for tangibles
existing for him personally,
he is aware,

'I have personally no passion for tangibles.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother contacts a tangible with the body,
he experiences tangibles,
but he does not conceive a passion for tangibles,
and of that passion for tangibles
which exists not for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally no passion for tangibles,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,

apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

■

"Then again, Upavāṇa,
when a brother is conscious of a mind-state with mind,
he experiences mind-states,
but he does not conceive a passion for mind-states.

As there is no passion for mind-states
existing for him personally,
he is aware,

'I have personally no passion for tangibles.'

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as when a brother is conscious of a mind-state with mind,
he experiences mind-states,
but he does not conceive a passion for mind-states,
and of that passion for mind-states
which exists not for him personally
he is aware,
'I have personally no passion for mind-states,'
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.[3]

---

[1] Cf. K.S. i, 220, S. v, 76. He was the personal attendant of the Buddha before Ānanda.

[2] The well-known epithets of the Dhamma. Cf. S. 1, 9; Dialog., iii, 10 n.; V.M. 215. Cf. K.S. i, 16: 'a thing of the present' (sandiṭṭiko).

[3] In this sutta, says Comy., the sekha (pupil) and his experiences are discussed.

[ed1] This sutta has no nidana and D.P.P.N. gives no clue as to where it might have been given. The opening line: "There then" would indicate the previous sutta which took place between Sāriputta and Upasena in Rājagaha.

[ed2] Woodward abridges thus:

Now, Upavāṇa,
in so far as a brother is thus aware of his personal passion for objects,
I say the Norm is of immediate use,
apart from time,
bidding one come to see,
leading on,
to be experienced,
each for himself,
by the wise.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 71

Paṭhama Cha-Phass'Āyatana Suttaṃ

Concerning the Sixfold Sphere of Contact (i)

---

[43] [22]

"Whatsoever[ed1] brother, Brethren, understands not,
as they really are,
the arising and destruction,
the satisfaction and misery,
and the escape

from the sixfold sphere of contact, -
not lived by such an one is the righteous life.

Far is he
from this Norm and Discipline."

At these words a certain brother addressed the Exalted One, saying: -

"Herein, lord, I am in despair; -
for I, lord, do not understand these things
as they really are."

"Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the eye thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?"

"No indeed, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This eye is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the eye will have been rightly seen.

That is the end of ill.

■

Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the ear thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?"

"No indeed, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This ear is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the ear will have been rightly seen.

That is the end of ill.

■

Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the nose thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?"

"No indeed, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This nose is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the nose will have been rightly seen.

That is the end of ill.

■

Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the tongue thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?"

"No indeed, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This tongue is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the tongue will have been rightly seen.

That is the end of ill.

■

Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the body thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?"

"No indeed, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This body is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the body will have been rightly seen.

That is the end of ill.

■

Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the mind thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?"

"No indeed, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This mind is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the mind will have been rightly seen.

That is the end of ill."

[ed1] This sutta has no nidana.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 72

Dutiya Cha-Phass'Āyatana Suttaṃ

Concerning the Sixfold Sphere of Contact (ii)

---

[22]

"Whatsoever[ed1] brother, Brethren, understands not,
as they really are,
the arising and destruction,
the satisfaction and misery,
and the escape

from the sixfold sphere of contact, -
not lived by such an one
is the righteous life.

Far is he
from this Norm and Discipline."

At these words a certain brother addressed the Exalted One, saying: -

"Herein, lord, I am in despair; -
for I, lord, do not understand these things
as they really are."

"Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the eye thus:[ed2]

'This is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self'?"

"Yes, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This eye is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the eye will have been rightly seen.

Thus the first sphere of contact will have been abandoned by you, so as to become again no more in future time.

■

"Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the ear thus:

'This is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self'?"

"Yes, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This ear is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the ear will have been rightly seen.

Thus the second sphere of contact will have been abandoned by you, so as to become again no more in future time.

■

"Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the nose thus:

'This is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self'?"

"Yes, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This nose is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the nose will have been rightly seen.

Thus the third sphere of contact will have been abandoned by you,
so as to become again no more in future time.

■

"Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the tongue thus:

'This is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self'?"

"Yes, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This tongue is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the tongue will have been rightly seen.

Thus the fourth sphere of contact will have been abandoned by you, so as to become again no more in future time.

■

"Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the body thus:

'This is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self'?"

"Yes, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This body is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the body will have been rightly seen.

Thus the fifth sphere of contact will have been abandoned by you,
so as to become again no more in future time.

■

"Now what think you, brother?

Do you regard the mind thus:

'This is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self'?"

"Yes, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This mind is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the mind will have been rightly seen.

Thus the sixth sphere of contact will have been abandoned by you,
so as to become again no more in future time.

---

ed1 This sutta has no nidana.

ed2 Woodward has misread the Pali of this sutta, stating: (The same as the above with the addition, after 'rightly seen' of: 'Thus the first sphere ...). But this sutta does not follow the previous sutta, but is constructed as given. Woodward's construction is:

Do you regard the eye thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?"

"No indeed, lord."

"Well said, brother.

And herein, brother,
by right understanding
as it really is:

'This eye is not mine.

This am I not.

This is not my self,'

the eye will have been rightly seen.

Thus the first sphere of contact will have been abandoned by you,
so as to become again no more in future time.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
2. Migajāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on Migajāla

Sutta 73

Tatiya Cha-Phass'Āyatana Suttaṃ

Concerning the Sixfold Sphere of Contact (iii)

---

[23]

"Whatsoever[ed1] brother, Brethren, understands not,
as they really are,
the arising and destruction,
the satisfaction and misery,
and the escape

from the sixfold sphere of contact, -
not lived by such an one
is the righteous life.

Far is he
from this Norm and Discipline."

At these words a certain brother addressed the Exalted One, saying: -

"Herein, lord, I am in despair; -
for I, lord, do not understand these things
as they really are."

Now what think ye, brother?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is eye-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from eye-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

"Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from ear-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are things tactile permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are mind-states permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is mind-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from mind-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"So seeing, brother, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brother, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brother, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brother, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brother, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brother, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

ed1 This sutta has no nidana.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 74

Paṭhama Gilāna Suttaṃ

Sick (i)[1]

---

[23]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him

saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Lord, in such and such a lodging
there is a brother,
a novice,
of no reputation.[2]

He is sick,
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

Well were it, lord,
if the Exalted One should visit that brother,
out of compassion for him."

■

Then the Exalted One,
on hearing the words 'novice'
and 'sick,'
and finding that he was of no reputation,
went to where that brother was.

Now that brother saw the Exalted One coming,
while yet he was far off,
and seeing him he stirred upon his bed.

Then the Exalted One (on coming to him) said:

"Enough, brother!

Stir not on your bed.

There are these seats made ready.

I will sit there."

And he sat on a seat made ready.

So the Exalted One sat down
and said to that brother: -

"Well, brother!

I hope you are bearing up.

I hope you are enduring.

Do your pains abate and not increase?

Are there signs of their abating
and not increasing?"[3]

"No, lord.

I am not bearing up.

I am not enduring.

[24] Strong pains come upon me.

They do not abate.

There is no sign of their abating,
but of their increasing."

"I hope, brother, you have no doubt,
no remorse."

"Indeed, lord, I have no little doubt.

I have no little remorse."

"But I hope that as to morals
you yourself make no reproach."

"No indeed, lord."

"Then, brother, if that is so,
you must have some doubt,
you must have some regret."

"Lord, I do not understand
the meaning of the purity of life
in the Norm taught by the Exalted One."

"Well, brother, if you do not understand the meaning of the purity of life
in the Norm taught by me,
in what sense do you understand it?"

"Passion and the destruction of passion, lord, - that is what I understand to be the Norm taught by the Exalted One."

"Well said, brother!

Well said!

Well indeed do you understand
the meaning of the Norm taught by me.

Indeed it means passion and the destruction of passion.

Now what think ye, brother?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from eye-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

"Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from ear-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are things tactile permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are mind-states permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from mind-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

[14] "So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Thus spake the Exalted One.

And that brother was delighted and welcomed the words of the Exalted One.

More- [25] over,
when this discourse was uttered,
in that brother arose the pure and flawless eye of the Norm, (so that he saw):

"Whatsoever is of a nature to arise,
all that is of a nature to cease."

---

[1] The substance of this section occurs at S. iii, 119 (K.S. iii, 101), where see n. and Brethren, pp. 197-200.

[2] Appaññata. 'Not well known like Rāhula or Sumaṇa, for instance.' Comy.

[3] Cf. K.S. iii, 102, 106. The usual formula of greeting to a sick man. But we are not to suppose the Master always used these same words, or got the same reply. It is a good example of the basis on which the whole Scriptures are composed, for the purpose of learning by heart. But here and there we may get ipsissima verba.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 75

Dutiya Gilāna Suttaṃ

Sick (ii)

---

[25]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side
he said to the Exalted One: -

"Lord, in such and such a lodging
there is a brother,
a novice,
of no reputation.

He is sick,
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

Well were it, lord,
if the Exalted One should visit that brother,
out of compassion for him."

Then the Exalted One,
on hearing the words 'novice'
and 'sick,'
and finding that he was of no reputation,
went to where that brother was.

Now that brother saw the Exalted One coming,
while yet he was far off,
and seeing him he stirred upon his bed.

Then the Exalted One (on coming to him) said:

"Enough, brother!

Stir not on your bed.

There are these seats made ready.

I will sit there."

And he sat on a seat made ready.

So the Exalted One sat down
and said to that brother: -

"Well, brother!

I hope you are bearing up.

I hope you are enduring.

Do your pains abate and not increase?

Are there signs of their abating
and not increasing?"

"No, lord.

I am not bearing up.

I am not enduring.

Strong pains come upon me.

They do not abate.

There is no sign of their abating,
but of their increasing."

"I hope, brother, you have no doubt,
no remorse."

"Indeed, lord, I have no little doubt.

I have no little remorse."

"But I hope that as to morals
you yourself make no reproach."

"No indeed, lord."

"Then, brother, if that is so,
you must have some doubt,
you must have some regret."

"Lord, I do not understand
the meaning of the purity of life
in the Norm taught by the Exalted One."

"Well, brother, if you do not understand the meaning of the purity of life
in the Norm taught by me,
in what sense do you understand it?"

"Final emancipation without grasping,[1] lord, I take to be the meaning of the Norm taught by the Exalted One."

"Well said, brother!

Well said!

Well indeed do you understand
the meaning of the Norm taught by me.

Indeed it means final emancipation without grasping.

Now what think ye, brother?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from eye-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

"Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from ear-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are things tactile permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are mind-states permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from mind-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

[14] "So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,

is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Thus spake the Exalted One.

And that brother was delighted and welcomed the words of the Exalted One.

Moreover, when this discourse was uttered, the heart of that brother was released from the āsavas
without grasping.

[1] Anupādā-parinibbāna.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 76

Anicca Suttaṃ (aka: Rādha Suttaṃ (i))

Rādha (i)

---

[48] [25]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then the venerable Rādha[1] came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me a teaching in brief, hearing which I might dwell
remote and earnest,
ardent and aspiring."

"What is impermanent, Rādha, -
for that you must abandon desire.

And what is impermanent, Radha?

The eye is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Objects are impermanent,
for them you must abandon desire.

Eye-consciousness is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Eye-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The ear is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Sounds are impermanent,
for them you must abandon desire.

Ear-consciousness is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Ear-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The nose is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Scents are impermanent,
for them you must abandon desire.

Nose-consciousness is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Nose-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The tongue is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Savours are impermanent,
for them you must abandon desire.

Tongue-consciousness is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Tongue-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The body is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Tangibles are impermanent,
for them you must abandon desire.

Body-consciousness is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Body-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The mind is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Mind-states are impermanent,
for them you must abandon desire.

Mind-consciousness is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

Mind-contact is impermanent,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact is impermanent,

for that you must abandon desire.

■

What is impermanent,
you must abandon desire for that."

---

[1] For Rādha cf. K.S. iii, 66, §§ 155-63; Brethren, 115.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 77

Dukkha Suttaṃ (aka: Rādha Suttaṃ (ii))

Rādha (ii)

---

[26]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then the venerable Rādha came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me a teaching in brief, hearing which I might dwell
remote and earnest,
ardent and aspiring."

"What is Ill, Rādha, -
for that you must abandon desire.

And what is Ill, Radha?

The eye is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Objects are Ill,
for them you must abandon desire.

Eye-consciousness is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Eye-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The ear is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Sounds are Ill,
for them you must abandon desire.

Ear-consciousness is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Ear-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The nose is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Scents are Ill,
for them you must abandon desire.

Nose-consciousness is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Nose-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The tongue is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Savours are Ill,
for them you must abandon desire.

Tongue-consciousness is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Tongue-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The body is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Tangibles are Ill,
for them you must abandon desire.

Body-consciousness is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Body-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The mind is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Mind-states are Ill,
for them you must abandon desire.

Mind-consciousness is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

Mind-contact is Ill,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact is Ill,

for that you must abandon desire.

■

What is Ill,
you must abandon desire for that."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 78

Anatta Suttaṃ (aka: Rādha Suttaṃ (iii))

Rādha (iii)

---

[26]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then the venerable Rādha came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me a teaching in brief, hearing which I might dwell
remote and earnest,
ardent and aspiring."

"What is void of self, Rādha, -
for that you must abandon desire.

And what is void of self, Radha?

The eye is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Objects are void of self,
for them you must abandon desire.

Eye-consciousness is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Eye-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The ear is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Sounds are void of self,
for them you must abandon desire.

Ear-consciousness is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Ear-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The nose is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Scents are void of self,
for them you must abandon desire.

Nose-consciousness is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Nose-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The tongue is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Savours are void of self,
for them you must abandon desire.

Tongue-consciousness is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Tongue-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The body is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Tangibles are void of self,
for them you must abandon desire.

Body-consciousness is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Body-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

■

The mind is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Mind-states are void of self,
for them you must abandon desire.

Mind-consciousness is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

Mind-contact is void of self,
for that you must abandon desire.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact is void of self,

for that you must abandon desire.

■

What is void of self,
you must abandon desire for that."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 79

Paṭhama Avijjā Suttaṃ

Ignorance (i)

---

[49] [26]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Is there, lord, any one thing
which must be abandoned;
by abandoning which
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge springs up in a brother?"

"There is indeed, brother, one thing
which must be abandoned;
by abandoning which
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge springs up in a brother."

§

"What then lord, is that one thing
which must be abandoned;
by abandoning which
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge springs up in a brother?"

"Ignorance, brother, is that one thing
which must be abandoned;
by abandoning which
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge springs up in a brother."

§

"But how knowing, lord,
how seeing,
does a brother abandon ignorance
so that knowledge arises?"

"By knowing, by seeing eye as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing objects as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing eye-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to eye-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

■

By knowing, by seeing ear as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing sounds as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing ear-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to ear-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

■

By knowing, by seeing nose as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing scents as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing nose-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing nose-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to nose-contact as impermanent, brother,

ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

■

By knowing, by seeing tongue as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing savours as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing tongue-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to tongue-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

■

By knowing, by seeing body as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing tangibles as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing body-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing body-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to body-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

■

By knowing, by seeing mind as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing mind-states as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing mind-consciousness as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing mind-contact as impermanent, brother,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

By knowing, by seeing that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to mind-contact as impermanent, brother,

ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother.

So seeing, brother,
so knowing,
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge arises in a brother."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 80

Dutiya Avijjā Suttaṃ

Ignorance (ii)

---

[26]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Is there, lord, any one thing
which must be abandoned;
by abandoning which
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge springs up in a brother?"

"There is indeed, brother, one thing
which must be abandoned;
by abandoning which
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge springs up in a brother."

§

"What then lord, is that one thing
which must be abandoned;
by abandoning which
ignorance is abandoned
and knowledge springs up in a brother?"

§

"Herein, brother, it has been heard by a certain brother:

'All things ought not to be adhered to.'[1]

Then if that brother has heard,

'All things ought not to be adhered to,'

he fully understands the whole Norm.

Fully understanding it,
he [27] comprehends it.

Comprehending it,
he regards all phenomena[2] as changeable.

He regards the eye as changeable,
he regards objects as changeable,
he regards eye-consciousness as changeable,
he regards eye-contact as changeable, he regards that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to eye-contact as changeable.

■

He regards the ear as changeable,
he regards sounds as changeable,
he regards ear-consciousness as changeable,
he regards ear-contact as changeable,
he regards that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to ear-contact as changeable.

■

He regards the nose as changeable,
he regards scents as changeable,
he regards nose-consciousness as changeable,
he regards nose-contact as changeable,
he regards that weal

or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to nose-contact as changeable.

■

He regards the tongue as changeable,
he regards savours as changeable,
he regards tongue-consciousness as changeable,
he regards tongue-contact as changeable,
he regards that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to tongue-contact as changeable.

■

He regards the body as changeable,
he regards tangibles as changeable,
he regards body-consciousness as changeable,
he regards body-contact as changeable,
he regards that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to body-contact as changeable.

■

He regards the mind as changeable,
he regards mind-states as changeable,
he regards mind-consciousness as changeable,
he regards mind-contact as changeable,
he regards that weal
or woe
or neutral state
arising owing to mind-contact as changeable.

So knowing,
so seeing,
a brother abandons ignorance and knowledge arises in him."

---

[1] Dhammā nāḷaṇ abhinivesāya. Comy. 'Te-bhūmaka-dhammā (belonging to the three worlds of existence): na yuttā abhinivesatthaṇ parāmasā-gāhena ganhituṇ' - i.e., ought not to be taken hold of by way of mental bias, with wrongful view.

[2] Sabba-nimittāni aññato, by way of 'otherness.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 81

Sambahula-Bhikkhu Suttaṃ

A Brother[1]

---

[50] [27]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then a number of brethren came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him

saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As they sat at one side those brethren said to the Exalted One: -

"Now here, lord, the wandering sectarians thus question us:

'What is the object, friend,
for which the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, lord,
we thus make answer to those wandering sectarians:

'It is for the full knowledge of ill that the holy life is lived under the rule of the Exalted One.'

Pray, lord, when, thus questioned,[2]
we so make answer,
do we state the views of the Exalted One,
without misrepresenting the Exalted One
by stating an untruth?

Do we answer in accordance with his teaching,
so that no one who agrees with his teaching
and follows his views
could incur reproach?"

"Truly, Brethren, when thus questioned
you thus make answer,
ye do state my views
without misrepresenting me
by stating an untruth.

You do answer in accordance with my teaching,
so that no one who agrees with my teaching and follows my views

could incur reproach
in stating that it is for the full knowledge of ill that the holy life is lived under my rule.

But if, Brethren, the wandering sectarians should thus question you:

'But what, friend, is that ill, for the full knowledge of which
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse?' - thus questioned ye should answer thus:

'The eye, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Objects, friend, are ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Eye-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Eye-contact, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

"That weal or woe or neutral state that arises through eye-contact,
that also, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

■

The ear, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Sounds, friend, are ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Ear-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Ear-contact, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

"That weal or woe or neutral state that arises through ear-contact,
that also, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

■

The nose, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Scents, friend, are ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Nose-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Nose-contact, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

"That weal or woe or neutral state that arises through nose-contact,
that also, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

■

The tongue, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Savours, friend, are ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Tongue-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Tongue-contact, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

"That weal or woe or neutral state that arises through tongue-contact,
that also, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

■

The body, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Tangibles, friend, are ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Body-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Body-contact, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

"That weal or woe or neutral state that arises through body-contact,
that also, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

■

The mind, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Mind-states, friend, are ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Mind-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

Mind-contact, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.

"That weal or woe or neutral state that arises through mind-contact,
that also, friend, is ill.

For full knowledge of that
the holy life is lived under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

■

Thus questioned, Brethren, by those wandering sectarians, thus should ye make answer."

---

[1] Cf. § 151.

[2] Cf. K.S. ii, 28; iii, 100.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 82

Loka Suttaṃ

The World

---

[52] [28]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side that brother said to the Exalted One: -

"'The world! The world!'[1] is the saying, lord.

How far, lord, does this saying go?"

It crumbles away, brother.

Therefore it is called "the world."

§

What crumbles away?

'The eye, brother, crumbles away,
objects crumble away,
eye-consciousness crumbles away,
eye-contact crumbles away,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through eye-contact, brother, that also crumbles away.

■

The ear, brother, crumbles away, sounds, crumble away,
ear-consciousness crumbles away,
ear-contact crumbles away,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through ear-contact,
that also crumbles away.

■

The nose, brother, crumbles away,
scents, crumble away,

nose-consciousness, crumbles away,
nose-contact, crumbles away,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through nose-contact,
that also crumbles away.

■

The tongue, brother, crumbles away,
savours, crumble away,
tongue-consciousness, crumbles away,
tongue-contact, crumbles away,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through tongue-contact,
that also crumbles away.

■

The body, brother, crumbles away,
tangibles, crumble away,
body-consciousness, crumbles away, body-contact, crumbles away,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through body-contact,
that also crumbles away.

■

The mind, brother, crumbles away, mind-states, crumble away,
mind-consciousness, crumbles away,
mind-contact, crumbles away,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through mind-contact,
that also crumbles away.

It crumbles away, brother.

Therefore it is called 'the world.'"

[1] Loko, lujjati. Cf. K.S. iii, 117, n. 4; supra. § 68; infra. § 116 (for Ānanda'a explanation).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
3. Gilāna Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Sick Man

Sutta 83

Phagguna Suttaṃ

Phagguna

---

[52] [28]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then the venerable Phagguna[1] came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side the venerable Phagguna said to the Exalted One: -

"Is there, lord, an eye,
by which seeing
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,[2]
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill?

Is there, lord, an ear,
by which hearing
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill?

Is there, lord, a nose,
by which smelling
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill?

Is there, lord, a tongue,
by which tasting
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),

ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill?

Is there, lord, a body,
by which touching
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill?

Is there, lord, a mind,
by which cognizing
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill?"

§

"There is no such eye, Phagguna,
by which seeing
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill.

There is no such ear, Phagguna,
by which hearing
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill.

There is no such nose, Phagguna,
by which smelling
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill.

There is no such tongue, Phagguna,
by which tasting
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill.

There is no such body, Phagguna,
by which touching
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill.

There is no such mind, Phagguna,
by which cognizing
one could recognize and proclaim the past Buddhas,
those who have passed away,
who have broken down the hindrances,
cut off the road (of craving),
ended the round of rebirth,
escaped from all ill."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. ii, 9 for another of this name.

[2] Chinna-papañca. Vaṭuma = taṇhā-vaṭuma. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 84

Paloka-Dhamma Suttaṃ

Transitory

---

[53] [28]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then the venerable Ānanda came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side the venerable Ānanda said to the Exalted One: -

"'The world! The world!' is the saying, lord.

Pray how far, lord, does this saying go?"

[29] "What is transitory[1] by nature, Ānanda, is called 'the world' in the Ariyan discipline.

And what, Ānanda, is transitory by nature?

The eye, Ānanda, is transitory by nature, objects are transitory by nature,
eye-consciousness is transitory by nature,
eye-contact is transitory by nature,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through eye-contact, brother, that also is transitory by nature.

■

The ear, Ānanda, is transitory by nature, sounds, are transitory by nature,
ear-consciousness is transitory by nature,
ear-contact is transitory by nature,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through ear-contact,
that also is transitory by nature.

■

The nose, Ānanda, is transitory by nature, scents, are transitory by nature, nose-consciousness, is transitory by nature, nose-contact, is transitory by nature,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through nose-contact,
that also is transitory by nature.

■

The tongue, Ānanda, is transitory by nature,
savours, are transitory by nature, tongue-consciousness, is transitory by nature, tongue-contact, is transitory by nature,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through tongue-contact,
that also is transitory by nature.

■

The body, Ānanda, is transitory by nature, tangibles, are transitory by nature,
body-consciousness, is transitory by nature,
body-contact, is transitory by nature,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through body-contact,
that also is transitory by nature.

■

The mind, Ānanda, is transitory by nature,
mind-states, are transitory by nature,
mind-consciousness, is transitory by nature, mind-contact, is transitory by nature,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through mind-contact,
that also is transitory by nature.

What is thus transitory, Ānanda, is called 'the world' in the Arivan discipline."

---

[1] Paloka-dhamma = bhijjanaka, Comy., and at Par. Jot., Comy. 506, palokinaṇ jara-maraṇehi palu-j-jana-dhammaṇ. Cf. S. iii, 167 (K.S. iii, 143 n.).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 85

Suñña Loka Suttaṃ

Void

---

[54] [29]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then the venerable Ānanda came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side the venerable Ānanda said to the Exalted One: -

"'Void[1] is the world! Void is the world!' is the saying, lord.

Pray how far, lord, does this saying go?"

"Because the world is void of the self, Ānanda, or of what belongs to the self,[2] therefore is it said
'Void is the world.'

And what, Ānanda, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self?

'The eye, Ānanda, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
objects are void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
eye-consciousness is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
eye-contact is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through eye-contact, brother,
that also is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self.

■

The ear, Ānanda, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
sounds, are void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
ear-consciousness is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
ear-contact is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through ear-contact,

that also is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self.

■

The nose, Ānanda, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
scents, are void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
nose-consciousness, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
nose-contact, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through nose-contact,
that also is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self.

■

The tongue, Ānanda, is transitory by nature,
savours, are void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
tongue-consciousness, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
tongue-contact, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through tongue-contact,
that also is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self.

■

The body, Ānanda, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
tangibles, are void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
body-consciousness, is void of the self,

or of what belongs to the self,
body-contact, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through body-contact,
that also is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self.

■

The mind, Ānanda, is transitory by nature, mind-states, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
mind-consciousness, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
mind-contact, is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self,
that weal or woe or neutral state that arises through mind-contact,
that also is void of the self,
or of what belongs to the self.

Because the world is void of the self, Ānanda,
or of what belongs to the self,
therefore is it said
'Void is the world.'"

---

[1] Cf. Pts. of Controv., 58, 62: V.M. ii, 653; Buddhism (Mrs. Rhys Davids), 52.

[2] Attaniya. Comy. attano santkena parikkhārena - i.e., void of any property belonging to the self.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 86

Sankhitta-Dhamma Suttaṃ

In Brief

---

[54] [29]

At Sāvatthī was the occasion (for this discourse)

Then the venerable Ānanda came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side the venerable Ānanda said to the Exalted One: -

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me a teaching in brief, hearing which teaching from the Exalted One
I might dwell solitary, remote,
earnest,
ardent
and aspiring."

"Now what think you, Ānanda?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from eye-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Ānanda?

"Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from ear-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Ānanda?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Ānanda?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Ānanda?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are things tactile permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Ānanda?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are mind-states permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from mind-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

[14] "So seeing, Ānanda, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, Ānanda, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, Ānanda, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, Ānanda, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, Ānanda, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, Ānanda, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 87

Channa Suttaṃ

Channa

---

[55] [30]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
in Bamboo Grove,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Now at that time the venerable Sāriputta the venerable Cunda, the Great[1] and the venerable Channa,[2] were staying on Vulture's Peak.

At that time the venerable Channa was sick,
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

Then the venerable Sāriputta,
at eventide rising from his solitude, went to visit the venerable Cunda,
and on coming to him said:

"Let us go, friend Cunda, to visit the venerable Channa and ask about his sickness."

And the venerable Cunda the Great assented, saying,

"Very well, friend."

So they two went to visit the venerable Channa, and on reaching him sat down on a seat made ready.

On sitting down
the venerable Sāriputta said to the venerable Channa:

"Well, friend, I hope you are bearing up.

I hope you are enduring.

Do your pains abate and not increase?

Are there signs of their abating and not increasing?"[3]

"No, friend Sāriputta.

I am not bearing up.

I am not enduring.

Strong pains come upon me.

They do not abate.

There is no sign of their abating,
but of their increasing.

Just as if, friend,
a strong man[4] with a sharp-pointed sword were crashing into my brain, just so, friend, does the strong rush of vital air torment my brain.

No, friend, I am not bearing up,
I am not enduring.

Just as if, friend,
a skilful butcher or butcher's 'prentice with a sharp butcher's knife were ripping up my belly, even [31] so strong, friend,
are the winds that rack my belly.

No, friend, I am not bearing up,
I am not enduring.

Just as if, friend,
two strong men
should lay hold of some weaker man, seizing him each by an arm,
and should scorch and burn him in a pit of glowing charcoal,

even so scorching, friend,
is the burning in my body.

No, friend, I am not bearing up,
I am not enduring.

Strong pains come upon me.

They do not abate.

There is no sign of their abating,
but of their increasing.

I'll use the knife,[5] friend Sāriputta!

I wish to live no longer."

■

"Let not the venerable Channa use the knife.

Let the venerable Channa bear up.

We want the venerable Channa to bear up.

If the venerable Channa has no proper food,
I will search for proper food for him.

If the venerable Channa has no proper medicine,
I will search for proper medicine for him.

If he has no fit attendants,
I will wait on the venerable Channa.

Let not the venerable Channa use the knife.

Let him bear up.

We want the venerable Channa to bear up."

■

"No, friend Sāriputta.

I am not without proper food.

I have it.

I am not without proper medicine.

I have it.

I am not without fit attendants.

I have them.

I myself, friend, waited on the Master
for many a long day
with service that was delightful,
not tedious.

That, friend, is the proper thing for a disciple to do."

'In so far as he served the Master with a service that was delightful,
not tedious,
blameless[6] (must be accounted)
the brother Channa's use of the knife':

so should you uphold, friend Sāriputta."

§

"We would ask a question of the venerable Channa on a [32] certain point, if the venerable Channa gives permission for questioning and expounding."

"Ask, friend Sāriputta.

Hearing we shall understand."

"Now as to eye, friend Channa,
eye-consciousness
and states cognizable by eye-consciousness, -
do you regard it thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?

■

As to ear, friend Channa,
ear-consciousness
and states cognizable by ear-consciousness, -
do you regard it thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?

■

As to nose, friend Channa,
nose-consciousness

and states cognizable by nose-consciousness, -
do you regard it thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?

■

As to tongue, friend Channa,
tongue-consciousness
and states cognizable by tongue-consciousness, -
do you regard it thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?

■

As to body, friend Channa,
body-consciousness
and states cognizable by body-consciousness, -
do you regard it thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?

■

As to mind, friend Channa,
mind-consciousness
and states cognizable by mind-consciousness, -
do you regard it thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self'?"

■

"As to eye, friend Sāriputta,
eye-consciousness
and states cognizable by eye-consciousness, -
I regard it thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to ear, friend Sāriputta,
ear-consciousness
and states cognizable by ear-consciousness, -
I regard it thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to nose, friend Sāriputta,
nose-consciousness
and states cognizable by nose-consciousness, -
I regard it thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to tongue, friend Sāriputta,
tongue-consciousness
and states cognizable by tongue-consciousness, -
I regard it thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to body, friend Sāriputta,
body-consciousness
and states cognizable by body-consciousness, -
I regard it thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to mind, friend Sāriputta,
mind-consciousness
and states cognizable by mind-consciousness, -
I regard it thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'."

■

"Now, friend Channa,
as to eye,
eye-consciousness,
and states cognizable by eye-consciousness,[ed1]
seeing what,
comprehending what,
do you regard
eye,
eye-consciousness,
and states cognizable by eye-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to ear,
ear-consciousness,
and states cognizable by ear-consciousness,
seeing what,
comprehending what,

do you regard
ear,
ear-consciousness,
and states cognizable by ear-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to nose,
nose-consciousness,
and states cognizable by nose-consciousness,
seeing what,
comprehending what,
do you regard
nose,
nose-consciousness,
and states cognizable by nose-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to tongue,
tongue-consciousness,
and states cognizable by tongue-consciousness,
seeing what,
comprehending what,
do you regard

tongue,
tongue-consciousness,
and states cognizable by tongue-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to body,
body-consciousness,
and states cognizable by body-consciousness,
seeing what,
comprehending what,
do you regard
body,
body-consciousness,
and states cognizable by body-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to mind,
mind-consciousness,
and states cognizable by mind-consciousness,
seeing what,
comprehending what,
do you regard
mind,

mind-consciousness,
and states cognizable by mind-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'."

■

"As to eye, friend Sāriputta,
eye-consciousness,
and states cognizable by eye-consciousness,
seeing ceasing to be,
comprehending ceasing to be
do I regard
eye,
eye-consciousness,
and states cognizable by eye-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to ear,
ear-consciousness,
and states cognizable by ear-consciousness,
seeing ceasing to be,
comprehending ceasing to be
do I regard
ear,

ear-consciousness,
and states cognizable by ear-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to nose,
nose-consciousness,
and states cognizable by nose-consciousness,
seeing ceasing to be,
comprehending ceasing to be
do I regard
nose,
nose-consciousness,
and states cognizable by nose-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to tongue,
tongue-consciousness,
and states cognizable by tongue-consciousness,
seeing ceasing to be,
comprehending ceasing to be
do I regard
tongue,

tongue-consciousness,
and states cognizable by tongue-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to body,
body-consciousness,
and states cognizable by body-consciousness,
seeing ceasing to be,
comprehending ceasing to be
do I regard
body,
body-consciousness,
and states cognizable by body-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'.

■

As to mind,
mind-consciousness,
and states cognizable by mind-consciousness,
seeing ceasing to be,
comprehending ceasing to be
do I regard
mind,

mind-consciousness,
and states cognizable by mind-consciousness thus:

'This is not mine.

This is not I.

This is not my self'."

§

At these words the venerable Cunda the Great[7]
thus addressed the venerable Channa:

"Wherefore, friend Channa, you ought to ever bear in mind
the teaching of that Exalted One,
to wit: -

'In him that clingeth,[8]
there is wavering.

In him that clingeth not,
wavering is not.

Where is no wavering,
there is calm.

Where is calm,
there is no bent.

Where is no bent,
there is no wrong practice.[9]

Where is no wrong practice, there is no vanishing and reappearing.[10]

If there be no vanishing and reappearing, there is no here
nor yonder
nor yet midway.

That is the end of ill.'"

[33] Thereupon the venerable Sāriputta and the venerable Cunda the Great,
when this discourse was uttered,
rose from their seats and went away.

But the venerable Channa,
not long after the going of those venerable ones, used the knife.[11]

§

Now the venerable Sāriputta came to see the Exalted One,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Sāriputta said to the Exalted One: -

"Lord, the venerable Channa has used the knife.

What is his rebirth?

What is his attainment?"

"Was it not face to face with you, Sāriputta, that the brother Channa declared that no blame attached to him?"

"Yes, lord.

But there is a village of the Vajjis called Pubbavijjhanam,
and there dwell clansmen of the venerable Channa,
who are friends and dear comrades to him, clansmen who are to be blamed."[12]

"True, Sāriputta.

There are these clansmen,
friends and dear comrades of the brother Channa,
who are to be blamed.

Nevertheless, Sāriputta,
I am not one to reproach him, saying

'He is to blame.'

For whoso, Sāriputta, lays down one body
and takes up another body, of him I say

'He is to blame.'

But it is not so with the brother Channa.

Without reproach was the knife used by the brother Channa.

So should you maintain, Sāriputta."

---

[1] Younger brother of Sāriputta and one of the chief elders. Cf. Brethren, 119.

[2] Comy. says it is not the Channa (master of his horse) of the Buddha's 'forthgoing' (Cf. K.S. iii, 11 (sic. 111) n.) but another. *Cf. M.*ii, 193; iii, 260.

[3] Cf. supra. § 74.

[4] The stock epithets for unbearable pain. Cf. M. i, 243 (trans. in my Some Sayings of the Buddha, p. 20 ff.).

[5] Cf. K.S. i, 150 n.; iii, 105 n. I have discussed the ethics of suicide at some length in an article in the Buddhist Annual of Ceylon, 1922, and with reference to this episode. Cf. in this connexion, Edmunds, Buddhist and Christian Gospels, ii, 58, where I think he is wrong in regarding the deed as a sacrifice, for he misses the point of the Master's reply.

[6] Anupavajjaṇ. Here Comy. says anupavattikaṇ appaṭisandhikaṇ (not irremediable). See the Master's pronouncement at the end of the section.

[7] Comy. remarks that Sāriputta was aware, in spite of this reply, of the fact that Channa was still unperfected, but made no remark thereon, while Cunda, with the intention of testing him, gave him this sermon.

[8] To taṇhā-māna-diṭṭhi. Comy. 'As you feel your pains you waver, therefore you are still unconverted,' says the elder.

[9] Agati-gali.

[10] Cut'upapāto, in successive rebirths.

[11] 'Severed his wind-pipe. But that very moment fear overcame him and warning of his doom (gati-nimātaṇ). So, conscious of his unconverted state, he quickly applied insight, mastered the activities, attained Arahantship, and made an end of life and craving (samasīsiṇ hutvā and was so released.' The facts could not have been known, and it seems a rather desperate effort to work up a satisfactory reason for this supposed attainment. Cf. Comy. on v. 381 of Dhammapada, the case of Vakkhali.

[12] Upavajjana-kulāni. Comy. explains by upaaañ kamiabbakulāni, they have to be visited, and the constant intercourse with laymen was forbidden. They are to blame for this, not the elder.

[ed1] Woodward alters his translation here to: "... things cognizable by eye-consciousness that is in the eye, -" but the Pali text is the same as above. I am altering his translation to conform to the repetition found in the Pali.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 88

Puṇṇa Suttaṃ

Puṇṇa

---

[60] [34]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's, Park.[ed1]

Then the venerable Puṇṇa[1] came to see the Exalted One,
saluted him,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the venerable Puṇṇa said to the Exalted One: -

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me a teaching in brief,
hearing which teaching from the Exalted One
I might dwell solitary,
remote,
earnest,
ardent
and aspiring."

"There are objects,[2] Puṇṇa, cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of such,
if he welcome them,
persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the arising of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are sounds, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of such,
if he welcome them,
persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the arising of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are scents, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of such,
if he welcome them,
persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the arising of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are savours, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of such,
if he welcome them,
persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the arising of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are things tangible, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of such,
if he welcome them,
persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the arising of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are mind-states, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of such,
if he welcome them,
persist in clinging to them,
so enamoured,
so persisting in clinging to them,
there comes a lure upon him.

The arising of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the arising of ill.

So I declare.

§

"There are objects, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of such,
if he welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured,
thus not persisting in clinging to them,
the lure comes to cease.

The ceasing of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the ceasing of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are sounds, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of such,
if he welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured,

thus not persisting in clinging to them,
the lure comes to cease.

The ceasing of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the ceasing of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are scents, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of such,
if he welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured,
thus not persisting in clinging to them,
the lure comes to cease.

The ceasing of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the ceasing of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are savours, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of such,
if he welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured,
thus not persisting in clinging to them,
the lure comes to cease.

The ceasing of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the ceasing of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are things tangible, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of such,
if he welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured,
thus not persisting in clinging to them,
the lure comes to cease.

The ceasing of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the ceasing of ill.

So I declare.

■

There are mind-states, Puṇṇa, cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of such,
if he welcome them not,
persist not in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured,
thus not persisting in clinging to them,
the lure comes to cease.

The ceasing of the lure, Puṇṇa,
is the ceasing of ill.

So I declare.

§

Now, Puṇṇa,
after being instructed by me
with this teaching in brief, tell me in what district you will be dwelling."

[35] "There is a district, lord, called Sunāparanta.[3]

That is where I shall be dwelling."|| ||

"Hotheaded, Puṇṇa, are the men of Sunāparanta.|| ||

Fierce, Puṇṇa, are the men of Sunāparanta.|| ||

If the men of Sunāparanta abuse and revile you, Puṇṇa, how will it be with you?"[4]|| ||

"If the men of Sunāparanta abuse and revile me, lord,
I shall feel thus of them:

'Kindly indeed are the men of Sunāparanta.

Very kindly are the men of Sunāparanta
in that they do not smite me a blow with their hands.'

That is how it will be with me, then, 0 Exalted One.

That is how it will be with me then, O Happy One."

■

"But if, Puṇṇa, those men of Sunāparanta smite you a blow with their hands, how will it be with you then, Puṇṇa?"

Why in such case, lord,
this is how it will be with me:

'Kindly indeed are the men of Sunāparanta.

Very kindly are the men of Sunāparanta
in that they do not throw clods of earth at me.'

That is how it will be with me, then, 0 Exalted One.

That is how it will be with me then, O Happy One."

■

"But suppose, Puṇṇa, that they throw clods at you, how will it be with you then, Puṇṇa?"

"Why in such case, lord,
this is how it will be with me:

'Kindly indeed are the men of Sunāparanta.

Very kindly are the men of Sunāparanta in that they do not beat me with a stick'

That is how it will be with me, then, 0 Exalted One.

That is how it will be with me then, O Happy One."

■

"But if they do beat you with a stick, Puṇṇa., how will it be with you then, Puṇṇa?"

"Why in such case, lord,
this is how it will be with me:

'Kindly indeed are the men of Sunāparanta.

Very kindly are the men of Sunāparanta in that they do not strike me with a sword.'

That is how it will be with me, then, 0 Exalted One.

That is how it will be with me then, O Happy One."

■

"But if they do strike you with a sword, Puṇṇa, how will it be with you then, Puṇṇa?"

"Why in such case, lord,
this is how it will be with me:

'Kindly indeed are the men of Sunāparanta.

Very kindly are the men of Sunāparanta in that they do not slay me with a sharp sword.'

That is how it will be with me, then, 0 Exalted One.

That is how it will be with me then, O Happy One."

■

[36] "But suppose they do slay you with a sharp sword, Puṇṇa, how will it be with you then, Puṇṇa?"

"Then, lord, I shall think:

'There are disciples of that Exalted One who, when tormented by,[5] ashamed of,
disgusted with,
body and life,
have resort to stabbing themselves.[6]

Now I have come by a stabbing that I never sought.'|| ||

That is how it will be with me, then, 0 Exalted One.

That is how it will be with me then, O Happy One."

"Well said! Well said, Puṇṇa!

Possessed of such self control as this,
you will be well able to dwell
in the district of the folk of Sunāparanta.

So now, Puṇṇa,
do what you think it time for."[7]

§

Thereupon the venerable Puṇṇa welcomed the words of the Exalted One,
and took pleasure therein,
and rising from his seat
he saluted the Exalted One by the right.

Then he set his lodging in order,
and taking bowl and robe
went off on his wanderings to the district of Sunāparanta.

And so wandering on,
reached it,
and there the venerable Puṇṇa stayed in the district of Sunāparanta.

And during that rainy season
the venerable Puṇṇa established in the Norm as many as five hundred devotees.

In that same rainy season
he realized the threefold knowledge.

In that same rainy season he passed finally away.

Now a number of brethren came to the Exalted One,
saluted him,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side those brethren said to the Exalted One: -

"Lord, that clansman named Puṇṇa, who was taught with a teaching in brief by the Exalted One,
is dead.

What is his rebirth?

What is his attainment?"

"A sage, Brethren, was Puṇṇa the clansman.

He lived in accordance with the Norm.

He did not hurt me with disputings about the Norm.

Puṇṇa, Brethren, has passed finally away."[8]

---

[1] For Puṇṇa see M. iii, 267 (J.P.T.S., 1887, p. 23): Brethren, 70-1; Poussin, Bouddhisme, p. 275 ff.; Bumouf, Introduction to Bouddhisme Indien, p. 235 ff. (Légende de Purṇa); Divyāvadāna, 37-9. It is possible he is the Puṇṇa Mantāni-putta who was one of the ten great disciples. Cf. K.S. iii, 89.

[2] Cf. supra, § 63.

[3] Bumouf, op. cit., p. 252 n. (who translates the whole sutta), discusses the situation of this place. Aparantaka is mentioned at Mahāvaṇsa, P.T.S. (Geiger), p. 85.

[4] Tatra te kinti bhavissati. We might translate 'what will you think?' Cf. tatra me evaṇ ahosi, 'thus it occurred to me.'
This graduated scale of ill-treatment follows the stock formula for such cases. Cf. the Buddha's advice to Phagguna at M. i, 124.

[5] Aṭṭiyamānā. Text has wrongly atthiyamānā.

[6] Contrary to the ordinances of Vinaya. The Sanskrit version which Bumouf (Story of Purṇa) translates has 'take poison, hang themselves, cast themselves down from precipices': but for the next sentence, 'I shall think them kind for delivering me from this "excrementitious" body.'

[7] Yassa dāni tvaṇ kālaṇ maññasi. The usual formula of dismissal.

[8] The same words are said of Suppabuddha, the leper, at Udāna, v, 3.

[ed1] The Pali begins "There then ..." which would indicate by reference to the previous sutta that this sutta was delevered in Rājagaha, but at MN 145 the same story is located here.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 89

Bāhiya Suttaṃ

Bāhiya

---

[63] [37]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's, Park.[ed1]

Then the venerable Bāiya[1] came to see the Exalted One,
saluted him,
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the venerable Bāiya said to the Exalted One: -

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me a teaching in brief,
hearing which teaching from the Exalted One
I might dwell solitary,
remote,
earnest,
ardent
and aspiring."

"Now what think you, Bāiya?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from eye-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

Now what think ye, Bāiya?

"Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from ear-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

Now what think ye, Bāiya?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness permanetn
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

Now what think ye, Bāiya?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Bāiya?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are things tactile permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Bāiya?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are mind-states permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from mind-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

---

[14] So seeing, Bāiya, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, Bāiya, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, Bāiya, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, Bāiya, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, Bāiya, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, Bāiya, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§

Then the venerable Bāiya was delighted with the words of the Exalted One welcomed the words of the Exalted One,
and took pleasure therein,
and rising from his seat
he saluted the Exalted One by the right.

Then the venerable Bāiya,
dwelling solitary,
remote,
earnest,
ardent
and aspiring,
in no long time attained that goal

for which the clansmen rightly leave home for the homeless life, even that unrivalled goal of righteous living;
attained it even in that very life,
and knowing it for himself,
realizing it for himself,
abode therein,
so that he came to know:

"Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter."

And the venerable Bāiya was yet another of the Arahants.

---

[1] Cf. Uddna, i, 10, where a brother of this name was called Dārucīriya, because he wore a dress of bark.

[ed1] The Pali begins "There then ..." which would indicate by reference to the previous sutta which in the text has a similar nidana, that this sutta was delevered in Rājagaha, the location of the sutta prior to that one. But the previous sutta was, according to MN 145 actually delivered in Sāvatthi, so I take it that this "There..." indicates Sāvatthi, not Rājagaha.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 90

Paṭhama Ejā Suttaṃ

Passion (i)

---

[64] [37]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Passion,[1] Brethren, is a disease.

Passion is an imposthume.

Passion is a dart.

Therefore, Brethren, the Tathāgata abides passionless and unwounded.

Wherefore, Brethren, if one should so desire,
he also might abide passionless and unwounded.

He should have no conceit[2]
of being the eye,
in the eye,
or by way of the eye.

He [38] should not imagine:

'I have an eye.'

He should have no conceit
of being an object
or in an object
or by way of an object.

He should not imagine:

'I have an object.'

He should have no conceit
of being eye-consciousness

or in eye-consciousness
or by way of eye-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have eye-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being eye-contact
or in eye-contact
or by way of eye-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have eye-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through eye-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He should have no conceit
of being the ear
or in the ear
or by way of the ear.

He should not imagine:

'I have an ear.'

He should have no conceit
of being a sound

or in a sound
or by way of a sound.

He should not imagine:

'I have a sound.'

He should have no conceit
of being ear-consciousness
or in ear-consciousness
or by way of ear-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have ear-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being ear-contact
or in ear-contact
or by way of ear-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have ear-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through ear-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He should have no conceit
of being the nose

or in the nose
or by way of the nose.

He should not imagine:

'I have an nose.'

He should have no conceit
of being a scent
or in a scent
or by way of a scent.

He should not imagine:

'I have a scent.'

He should have no conceit
of being nose-consciousness
or in nose-consciousness
or by way of nose-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have nose-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being nose-contact
or in nose-contact
or by way of nose-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have nose-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through nose-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that

or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He should have no conceit
of being the tongue
or in the tongue
or by way of the tongue.

He should not imagine:

'I have an tongue.'

He should have no conceit
of being a savour
or in a savour
or by way of a savour.

He should not imagine:

'I have a savour.'

He should have no conceit
of being tongue-consciousness
or in tongue-consciousness
or by way of tongue-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have tongue-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being tongue-contact
or in tongue-contact
or by way of tongue-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have tongue-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through tongue-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He should have no conceit
of being the body
or in the body
or by way of the body.

He should not imagine:

'I have a body.'

He should have no conceit
of being a thing tactile
or in a thing tactile
or by way of a thing tactile.

He should not imagine:

'I have a thing tactile.'

He should have no conceit
of being body-consciousness
or in body-consciousness
or by way of body-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have body-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being body-contact
or in body-contact
or by way of body-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have body-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through body-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He should have no conceit
of being the mind
or in the mind
or by way of the mind.

He should not imagine:

'I have a mind.'

He should have no conceit of being a mind-state
or in a mind-state
or by way of a mind-state.

He should not imagine:

'I have a mind-state.'

He should have no conceit
of being mind-consciousness
or in mind-consciousness
or by way of mind-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have mind-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being mind-contact
or in mind-contact
or by way of mind-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have mind-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through mind-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

■

He should have no conceit
of being the all
or in the all
or by way of the all.

He should not think:

'The all is mine'.

§

Thus having no conceits
he grasps at nothing in the world.

Being free from grasping
he is not troubled.

Being untroubled
he is himself
by himself
set free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Here ejā, says Comy., is a name for taṇhā in its meaning of 'transience' (cal'aṭṭhena), i.e. as motion opposed to calm dispassion. It is gaṇḍa because of its corruption. It is sallaṇ because it slays.

[2] Na maññeyya. The whole as in § 30 supra.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 91

Dutiya Ejā Suttaṃ

Passion (ii)[1]

---

[66] [38]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Passion, Brethren, is a disease.

Passion is an imposthume.

Passion is a dart.

Therefore, Brethren, the Tathāgata abides passionless and unwounded.

Wherefore, Brethren, if one should so desire,
he also might abide passionless and unwounded.

He should have no conceit
of being the eye,
in the eye,
or by way of the eye.

He should not imagine:

'I have an eye.'

He should have no conceit
of being an object
or in an object
or by way of an object.

He should not imagine:

'I have an object.'

He should have no conceit
of being eye-consciousness

or in eye-consciousness
or by way of eye-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have eye-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being eye-contact
or in eye-contact
or by way of eye-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have eye-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through eye-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He should have no conceit
of being the ear
or in the ear
or by way of the ear.

He should not imagine:

'I have an ear.'

He should have no conceit
of being a sound
or in a sound
or by way of a sound.

He should not imagine:

'I have a sound.'

He should have no conceit
of being ear-consciousness
or in ear-consciousness
or by way of ear-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have ear-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being ear-contact
or in ear-contact
or by way of ear-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have ear-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through ear-contact, -

he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He should have no conceit
of being the nose
or in the nose
or by way of the nose.

He should not imagine:

'I have an nose.'

He should have no conceit
of being a scent
or in a scent
or by way of a scent.

He should not imagine:

'I have a scent.'

He should have no conceit
of being nose-consciousness
or in nose-consciousness
or by way of nose-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have nose-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being nose-contact
or in nose-contact
or by way of nose-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have nose-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through nose-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He should have no conceit
of being the tongue
or in the tongue
or by way of the tongue.

He should not imagine:

'I have an tongue.'

He should have no conceit
of being a savour
or in a savour
or by way of a savour.

He should not imagine:

'I have a savour.'

He should have no conceit
of being tongue-consciousness
or in tongue-consciousness
or by way of tongue-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have tongue-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being tongue-contact
or in tongue-contact
or by way of tongue-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have tongue-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through tongue-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He should have no conceit
of being the body
or in the body
or by way of the body.

He should not imagine:

'I have a body.'

He should have no conceit
of being a thing tactile
or in a thing tactile
or by way of a thing tactile.

He should not imagine:

'I have a thing tactile.'

He should have no conceit
of being body-consciousness
or in body-consciousness
or by way of body-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have body-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being body-contact
or in body-contact
or by way of body-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have body-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through body-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

§

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means

and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:

'It is mine', -

therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

He should have no conceit
of being the mind
or in the mind
or by way of the mind.

He should not imagine:

'I have a mind.'

He should have no conceit of being a mind-state
or in a mind-state
or by way of a mind-state.

He should not imagine:

'I have a mind-state.'

He should have no conceit
of being mind-consciousness
or in mind-consciousness
or by way of mind-consciousness.

He should not imagine:

'I have mind-consciousness.'

He should have no conceit
of being mind-contact
or in mind-contact
or by way of mind-contact.

He should not imagine:

'I have mind-contact.'

Whatever weal or woe or neutral state arises, experienced through mind-contact, -
he should have no conceit of being that,
or in that
or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Whatever conceit one has, Brethren,
and by whatsoever means
and in whatsoever way,
in thinking:
'It is mine', -
therein is instability.

The world delights in becoming
because it is based on change,
because it is entangled in becoming.

■

Even up to the sphere
of the factors of existence and the elements
one should have no conceit of being that,
or in that

or by way of that,
thinking:

'That is mine.'

Thus having no conceits
one grasps at nothing in the world.

Being free from grasping
he is not troubled.

Being untroubled
he is himself
by himself
set free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Cf. supra, § 31.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 92

Paṭhama Dvaya Suttaṃ

Duality (i)

---

[67] [38]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will show you a dual thing, brethren.

Do ye listen to it.

What is a dual thing, brethren?

Eye and object,
ear and sound,
nose and scent,
tongue [39] and savour,
body and tangibles,
mind and mind-states, -
that, Brethren, is called a dual.

He who should say:

'Rejecting this dual,
I will proclaim another dual,' -

it would be mere talk on his part,
and when questioned
he could not make good his boast,
and further would come to an ill pass.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, it would be beyond his scope.[1]

---

[1] supra §23

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
4. Channa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Channa and Others

Sutta 93

Dutiya Dvaya Suttaṃ

Duality (ii)[1]

---

[67] [39]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Owing to a dual (thing), Brethren, consciousness comes into being.

And what, Brethren, is that dual owing to which consciousness comes into being?

Owing to the eye and objects
arises eye-consciousness.

The eye is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'[2]

Objects are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'.

Thus this dual —
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent,
changing, -
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Eye-consciousness is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of eye-consciousness, -
they also are impermanent,

changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'

This eye-consciousness, arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Now the striking together,
the falling together,
the meeting together
of these three things, -
this, Brethren, is called 'eye-contact.'

Eye-contact is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of eye-contact, -
they also are impermanent.

This eye-contact,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Contacted, Brethren, one feels.

Contacted, one is aware.

Contacted, one perceives.

Thus these states also are
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent
and changing.

Their state is 'becoming otherness.'

■

Owing to the ear and sounds
arises ear-consciousness.

The ear is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Sounds are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'.

Thus this dual —
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent,
changing, -
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Ear-consciousness is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of ear-consciousness, -
they also are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'

This ear-consciousness,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Now the striking together,
the falling together,
the meeting together
of these three things, -
this, Brethren, is called 'ear-contact.'

Ear-contact is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of ear-contact, -
they also are impermanent.

This ear-contact,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Contacted, Brethren, one feels.

Contacted, one is aware.

Contacted, one perceives.

Thus these states also are
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent
and changing.

Their state is 'becoming otherness.'

■

Owing to the nose and scents
arises ear-consciousness.

The nose is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Scents are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'.

Thus this dual —
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent,
changing, -
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Nose-consciousness is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of nose-consciousness, -
they also are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'

This nose-consciousness,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Now the striking together,
the falling together,
the meeting together
of these three things, -
this, Brethren, is called 'nose-contact.'

Nose-contact is impermanent,
changing,

its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of nose-contact, -
they also are impermanent.

This nose-contact,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Contacted, Brethren, one feels.

Contacted, one is aware.

Contacted, one perceives.

Thus these states also are
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent
and changing.

Their state is 'becoming otherness.'

■

Owing to the tongue and savours
arises ear-consciousness.

The tongue is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Savours are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'.

Thus this dual —
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent,
changing, -
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Tongue-consciousness is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of tongue-consciousness, -
they also are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'

This tongue-consciousness,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Now the striking together,
the falling together,
the meeting together
of these three things, -
this, Brethren, is called 'tongue-contact.'

Tongue-contact is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of tongue-contact, -
they also are impermanent.

This tongue-contact,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -

how could it be permanent?

Contacted, Brethren, one feels.

Contacted, one is aware.

Contacted, one perceives.

Thus these states also are
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent
and changing.

Their state is 'becoming otherness.'

■

Owing to the body and tangibles
arises ear-consciousness.

The body is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Tangibles are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'.

Thus this dual —
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent,
changing, -
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Body-consciousness is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of body-consciousness, -
they also are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'

This body-consciousness,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Now the striking together,
the falling together,
the meeting together
of these three things, -
this, Brethren, is called 'body-contact.'

Body-contact is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of body-contact, -
they also are impermanent.

This body-contact,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Contacted, Brethren, one feels.

Contacted, one is aware.

Contacted, one perceives.

Thus these states also are
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent
and changing.

Their state is 'becoming otherness.'

■

Owing to the mind and mind-states
arises ear-consciousness.

The mind is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Mind-states are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'.

Thus this dual —
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent,
changing, -
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

Mind-consciousness is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of mind-consciousness, -
they also are impermanent,
changing,
their state is 'becoming otherness.'

This mind-consciousness,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Now the striking together,
the falling together,
the meeting together
of these three things, -
this, Brethren, is called 'mind-contact.'

Mind-contact is impermanent,
changing,
its state is 'becoming otherness.'

That condition,
that relation of the uprising of mind-contact, -
they also are impermanent.

This mind-contact,
arising as it does from an impermanent relation, -
how could it be permanent?

Contacted, Brethren, one feels.

Contacted, one is aware.

Contacted, one perceives.

Thus these states also are
mobile
and transitory,
impermanent
and changing.

Their state is 'becoming otherness.'

■

Thus, Brethren, owing to a dual, consciousness comes into being."

---

[1] Cf. M. i, 111; Buddh. Psych., p. 64.

[2] Aññathā-bhāvin. I borrow the translation of this term from Mrs. Rhys Davids.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 94

Cha-Phass'Āyatana (Paṭhama Saṇgayya) Suttaṃ

Including (The Sixfold Sense-Sphere) (i)[1]

[4] Sabbaṇ geha-sitaṇ (= geha-nissitaṇ vitakkaṇ. Comy.), 'connected with the household life.'

[5] Nekhhamma-sitaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 95

Māluṇkya-Putta (Dutiya Saṇgaya) Suttaṃ

Including (ii)

p.p. explains it all — p.p.

"Herein, then, of those things seen,
heard,
imagined,
cognizable,
in what is seen
you will have only the seen.

In what is heard
you will have only what is heard.

In the imagined
you will have only what is imagined.

In the cognized
you will have only what is cognized.

When, Mālunkya's Son, of those things seen,
heard,
imagined,
cognizable,
in what is seen
you will have only the seen.

In what is heard
you will have only what is heard.

In the imagined
you will have only what is imagined.

In the cognized
you will have only what is cognized,
you will have no 'thereby.'

As you will have no 'thereby,'
you will have no 'therein.'

As you, Mālunkya's Son will have no 'therein,' it follows that you will have no 'here' or 'beyond'
or 'midway between.'[4]

That is the end of ill."

"Indeed, lord, I understand in full the meaning of what the Exalted One has spoken in brief:[5]

Sight of fair shape bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Sound, bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Smell bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Taste bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Touch, bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

[44] Object, idea, bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,
And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow

Divers emotions rooted in idea,
Greed and aversion; and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say, -
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering: -
    Far from Nibbāna!

He who for things he sees no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he sees, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.

Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things he hears no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he hears, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things he smells no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he smells, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things he tastes no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he tastes, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things things touched no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he is touched, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things things felt no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he doth perceive, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

Indeed, lord, I understand in full the meaning of what the Exalted One has spoken in brief."

"Well said! Well said, Mālunkya's Son!

Well indeed do you understand in full the meaning of what I have spoken in brief: -

Sight of fair shape bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Sound, bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,

The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Smell bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Taste bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,
Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Touch, bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,

And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow
Divers emotions rooted in the sight,

Greed and aversion, and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say,
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering:
    Far from Nibbāna!

Object, idea, bewildering lucid thought,
If one but heed the image sweet and dear,
The heart inflamed in feeling doth o'erflow,
And clinging stayeth. Thus in him do grow

Divers emotions rooted in idea,
Greed and aversion; and the heart of him
Doth suffer grievously. Of him we say, -
Thus heaping store of pain and suffering: -
    Far from Nibbāna!

He who for things he sees no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he sees, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things he hears no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he hears, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things he smells no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he smells, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things he tastes no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he tastes, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things things touched no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he is touched, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.
Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

He who for things things felt no passion breeds,
But mindful, clear of head, can suffer sense,
With uninflamed heart, nor staying clings;

And as he doth perceive, so normally he feels;
For him no heaping up, but minishing:
Thus doth he heedfully pursue his way.

Of him, building no store of ill, we say: -
    Near is Nibbāna!

[45] That is how, Mālunkya's Son, you should regard in full the meaning of what I have said in brief."

Thereupon Mālunkya's Son welcomed what was said by the Exalted One and took pleasure therein.

And he rose from his seat,
saluted the Exalted One by the right
and went away.

And the venerable Mālunkya's Son,
dwelling solitary,
remote,
earnest,
ardent
and aspiring,
in no long time
attained that goal
for which the clansmen rightly leave home
for the homeless life,
even that unrivalled goal of righteous living,
attained it in that very life,
and knowing it for himself
abode therein,
so that he came to know:

"Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter."

And the venerable Mālunkya's Son was yet another of the Arahants.

---

[1] For Mālunkya's Son (Text has Mālukya, but Comy. Māluinkya) see Brethren, 212; M. 1, § 63; A. ii, 248. Again, at Brethren, 307, the stanzas summing up the teaching of the present section are given in full. Mrs. Rhys Davids has given so fine a rendering of them that I have ventured to include them here instead of my own.

[2] As in the passage at A. ii, 248, where he is given a teaching on taṇhā, Comy. says this brother had in his youth neglected the detailed teaching and fallen back. Yet now he asks for a comprehensive view of it. How can such a practice be advised to the young? The Master speaks thus both to depreciate and encourage him.

[3] Dāyāda.

[4] Cf. supra. § 87. That is, birth in this world, or that beyond, or the intermediate state: as you will have no grounds for rāga, dosa, moha.

[5] Here Malunkya's Son sums up the teaching, just given, in verses of his own, which the Master repeats with approval. In the last stanza of the English version, as in the second, the separate verses of the Pali are combined. [Ed. here unabridged.]

[ed1] In this and the following cases Woodward has abridged without indicating his preferred translation. I have inserted my best guess as to what he would have used.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 96

Parihāna-Dhamma Suttaṃ

Falling back[1]

---

[76] [45]

"I will teach you, brethren,
of one whose nature is to fall back,
and of one whose nature is not to fall back:
also the six[2] stations of the conqueror.

§

And how, brethren, is one of a nature to fall back?

Herein, brethren, at sight of an object,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and plans,[3]
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes that object,
rejects it not,
puts it not away,
wipes it not out,
does not make it go to utter destruction,
thus should a brother understand of it:

'In profitable states I fall back.

This was called by the Exalted One "falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on hearing a sound with the ear,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and plans,
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes that object,
rejects it not,
puts it not away,
wipes it not out,
does not make it go to utter destruction,
thus should a brother understand of it:

'In profitable states I fall back.

This was called by the Exalted One "falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on smelling a scent with the nose,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and plans,
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes that object,
rejects it not,
puts it not away,
wipes it not out,
does not make it go to utter destruction,
thus should a brother understand of it:

'In profitable states I fall back.

This was called by the Exalted One "falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on tasting a savour with the tongue,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and plans,
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes that object,
rejects it not,
puts it not away,
wipes it not out,
does not make it go to utter destruction,
thus should a brother understand of it:

'In profitable states I fall back.

This was called by the Exalted One "falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on feeling a tangible with the body,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and plans,
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes that object,
rejects it not,
puts it not away,
wipes it not out,
does not make it go to utter destruction,
thus should a brother understand of it:

'In profitable states I fall back.

This was called by the Exalted One "falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and plans,
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes that object,
rejects it not,
puts it not away,
wipes it not out,
does not make it go to utter destruction,
thus should a brother understand [46] of it:

'In profitable states I fall back.

This was called by the Exalted One "falling back."'

Such, brethren, is one whose nature is to fall back.

§

And how, brethren, is one of a nature not to fall back?

Herein, brethren, at sight of an object,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes not that object,
rejects it,
puts it away,
wipes it out,
makes it go to utter destruction,
thus should he understand of it:

'In profitable states I am not falling back.

This was called by the Exalted One
"not falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on hearing a sound with the ear,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes not that object,
rejects it,
puts it away,

wipes it out,
makes it go to utter destruction,
thus should he understand of it:

'In profitable states I am not falling back.

This was called by the Exalted One
"not falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on smelling a scent with the nose,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes not that object,
rejects it,
puts it away,
wipes it out,
makes it go to utter destruction,
thus should he understand of it:

'In profitable states I am not falling back.

This was called by the Exalted One
"not falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on tasting a savour with the tongue,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes not that object,
rejects it,

puts it away,
wipes it out,
makes it go to utter destruction,
thus should he understand of it:

'In profitable states I am not falling back.

This was called by the Exalted One
"not falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on feeling a tangible with the body,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes not that object,
rejects it,
puts it away,
wipes it out,
makes it go to utter destruction,
thus should he understand of it:

'In profitable states I am not falling back.

This was called by the Exalted One
"not falling back."'

■

Herein, brethren, on cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
evil, unprofitable states arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

If a brother welcomes not that object,
rejects it,
puts it away,
wipes it out,
makes it go to utter destruction,
thus should he understand of it:

'In profitable states I am not falling back.

This was called by the Exalted One
"not falling back."'

§

And what, brethren, are the six stations of mastery?

Herein, brethren, on seeing an object with the eye
evil unprofitable states do not arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

In such case, brethren,
thus should a brother understand:

'Mastered is this sense-sphere.

This was called
"a station of mastery"
by the Exalted One.'

■

Herein, brethren, on hearing a sound with the ear
evil unprofitable states do not arise in a brother,

memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

In such case, brethren,
thus should a brother understand:

'Mastered is this sense-sphere.

This was called
"a station of mastery"
by the Exalted One.'

■

Herein, brethren, on smelling a scent with the nose
evil unprofitable states do not arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

In such case, brethren,
thus should a brother understand:

'Mastered is this sense-sphere.

This was called
"a station of mastery"
by the Exalted One.'

■

Herein, brethren, on tasting a savour with the tongue
evil unprofitable states do not arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

In such case, brethren,
thus should a brother understand:

'Mastered is this sense-sphere.

This was called
"a station of mastery"
by the Exalted One.'

■

Herein, brethren, on feeling a tangible with the body
evil unprofitable states do not arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

In such case, brethren,
thus should a brother understand:

'Mastered is this sense-sphere.

This was called
"a station of mastery"
by the Exalted One.'

■

Herein, brethren, on cognizing a mind-state with the mind
evil unprofitable states do not arise in a brother,
memories and hopes
akin to the fetters that bind.

In such case, brethren,
thus should a brother understand:

'Mastered is this sense-sphere.

This was called
"a station of mastery"
by the Exalted One.'

■

These, brethren, are called 'the six stations of mastery.'

---

[1] Parihānaṃ. Cf. K.S. ii, 139.

[2] Usually eight. Cf. infra, § 150.

[3] Sara-sañkappa. Comy. 'Ettha sarantī ti sarā dhāvantī ti attho. Cf. infra, § 203.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 97

Pamāda-Vihāri Suttaṃ

Dwelling Heedless

---

[78] [46]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
of the one who dwells heedless,
and of the one who dwells earnest.

Do ye listen to it.

And how, Brethren, does one dwell heedless?

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of sight uncontrolled,
the heart is corrupted
by objects cognizable by the eye.

In him whose heart is corrupted
there is no delight.

Without delight
there is no joy.

Where joy is not,
there is no calm.

Without calm
one dwells in sorrow.

The sorrowful man's heart
is not composed.

When the heart is [47] not composed,
one has not clear ideas.[1]

Through not having clear ideas
he is reckoned
as one who dwells heedless.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of hearing uncontrolled,
the heart is corrupted
by sounds cognizable by the ear.

In him whose heart is corrupted
there is no delight.

Without delight
there is no joy.

Where joy is not,
there is no calm.

Without calm
one dwells in sorrow.

The sorrowful man's heart
is not composed.

When the heart is not composed,
one has not clear ideas.

Through not having clear ideas
he is reckoned
as one who dwells heedless.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of smell uncontrolled,

the heart is corrupted
by scents cognizable by the nose.

In him whose heart is corrupted
there is no delight.

Without delight
there is no joy.

Where joy is not,
there is no calm.

Without calm
one dwells in sorrow.

The sorrowful man's heart
is not composed.

When the heart is not composed,
one has not clear ideas.

Through not having clear ideas
he is reckoned
as one who dwells heedless.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of taste uncontrolled,
the heart is corrupted
by tangibles cognizable by the tongue.

In him whose heart is corrupted
there is no delight.

Without delight
there is no joy.

Where joy is not,
there is no calm.

Without calm
one dwells in sorrow.

The sorrowful man's heart
is not composed.

When the heart is not composed,
one has not clear ideas.

Through not having clear ideas
he is reckoned
as one who dwells heedless.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of touch uncontrolled,
the heart is corrupted
by tangibles cognizable by the body.

In him whose heart is corrupted
there is no delight.

Without delight
there is no joy.

Where joy is not,
there is no calm.

Without calm
one dwells in sorrow.

The sorrowful man's heart
is not composed.

When the heart is not composed,
one has not clear ideas.

Through not having clear ideas
he is reckoned
as one who dwells heedless.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells
with the faculty of mind uncontrolled,
the heart is corrupted
by mind-states cognizable by the mind.

In him whose heart is corrupted
there is no delight.

Without delight
there is no joy.

Where joy is not,
there is no calm.

Without calm
one dwells in sorrow.

The sorrowful man's heart
is not composed.

When the heart is not composed,
one has not clear ideas.

Through not having clear ideas
he is reckoned
as one who dwells heedless.

Thus, Brethren, is one
a dweller in heedlessness.

§

And how, Brethren, does one dwell in earnest?

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of sight controlled
the heart is not corrupted
by objects cognizable by the eye.

In him whose heart is not corrupted
delight is born.

In one delighted
joy is born.

When one is joyful
the body is calmed.

He whose body is calmed
feels at ease.

Composed is the heart of him
who is at ease.

When the heart is composed
one's ideas are clear.

Through having clear ideas
one is reckoned as
one who dwells earnest.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of hearing controlled
the heart is not corrupted
by sounds cognizable by the ear.

In him whose heart is not corrupted
delight is born.

In one delighted
joy is born.

When one is joyful
the body is calmed.

He whose body is calmed
feels at ease.

Composed is the heart of him
who is at ease.

When the heart is composed
one's ideas are clear.

Through having clear ideas
one is reckoned as
one who dwells earnest.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of smell controlled
the heart is not corrupted
by scents cognizable by the nose.

In him whose heart is not corrupted
delight is born.

In one delighted
joy is born.

When one is joyful
the body is calmed.

He whose body is calmed
feels at ease.

Composed is the heart of him
who is at ease.

When the heart is composed
one's ideas are clear.

Through having clear ideas
one is reckoned as
one who dwells earnest.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of taste controlled
the heart is not corrupted
by savours cognizable by the tongue.

In him whose heart is not corrupted
delight is born.

In one delighted
joy is born.

When one is joyful
the body is calmed.

He whose body is calmed
feels at ease.

Composed is the heart of him
who is at ease.

When the heart is composed
one's ideas are clear.

Through having clear ideas
one is reckoned as
one who dwells earnest.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of touch[2] controlled
the heart is not corrupted
by tangibles cognizable by the body.

In him whose heart is not corrupted
delight is born.

In one delighted
joy is born.

When one is joyful
the body is calmed.

He whose body is calmed
feels at ease.

Composed is the heart of him
who is at ease.

When the heart is composed
one's ideas are clear.

Through having clear ideas
one is reckoned as
one who dwells earnest.

■

In him, Brethren, who dwells with the faculty of mind controlled
the heart is not corrupted
by mind-states cognizable by the mind.

In him whose heart is not corrupted
delight is born.

In one delighted
joy is born.

When one is joyful
the body is calmed.

He whose body is calmed
feels at ease.

Composed is the heart of him
who is at ease.

When the heart is composed
one's ideas are clear.

Through having clear ideas
one is reckoned as
one who dwells earnest.

Thus, Brethren, is one
a dweller in earnestness.

[1] Dhammā na pātubhavanti. 'Things are not evident.' Comy. Samatha-vipassanā dhammā na uppajjanti.

[2] Kāy'indriya.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 98

Saṃvara Suttaṃ

Restraint

---

[79] [47]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, restraint and lack of restraint.

Do ye listen to it.

And how, Brethren, is one unrestrained?

There are, Brethren, objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am falling back in profitable states.

This was called "falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am falling back in profitable states.

This was called "falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am falling back in profitable states.

This was called "falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am falling back in profitable states.

This was called "falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am falling back in profitable states.

This was called "falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am falling back in profitable states.

This was called "falling back" by the Exalted One.'

Thus, Brethren, is one unrestrained.

§

And how, Brethren, is one restrained?

There are, Brethren, objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother not be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them not,
if he persist not in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am not falling back in profitable states.

This was called "not falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother not be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them not,
if he persist not in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am not falling back in profitable states.

This was called "not falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother not be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them not,
if he persist not in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am not falling back in profitable states.

This was called "not falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother not be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them not,
if he persist not in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am not falling back in profitable states.

This was called "not falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother not be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them not,
if he persist not in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am not falling back in profitable states.

This was called "not falling back" by the Exalted One.'

■

There are, Brethren, mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother not be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them not,
if he persist not in clinging to them,
thus should he understand:

'I am not falling back in profitable states.

This was called "not falling back" by the Exalted One.'

Thus, Brethren, is one restrained."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 99

Samādhi Suttaṃ

Concentration

---

[80] [48]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Practise concentration,[1] brethren.

A brother of concentrated mind knows things as they really are.

And how does he so know?

He knows, as it really is,
that the eye is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that objects are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that eye-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that eye-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the ear is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that sounds are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that ear-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that ear-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the nose is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that scents are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that nose-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that nose-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the tongue is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that savours are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that tongue-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that tongue-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the body is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that tangibles are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that body-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that body-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the mind is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that mind-states are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that mind-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that mind-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

Do ye practise concentration, brethren.

A brother of concentrated mind knows things as they really are.

---

[1] Samādhi = citt'ekaggatā. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 100

Paṭisallāṇa Suttaṃ

Solitude

---

[80] [48]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Apply yourselves, brethren, to solitude.

A brother who is solitary
knows things as they really are.

And how does he so know?

He knows, as it really is,
that the eye is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that objects are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that eye-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that eye-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the ear is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that sounds are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that ear-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that ear-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the nose is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that scents are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that nose-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that nose-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the tongue is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that savours are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that tongue-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that tongue-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the body is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that tangibles are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that body-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that body-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

■

He knows, as it really is,
that the mind is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that mind-states are impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that mind-consciousness is impermanent.

He knows, as it really is,
that mind-contact is impermanent.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact, -
that also he knows,
as it really is,
to be impermanent.

Apply yourselves, brethren, to solitude.

A brother who is solitary
knows things as they really are."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 101

Paṭhama Na Tumhāka Suttaṃ

Not Yours (i)[1]

---

[81] [48]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"What is not of you, Brethren,
put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

And what, Brethren, is not of you?

The eye, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Objects, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Eye-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Eye-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The ear, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Sounds, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Ear-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Ear-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The nose, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Scents, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Nose-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Nose-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The tongue, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Savours, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Tongue-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Tongue-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The body, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Tangibles, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Body-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Body-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The mind, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-objects, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

§

Just as if, Brethren, a man should gather,
burn
or do what he likes
with all the grass,
all the sticks,
branches
and stalks [49] in this Jeta Grove,
pray would he say:

'This man is gathering,
is burning us,
doing what he pleases with us'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Why not?"

"Because, lord, this is not our self, nor of the nature of self."

§

"Even so, Brethren, the eye is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Objects, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Eye-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Eye-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The ear, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Sounds, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Ear-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Ear-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The nose, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Scents, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Nose-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Nose-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The tongue, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Savours, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Tongue-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Tongue-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The body, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Tangibles, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Body-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Body-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The mind, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-objects, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away
will be for your profit and welfare.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare."

---

[1] As at K.S. iii, 31 for the khandhas.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 102

Dutiya Na Tumhāka Suttaṃ

Not Yours (ii)

---

[82] [49]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"What is not of you, Brethren, put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

And what, Brethren, is not of you?

The eye, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Objects, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

Eye-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Eye-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The ear, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Sounds, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

Ear-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Ear-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The nose, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Scents, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

Nose-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Nose-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The tongue, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Savours, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

Tongue-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Tongue-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The body, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Tangibles, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

Body-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Body-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The mind, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-objects, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-consciousness, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Mind-contact, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact, Brethren,
is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ II: Paññāsaka Dutiya
5. Saḷa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ II: The 'Second Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter of the Six

Sutta 103

Uddaka Suttaṃ

Uddaka

[4] Cf. Dialog, i, 87 and n.; infra. xli, 5; S. v, 369.

[5] Comy. describes the shampooing (sambāhana) of the body from childhood onwards, which wears it gradually away (tanu-vilepana).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 104

Yoga-k-Khemi Suttaṃ

Winner of Security[1]

---

[85] [51]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
the method of winning security from the yoke,
the method of the Norm.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the method of winning security from the yokes?

There are, Brethren,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

They have been abandoned by the Tathāgata,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that they cannot grow up again in future time.

For the abandoning of them
he has proclaimed the yoke.[2]

Therefore is the Tathāgata, called
'winner of security from the yokes.'

■

There are, Brethren,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

They have been abandoned by the Tathāgata,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that they cannot grow up again in future time.

For the abandoning of them
he has proclaimed the yoke.

Therefore is the Tathāgata, called
'winner of security from the yokes.'

■

There are, Brethren,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

They have been abandoned by the Tathāgata,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that they cannot grow up again in future time.

For the abandoning of them
he has proclaimed the yoke.

Therefore is the Tathāgata, called
'winner of security from the yokes.'

■

There are, Brethren,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

They have been abandoned by the Tathāgata,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that they cannot grow up again in future time.

For the abandoning of them
he has proclaimed the yoke.

Therefore is the Tathāgata, called
'winner of security from the yokes.'

■

There are, Brethren,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

They have been abandoned by the Tathāgata,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that they cannot grow up again in future time.

For the abandoning of them
he has proclaimed the yoke.

Therefore is the Tathāgata, called
'winner of security from the yokes.'

■

There are, Brethren,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

They have been abandoned by the Tathāgata,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that they cannot grow up again in future time.

For the abandoning of them
he has proclaimed the yoke.

Therefore is the Tathāgata, called
'winner of security from the yokes.'

This Brethren, is the method of winning security from the yokes, the method of the Norm.

---

[1] Yoga-khema-pariyāya. Cf. K.S. ii, 132 and Appendix, 203. It is (not 'the security or peace of yoga' [as a Hindu would understand the word], but) security from the four bonds or yokes of kāma, bhava, diṭṭhi, avijjā. Comy.

[2] Here yoga seems to be used in the sense of application or effort. Tasmā, 'not because he has proclaimed, but because he has abandoned.' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 105

Upādāya Suttaṃ

Dependent

---

[85] [51]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Owing to the existence of what, Brethren, dependent on what,
does this personal weal or woe arise?

[52] "For us, lord,
things have the Exalted One as their root,
their guide
and their resort.

Well indeed were it if the meaning
of this that he has spoken
were to manifest itself to the Exalted One.

Hearing it from him,
the brethren will remember it."[1]

"Well then, brethren, listen,
give your mind thoroughly
and I will speak."

"Even so, lord," responded those brethren.

The Exalted One spake thus:

"Where you[2] have eye, Brethren,
dependent on eye
arises one's personal weal and woe.

"Where you have ear, Brethren,
dependent on eye
arises one's personal weal and woe.

"Where you have nose, Brethren,
dependent on eye
arises one's personal weal and woe.

"Where you have tongue, Brethren,
dependent on eye
arises one's personal weal and woe.

"Where you have body, Brethren,
dependent on eye
arises one's personal weal and woe.

"Where you have mind, Brethren,
dependent on eye
arises one's personal weal and woe.

§

Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the eye permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is the ear permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is the nose permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is the tongue permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is the body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is the mind permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

"Then what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine;
this am I;
this is the Self of me?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"So seeing, the well-taught Axiyan disciple
is averse from the eye
is averse from the ear
is averse from the nose
is averse from the tongue
is averse from the body
is averse from the the mind.

Being averse,
he lusts not.

Not lusting,
he is set free.

By being free
comes the knowledge that one is free.

So that he realizes:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] Bhagavaṇ-mūlakā dhammā, 'conditioned by, originating in.' Cf. K.S. ii, 56.

[2] Vo (frequent as a particle) is really an ethic dative here.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 106

Dukkha-Samudaya Suttaṃ

Ill

---

[52]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
the arising and the destruction of ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the arising of ill?

Owing to eye and objects
arises eye-consciousness.

The [53] coming together of the three is contact.[1]

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

This is the arising of ill.[2]

■

Owing to ear and sounds
arises ear-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

This is the arising of ill.

■

Owing to nose and scents
arises nose-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

This is the arising of ill.

■

Owing to tongue and savours
arises tongue-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

This is the arising of ill.

■

Owing to body and tangibles
arises body-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

This is the arising of ill.

■

Owing to mind and mind-states
arises mind-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

This is the arising of ill.

§

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of ill?|| ||

Owing to eye and objects
arises eye-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,

of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of the whole mass of ill.

This is the destruction of ill.

■

Owing to ear and sounds
arises ear-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,
of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of the whole mass of ill.

This is the destruction of ill.

■

Owing to nose and scents
arises nose-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,
of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of the whole mass of ill.

This is the destruction of ill.

■

Owing to tongue and savours
arises tongue-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,
of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of the whole mass of ill.

This is the destruction of ill.

■

Owing to body and tangibles
arises body-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,

of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of the whole mass of ill.

This is the destruction of ill.

■

Owing to mind and mind-states
arises mind-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Conditioned by contact is feeling.

Conditioned by feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,
of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of the whole mass of ill.

This is the destruction of ill.

[1] M. i, 111; iii, 281.

[2] The greater part of K.S. ii deals with this subject.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 107

Loka-Samudaya Suttaṃ

The World

---

[53]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
the arising and the destruction of the world.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the arising of the world?

Owing to eye and objects
arises eye-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping is coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation,
and despair
come into being.

This is the arising of the world.

■

Owing to ear and sounds
arises ear-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping is coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation,
and despair
come into being.

This is the arising of the world.

■

Owing to nose and scents
arises nose-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping is coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation,
and despair
come into being.

This is the arising of the world.

■

Owing to tongue and savours
arises tongue-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping is coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation,

and despair
come into being.

This is the arising of the world.

■

Owing to body and tangibles
arises body-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping is coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation,
and despair
come into being.

This is the arising of the world.

■

Owing to mind and mind-states
arises mind-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping is coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation,
and despair
come into being.

This is the arising of the world.

§

And what, Brethren, is the going to destruction of the world?|| ||

[54] Owing to eye and objects
arises eye-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,
of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of this whole mass of Ill.

This is the destruction of the world.

■

Owing to ear and sounds
arises ear-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,

of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of this whole mass of Ill.

This is the destruction of the world.

■

Owing to nose and scents
arises nose-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,
of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of this whole mass of Ill.

This is the destruction of the world.

■

Owing to tongue and savours
arises tongue-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,
of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of this whole mass of Ill.

This is the destruction of the world.

■

Owing to body and tangibles
arises body-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,
of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of this whole mass of Ill.

This is the destruction of the world.

■

Owing to mind and mind-states
arises mind-consciousness.

The coming together of the three is contact.

Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

But by the utter passionless ceasing of craving
comes ceasing to be.

By ceasing to be
comes the ceasing of birth.

By the ceasing of birth
comes the ceasing of age and death,
of sorrow and grief,
of woe,

of lamentation
and despair.

This is the ceasing of this whole mass of Ill.

This is the destruction of the world.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 108

Seyya Suttaṃ

Better[1]

---

[88] [54]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Owing to the existence of what, Brethren,
by adherence to what
comes the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'?"

"For us, lord,
things have the Exalted One as their root,
their guide
and their resort.

Well indeed were it if the meaning
of this that he has spoken
were to manifest itself to the Exalted One.

Hearing it from him,
the brethren will remember it."

"Well then, brethren, listen,
give your mind thoroughly
and I will speak."

"Even so, lord," responded those brethren.

The Exalted One spake thus:

"Owing to the existence of the eye, Brethren,
dependent on the eye,
by adhering to the eye
comes the notion of

'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'.

■

"Owing to the existence of the ear, Brethren,
dependent on the eye,
by adhering to the eye
comes the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'.

■

"Owing to the existence of the nose, Brethren,
dependent on the eye,
by adhering to the eye
comes the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'.

■

"Owing to the existence of the tongue, Brethren,
dependent on the eye,
by adhering to the eye
comes the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'.

■

"Owing to the existence of the body, Brethren,
dependent on the eye,
by adhering to the eye
comes the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'.

■

"Owing to the existence of the mind, Brethren,
dependent on the eye,
by adhering to the eye
comes the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'.

§

Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the eye permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

unstable in nature, -
without dependence on that
could there be the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is the ear permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
without dependence on that
could there be the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is the nose permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
without dependence on that
could there be the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is the tongue permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
without dependence on that
could there be the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is the body permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
without dependence on that
could there be the notion of
'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is the mind permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"And what is impermanent,
is that woe or weal?"

"Woe, lord."

Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
unstable in nature, -
without dependence on that
could there be the notion of

'better am I' or
'equal am I' or
'inferior am I'?"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"So seeing, the well-taught Axiyan disciple
is averse from the eye
is averse from the ear
is averse from the nose
is averse from the tongue
is averse from the body
is averse from the the mind.

Being averse,
he lusts not.

Not lusting,
he is set free.

By being free
comes the knowledge that one is free.

So that he realizes:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

[1] Cf, K.S. i, 17 and n. 3; iii, 48, [but ?] etc..

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 109

Saṇyojana Suttaṃ

Fetter[1]

---

[89] [55]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
the things that make for bondage
and the fetter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, are the things that make for bondage
and what is the fetter?

The eye, Brethren, is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter of the eye.

■

The ear, Brethren, is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter of the ear.

■

The nose, Brethren, is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter of the nose.

■

The tongue, Brethren, is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter of the tongue.

■

The body, Brethren, is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter of the body.

■

The mind, Brethren, is a thing that makes for bondage.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter of the mind.

These, Brethren, are called
'the things that make for bondage,'
and this is the fetter.

---

[1] These two sections are similar to §§ 120 - 121 of K.S. iii, 142.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 110

Upādāna Suttaṃ

Grasping[1]

---

[89] [55]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
the things that make for grasping
and grasping.[ed1]

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, are the things that make for grasping
and what is grasping?

The eye, Brethren, is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is grasping of the eye.

■

The ear, Brethren, is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is grasping of the ear.

■

The nose, Brethren, is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is grasping of the nose.

■

The tongue, Brethren, is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is grasping of the tongue.

■

The body, Brethren, is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is grasping of the body.

■

The mind, Brethren, is a thing that makes for grasping.

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is grasping of the mind.

These, Brethren, are called
'the things that make for grasping,'
and this is grasping.

---

[1] These two sections are similar to §§ 120 - 121 of K.S. iii.

[ed1] Woodward has mistakenly repeated 'the fetter' from the previous sutta.
Upādāniye ca bhikkhave dhamme desissāmi upādānaṃ ca.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 111

Paṭhama Parijānana Suttaṃ

Understanding (i)[1]

---

[89] [55]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
the eye,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
the ear,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
the nose,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
the tongue,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,

without abandoning
the body,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
the mind,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

§

But by comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
the eye,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
the ear,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
the nose,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
the tongue,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
the body,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
the mind,
one is capable of the destruction of ill."

---

[1] Cf. supra. 26; Pts. of Contr., 117.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 112

Dutiya Parijānana Suttaṃ

Understanding (ii)

---

[55]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
objects,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
sounds,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
scents,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
savours,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,

without abandoning
tangibles,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

By not comprehending,
by not understanding,
without detaching himself from,
without abandoning
mind-states,
one is incapable of the destruction of ill.

§

But by comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
objects,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
sounds,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
scents,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
savours,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
tangibles,
one is capable of the destruction of ill.

By comprehending,
by understanding,
by detaching himself from,
by abandoning
mind-states,
one is capable of the destruction of ill."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
1. Yoga-k-Khemi Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on Winning Security

Sutta 113

Upassuti Suttaṃ

Overhearing[1]

---

[55]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying in Nātika at the Brick Hall.

[56] Then the Exalted One, while meditating in solitude, uttered this Norm-teaching: -

"Because of eye and objects
arises eye-consciousness.

The coming together of three things is contact.
Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe, lamentation,
and despair come into being.

Thus arises this whole mass of ill.

■

Because of ear and sounds
arises ear-consciousness.

The coming together of three things is contact.
Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe, lamentation,
and despair come into being.

Thus arises this whole mass of ill.

■

Because of nose and scents
arises nose-consciousness.

The coming together of three things is contact.
Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe, lamentation,
and despair come into being.

Thus arises this whole mass of ill.

■

Because of tongue and tastes
arises tongue-consciousness.

The coming together of three things is contact.
Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe, lamentation,
and despair come into being.

Thus arises this whole mass of ill.

■

Because of body and tangibles
arises body-consciousness.

The coming together of three things is contact.
Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,

woe, lamentation,
and despair come into being.

Thus arises this whole mass of ill.

■

Because of mind and mind-states
arises mind-consciousness.

The coming together of three things is contact.
Dependent on contact is feeling.

Dependent on feeling is craving.

Dependent on craving is grasping.

Dependent on grasping coming to be.

Dependent on coming to be is rebirth.

Dependent on rebirth,
decay and death,
sorrow and grief,
woe, lamentation,
and despair come into being.

Thus arises this whole mass of ill."

§

Now on that occasion a certain brother stood overhearing the Exalted One.

And the Exalted One saw that brother standing and overhearing, and he said to that brother:

"Brother, did you hear this Norm-discourse?"

"I did, lord."

"Do you commit this Norm-discourse to memory, brother.

Master it, brother.

Bear it in mind, brother.

For this Norm-discourse bears upon your welfare, brother.

It belongs to the rudiments of the righteous life."[2]

---

[1] Cf. K.S. ii, 51, 107.

[2] Ādi-brahmacariyako.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements[1]

Sutta 114

Paṭhama Māra-Pāsa Suttaṃ

Māra's Noose (i)

---

[91] [56]

Thus have I heard:[ed1]

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are, Brethren, objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,

persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

§

There are, Brethren, objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

[57] If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon."

---

[1] (Pañca)loka-kāma-guṇā. Cf. xxxvi, § 19, 11.

[ed1] This sutta has no Nidāna.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 115

Dutiya Māra-Pāsa Suttaṃ

Māra's Noose (ii)

---

[92] [57]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are, Brethren, objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One bound by objects cognizable by the eye,
gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One bound by sounds cognizable by the ear,
gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One bound by scents cognizable by the nose,
gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One bound by savours cognizable by the tongue,
gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One bound by tangibles cognizable by the body,
gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights in them,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One bound by mind-states cognizable by the mind,
gone to Māra's home,
gone under Māra's sway.'

Māra's noose encircles him.

Bound is he
with Māra's bond,
for the Evil One
to work his will upon.

§

There are, Brethren, objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not bound by objects cognizable by the eye,
not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not bound by sounds cognizable by the ear,
not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not bound by scents cognizable by the nose,
not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not bound by savours cognizable by the tongue,
not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,

pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not bound by tangibles cognizable by the body,
not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon.

■

There are, Brethren, mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delights not in them,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
this brother is called

'One not bound by mind-states cognizable by the mind,
not gone to Māra's home,
not gone under Māra's sway.'

Unwound for him is Māra's noose.

Freed is he from Māra's bond.

He is not one for the Evil One to work his will upon."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 116

Paṭhama Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Suttaṃ

Worldly Sense-Pleasures (i)

---

[93] [57]

Thus have I heard:[ed1]

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.[1]

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end."

So saying the Exalted One rose from his seat
and entered the residence.[2]

§

Now not long after the Exalted One had gone,
it occurred thus to those brethren:

"The Exalted One, having given us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat
and entered the residence, having said this:[ed2]

'I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,

seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end.'

Pray who could expound to us in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One?"

§

[58] Then it occurred to those brethren:[3]

"There is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda?

Suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing?"

■

So those brethren went to visit the venerable Ānanda,
came into his presence
and greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of mutual courtesies,
sat down at one side.

So seated
those brethren said to the venerable Ānanda:

"Friend Ānanda, the Exalted One,
after giving us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat
and entered the residence.

He said:

'I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end.'[4]

Now not long after the Exalted One had gone,
it occurred thus to us:

'The Exalted One, having given us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat
and entered the residence,
having said this:

"I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end."

Pray who could expound to us in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One?'

Then it occurred to us:

'There is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda?

Suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing?'

Do you expound, venerable Ānanda."

§

"Friends, suppose a man in need of sound timber,[5]
in quest of sound timber,
going about searching for sound timber,
should come upon a tree,
upstanding,
all sound timber:
but, leaving the root,
leaving the trunk,
should think that sound timber
was to be looked for
in leaves and branches.

This is just what has happened[6] to you venerable ones.

Though you had the Master face to face
you passed over that Exalted One,
and think that I am the one to be questioned on this matter.

Friends, that Exalted One
is one who, knowing, knoweth:
who, seeing, seeth:
who hath become the seer,
who hath become the knower,
who hath become the Norm,
who hath become the highest.

Proclaimer and expounder is he.

Dispenser of good,
giver of the immortal,
Lord of the [59] Norm, Tathāgata, is he.[7]

Surely that was the time
for you to ask the Exalted One this question.

What the Exalted One should reply to you,
that should ye bear in mind."

■

"True it is, friend Ānanda, that the Exalted One
is one who, knowing, knoweth:
who, seeing, seeth:
who hath become the seer,
who hath become the knower,
who hath become the Norm,
who hath become the highest.[8]

Proclaimer and expounder is he.

Dispenser of good,
giver of the immortal,
Lord of the Norm, Tathāgata, is he.

Surely that was the time
for us to have asked the Exalted One this question
and that we should bear in mind
what the Exalted One might reply to us.

Still we thought:

'Here is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda?

Suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing?'

Let the venerable Ānanda expound the meaning, and not put us to further trouble."[9]

■

"Well, listen, friends.

Apply your minds.

I will speak."

"Very good, friend,"
replied those brethren
to the venerable Ānanda,
who said: -

"As to that pronouncement
uttered in brief by the Exalted One,
but without expounding its meaning in detail:

'I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end.'

Thus do I understand it: -

That by which one is conscious of the world,
by which one has conceit of the world,[10] -
that is called
'world'
in the Ariyan discipline.

And through what is one conscious of the world?

Through what has one conceit of the world?

Through the eye, friends,
through the ear,
through the nose,
through the tongue,
through the body,
through the mind
one is conscious of the world,
has conceit of the world.

That is called
'world'
in the Ariyan discipline.

As to that pronouncement
uttered in brief by the Exalted One,
but without expounding its meaning in detail:

'I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill

can be made
without going to world's end.'

Thus do I understand in detail
the meaning of what was not explained in detail.

But, if ye wish it, ye venerable ones
should approach the Exalted One
and question him on this matter,
and according as the Exalted One explains it to you
so do ye bear it in mind."

"Very good, friend," replied those brethren to the venerable [60] Ānanda.

§

Then rising up
they went to the Exalted One,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated,
they thus addressed the Exalted One: -

"As to that pronouncement, lord
uttered in brief by the Exalted One,
but without expounding its meaning in detail:

'I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,

gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end.'

So saying the Exalted One rose from his seat
and entered the residence.

Now not long after the Exalted One had gone,
it occurred thus to us:

'The Exalted One, having given us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat
and entered the residence,
having said this:

"I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end."

Pray who could expound to us in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One?"

Then it occurred to us:

'There is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda?

Suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing?'

So we went to visit the venerable Ānanda,
came into his presence
and greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of mutual courtesies,
sat down at one side.

So seated
we said to the venerable Ānanda:

'Friend Ānanda, the Exalted One,
after giving us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat
and entered the residence.

He said:

"I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end."

Now not long after the Exalted One had gone,
it occurred thus to us:

"The Exalted One, having given us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat
and entered the residence,
having said this:

'I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end.'

Pray who could expound to us in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One?

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda?

Suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing?'

Do you expound, venerable Ānanda.'

[Then Ānanda said:]

'Friends, suppose a man in need of sound timber,
in quest of sound timber,
going about searching for sound timber,
should come upon a tree,
upstanding,
all sound timber:
but, leaving the root,
leaving the trunk,
should think that sound timber
was to be looked for
in leaves and branches.

This is just what has happened to you venerable ones.

Though you had the Master face to face
you passed over that Exalted One,
and think that I am the one to be questioned on this matter.

Friends, that Exalted One
is one who, knowing, knoweth:
who, seeing, seeth:
who hath become the seer,
who hath become the knower,
who hath become the Norm,
who hath become the highest.

Proclaimer and expounder is he.

Dispenser of good,
giver of the immortal,

Lord of the Norm, Tathāgata, is he.

Surely that was the time
for you to ask the Exalted One this question.

What the Exalted One should reply to you,
that should ye bear in mind.'

[We replied:]

'True it is, friend Ānanda, that the Exalted One
is one who, knowing, knoweth:
who, seeing, seeth:
who hath become the seer,
who hath become the knower,
who hath become the Norm,
who hath become the highest.

Proclaimer and expounder is he.

Dispenser of good,
giver of the immortal,
Lord of the Norm, Tathāgata, is he.

Surely that was the time
for us to have asked the Exalted One this question
and that we should bear in mind
what the Exalted One might reply to us.

Still we thought:

"Here is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement

made in brief by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda?

Suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing?"

Let the venerable Ānanda expound the meaning,
and not put us to further trouble.'

Then the meaning was explained to us by the venerable Ānanda, with these reasons,
in these words,
in these particulars:[11]

'Well, listen, friends.

Apply your minds.

I will speak.'

'Very good, friend,'
we replied
to the venerable Ānanda,
who said: -

'As to that pronouncement
uttered in brief by the Exalted One,
but without expounding its meaning in detail:

"I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,
seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end."

Thus do I understand it: -

That by which one is conscious of the world,
by which one has conceit of the world, -
that is called
'world'
in the Ariyan discipline.

And through what is one conscious of the world?

Through what has one conceit of the world?

Through the eye, friends,
through the ear,
through the nose,
through the tongue,
through the body,
through the mind
one is conscious of the world,
has conceit of the world.

That is called
'world'
in the Ariyan discipline.

As to that pronouncement
uttered in brief by the Exalted One,
but without expounding its meaning in detail:

"I declare, Brethren,
that the end of the world
is not to be learned,

seen,
gone to,
by going to world's end.

Nor do I declare, Brethren,
that the end of ill
can be made
without going to world's end."

Thus do I understand in detail
the meaning of what was not explained in detail.

But, if ye wish it, ye venerable ones
should approach the Exalted One
and question him on this matter,
and according as the Exalted One explains it to you
so do ye bear it in mind.'

Very good, friend,' we replied to the venerable Ānanda.

Then rising up
we came to the Exalted One."

"A sage, Brethren, is Ānanda;
of great wisdom, Brethren, is Ānanda.|| ||

If you were to put me this question,
I should explain it even as Ānanda explained it to you.

This is the meaning of that thing, and so do ye bear it in mind."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. i, 85 f.; A. ii, 48.

[2] Comy. thinks he went away so that the brethren might hear his praises from Ānanda and so have renewed confidence in their Master.

[3] Cf. K.S. iii, 112, Dial. ii. 159, Further Dial, i, 155, etc.

[4] K.S. i, 85 f.; A. ii, 47 f.

[5] Cf. M. i, 111, 194, 233; K.S. iii, 119.

[6] Evaṇ sampadaṇ idaṇ. = sampattikaṇ Comy.

[7] The word 'Tathāgata,' is thus explained by Comy.

[8] Cakkhu-, ñāṇa-, dhamma-, brahma-bhūta. Cf. K.S. ii, 170 (S. ii, 255).

[9] Agaruṇ karitvā generally means 'doing a discourtesy.' Comy. says 'by making us ask again and again.'

[10] Loka-saññī, loka-mānī.

[11] Imehi ākārehi, padehi, vyañjanehi. Comy. 'kāraṇehi, akkhara-sampiṇḍakehi, pāṭiyekka-akkharehi.'

[ed1] This sutta has no nidāna.

[ed2] Woodward has 'saying', but the Buddha did not "rise up from his seat and enter his residence saying" what he said. He said what he said and then rose up...; further Woodward alters the wording of his translation slightly where the Pali is (and always is) identical. I have changed things accordingly, but have retained Woodward's vocabulary.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 117

Devadaha Sutta

Worldly Sensual Elements (ii)

p.p. explains it all — p.p.

[61] 4. Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -

wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away[3]-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind."

5. So saying the Exalted One rose from his seat and entered the residence.

6. Now not long after the Exalted One had gone, it occurred thus to those brethren:

"The Exalted One, having given us this pronouncement in brief, without expounding its meaning in detail, rose from his seat and entered the residence, saying this:

'Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind.'

Pray who could expound to us in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One?

7. Then it occurred to those brethren:

"There is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda,
suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing."

8. So those brethren went to visit the venerable Ānanda, came into his presence
and greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of mutual courtesies,
sat down at one side.

9. So seated those brethren said to the venerable Ānanda:

"Friend Ānanda, the Exalted One,
after giving us this pronouncement in brief,

without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat and entered the residence.

He said:

'Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind.'

Now, not long after the Exalted One had gone,
it occurred thus to us:

'The Exalted One, having given us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat and entered the residence,
saying this:

"Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,

which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind,"

pray who could expound to us in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One?

Then it occurred to us:

'There is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement made in brief
by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda,
suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing.'

Do you expound, venerable Ānanda."

The venerable Ānanda said: -

10. "Friends, suppose a man in need of sound timber,
in quest of sound timber,
going about searching for sound timber,
should come upon a tree,
upstanding,
all sound timber:
but, leaving the root,
leaving the trunk,
should think that sound timber
was to be looked for in leaves and branches.

This is just what has happened to you venerable ones.

Though you had the Master face to face
you passed over that Exalted One,
and think that I am the one to be questioned on this matter.

Friends, that Exalted One is one who,
knowing, knoweth:
who, seeing, seeth:
who hath become the seer,
who hath become the knower,
who hath become the Norm,
who hath become the highest,
proclaimer and expounder is he.

Dispenser of good,
giver of the immortal,
Lord of the Norm,
Tathāgata is he.

Surely that was the time
for you to ask the Exalted One this question.

What the Exalted One should reply to you,
that should ye bear in mind."

11. "True it is, friend Ānanda,
that the Exalted One is one who,
knowing, knoweth:
who, seeing, seeth:
who hath become the seer,
who hath become the knower,
who hath become the Norm,
who hath become the highest,
proclaimer and expounder is he.

Dispenser of good,
giver of the immortal,
Lord of the Norm,
Tathāgata is he.

Surely that was the time
for us to ask the Exalted One this question.

What the Exalted One should reply,
that we should bear in mind.

Still we thought:

'Here is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement made in brief
by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda,
suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing.

Let the venerable Ānanda expound the meaning,
and not put us to further trouble."

12. "Well, listen, friends.

Apply your minds.

I will speak."

"Very good, friend," replied those brethren to the venerable Ānanda, who said: -

13. "As to that pronouncement uttered in brief by the Exalted One,
but without expounding its meaning in detail:

'Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind',

thus do I understand it, friends:

It was uttered, friends,
by the Exalted One concerning the sixfold sphere of sense,
thus:

'Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind'
- so do I understand the meaning.

14. But if ye wish it,
ye venerable ones should approach the Exalted One
and question him about the matter, and,
according as the Exalted One explains it,
so do ye bear it in mind."

"Very good, friend," replied those brethren to the venerable Ānanda.

Then rising up they went to the Exalted One,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

15. So seated they thus addressed the Exalted one:

"As to that pronouncement, lord uttered in brief by the Exalted One,
but without expounding its meaning in detail:

'Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind',

now, not long after the Exalted One had gone,
it occurred thus to us:

'The Exalted One, having given us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,

rose from his seat and entered the residence,
saying this:

"Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind,"

pray who could expound to us in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One?

Then it occurred to us:

'There is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement made in brief

by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda,
suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing.'

16. So then we went to visit the venerable Ānanda, came into his presence
and greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of mutual courtesies,
sat down at one side.

So seated we said to the venerable Ānanda:

'Friend Ānanda, the Exalted One,
after giving us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat and entered the residence.

He said:

"Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind."

Now, not long after the Exalted One had gone,
it occurred thus to us:

'The Exalted One, having given us this pronouncement in brief,
without expounding its meaning in detail,
rose from his seat and entered the residence,
saying this:

"Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind,"

pray who could expound to us in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement
made in brief by the Exalted One?

Then it occurred to us:

'There is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement made in brief
by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda,
suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing.'

Do you expound, venerable Ānanda'

17. The venerable Ānanda said: -

'Friends, suppose a man in need of sound timber,
in quest of sound timber,
going about searching for sound timber,
should come upon a tree,
upstanding,
all sound timber:
but, leaving the root,
leaving the trunk,
should think that sound timber
was to be looked for in leaves and branches.

This is just what has happened to you venerable ones.

Though you had the Master face to face
you passed over that Exalted One,

and think that I am the one to be questioned on this matter.

Friends, that Exalted One is one who,
knowing, knoweth:
who, seeing, seeth:
who hath become the seer,
who hath become the knower,
who hath become the Norm,
who hath become the highest.

Proclaimer and expounder is he.

Dispenser of good,
giver of the immortal,
Lord of the Norm,
Tathāgata is he.

Surely that was the time
for you to ask the Exalted One this question.

What the Exalted One should reply to you,
that should ye bear in mind.'

'True it is, friend Ānanda,
that the Exalted One is one who,
knowing, knoweth:
who, seeing, seeth:
who hath become the seer,
who hath become the knower,
who hath become the Norm,
who hath become the highest.

Proclaimer and expounder is he.

Dispenser of good,
giver of the immortal,

Lord of the Norm,
Tathāgata is he.

Surely that was the time
for us to ask the Exalted One this question.

What the Exalted One should reply,
that we should bear in mind.

Still we thought:

"Here is this venerable Ānanda,
one praised by the Master
and honoured by intelligent co-mates of the righteous life.

The venerable Ānanda is capable of expounding in detail
the meaning of this pronouncement made in brief
by the Exalted One.

Suppose we go to visit the venerable Ānanda,
suppose we come before the venerable Ānanda
and question him as to the meaning of this thing.

Let the venerable Ānanda expound the meaning,
and not put us to further trouble.'

'Well, listen, friends.

Apply your minds.

I will speak.'

'Very good, friend,' we replied to the venerable Ānanda, who said: -

'As to that pronouncement uttered in brief by the Exalted One,
but without expounding its meaning in detail:

"Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind."

thus do I understand it, friends:

It was uttered, friends,
by the Exalted One concerning the sixfold sphere of sense,
thus:

"Wherefore, brethren, as to those worldly sensual elements
experienced by thought,
which are passed,
perished
and altered,
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein eye and perception of objects fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -

wherein ear and perception of sounds fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein nose and perception of scents fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein tongue and perception of savours fade away, -
in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere: -
wherein mind and perception of mind-states fade away-

in what is to be regarded as a sense-sphere,
ye ought,
for your own sakes,
to practise watchfulness
and concentration of mind"
- so do I understand the meaning.

But if ye wish it,
ye venerable ones should approach the Exalted One
and question him about the matter, and,
according as the Exalted One explains it,
so do ye bear it in mind.'

'Very good, friend,' we replied to the venerable Ānanda and then rising up we came to the Exalted One."

And the Exalted One replied: -

"A sage, brethren, is Ānanda.

Of great wisdom, brethren, is Ānanda.

If ye were to put me this question, I should explain it even as Ānanda explained it to you.

This is the meaning of that thing, and so do ye bear it in mind."

---

[1] Bahulaṃ ... appaṃ gaccheyya. Comy. says 'in the future, when Metteyya Buddha shall arise, these passions will be of diminished force.'

[2] Atta-rūpena. Cf. A. ii, 120, the Comy. on which has attano anurūpena, anucchavikena, hitakāmenāti: 'by (what is) suitable, befitting for the self, by desire for (one's) good.'

[3] Comy. Saḷayatana-nirodho vuccati nibbānaṃ, in which state all sinks to rest. Cf. D. i, 222; S. iii, 188; Udana, chap. viii.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 118

Sakka-Pañha Suttaṃ

Sakha[1]

---

[101] [61]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
on the hill Vulture's Peak.

Then Sakka, lord of the devas, [62] came to the Exalted One,
saluted him
and stood at one side.

So standing, Sakka, lord of the devas,
thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are fully set free[2]
in this very life?

What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are not fully set free
in this very life?"

§

"There are, lord of the devas,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,

thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that[3]
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping,[4] lord of the devas,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
scents cognizable by the nose,

scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -

dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is not wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are not
in this very life
wholly set free.

§

Again, lord of the devas, there are
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.[ed1]

If he be without grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

"There are, lord of the devas,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,

thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, lord of the devas,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, lord of the devas,
a brother is wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are
in this very life
wholly set free."

---

[1] Cf. Dialog, ii, 294 ff.

[2] Parinibbāyanti.

[3] Tannissilaṇ viññāṇaṇ. Comy. 'taṇhā-nissitaṇ kamma-viññāṇaṇ.'

[4] Sa-upādāna. Cf. infra. § 124. At p. 399 of text it is applied to fuel.

[ed1] Woodward has abridged where it is not clear how he might have managed this last phrase. I have turned his positive phrase into the negative as closely as I felt could fit the meaning.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 119

Pañca-Sikha-Pañha Suttaṃ

Five-Crest

---

[62]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
on the hill Vulture's Peak.

Then Five-crest,[1] son of a Gandharva, came to the Exalted One,
saluted him
and stood at one side.

So standing, Five-crest, son of a Gandharva,
thus addressed the Exalted One:

"What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are fully set free
in this very life?

What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are not fully set free
in this very life?"

§

"There are, Five-crest,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,

thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,

pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -

dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is not wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are not
in this very life
wholly set free.

§

Again, Five-crest, there are
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,

thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Five-crest,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Five-crest,
a brother is wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are
in this very life
wholly set free."

---

[1] See Dialog. ii, 288, where he accompanies Sakka.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 120

Sāriputta-Saddhi-Vihārika Suttaṃ

Sāriputta

---

[103] [63]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to visit the venerable Sāriputta.

After the exchange of greetings and friendly courtesies
he sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother thus addressed the venerable Sāriputta: -

"Friend Sāriputta, my fellow-lodger has renounced the training and gone back to the lower life."[1]

"So it happens, friend, with one the door of whose faculties is unguarded,[2]
who is immoderate in eating, and not given to watchfulness.

That brother, friend,
is of such a nature.

So long as he lives
it will be impossible for him to apply himself[3]
to the righteous life
in all its fullness,
in all its purity.

Indeed, friend, a brother,[4]
the door of whose faculties is guarded, who is moderate in eating and given to watchfulness, -
for such an one,
so long as he lives,
it is possible to apply himself
to the righteous life
in all its fullness,
in all its purity.

§

And how, friend, has one
the door of his faculties guarded?

Herein a brother, seeing an object with the eye,
is not misled by its outer view,[5]
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one who dwells
with the faculty of eye uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of eye, attains control thereof.

■

When he hears a sound with the ear,
is not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one who dwells
with the faculty of ear uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of ear,
attains control thereof.

■

When he smells a scent with the nose,
is not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one who dwells
with the faculty of nose uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of nose,
attains control thereof.

■

When he tastes a savour with the tongue,
is not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one who dwells
with the faculty of tongue uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of tongue,
attains control thereof.

■

When he contacts tangibles with the body,
is not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,

might overwhelm one who dwells
with the faculty of body uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of body,
attains control thereof.

■

When he cognizes mental states with the mind,
is not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

[64] Since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one who dwells
with the faculty of mind uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of mind,
attains control thereof.

§

And how, friend, is one moderate in eating?

Herein, friend, a brother takes his food thoughtfully[6] and prudently, not for sport,[7]
not for indulgence,
not for personal charm or adornment, but just enough for the support and upkeep of the body, to allay its pains,[8]

to help the practice of the righteous life,
with the thought:

'My former feeling I check,
and set going no new feeling.

So shall I keep going,[9]
be blameless,
and live at ease.'

Thus, friend, is one moderate in eating.

§

And how, friend, is one given to watchfulness?

Herein, friend, by day
a brother walks up and down
and then sits,
and thus cleanses his heart
from states that may hinder.

By night, for the first watch
a brother walks up and down
and then sits,
and thus cleanses his heart
from states that may hinder.

In the middle watch of the night, lying on his right side
he takes up the lion-posture,[10] resting one foot on the other,

and thus collected and composed fixes his thought on rising up again.

In the last watch of the night,
at early dawn,
he walks up and down,
and then sits,
and so cleanses his heart
from states that may hinder.

Thus, friend, is one given to watchfulness.

Wherefore, friend, thus should you train yourselves:

'We will be watchful over our faculties, moderate in eating
and given to watchfulness.'

Thus, friend, must you train yourself."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. ii, 38.

[2] Cf. Buddh. Psych. Ethics, pp. 350 ff. and nn.; Dialog. i, 80; Vis. Magg., 16 and refs. (Comy. does not comment here, having done so elsewhere). For the passage following see § 198 (2).

[3] Santānessati = ghaṭessati. Comy.

[4] Text has so, which would refer to this particular brother. I read yo with MSS. S. 1-3.

[5] Nimitta-gāhin.

[6] Cf. K.S. ii, 68; Expositor, 511.

[7] Not for athletic prowess.

[8] Vihiṇsa-uparatiyā. Cf. Asḷ. 403.

[9] Yātrā me bhavissati.

[10] Sīha-seyyaṇ. Cf. A. ii, 244 (trans. in Numerical Sayings by A. D. Jayasundere), where the four postures are given, here quoted by Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 121

Rāhul'Ovāda Suttaṃ

Rāhula[1]

---

[105] [64]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then as the Exalted One was meditating in solitude this [65] thought occurred to him:

"Ripe now in Rāhula
are those states
that bring release to perfection.[2]

Suppose now I give Rāhula
the last teachings
for the destruction of the āsavas."

So the Exalted One,
robing himself at early dawn,
and taking bowl and robe
set out for Sāvatthī on his begging-round, and after completing his round and eating his meal,
said to the venerable Rāhula: -

"Rāhula, take a mat.

Let us go to Dark Wood[3] for the noonday rest."

"Very good, lord,"
replied the venerable Rāhula to the Exalted One,
and taking a mat
followed behind
in the footsteps of the Exalted One.

Now at that time
countless thousands of devas were following the Exalted One, thinking:

"To-day the Exalted One will give the venerable Rāhula
the last teachings
for the destruction of the āsavas."

So the Exalted One plunged into the depths of Dark Wood and sat down at the foot of a certain tree on the seat prepared for him.

And the venerable Rāhula, saluting the Exalted One,
sat down also at one side.

As he thus sat
the Exalted One said to the venerable Rāhula: -

"Now what think you, Rāhula?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That experience of feeling,
perception,
the activities
and consciousness,
which arises owing to eye-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Rāhula?

Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That experience of feeling,
perception,
the activities
and consciousness,
which arises owing to ear-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Rāhula?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness permanetn
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That experience of feeling,
perception,
the activities
and consciousness,
which arises owing to nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Rāhula?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That experience of feeling,
perception,
the activities
and consciousness,
which arises owing to tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Rāhula?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are things tactile permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is body-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That experience of feeling,
perception,
the activities
and consciousness,
which arises owing to body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, Rāhula?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are mind-states permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That experience of feeling,
perception,
the activities
and consciousness,
which arises owing to mind-contact, -

is that permanent
or impermanent?"

[66] "Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"So seeing, Rāhula, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, Rāhula, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, Rāhula, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, Rāhula, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, Rāhula, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, Rāhula, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Thus spake the Exalted One.

And the venerable Rāhula was delighted with the words of the Exalted One
and welcomed them.

And when this instruction was given,
the venerable Rāhula's heart was freed from the āsavas
without grasping.

And in those countless thousands of devas arose the pure and spotless eye of the Norm,[4] so that they knew:

"Whatsoever is of a nature to arise,
all that is of a nature to cease."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. ii, 165; iii, 114, 115.

[2] Vimutti-paripācaniyā dhammā, i.e. saddhindriya, etc. (faith, energy, mindfulness, concentration, insight), which lead to Path-concentration. Cf. A. ii, 145. Comy. quotes Paṭisambhidā, ii, 1, in full, and Udana, iv.

[3] Cf. K.S. i, 160 n. About two miles from Sāvatthī. It is really 'Blind Wood,' owing to its having been the haunt of bandits who blinded their victims! So Comy., ad loc. cit.

[4] Dhamma-cakkhu = 'the four paths and path-fruits.' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 122

Saṇyojana Suttaṃ

Fetter

---

[66]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
the things that make for bondage
and the fetter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, are the things that make for bondage
and what is the fetter?

"There are, brethren,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for bondage.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful

and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for bondage.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for bondage.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for bondage.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for bondage.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for bondage.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the fetter that is in them."

References:

see: SN 4.35.109;
These two sections are similar to §§ 120 - 121 of K.S. iii, 142.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
2. Loka-Kāma-Guṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

2. The Chapter on the Worldly Sensual Elements

Sutta 123

Upādāna Suttaṃ

Grasping

---

[66]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
the things that make for grasping
and grasping.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, are the things that make for grasping
and what is grasping?

There are, brethren,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for grasping.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the grasping that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful

and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for grasping.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the grasping that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for grasping.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the grasping that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for grasping.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the grasping that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for grasping.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the grasping that is in them.

■

There are, brethren,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are called:
'the things that make for grasping.'

The desire and lust that are therein, -
that is the grasping that is in them.

References:

see: SN 4.35.110;
These two sections are similar to §§ 120 - 121 of K.S. iii, 142.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 124

Vesālī Suttaṃ

Vesālī

---

[109] [66]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was once staying near Vesālī, in Great Wood,
at the Hall of the Peaked Gable.

[67] Then Ugga,[1] the housefather, of Vesālī,
came to the Exalted One.

After the exchange of greetings and friendly courtesies
he sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
Ugga, the housefather, of Vesālī, said this to the Exalted One: -

"What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are fully set free
in this very life?

What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are not fully set free
in this very life?"[2]

§

"There are, housefather,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,

thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are not
in this very life
wholly set free.

§

Again, housefather, there are
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,

thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,

pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are
in this very life
wholly set free."

---

[1] In the list at A. i, 26 he is declared by the Master to be 'the most charming (manāpa) of all lay supporters.' Comy. misquotes his title as paṇīta-dāyakānaṇ agga. Cf. A.A. i. 394; A. iii, 49.

[2] As above, § 118.

References:

AN 1.253,
AN 5.44,
SN 4.35.118

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 125

Vajji Suttaṃ

Vajjians

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was once staying among the Vajjians at Elephant Town.[1]

Then Ugga, the housefather, of Elephant Town came to see the Exalted One.

After the exchange of greetings and friendly courtesies
he sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
Ugga, the housefather, of Elephant Town said this to the Exalted One: -

"What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are fully set free
in this very life?

What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are not fully set free
in this very life?"

§

"There are, housefather,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,

thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are not
in this very life
wholly set free.

§

Again, housefather, there are
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,

thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,

pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are
in this very life
wholly set free.

---

[1] Hatthigāma.

References:

SN 4.35.124
SN 4.35.118

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 126

Nālandā Suttaṃ

Nalanda[1]

---

[67]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was once staying at Nālanda, in Pavarika[2] Mango Grove.

Then Upāli,[3] the housefather came to see the Exalted One.

After the exchange of greetings and friendly courtesies
he sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
Upāli, the housefather, said this to the Exalted One: -

"What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are fully set free
in this very life?

What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are not fully set free
in this very life?"

§

"There are, housefather,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,

if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
scents cognizable by the nose,

scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -

dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are not
in this very life
wholly set free.

§

Again, housefather, there are
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,

thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are
in this very life
wholly set free.

---

[1] In Magadha, once the seat of the famous university.

[2] Pāvārika means 'cloak-seller.'

[3] This may be the Jain who became an adherent. M. i, 380 f.

References:

SN 4.35.124,
SN 4.35.118,
AN 1.228,
MN 56

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 127

Bhāradvāja Suttaṃ

Bhāradvāja

---

[110] [68]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Piṇḍola,[1] of Bhāradvāja, was staying at Kosambī in Ghosita Park.

Then the rājah Udena went to see the venerable Piṇḍola,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of courtesies and greetings
sat down at one side.

So seated the rājah Udena said to him: -

"What is the condition, Master Bhāradvāja,[2]
what is the cause
whereby the young Brethren,
who are mere lads with jet-black hair,
blessed with happy youth,
who in the flower of their life
have had no dalliance[3] with the passions,
yet practise the righteous life
in its fullness and perfection
and live out their span of life to the full?"[4]

■

"It has been said, Mahārājah, by that Exalted One
who knoweth,
who seeth,
by that Arahant who is a Fully Enlightened One:

'Come ye, brethren;
in the case of those who are just mothers,[5] sisters
and daughters,
do ye call up the mother-mind,
the sister-mind,
the daughter-mind.'

That is the condition, Mahārājah,
that is the cause

whereby these young Brethren,
who are mere lads with jet-black hair,
blessed with happy youth,
who in the flower of their life
have had no dalliance with the passions,
yet practise the righteous life
in its fullness and perfection
and live out their span of life to the full."

§

"The heart is wanton, Bhāradvāja.

It may well be
that at times
mind-states that are wanton arise in the case of those [69] who are mother, sister
and daughter.

Pray, Bhāradvāja, is there any other condition,
any other cause
whereby these young Brethren,
who are mere lads with jet-black hair,
blessed with happy youth,
who in the flower of their life
have had no dalliance with the passions,
yet practise the righteous life
in its fullness and perfection
and live out their span of life to the full?"

■

"It has been said, Mahārājah, by that Exalted One
who knoweth,
who seeth,
by that Arahant who is a Fully Enlightened One:[6]

'Come ye, Brethren,
look upon this same body,
upwards from the soles of the feet, downwards from the top of the head,
enclosed by skin,
full of manifold impurities.

There are in this body
hair of the head,
hair of the body,
nails,
skin,
teeth,
flesh,
nerves,
bones,
marrow,
kidneys,
heart,
liver,
pleura,
spleen,
lungs,
intestines,
mesentery,
stomach,
faeces,
bile,
phlegm,
matter,
blood,

sweat,
lymph,
fat,
tears,
lubricant,
saliva,
mucus,
oil,
urine.'

That, Mahārājah, is the condition,
that is the cause
whereby these young brethren,
who are mere lads with jet-black hair,
blessed with happy youth,
who in the flower of their life
have had no dalliance with the passions,
yet practise the righteous life
in its fullness and perfection
and live out their span of life to the full."

§

"Well, master Bhāradvāja, that is easy for those brethren who train the body,
who train in morals,
who train the mind
who train in insight, but for those who do not train the body,
who do not train in morals,

who do not train the mind
who do not train in insight, it is a hard thing.

Maybe at times, master Bhāradvāja,
when one is thinking:

'I will regard it as unlovely',

he comes to regard it as lovely.[7]

Pray, Bhāradvāja, is there any other condition,
any other cause
whereby these young Brethren,
who are mere lads with jet-black hair,
blessed with happy youth,
who in the flower of their life
have had no dalliance with the passions,
yet practise the righteous life
in its fullness and perfection
and live out their span of life to the full?"

■

"It has been said, Mahārājah, by that Exalted One
who knoweth,
who seeth,
by that Arahant who is a Fully Enlightened One:

'Come ye, Brethren,
do ye abide watchful over the doors of the faculties.

Seeing an object with the eye,[8]
be not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

But since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of the eye uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of the eye
and attain control of it.

§

Hearing a sound with the ear,
be not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

But since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of the ear uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of the ear
and attain control of it.

§

Smelling a scent with the nose,
be not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

But since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of the nose uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,

set a guard over the faculty of the nose
and attain control of it.

§

Tasting a savour with the tongue,
be not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

But since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of the tongue uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of the tongue
and attain control of it.

§

Contacting tangibles with the body,
be not misled by its outer view,
nor by its lesser details.

But since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of the body uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of the body
and attain control of it.

§

Cognizing mind-states with the mind,
be not misled by its outer view,

nor by its lesser details.

[70] But since coveting and dejection,
evil,
unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of the mind uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of the mind
and attain control of it.

This, Mahārājah, is the condition, this is the cause whereby these young Brethren,
who are mere lads with jet-black hair,
blessed with happy youth,
who in the flower of their life
have had no dalliance with the passions,
yet practise the righteous life
in its fullness and perfection
and live out their span of life to the full."

§

"Wonderful, master Bhāradvāja!

Marvellous it is, master Bhāradvāja, how well spoken are these words of that Exalted One, who knoweth, who seeth, that Axahant who is a Fully Enlightened One.

Surely that is the condition, that is the cause, master Bhāradvāja,
whereby these young brethren,
who are mere lads with jet-black hair,

blessed with happy youth,
who in the flower of their life
have had no dalliance with the passions,
yet practise the righteous life
in its fullness and perfection
and live out their span of life to the full.

I myself, master Bhāradvāja, whenever I enter my palace with body,
speech
and mind unguarded,
with thought unsettled,
with my faculties uncontrolled, - at such times lustful states overwhelm me.

But whenever, master Bhāradvāja, whenever I enter my palace with body,
speech
and mind guarded,
with thought settled,
with my faculties controlled, -
at such times lustful states do not overwhelm me.

Excellent, master Bhāradvāja!

Excellent it is, master Bhāradvāja!

Even as one raises what is overthrown,
or shows forth what is hidden,
or points out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or holds up a light in the darkness,
so that they who have eyes may see objects, -
even so in divers ways
has the Norm been set forth by the worthy Bhāradvāja.

I myself, master Bhāradvāja,
do go for refuge to that Exalted One,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

May the worthy Bhāradvāja accept me as a follower
from this day forth,
so long as life doth last,
as one who has so taken refuge."

---

[1] Formerly a brahmin of Bhāradvāja. See n. to Brethren, p. 110; Udana, iv, 6; Vin. Cullavagga, iii; Vinaya Texts, iii, 78; and K.S. i, 204 ('congey-man') and n. ad loc. Comy. followed by Dhammapāla on Udāna, describes him at length as a scrap-hunter with a huge bowl. The Master would not allow him a strap to carry it (ṭhavika), so it got knocked about and gradually reduced in size to a mere shred. Thus he learned continence and later became Arahant. For Piṇḍola ("scrap-gathcrer') see also Itivuttaka, § 91; K.S. iii, 93, [but ? should this not be SN 3 page 93 = KS 3 §80] Jāt. iv, 375. At A. i, 23 (A.A. 196) he is proclaimed by the Master as "best at the lion's roar'. Bhāradvāja is on the river Jumna, the capital of the Vaṇsas, about 230 miles from Benares. See Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, p. 36.

[2] Giving him his clan-name.

[3] Anikīḷitavin. Cf. K.S. i, 15.

[4] Addhānaṇ āpādenti, or 'keep it going."Comy. 'Paveṇiṇ paṭipādenti.'

[5] Mātumattīsu = "Mātu-samānāsu." Comy. i.e. regard all women-folk as you would your own mother, sister, daughter. I cannot find the passage quoted. It does not occur in the Canon, as far as I know.

[6] Cf. M. i, 57, 420.

[7] Quoted at Pts. of Controv., p. 288 n.

[8] Supra, § 120.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 128

Soṇa Suttaṃ

Soṇa

---

[70]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
in Bamboo Grove at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then Soṇa, the housefather's son,[1] camc to see the Exalted [71] One and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of courtesies and greetings
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said this to the Exalted One: -

"What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are fully set free
in this very life?

What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are not fully set free
in this very life?"

§

"There are, Soṇa,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,

if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
scents cognizable by the nose,

scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -

dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is not wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are not
in this very life
wholly set free.

§

Again, Soṇa, there are
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,

thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, Soṇa,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, Soṇa,
a brother is wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are
in this very life
wholly set free.

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 42 ff.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 129

Ghosita Suttaṃ

Ghosita

---

[113] [71]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Ānanda was staying at Kosambī in Ghosita Park.

Then the housefather Ghosita came to see the venerable Ānanda,
and on coming to him

greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of courtesies and greetings
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said this to the venerable Ānanda:-

"'Diversity in elements!

Diversity in elements!'[1] is the saying, my lord Ānanda.

Pray, sir, how far has diversity in elements been spoken of by the Exalted One?"

■

"When the elements of eye
and objects that are pleasing and eye-consciousness occur together, housefather, owing to the pleasurable contact
there arises pleasurable feeling.

When the elements of eye,
objects that are displeasing
and eye-consciousness occur together,
owing to the unpleasant contact resulting
there arises painful feeling.

When the elements of eye,
objects that are of indifferent effect[2]
and eye-consciousness occur together,
owing to neutral contact resulting,
there arises feeling that is neutral.

■

When the elements of ear
and sounds[ed1] that are pleasing and ear-consciousness occur together, housefather,

owing to the pleasurable contact
there arises pleasurable feeling.

When the elements of ear,
sounds that are displeasing
and ear-consciousness occur together,
owing to the unpleasant contact resulting
there arises painful feeling.

When the elements of ear,
sounds that are of indifferent effect
and ear-consciousness occur together,
owing to neutral contact resulting,
there arises feeling that is neutral.

■

When the elements of nose
and scents that are pleasing and nose-consciousness occur together, housefather,
owing to the pleasurable contact
there arises pleasurable feeling.

When the elements of nose,
scents that are displeasing
and nose-consciousness occur together,
owing to the unpleasant contact resulting
there arises painful feeling.

When the elements of nose,
scents that are of indifferent effect
and nose-consciousness occur together,
owing to neutral contact resulting,
there arises feeling that is neutral.

■

When the elements of tongue
and savours that are pleasing and tongue-consciousness occur together, housefather,
owing to the pleasurable contact
there arises pleasurable feeling.

When the elements of tongue,
savours that are displeasing
and tongue-consciousness occur together,
owing to the unpleasant contact resulting
there arises painful feeling.

When the elements of tongue,
savours that are of indifferent effect
and tongue-consciousness occur together,
owing to neutral contact resulting,
there arises feeling that is neutral.

■

When the elements of body
and tangibles that are pleasing and body-consciousness occur together, housefather,
owing to the pleasurable contact
there arises pleasurable feeling.

When the elements of body,
tangibles that are displeasing
and body-consciousness occur together,
owing to the unpleasant contact resulting
there arises painful feeling.

When the elements of body,
tangibles that are of indifferent effect
and body-consciousness occur together,
owing to neutral contact resulting,
there arises feeling that is neutral.

■

When the elements of mind
and mind-states that are pleasing and mind-consciousness occur together, housefather,
owing to the pleasurable contact
there arises pleasurable feeling.

When the elements of mind,
mind-states that are displeasing
and mind-consciousness occur together,
owing to the unpleasant contact resulting
there arises painful feeling.

When the elements of mind,
mind-states that are of indifferent effect
and mind-consciousness occur together,
owing to neutral contact resulting,
there arises feeling that is neutral.

Thus far, housefather, diversity in elements has been spoken of by the Exalted One."

---

[1] Dhātu-nānattaṇ. See K.S. ii, 101 ff. and nn.; Buddh Psych. Eth., 72 n.

[2] Upekkhā-ṭ-ṭhāniyā.

[ed1] Woodward abridges indicating he would use 'objects' for each of the objects of sense, but this is likely just an oversight (resulting, I would say, from the use of 'objects' for the object of the eye sense where 'shape' is the better and usual translation for 'rūpa'). The Pali and all his previous translations have named the objects of sense in accordance with the sense organ. The usual manner of abridgment is to give the first (and sometimes the second) in a series complete, abridge the middle with the briefest possible indication of what belongs there and give the final item completely. Here, in concluding, Woodward has used 'objects' for his usual 'mind-states'. The Pali has 'dhamma'. I have followed his usual translation.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 130

Hāliddaka Suttaṃ

Hāliddaka[1]

---

[115] [72]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Kaccāna the Great was staying among the folk of Avanti, at Osprey's Haunt, on a sheer mountain crag.

Then the housefather Hāliddakāni came to see the venerable Kaccāna the Great,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of courtesies and greetings
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said this to the venerable Kaccāna the Great:-

"It has been said by the Exalted One, sir,|| ||

'Owing to diversity in elements
arises diversity of contact.|| ||

Owing to diversity of contact arises diversity of feeling.'[2]

Pray, sir, how far is this so?"

■

"Herein, housefather, seeing a pleasant object with the eye,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'[3]

comes to know of eye-consciousness
that is pleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is pleasant to experience
arises pleasant feeling.

When with the eye
he sees an object that is displeasing,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of eye-consciousness
that is unpleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is unpleasant to experience
arises unpleasant feeling.

When with the eye
he sees an object that is of indifferent effect,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of eye-consciousness
that is neutral.

Owing to contact that is neutral to experience
arises feeling that is neutral.

■

So also, housefather,
hearing a pleasant sound with the ear,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of ear-consciousness
that is pleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is pleasant to experience
arises pleasant feeling.

When with the ear
he hears a sound that is displeasing,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of ear-consciousness
that is unpleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is unpleasant to experience
arises unpleasant feeling.

When with the ear
he hears a sound that is of indifferent effect,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of ear-consciousness
that is neutral.

Owing to contact that is neutral to experience
arises feeling that is neutral.

■

So also, housefather,
smelling a pleasant scent with the nose,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of nose-consciousness
that is pleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is pleasant to experience
arises pleasant feeling.

When with the nose
he smells a scent that is displeasing,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of nose-consciousness
that is unpleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is unpleasant to experience
arises unpleasant feeling.

When with the nose
he smells a scent that is of indifferent effect,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of nose-consciousness
that is neutral.

Owing to contact that is neutral to experience
arises feeling that is neutral.

■

So also, housefather,
tasting a pleasant savour with the tongue,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of tongue-consciousness
that is pleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is pleasant to experience
arises pleasant feeling.

When with the tongue
he tastes a savour that is displeasing,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of tongue-consciousness
that is unpleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is unpleasant to experience
arises unpleasant feeling.

When with the tongue
he tastes a savour that is of indifferent effect,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of tongue-consciousness
that is neutral.

Owing to contact that is neutral to experience
arises feeling that is neutral.

■

So also, housefather,
contacting a pleasant tangible with the body,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of body-consciousness
that is pleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is pleasant to experience
arises pleasant feeling.

When with the body
he contacts a tangible that is displeasing,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of body-consciousness
that is unpleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is unpleasant to experience
arises unpleasant feeling.

When with the body
he contacts a tangible that is of indifferent effect,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of body-consciousness
that is neutral.

Owing to contact that is neutral to experience
arises feeling that is neutral.

■

So also, housefather,
cognizes a pleasant mind-state with the mind,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of mind-consciousness
that is pleasant [73] to experience.

Owing to contact that is pleasant to experience
arises pleasant feeling.

When with the mind
he cognizes a mind-state that is displeasing,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of mind-consciousness
that is unpleasant to experience.

Owing to contact that is unpleasant to experience
arises unpleasant feeling.

When with the mind
he cognizes a mind-state that is of indifferent effect,
a brother, at the thought:

'This is such and such,'

comes to know of mind-consciousness
that is neutral.

Owing to contact that is neutral to experience
arises feeling that is neutral.

---

[1] A turmeric dyer (hālidda). At K.S. iii, 10 a housefather of this name questions Mahā Kaccana at the same place. The name is variously spelt. For Avanti, which is N.E. of Bombay in the Vindhya Mts., see Brethren, p. 107 n., and infra. 288. For Kaccāna, Vinaya i, 194; M. ii, 84; iii, 194; Brethren, CCIX, [sic. CCXXIX] etc.

[2] S. ii, 141.

[3] Itthetaṇ (itthaṇ = ita). Burmese MSS. read iṭṭh'etaṇ (cupitum hoc) Comy. 'evam etaṇ, manāpam etaṇ.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 131

Nakula-Pitā Suttaṃ

Nakulapitar

---

[73]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Bhaggī, at Crocodile Haunt,
in Bhesakala Grove in the Antelope Park.

Then the housefather Nakulapitar[1]
came to the Exalted One.

After the exchange of greetings and friendly courtesies
he sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
Nakulapitar said this to the Exalted One: -

"What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are fully set free
in this very life?

What is the condition, lord,
what is the cause
whereby in this world
some beings are not fully set free
in this very life?"

§

"There are, housefather,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,

thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be enamoured of them,
if he welcome them,
if he persist in clinging to them,
thus enamoured of them,
thus welcoming them,
thus persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes consciousness based on that grasping.

If he be full of grasping, housefather,
a brother is not wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are not
in this very life
wholly set free.

§

Again, housefather, there are
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
scents cognizable by the nose,
scents desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
savours desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,

thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
tangibles desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

■

There are, housefather,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
mind-states desirable,

pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother be not enamoured of them,
if he does not welcome them,
if he does not persist in clinging to them,
thus not enamoured of them,
thus not welcoming them,
thus not persisting in clinging to them, -
dependent on that
comes no consciousness there being no basis in grasping.

If he be without grasping, housefather,
a brother is wholly set free.

This is the condition,
this is the cause
why in the world
some beings are
in this very life
wholly set free."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 1.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 132

Lohicca Suttaṃ

Lohicca

---

[116] [73]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Kaccana the Great was staying among the folk of Avanti, at Makkarakaṭa in a forest hut.

Then a number of resident pupils of the brahmin Lohicca, mere lads
who were gathering sticks,[1] came up to the forest hut of the venerable Kaccana the Great.

On reaching it
they began to roam and wander up and down
on all sides of the hut, uproarious and noisy,
playing all sorts of mad pranks.[2]

And they said:

"These shavelings,
sham recluses,
menials,
black fellows,
the offspring of our kinsman's foot,[3]
are honoured,
revered,
made much of,
worshipped,
and given offerings
by these sons of coolies."[4]

Thereupon the venerable Kaccana the Great came out of his dwelling and thus addressed those lads:

"Hush! my lads.

I will teach you the Norm."

At these words
the young fellows were silent.

Then the venerable Kaccana the Great addressed them with these verses: -

"Foremost in virtue were the men of old,
Those brahmins who remembered ancient rules.
In them well guarded were the doors of sense.
They had achieved the mastery of wrath.
In meditation and the Norm they took delight,
Those brahmins who remembered ancient rules.

But these backsliders[5] with their 'Let us recite,'[6]
Drunk with the pride of birth, walk wrongfully.[7]
O'ercome by wrath, exceeding violent,[8]
They come to loss 'mongst weak and strong alike.[9]
Vain is the penance of the uncontrolled,[10]
Empty as treasure gotten in a dream.

[75] Such, ways[11] as fastings, couching on the ground,
Bathing[12] at dawn, recitings of the Three,
Wearing rough hides, and matted hair and filth,
Chantings and empty rites and penances,
Hypocrisy and cheating and the rod,
Washings, ablutions, rinsings of the mouth,[13] -
These are the caste-marks[14] of the brahmin folk,
Things done and practised for some trifling gain.[15]

A heart well tamed, made pure and undefiled,
Considerate[16] for every living thing, -
That is the Way the highest to attain."

Thereupon the young fellows were angered and displeased, and went away to the brahmin Lohicca.

On coming to him they said: -

"May it please your reverence to know[17] that the recluse, Kaccana the Great, is attacking and abusing the sacred things[18] of the brahmins."

At these words the brahmin Lohicca was angered and displeased.

Then it occurred to the brahmin Lohicca:

"It is not proper for me to attack and abuse the recluse, Kaccana the Great, merely on hearsay of young fellows.

Suppose now I visit and question him?"

■

So the brahmin Lohicca went along with those young fellows to visit the venerable Kaccana the Great,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously
and, after the exchange [76] of greetings and compliments,
sat down at one side.

So seated
he said to the venerable Kaccana the Great: -

"Worthy Kaccana, is it true that a number of our resident pupils,
mere lads,
gathering sticks,
have been here?"

"It is true, brahmin.

They did come here."

"And did the worthy Kaccana have any converse with those lads?"

"I did, brahmin."

"Pray what was the topic of the converse?"

"I spoke to them to this effect, brahmin: -

'Foremost in virtue were the men of old,
Those brahmins who remembered ancient rules.
In them well guarded were the doors of sense.
They had achieved the mastery of wrath.
In meditation and the Norm they took delight,
Those brahmins who remembered ancient rules.

But these backsliders with their "Let us recite,"
Drunk with the pride of birth, walk wrongfully.
O'ercome by wrath, exceeding violent,
They come to loss 'mongst weak and strong alike.
Vain is the penance of the uncontrolled,
Empty as treasure gotten in a dream.

Such, ways as fastings, couching on the ground,
Bathing at dawn, recitings of the Three,
Wearing rough hides, and matted hair and filth,
Chantings and empty rites and penances,
Hypocrisy and cheating and the rod,
Washings, ablutions, rinsings of the mouth, -
These are the caste-marks of the brahmin folk,
Things done and practised for some trifling gain.

A heart well tamed, made pure and undefiled,
Considerate for every living thing, -
That is the Way the highest to attain.'

Such, brahmin, was the talk I had with the young fellows."

"You said 'unguarded in the doors of sense,' worthy Kaccana.

Now how far is one unguarded in the doors of sense?"

"Herein, brahmin, a certain one,
seeing an object with the eye,[19]
is attached to objects that charm, is repelled by objects that displease.

He dwells with mind distracted
and his heart is mean.

He realizes not
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil unprofitable states that arise
do not come to cease without remainder.

■

Hearing a sound with the ear
is attached to sounds that charm, is repelled by sounds that displease.

He dwells with mind distracted
and his heart is mean.

He realizes not
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil unprofitable states that arise
do not come to cease without remainder.

■

Smelling a scent with the nose
is attached to scents that charm, is repelled by scents that displease.

He dwells with mind distracted
and his heart is mean.

He realizes not
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil unprofitable states that arise
do not come to cease without remainder.

■

Tasting a savour with the tongue
is attached to savours that charm, is repelled by savours that displease.

He dwells with mind distracted
and his heart is mean.

He realizes not
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil unprofitable states that arise
do not come to cease without remainder.

■

Contacting a tangible with the body
is attached to tangibles that charm, is repelled by tangibles that displease.

He dwells with mind distracted
and his heart is mean.

He realizes not
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil unprofitable states that arise
do not come to cease without remainder.

■

Cognizing a mind-state with the mind
is attached to mind-states that charm, is repelled by mind-states that displease.

He dwells with mind distracted
and his heart is mean.

He realizes not
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil unprofitable states that arise
do not come to cease without remainder.

To that extent, brahmin,
one is unguarded in the doors of sense."

"Wonderful, worthy Kaccana!

Marvellous, worthy Kaccana, is the way in which the worthy Kaccana has defined the words
'unguarded in the doors of sense.'

Now as to the words
'guarded in the doors of sense, guarded in the doors of sense,' -
pray, worthy Kaccana,
how far is one so guarded?"

[77] "Herein, brahmin, a brother, seeing an object with the eye,
is not attached to objects that charm,
or repelled by objects that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed,
and his heart is boundless.[20]

Thus he realizes
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil, unprofitable states that arise
come to cease without remainder.

■

Hearing a sound with the ear,
is not attached to sounds that charm,
or repelled by sounds that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed,
and his heart is boundless.

Thus he realizes
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil, unprofitable states that arise
come to cease without remainder.

■

Smelling a scent with the nose,
is not attached to scents that charm,
or repelled by scents that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed,
and his heart is boundless.

Thus he realizes
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil, unprofitable states that arise
come to cease without remainder.

■

Tasting a savour with the tongue,
is not attached to savours that charm,
or repelled by savours that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed,
and his heart is boundless.

Thus he realizes
in its true nature

that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil, unprofitable states that arise
come to cease without remainder.

■

Contacting a tangible with the body,
is not attached to tangibles that charm,
or repelled by tangibles that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed,
and his heart is boundless.

Thus he realizes
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil, unprofitable states that arise
come to cease without remainder.

■

Cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
is not attached to mind-states that charm,
or repelled by mind-states that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed,
and his heart is boundless.

Thus he realizes
in its true nature
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom.

So that those evil, unprofitable states that arise
come to cease without remainder.

Thus, brahmin, one is guarded in the doors of senses."

"Excellent, worthy Kaccana!

Excellent, worthy Kaccana!

Even as one raises what is overthrown,
or shows forth what is hidden,
or points out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or holds up a light in the darkness,
so that they who have eyes may see objects, -
even so in divers ways
has the Norm been set forth by the worthy Kaccana.

I myself, master Kaccana,
do go for refuge to that Exalted One,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

May the worthy Kaccana accept me as a follower
from this day forth,
so long as life doth last,
as one who has so taken refuge."

Now as the worthy Kaccana visits the families of his supporters at Makkarakaṭa,
even so let him visit the family of Lohicca.

Then all the lads and maidens there will greet the worthy Kaccana, set a seat for him
and give him water,

and that shall be a blessing and a profit for them
for many a long day."

---

[1] Cf. S. 1, 180 (K.S. i, 228).

[2] Kanici hanici selissakdni Lṃuonti. Comy. explains 'aññamaññaṃ upanissāya piṭṭhiṃ gahetvā langhitvā,' which would seem to mean 'playing leap-frog,' but does not explain the word selissaka ('noisy'). Comy. MSS. road selissāni. It does not occur elsewhere.

[3] Cf. D. i, 103 (Dialog. 1, 112 and n., 128), M. i, 334. Ibbhā = gahapatikā; kiṇhā = kaṇhā. Comy. Bandhu-pād' āpaccā, referring to the belief that non-brahmins (sudras), who were of darker complexion, were born of Brahma's foot. Cf. D.A. i, 254.

[4] Bhāratakā. Comy. kuṭumbikā, 'cottagers who carry loads,' a term of contempt for the village folk who support the wandering recluses.

[5] (v)okkamma, 'deserting the ancient rules.' Comy.

[6] Jap(p)āmase, reflex, imperat. plur. of japati, may refer to tho 'vain repetitions' of the brahmins. For a passage of the same tenor cf. K.S. 1, 178. Comy. says, 'mayaṇ jappāma kathayamā' ti ettaken'eva brāhmaṇ' amhā ti maññamānā.

[7] Visamaṇ caranti, 'walk in the uneven.' Cf. K.S. i, 6 n.

[8] Puthu-atta-daṇḍa ('stick-taken'). Cf. Dhp. 406; K.S. i, 303, where Mrs. Rhys Davids translates: 'self-armed' Puthu here = bahu. Comy. takes it to mean nānādaṇḍā.

[9] Tasa-thāvaresu. Cf. K.S. i, 411, [? no pg 411] a general term for 'all sorts and conditions.' Comy. sataṇha-nittaṇhesu ('sinners and saints').

[10] Comy. 'sabbe pi vata-samādānā moghā bhavanti.'

[11] Cf. Dialog, i, 230 for the habits of the naked ascetics Dhp. v, 141.

[12] Text pātho (recital) with v.ll. . ... I follow Comy., which reads pīto-sinānañ ca.

[13] So Comy.

[14] Vaññā. Comy. 'furniture, utensils, marks.'

[15] Reading bhāvana for text's bāvana. Comy. ayam eva vā pātho amisa-kiñcikkassa vaḍḍhan'atthāya katan ti attho

[16] Akhilaṇ Comy. "soft and not stubborn.' Cf. S. 1, 27; K.S. iii. 113 n.

[17] Yagghe (see Dict. s.v. taggha) bhavaṇ jāneyya Cf. K.S. i, 228. In next section Comy. says. of taggha, 'codan'atthe nipāta.'

[18] Mante, charms, texts, ritual, etc., as above.

[19] Infra, § 202

[20] Appamāṇa-cetaso, as opposed to paritta. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
3. Gahapati Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Householders

Sutta 133

Vera-Haccāni Suttaṃ

Verahaccāni

---

[121] [77]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Udāyin[1] was staying at Kāmaṇḍāya, in the mango grove of the brahmin Todeyya.

Then a young fellow,
a resident pupil of the brahmin lady of the Verahaccāni clan, came to visit the venerable Udāyin,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

As he thus sat,
the venerable Udāyin taught,
established,
roused,
and made that lad happy with a pious talk.

Then he, being thus taught,
established,
roused
and made happy
by the pious talk of the venerable Udāyin,
went to the [78] brahmin lady of the Verahaccāni clan,
and on coming to her said thus:

"I would have my lady know
that Udāyin, the recluse, is teaching a doctrine
that is lovely in its beginning,
lovely in its middle,
and lovely in its ending.

He sets forth the righteous life,
fully perfected and purified,
both in its spirit and in its form."

"Then, my lad,
in my name do you invite Udāyin, the recluse,
for to-morrow's meal."

"So be it, lady," replied the lad,
and in obedience to the lady's bidding
went back to the venerable Udāyin and said:

"Let the worthy Udāyin accept a teacher's fee from us, to-morrow's food from the brahmin lady of the Verahaccāni clan."

And the venerable Udāyin accepted by his silence.

Then the venerable Udāyin,
when that night was past,
robed himself at early dawn,
and taking bowl and robe
went to the dwelling
of the brahmin lady of the Vetahaccani clan,
and sat down on a seat made ready.

Then the brahmin lady served the venerable Udāyin
with choice food,
both hard and soft,
with her own hands,
until he had eaten his fill.

Now when she saw[2] that the venerable Udāyin had finished and withdrawn his hand from the bowl, she put on her sandals,
sat down on a high seat,
veiling her head,[3] and thus addressed the venerable Udāyin:

"Preach me doctrine, O recluse."

"A time will come for that, sister," said he,
rose from his seat and went away.

§

Then a second time
that young fellow visited the venerable Udāyin,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

As he thus sat,
the venerable Udāyin taught,
established,
roused,
and made that lad happy with a pious talk.

Then a second time he, being thus taught,
established,
roused
and made happy
by the pious talk of the venerable Udāyin,
went to the brahmin lady of the Verahaccāni clan, [79] and on coming to her said thus:

"I would have my lady know
that Udāyin, the recluse, is teaching a doctrine
that is lovely in its beginning,
lovely in its middle,
and lovely in its ending.

He sets forth the righteous life,
fully perfected and purified,
both in its spirit and in its form."

"You are speaking thus, my lad, in praise of the recluse Udāyin.

But (on the former occasion) when I said:

'Preach me doctrine, O recluse,' he replied:

'A time will come for that, sister,' rose from his seat and went to his lodging."

"But, my lady,
you put on your sandals,
sat down on a high seat,
veiled your head
and spoke thus:

'Preach me doctrine, O recluse.'

Now they honour the doctrine, those worthy ones.

They respect the doctrine."

"Very well then, my lad.

Do you invite Udāyin, the recluse, in my name
for to-morrow's meal."

"So be it, my lady," replied the lad
and in obedience to the lady's bidding
went back to the venerable Udāyin and said:

"Let the worthy Udāyin accept a teacher's fee from us, to-morrow's food from the brahmin lady of the Verahaccāni clan."

And the venerable Udāyin accepted by his silence.

Then the venerable Udāyin,
when that night was past,
robed himself at early dawn,
and taking bowl and robe

went to the dwelling
of the brahmin lady of the Vetahaccani clan,
and sat down on a seat made ready.

Then the brahmin lady served the venerable Udāyin
with choice food,
both hard and soft,
with her own hands,
until he had eaten his fill.

Then the brahmin lady of the Verahaccāni clan, when she saw that the venerable Udāyin had finished and removed his hand from the bowl, put off her sandals,
sat down on a low seat,
unveiled her head
and thus addressed the venerable Udāyin: -

"Pray, sir,
owing to the existence of what do the Arahants point out weal and woe?

Owing to the existence of what do they not do so?"

"When there is eye, sister,
the Arahants point out weal and woe.

When eye exists not, sister,
the Arahants do not point out weal and woe.

■

When there is ear, sister,
the Arahants point out weal and woe.

When ear exists not, sister,
the Arahants do not point out weal and woe.

■

When there is tongue, sister,
the Arahants point out weal and woe.

When tongue exists not, sister,
the Arahants do not point out weal and woe.

■

When there is body, sister,
the Arahants point out weal and woe.

When body exists not, sister,
the Arahants do not point out weal and woe.

■

When there is mind, sister,
the Arahants point out weal and woe.

When mind exists not, sister,
the Arahants do not point out weal and woe."

At these words the Brahmin lady of the Verahaccāni clan said to the venerable Udāyin: -

"Excellent, sir!

Excellent, sir!

Even as one raises what is overthrown,
or shows forth what is hidden,
or points out the way
to him that wanders astray,

or holds up a light in the darkness
so that he who has eyes may see objects, -
even so in divers ways
has the Norm been set forth by the worthy Udāyin.

I myself, master Udāyin,
do go for refuge to that Exalted One,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

Let the worthy Udāyin regard me as a lay-disciple who,
from this day forth
so long as life shall last,
has so taken refuge."

---

[1] Cf. infra. §§ 166, 223. Three of this name are mentioned. Cf. Brethren, 288 n.; Dialog, iii, 109; M. i, 396, 447. For Todeyya see M. ii, 202.

[2] Supplying viditvā, or is it acc. absol. according to Trenckner (Pāli Miscellany, p. 67)?

[3] See Vinaya rules (Pātimokkha, Sekhiya) about listening to the Dhamma, here broken by the lady, in three respects.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 134

Devadaha-Khaṇa Suttaṃ

The Moment at Devadaha[1]

---

[124] [80]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha,[2]
a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I do not declare, Brethren,
that for all brothers
there is need to strive earnestly
in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense.

Yet do I not declare
that for all brothers
there is no need so to strive earnestly
in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense.

Those brethren who are Arahants, destroyers of the āsavas,
who have lived the life,
done the task,
removed the burden,
who have won their own highest good,
utterly destroyed the fetters of becoming,
who by right insight
have become free, -
for such, Brethren, I declare that in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense there is no need to strive earnestly.

Why so?

Because they have wrought so earnestly as to be incapable of carelessness.

But those brothers who are yet earnest-minded pupils,[3] who dwell aspiring
for the security that is unsurpassed, - by those brothers I declare
that in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense
there is need to strive earnestly.

Why so?

Because, Brethren,
there are objects cognizable by the eye,
objects delightful or repulsive.

Though they touch the heart again and again,[4]
yet they cannot altogether lay hold of it
and so persist.

By their failure to lay hold of the heart
comes strenuous energy unquailing.

Mindfulness is set up untroubled.

The body is calmed,
not perturbed.

The heart is collected,
one-pointed.

Seeing this fruit of earnestness, Brethren,
I declare that such brothers
do need to strive earnestly
in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense.

■

There are sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects delightful or repulsive.

Though they touch the heart again and again,
yet they cannot altogether lay hold of it
and so persist.

By their failure to lay hold of the heart
comes strenuous energy unquailing.

Mindfulness is set up untroubled.

The body is calmed,
not perturbed.

The heart is collected,
one-pointed.

Seeing this fruit of earnestness, Brethren,
I declare that such brothers
do need to strive earnestly
in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense.

■

There are scents cognizable by the nose,
objects delightful or repulsive.

Though they touch the heart again and again,
yet they cannot altogether lay hold of it
and so persist.

By their failure to lay hold of the heart
comes strenuous energy unquailing.

Mindfulness is set up untroubled.

The body is calmed,
not perturbed.

The heart is collected,
one-pointed.

Seeing this fruit of earnestness, Brethren,
I declare that such brothers
do need to strive earnestly
in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense.

■

There are savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects delightful or repulsive.

Though they touch the heart again and again,
yet they cannot altogether lay hold of it
and so persist.

By their failure to lay hold of the heart
comes strenuous energy unquailing.

Mindfulness is set up untroubled.

The body is calmed,
not perturbed.

The heart is collected,
one-pointed.

Seeing this fruit of earnestness, Brethren,
I declare that such brothers
do need to strive earnestly
in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense.

■

There are things tactile cognizable by the body,
objects delightful or repulsive.

Though they touch the heart again and again,
yet they cannot altogether lay hold of it
and so persist.

By their failure to lay hold of the heart
comes strenuous energy unquailing.

Mindfulness is set up untroubled.

The body is calmed,
not perturbed.

The heart is collected,
one-pointed.

Seeing this fruit of earnestness, Brethren,
I declare that such brothers
do need to strive earnestly
in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense.

■

There are mind-states cognizable by the mind,
objects delightful or repulsive.

Though they touch the heart again and again,
yet they cannot altogether lay hold of it
and so persist.

By their failure to lay hold of the heart
comes strenuous energy unquailing.

Mindfulness is set up untroubled.

The body is calmed,
not perturbed.

The heart is collected,
one-pointed.

Seeing this fruit of earnestness, Brethren,
I declare that such brothers
do need to strive earnestly
in respect of the sixfold sphere of sense.

---

[1] Devadaha-khhaṇo. The 'moment' is referred to in § 135.

[2] Cf. K.S. iii, 6 n.

[3] Sekhā.

[4] Phussa-phussa. Cf. D. i, 45 for the double, and for the figure of speech cf. S. ii, 235; K.S. iii, 17 n. (cittaṇ na pariyādāya tiṭṭhanti).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 135

Khaṇa (aka Saṇgayha) Suttaṃ

Including (The Sixfold Sense-sphere)[1]

---

[126] [81]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha, a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"'Tis well for you, Brethren, 'tis well gotten by you, brethren!

Ye have won the moment for the righteous life.

Brethren, I have seen the hells so called,[2] belonging to the sixfold sense-sphere.

Therein whatever object one sees with the eye,
one sees it as uninviting,
not as inviting.

One sees it as repulsive,
not as charming.

One sees it as ugly,
not lovely.

■

Whatever sound one hears with the ear,
one sees it as uninviting,
not as inviting.

One sees it as repulsive,
not as charming.

One sees it as ugly,
not lovely.

■

Whatever scent one smells with the nose,
one sees it as uninviting,
not as inviting.

One sees it as repulsive,
not as charming.

One sees it as ugly,
not lovely.

■

Whatever savour one tastes with the tongue,
one sees it as uninviting,
not as inviting.

One sees it as repulsive,
not as charming.

One sees it as ugly,
not lovely.

■

Whatever tangible one contacts with the body,
one sees it as uninviting,
not as inviting.

One sees it as repulsive,
not as charming.

One sees it as ugly,
not lovely.

■

Whatever mind-state one cognizes with the mind,
one sees it as uninviting,

not as inviting.

One sees it as repulsive,
not as charming.

One sees it as ugly,
not lovely.

'Tis well for you, brethren!

'Tis well gotten by you, brethren!

Ye have won the moment for the righteous life.

§

Brethren, I have seen the heavens so called
of the sixfold sense-sphere.

Therein whatsoever object one sees with the eye,
one sees it as inviting,
not as uniniviting.

One sees it as charming,
not as repulsive.

One sees it as lovely,
not ugly.

■

Whatever sound one hears with the ear,
one sees it as inviting,
not as uniniviting.

One sees it as charming,
not as repulsive.

One sees it as lovely,
not ugly.

■

Whatever scent one smells with the nose,
one sees it as inviting,
not as uniniviting.

One sees it as charming,
not as repulsive.

One sees it as lovely,
not ugly.

■

Whatever savour one tastes with the tongue,
one sees it as inviting,
not as uniniviting.

One sees it as charming,
not as repulsive.

One sees it as lovely,
not ugly.

■

Whatever tangible one contacts with the body,
one sees it as inviting,
not as uniniviting.

One sees it as charming,
not as repulsive.

One sees it as lovely,
not ugly.

■

Whatever mind-state one cognizes with the mind,
one sees it as inviting,
not as uniniviting.

One sees it as charming,
not as repulsive.

One sees it as lovely,
not ugly.

'Tis well for you, brethren!

'Tis well gotten by you, brethren!

Ye have won the moment for the righteous life."

---

[1] Cf. supra, § 94.

[2] Comy. says Avīci is referred to here, while by sagga is meant 'the world of the Thirty-three.' 'Hell' is utter misery. 'Heaven' is utter bliss. The world of men is a mixture of both. You are lucky to be born as men, for thus you can enter the Path that sets you free.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 136

Rūpā-Pārāma Suttaṃ (PTS: Agayha Suttaṃ;
BJT: Sagayha Suttaṃ + Gayha Suttaṃ; CSCD: Paṭhama Rūpāpārāma Suttaṃ + Dutiya Rūpāpārāma Suttaṃ)[ed1]

Not Including (The Sixfold Sense-sphere)

---

[126] [81]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha,
a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in objects,
they are excited by objects.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of objects, Brethren,
that devas and [82] mankind live woefully.[1]

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in sounds,
they axe excited by sounds.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of sounds, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in scents,
they axe excited by scents.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,

the ceasing of scents, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in savours,
they axe excited by savours.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of savours, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in touch,
they axe excited by touch.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of touch, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in mind-states,
they axe excited by mind-states.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of mind-states, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

§

But the Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from objects, -
he delights not in objects,
takes not pleasure in objects,
is not excited by objects.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of objects
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from sounds, -
he delights not in sounds,
takes not pleasure in sounds,
is not excited by sounds.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of sounds
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from scents, -
he delights not in scents,
takes not pleasure in scents,
is not excited by scents.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of scents
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from savours, -
he delights not in savours,
takes not pleasure in savours,
is not excited by savours.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,

the ceasing of savours
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from touch, -
he delights not in touch,
takes not pleasure in touch,
is not excited by touch.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of touch
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from mind-states, -
he delights not in mind-states,
takes not pleasure in mind-states,
is not excited by mind-states.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of mind-states
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

Thus spake the Exalted One.

So saying the Happy One added this further as Teacher: -[2]

Things seen and heard, tastes, odours, what we touch, Perceive, - all, everything desirable,
Pleasant and sweet, while one can say 'it is,'
These are deemed 'sukhā' by both gods and men.
And when they cease to be they hold it woe.
The dissolution of the body-self[3]
To Ariyans seems 'sukha.' Everything
The world holds good, sages see otherwise.[4]

What other men call 'sukha,' that the saints
Call 'dukkha': what the rest so name,
That do the Ariyans know as happiness.
Behold a Norm[5] that's hard to apprehend.
[83] Hereby are baffled[6] they that are not wise.
Darkness is theirs, enmeshed by ignorance:
Blindness is theirs, who cannot see the light.

But by the wise,[7] whose eyes are opened wide,
The light is seen: and, near to it, they know it, Skilled in the knowledge of the mighty Norm.[8] By those whom longing for rebirth destroys,
By those who float adown becoming's stream,

By those who subjects are to Māra's sway,
Not fully comprehended is this Norm.
Who but the worthy ones are worthy of The all-enlightened Path, by knowing which Fully, the drug-immune ones are set free?[9]

[Here BJT calls the following #137: Gayha Suttaṃ and CSCD: #137: Dutiya Rūpāma Suttaṃ]

"Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in objects,
they are excited by objects.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of objects, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in sounds,
they axe excited by sounds.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of sounds, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in scents,
they axe excited by scents.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of scents, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in savours,
they axe excited by savours.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of savours, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in touch,
they axe excited by touch.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of touch, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

■

Devas and mankind, Brethren, delight in mind-states,
they axe excited by mind-states.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of mind-states, Brethren,
that devas and mankind live woefully.

§

But the Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from objects, -
he delights not in objects,
takes not pleasure in objects,
is not excited by objects.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of objects
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from sounds, -
he delights not in sounds,
takes not pleasure in sounds,
is not excited by sounds.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,

the ceasing of sounds
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from scents, -
he delights not in scents,
takes not pleasure in scents,
is not excited by scents.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of scents
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from savours, -
he delights not in savours,
takes not pleasure in savours,
is not excited by savours.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of savours
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from touch, -
he delights not in touch,
takes not pleasure in touch,
is not excited by touch.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of touch
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

■

The Tathāgata, Brethren,
who is Arahant,
a Fully-enlightened One,
seeing, as they really are,
both the arising and the destruction,
the satisfaction,
the misery
and the way of escape from mind-states, -
he delights not in mind-states,

takes not pleasure in mind-states,
is not excited by mind-states.

It is owing to the instability,
the coming to an end,
the ceasing of mind-states
that the Tathāgata, dwells at ease.

---

[1] Dukkhaṇ viharanti. Dukkhaṇ here is an adverb. For a discussion of the word see K.S. iii, 21 n.

[2] See Sutta Nipaṭa, v, 759-63, and Comy. ad loc. (Par. Jot. ii, 2, 509). Our text differs from Sn. in the third couplet, but our Comy. agrees with the Sn. reading, which I follow. Sakkā yassa should be sakkāy-assa For dassanaṇ read passataṇ. [Lines 1-4, 7-9 are well turned by Mrs. Rhys Davids, Buddh Psych., 86. I give them here, and have added the other lines myself.]

[3] Reading with Sn. sakkāyass'uparodhanaṇ.

[4] Reading sabbaṇ lokena passataṇ (= passantānaṇ = paṇḍitānāṇ).

[5] Text misprints phassa-dhammaṇ for passa dhammaṇ).

[6] Sammūḷh'ettha aviddasū (= bālā. Comy.).

[7] Sataṇ (= sappurisānaṇ. Comy.).

[8] Reading with text santikena vijānanti mahāihammassa kovidā. But Sn. and Comy. read santike na vijānanti magā (fools) dhammass'akovidā, i.e , 'though near it, fools unskilled in the D. do not know it.'

[9] Parinibbanti anāsavā. Comy. kilesa- or khtindha-parinibbānema.

[ed1] Bhikkhu Bodhi notes: "Feer wrongly entitles this sutta Agaytha, and runs it together with the next." I here follow the PTS numbering.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 137

Paṭhama Palāsinā Suttaṃ

Leaves (i)[1]

---

[128] [83]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's, Park.[ed1]

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"What is not of you, Brethren, put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

And what, Brethren, is not of you?

The eye, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The ear, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The nose, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The tongue, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The body, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The mind, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

§

Just as if, Brethren, a man should gather,
burn
or do what he likes
with all the grass,
all the sticks,
branches
and stalks in this Jeta Grove,
pray would he say:

'This man is gathering,
is burning us,
doing what he pleases with us'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Why not?"

[84] "Because, lord, this is not our self,
nor of the nature of self."

■

Even so, Brethren, the eye is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The ear, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The nose, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The tongue, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The body, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

The mind, Brethren, is not of you.

Put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

---

[1] Cf. S. iii, 33, where the title is 'Not yours.' See above, p. 48.

[ed1] This sutta does not have a nidana and in context should be located at Devadaha, but in the simile the Buddha speaks of 'this Jeta Grove'. This could be just an error due to the fact that the sutta is otherwise identical to SN 4.35.101, and someone overlooked the need to change the location of the grove being spoken of or the way the Jeta Grove was being spoken of.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 138

Dutiya Palāsinā Suttaṃ

Leaves (ii)

---

[84]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"What is not of you, Brethren, put it away.

Putting it away will be for your profit and welfare.

And what, Brethren, is not of you?

Objects, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Sounds, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Scents, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Savours, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Tangibles, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Mind-objects, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

§

Just as if, Brethren, a man should gather,
burn
or do what he likes
with all the grass,
all the sticks,
branches
and stalks in this Jeta Grove,
pray would he say:

'This man is gathering,
is burning us,
doing what he pleases with us'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Why not?"

"Because, lord, this is not our self,
nor of the nature of self."

§

Even so, Brethren, objects are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Sounds, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Scents, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Savours, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Tangibles, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

■

Mind-states, Brethren, are not of you.

Put them away.

Putting them away will be for your profit and welfare.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 139

Paṭhama Ajjhatta-Anicca aka Hetunā Ajjhatta Suttaṃ

The Personal, by Way of Condition (i)[1]

---

[129] [84]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha, a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye, Brethren, is impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the eye,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
the eye has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the eye be permanent?|| ||

■

"The ear, Brethren, is impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the ear,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
the ear has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the ear be permanent?|| ||

■

"The nose, Brethren, is impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be

for the appearance of the nose,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
the nose has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the nose be permanent?|| ||

■

"The tongue, Brethren, is impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the tongue,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
the tongue has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the tongue be permanent?|| ||

■

"The body, Brethren, is impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the body,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
the body has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the body be permanent?|| ||

■

"The mind, Brethren, is impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the mind,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
the mind has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the mind be permanent?|| ||

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

§

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] See above, p. 52

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 140

Dutiya Ajjhatta-Dukkha aka Hetunā Ajjhatta Suttaṃ

The Personal, by Way of Condition (ii)

---

[84]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha, a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye, Brethren, is suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the eye,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
the eye has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the eye be pleasant?|| ||

■

"The ear, Brethren, is suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the ear,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
the ear has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the ear be pleasant?|| ||

■

"The nose, Brethren, is suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be

for the appearance of the nose,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
the nose has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the nose be pleasant?|| ||

■

"The tongue, Brethren, is suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the tongue,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
the tongue has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the tongue be pleasant?|| ||

■

"The body, Brethren, is suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the body,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
the body has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the body be pleasant?|| ||

■

"The mind, Brethren, is suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the mind,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
the mind has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the mind be pleasant?|| ||

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 141

Tatiya Ajjhatta-Anatta aka Hetunā Ajjhatta Suttaṃ

The Personal, by Way of Condition (iii)

---

[84]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha,
a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The eye, Brethren, is without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the eye,
that also is without the self.

Owing to being being without the self
the eye has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the eye be of the self?|| ||

■

"The ear, Brethren, is without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the ear,
that also is without the self.

Owing to being without the self
the ear has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the ear be of the self?|| ||

■

"The nose, Brethren, is without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be

for the appearance of the nose,
that also is without the self.

Owing to being without the self
the nose has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the nose be of the self?|| ||

■

"The tongue, Brethren, is without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the tongue,
that also is without the self.

Owing to being without the self
the tongue has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the tongue be of the self?|| ||

■

"The body, Brethren, is without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the body,
that also is without the self.

Owing to being without the self
the body has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the body be of the self?|| ||

■

"The mind, Brethren, is without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of the mind,
that also is without the self.

Owing to being without the self
the mind has come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could the mind be of the self?|| ||

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 142

Paṭhama Bāhira-Anicca aka Hetunā Bāhira Suttaṃ

The External, by Way of Condition (i)

---

[84]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha,
a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects, Brethren, are impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of objects,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
objects have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could objects be permanent?|| ||

■

"Sounds, Brethren, are impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of sounds,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
sounds have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could sounds be permanent?|| ||

■

"Scents, Brethren, are impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be

for the appearance of scents,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
scents have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could scents be permanent?|| ||

■

"Savours, Brethren, are impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of savours,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
savours have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could savours be permanent?|| ||

■

"Tangibles, Brethren, are impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of tangibles,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
tangibles have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could tanglbles be permanent?|| ||

■

"Mind-states, Brethren, are impermanent.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of mind-states,
that also is impermanent.

Owing to impermanence
mind-states have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could mind-states be permanent?|| ||

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 143

Dutiya Bāhira-Dukkha aka Hetunā Bāhira Suttaṃ

The External, by Way of Condition (ii)

---

[84]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha, a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects, Brethren, are suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of objects,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
objects have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could objects be pleasant?|| ||

■

"Sounds, Brethren, are suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of sounds,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
sounds have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could sounds be pleasant?|| ||

■

"Scents, Brethren, are suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be

for the appearance of scents,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
scents have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could scents be pleasant?|| ||

■

"Savours, Brethren, are suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of savours,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
savours have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could savours be pleasant?|| ||

■

"Tangibles, Brethren, are suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of tangibles,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
tangibles have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could tanglbles be pleasant?|| ||

■

"Mind-states, Brethren, are suffering.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of mind-states,
that also is suffering.

Owing to suffering
mind-states have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could mind-states be pleasant?|| ||

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
4. Devadaha Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on Devadaha

Sutta 144

Tatiya Bāhira-Anatta aka Hetunā Bāhira Suttaṃ

The External, by Way of Condition (iii)

---

[84]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakkas at Devadaha, a township of the Sakkas.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Objects, Brethren, are without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of objects,
that also is without the self.

Owing to that which is without the self
objects have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could objects be of the self?|| ||

■

"Sounds, Brethren, are without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of sounds,
that also is without the self.

Owing to that which is without the self
sounds have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could sounds be of the self?|| ||

■

"Scents, Brethren, are without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be

for the appearance of scents,
that also is without the self.

Owing to that which is without the self
scents have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could scents be of the self?|| ||

■

"Savours, Brethren, are without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of savours,
that also is without the self.

Owing to that which is without the self
savours have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could savours be of the self?|| ||

■

"Tangibles, Brethren, are without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of tangibles,
that also is without the self.

Owing to that which is without the self
tangibles have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could tanglbles be of the self?|| ||

■

"Mind-states, Brethren, are without the self.

Whatever condition,
whatever cause there be
for the appearance of mind-states,
that also is without the self.

Owing to that which is without the self
mind-states have come into being, brethren.|| ||

How could mind-states be of the self?|| ||

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 145

Kamma Suttaṃ

Action[1]

---

[132] [85]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, action both new and old,
the ceasing of action
and the way leading to the ceasing of action.

Do ye listen to it.

Apply your minds and I will speak.

And what, Brethren, is action that is old?

The eye, Brethren, is to be viewed as action that is old,[2]
brought about
and intentionally done,[3]
as a base for feeling.[4]

■

The ear, Brethren, is to be viewed
as action that is old,
brought about
and intentionally done,
as a base for feeling.

■

The nose, Brethren, is to be viewed
as action that is old,
brought about
and intentionally done,
as a base for feeling.

■

The tongue, Brethren, is to be viewed
as action that is old,
brought about
and intentionally done,
as a base for feeling.

■

The body, Brethren, is to be viewed
as action that is old,
brought about
and intentionally done,
as a base for feeling.

■

The mind, Brethren, is to be viewed as action that is old,
brought about
and intentionally done,
as a base for feeling.

§

And what is action that is new?

The action one performs now, Brethren,
by body,
speech
and mind, -
that is called
'action that is new.'

§

And what, Brethren, is
the ceasing of action?

That ceasing of action by body,
speech
and mind,
by which one contacts freedom, -
that is called
'the ceasing of action.'

§

And what, Brethren, is
the way leading to the ceasing of action?

It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, to wit:

Right View,
Right Intention,
Right Speech,
Right Doing,
Right Living,
Right Effort,
Right Mindfulness,
Right Concentration.

§

This, Brethren, is called
'the way leading to the ceasing of action.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught you action that is old
and action that is new.

I have taught you
the ceasing of action
and the way leading to the ceasing of action.

Whatever, Brethren, should be done by a teacher out of compassion,
for the profit of his disciples,
that have I done,
taking pity on you.

Here are the roots of trees, brethren.

Here are lonely places to dwell in.

Be not remiss, brethren.

Be not regretful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."[5]

---

[1] Kamma.

[2] Comy. 'Eye in itself is not old, but it has come about by former actions.'

[3] Abhisañcetayitaṇ (= cetanāya pakappitaṇ Comy.)

[4] Vedanīyaṇ (= vedanāya catthu. Comy.)

[5] = M. i, 16, iii, 302.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 146

Paṭhama Sappāya Suttaṃ

Helpful (i)

---

[133] [86]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
a way that is helpful for Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is that way?

Herein, Brethren, a brother regards the eye as impermanent.

He regards objects as impermanent.

He regards eye-consciousness as impermanent.

He regards eye-contact, as impermanent.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by eye-contact, - that also he regards as impermanent.

■

He regards the ear as impermanent.

He regards sounds as impermanent.

He regards ear-consciousness as impermanent.

He regards ear-contact, as impermanent.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by ear-contact, -
that also he regards as impermanent.

■

He regards the nose as impermanent.

He regards scents as impermanent.

He regards nose-consciousness as impermanent.

He regards nose-contact, as impermanent.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by nose-contact, -
that also he regards as impermanent.

■

He regards the tongue as impermanent.

He regards savours as impermanent.

He regards tongue-consciousness as impermanent.

He regards tongue-contact, as impermanent.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by tongue-contact, -
that also he regards as impermanent.

■

He regards the body as impermanent.

He regards tangibles as impermanent.

He regards body-consciousness as impermanent.

He regards body-contact, as impermanent.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by body-contact, -

that also he regards as impermanent.

■

He regards the mind as impermanent.

He regards mind-states as impermanent.

He regards mind-consciousness as impermanent.

He regards mind-contact, as impermanent.

That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by mind-contact, -
that also he regards as impermanent.

This, Brethren, is the way that is helpful for Nibbāna."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 147

Dutiya Sappāya Suttaṃ

Helpful (ii)

---

[86]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
a way that is helpful for Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is that way?

Herein, Brethren, a brother regards the eye as suffering.

He regards objects as suffering.

He regards eye-consciousness as suffering.

He regards eye-contact, as suffering.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by eye-contact,
-
that also he regards as suffering.

■

He regards the ear as suffering.

He regards sounds as suffering.

He regards ear-consciousness as suffering.

He regards ear-contact, as suffering.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by ear-contact,
-
that also he regards as suffering.

■

He regards the nose as suffering.

He regards scents as suffering.

He regards nose-consciousness as suffering.

He regards nose-contact, as suffering.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by nose-contact, -
that also he regards as suffering.

■

He regards the tongue as suffering.

He regards savours as suffering.

He regards tongue-consciousness as suffering.

He regards tongue-contact, as suffering.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by tongue-contact, -
that also he regards as suffering.

■

He regards the body as suffering.

He regards tangibles as suffering.

He regards body-consciousness as suffering.

He regards body-contact, as suffering.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by body-contact, -
that also he regards as suffering.

■

He regards the mind as suffering.

He regards mind-states as suffering.

He regards mind-consciousness as suffering.

He regards mind-contact, as suffering.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by mind-contact, -
that also he regards as suffering.

This, Brethren, is the way that is helpful for Nibbāna."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 148

Tatiya Sappāya Suttaṃ

Helpful (iii)

---

[86]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
a way that is helpful for Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is that way?

Herein, Brethren, a brother regards the eye as without the self.

He regards objects as without the self.

He regards eye-consciousness as without the self.

He regards eye-contact, as without the self.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by eye-contact,
-
that also he regards as without the self.

■

He regards the ear as without the self.

He regards sounds as without the self.

He regards ear-consciousness as without the self.

He regards ear-contact, as without the self.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by ear-contact,
-
that also he regards as without the self.

■

He regards the nose as without the self.

He regards scents as without the self.

He regards nose-consciousness as without the self.

He regards nose-contact, as without the self.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by nose-contact, -
that also he regards as without the self.

■

He regards the tongue as without the self.

He regards savours as without the self.

He regards tongue-consciousness as without the self.

He regards tongue-contact, as without the self.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by tongue-contact, -
that also he regards as without the self.

■

He regards the body as without the self.

He regards tangibles as without the self.

He regards body-consciousness as without the self.

He regards body-contact, as without the self.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by body-contact, -
that also he regards as without the self.

■

He regards the mind as without the self.

He regards mind-states as without the self.

He regards mind-consciousness as without the self.

He regards mind-contact, as without the self.

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, which arises by mind-contact, -
that also he regards as without the self.

This, Brethren, is the way that is helpful for Nibbāna."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 149

Catuttha Sappāya Suttaṃ

Helpful (iv)

---

[86]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren,
a way that is helpful for Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is that way?

Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the eye permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are objects permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is eye-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from eye-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the ear permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are sounds permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is ear-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from ear-contact,
-
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the nose permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are scents permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-consciousness permanetn
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is nose-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from nose-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the tongue permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are savours permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is tongue-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from tongue-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the body permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Are things tactile permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is body-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,

by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Is body-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from body-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"Now what think ye, brethren?

Is the mind permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Are mind-states permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-consciousness permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is mind-contact permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"That weal or woe or neutral state experienced, that arises from mind-contact, -
is that permanent
or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
woeful,
by nature changeable, -
is it fitting to regard that as:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self?'"

"Surely not, lord."

§

"So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

This, Brethren, is the way that is helpful for Nibbāna."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 150

Antevāsika Suttaṃ

Resident Pupil

---

[136] [86]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Without a resident pupil, Brethren,
and without a teacher[1]
this righteous life is lived.

A brother who dwells with a resident pupil or dwells with a teacher dwells woefully,
dwells not at ease.

And how, Brethren, does a brother who has a resident pupil,
who has a teacher,
not dwell at ease?

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who sees an object with the eye
there arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.[2]

Evil, unprofitable states are resident,
reside in him.

Hence he is called
'co-resident.'

They beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling with a teacher.'

■

[87] Herein, Brethren, in a brother who hears a sound with the ear
there arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are resident,
reside in him.

Hence he is called
'co-resident.'

They beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling with a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who smells a scent with the nose
there arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are resident,
reside in him.

Hence he is called
'co-resident.'

They beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling with a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who tastes a savour with the tongue
there arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are resident,
reside in him.

Hence he is called
'co-resident.'

They beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling with a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who contacts a tangible with the body
there arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are resident,
reside in him.

Hence he is called
'co-resident.'

They beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling with a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who cognizes a mind-state with the mind
there arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are resident,
reside in him.

Hence he is called
'co-resident.'

They beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling with a teacher.'[3]

Thus, Brethren, a brother who has a resident pupil,
who has a teacher,
dwells not at ease.

§

And how, Brethren, does a brother without a resident pupil, without a teacher,
dwell at ease?[ed1]

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who sees an object with the eye
there do not arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are not resident,
do not reside in him.

Hence he is called
'not co-resident.'

They do not beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states do not beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling without a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who hears a sound with the ear
there do not arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are not resident,
do not reside in him.

Hence he is called
'not co-resident.'

They do not beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states do not beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling without a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who smells a scent with the nose
there do not arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are not resident,
do not reside in him.

Hence he is called
'not co-resident.'

They do not beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states do not beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling without a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who tastes a savour with the tongue
there do not arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are not resident,
do not reside in him.

Hence he is called
'not co-resident.'

They do not beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states do not beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling without a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who contacts a tangible with the body
there do not arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are not resident,
do not reside in him.

Hence he is called
'not co-resident.'

They do not beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states do not beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling without a teacher.'

■

Herein, Brethren, in a brother who cognizes a mind-state with the mind
there do not arise evil, unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
akin to states that bind.

Evil, unprofitable states are not resident,
do not reside in him.

Hence he is called
'not co-resident.'

They do not beset him,
those evil, unprofitable states do not beset him.

Therefore is he called
'dwelling without a teacher.'

Even so, Brethren, a brother who has no resident pupil, who has no teacher,
dwells at ease.

§

Without a resident pupil, Brethren,
and without a teacher
is this righteous life lived.

But with a resident pupil, Brethren, and with a teacher,
a brother lives woefully and not at ease.

Without a resident pupil, Brethren,
and without a teacher,
a brother lives happily and at ease."

---

[1] Quoted at M. Nidd. 362, 469. Comy. anto-vasana-kilesa ... ācaranaka-kilesa-virahitaṇ.

[2] Cf. §§ 96, 190.

[3] Sācariyako. 'They are his master, encompass him, work him, saying, " Apply such and such medical treatment, do such and such menial duties," and so are his master.' Comy.

[ed1] Woodward has abridged this entire section with the statement: "The same repeated negatively). I have re-constructed what he might have done, using his vocabulary, using the Pali as guide.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 151

'Kim Atthiya?' Suttaṃ

To What Purpose?

---

[138] [87]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Brethren, if the Wanderers who hold other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friend,
for which the righteous life is lived under Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, Brethren,
thus should ye explain it
to those Wanderers who hold other views: -

'It is for the full understanding of ill, friend, that the righteous life is lived
under Gotama the recluse.'

And if, Brethren, those Wanderers question you further:

'What is that ill, friend, fully to understand which
the righteous life is lived
under Gotama the recluse?'

thus questioned,
thus should ye explain it to them: -

'The eye, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Objects, friend, are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Eye-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Eye-contact, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

The weal or woe or neutral states experienced that arise owing to eye-contact, -
those also are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

■

The ear, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Sounds, friend, are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Ear-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Ear-contact, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

The weal or woe or neutral states experienced that arise owing to ear-contact, -
those also are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

■

The nose, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Scents, friend, are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Nose-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Nose-contact, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

The weal or woe or neutral states experienced that arise owing to nose-contact, -
those also are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

■

The tongue, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Savours, friend, are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Tongue-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Tongue-contact, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

The weal or woe or neutral states experienced that arise owing to tongue-contact, -
those also are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

■

The body, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Tangibles, friend, are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Body-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Body-contact, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

The weal or woe or neutral states experienced that arise owing to body-contact, -
those also are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

■

The mind, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Mind-states, friend, are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Mind-consciousness, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

Mind-contact, friend, is ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.

The weal or woe or neutral states experienced that arise owing to mind-contact, -
those also are ill.

For fully understanding that,
the righteous life is lived.'

■

Thus questioned, Brethren,
thus should ye explain it
to those Wanderers who hold other views."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 152

'Atthi Nu Kho Pariyāyo?' Suttaṃ

Is There A Method?[1]

---

[138] [88]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Is there, Brethren, any method,
by following which
a brother, apart from belief,
apart from inclination,
apart from hearsay,
apart from argument as to method,
apart from reflection on reasons,
apart from delight in speculation,
could affirm insight, thus:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter?'"

"For us, lord, things have their root in the Exalted One,
their guide,
their resort.[2]

Well indeed were it
if the meaning of this that has been spoken were to manifest itself in the Exalted One.

Hearing it from him
the brethren will remember it."

"There is indeed a method, Brethren,
by following which
a brother, apart from belief,
apart from inclination,

apart from hearsay,
apart from argument as to method,
apart from reflection on reasons,
apart from delight in speculation,
could affirm insight,[3] thus:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter?'

And what is that method?

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
beholding an object with the eye,
either recognizes within him the existence
of lust, malice and illusion, thus:

'I have lust, malice and illusion,'

or recognizes the non-existence of these qualities within him, thus:

'I have not lust, malice and illusion.'

Now as to that recognition
of their existence or non-existence within him,
are these conditions,
I ask,
to be understood by belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Are not these states to be understood
by seeing them with the eye of wisdom?"

"Surely, lord."

"Then, Brethren,
this is the method
by following which,
apart from belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation
whereby a brother could affirm insight thus:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

■

[89] Again, as to hearing a sound with the ear,
either recognizes within him the existence
of lust, malice and illusion, thus:

'I have lust, malice and illusion,'

or recognizes the non-existence of these qualities within him, thus:

'I have not lust, malice and illusion.'

Now as to that recognition
of their existence or non-existence within him,
are these conditions,

I ask,
to be understood by belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Are not these states to be understood
by seeing them with the eye of wisdom?"

"Surely, lord."

"Then, Brethren,
this is the method
by following which,
apart from belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation
whereby a brother could affirm insight thus:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

■

Again, as to smelling a scent with the nose,
either recognizes within him the existence
of lust, malice and illusion, thus:

'I have lust, malice and illusion,'

or recognizes the non-existence of these qualities within him, thus:

'I have not lust, malice and illusion.'

Now as to that recognition
of their existence or non-existence within him,
are these conditions,
I ask,
to be understood by belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Are not these states to be understood
by seeing them with the eye of wisdom?"

"Surely, lord."

"Then, Brethren,
this is the method
by following which,
apart from belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation
whereby a brother could affirm insight thus:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

■

Again, as to tasting a savour with the tongue,
either recognizes within him the existence
of lust, malice and illusion, thus:

'I have lust, malice and illusion,'

or recognizes the non-existence of these qualities within him, thus:

'I have not lust, malice and illusion.'

Now as to that recognition
of their existence or non-existence within him,
are these conditions,
I ask,
to be understood by belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Are not these states to be understood
by seeing them with the eye of wisdom?"

"Surely, lord."

"Then, Brethren,
this is the method
by following which,

apart from belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation
whereby a brother could affirm insight thus:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

■

Again, as to contacting a tangible with the body,
either recognizes within him the existence
of lust, malice and illusion, thus:

'I have lust, malice and illusion,'

or recognizes the non-existence of these qualities within him, thus:

'I have not lust, malice and illusion.'

Now as to that recognition
of their existence or non-existence within him,
are these conditions,
I ask,
to be understood by belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Are not these states to be understood
by seeing them with the eye of wisdom?"

"Surely, lord."

"Then, Brethren,
this is the method
by following which,
apart from belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation
whereby a brother could affirm insight thus:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

■

Again, as to cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
either recognizes within him the existence
of lust, malice and illusion, thus:

'I have lust, malice and illusion,'

or recognizes the non-existence of these qualities within him, thus:

'I have not lust, malice and illusion.'

Now as to that recognition
of their existence or non-existence within him,
are these conditions,
I ask,
to be understood by belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Are not these states to be understood
by seeing them with the eye of wisdom?"

"Surely, lord."

"Then, Brethren,
this is the method
by following which,
apart from belief,
or inclination,
or hearsay,
or argument as to method,
or reflection on reasons,
or delight in speculation
whereby a brother could affirm insight thus:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

■

"Then, Brethren, that is the method,
by following which
a brother, apart from belief,
apart from inclination,
apart from hearsay,
apart from argument as to method,
apart from reflection on reasons,
apart from delight in speculation,
could affirm insight, thus:

'Elided is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

---

[1] Cf. K.S. ii, 82.

[2] Text abbreviates this formula in reply, which I give here in full. Cf. K.S. ii, 19, 56, etc.

[3] Aññaṇ vyākareyya (= arahattaṇ. Comy.).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 153

Indriya-Sampanna Suttaṃ

Faculty[1]

---

[140] [89]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"'Perfect in faculty!

Perfect in faculty!'[2] is the saying, lord.

How far, lord,
is one perfect in faculty?"

§

"If a brother, who dwells
observing the rise and fall
in the eye as faculty,
is repelled by the eye as faculty,
thus repelled
he lusts not for it.

Then the knowledge arises in him:

'Freed am I by freedom,'

so that he realizes:

'Rooted out is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,

for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Thus far a brother is perfect in faculty.

■

If a brother, who dwells
observing the rise and fall
in the ear as faculty,
is repelled by the ear as faculty,
thus repelled
he lusts not for it.

Then the knowledge arises in him:

'Freed am I by freedom,'

so that he realizes:

'Rooted out is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Thus far a brother is perfect in faculty.

■

If a brother, who dwells
observing the rise and fall
in the nose as faculty, is repelled by the nose as faculty,
thus repelled
he lusts not for it.

Then the knowledge arises in him:

'Freed am I by freedom,'

so that he realizes:

'Rooted out is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Thus far a brother is perfect in faculty.

■

If a brother, who dwells
observing the rise and fall
in the tongue as faculty, is repelled by the tongue as faculty,
thus repelled
he lusts not for it.

Then the knowledge arises in him:

'Freed am I by freedom,'

so that he realizes:

'Rooted out is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Thus far a brother is perfect in faculty.

■

If a brother, who dwells
observing the rise and fall
in the body as faculty, is repelled by the body as faculty,
thus repelled
he lusts not for it.

Then the knowledge arises in him:

'Freed am I by freedom,'

so that he realizes:

'Rooted out is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Thus far a brother is perfect in faculty.

■

If a brother, who dwells
observing the rise and fall
in the mind as faculty, is repelled by the mind as faculty,
thus repelled
he lusts not for it.

Then the knowledge arises in him:

'Freed am I by freedom,'

so that he realizes:

'Rooted out is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Thus far a brother is perfect in faculty."

---

[1] For indriya (as power or controlling principle) see Compendium, Appendix.

[2] Indriya-sampanno (= paripaññindriya. Comy.).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ III: Paññāsaka Tatiya
5. Nava-Purāṇa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ III: The 'Third Fifty' Suttas

5. The Chapter on 'New and Old'

Sutta 154

Dhamma-Kathika Suttaṃ

Preacher[1]

---

[141] [89]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"'Norm-preacher!

Norm-preacher!' is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, how far is one a Norm-preacher?"

§

"If a brother preach a doctrine of repugnance for the eye,
for its fading out,
for its cessation,
he may well be called[2]
[90] 'a brother who is a Norm-preacher.'

If a brother be practised in repugnance for the eye,
so that it fades out
and ceases,
well may he be called
'one who is practised in what conforms to the Norm.'

If a brother be set free from grasping
by such repugnance,
fading out
and ceasing of the eye,
well may he be called
'winner of Nibbāna in this very life.'

■

If a brother preach a doctrine of repugnance for the ear,
for its fading out,

for its cessation,
he may well be called
'a brother who is a Norm-preacher.'

If a brother be practised in repugnance for the eye,
so that it fades out
and ceases,
well may he be called
'one who is practised in what conforms to the Norm.'

If a brother be set free from grasping
by such repugnance,
fading out
and ceasing of the eye,
well may he be called
'winner of Nibbāna in this very life.'

■

If a brother preach a doctrine of repugnance for the nose,
for its fading out,
for its cessation,
he may well be called
'a brother who is a Norm-preacher.'

If a brother be practised in repugnance for the eye,
so that it fades out
and ceases,
well may he be called
'one who is practised in what conforms to the Norm.'

If a brother be set free from grasping
by such repugnance,
fading out
and ceasing of the eye,
well may he be called
'winner of Nibbāna in this very life.'

■

If a brother preach a doctrine of repugnance for the tongue,
for its fading out,
for its cessation,
he may well be called
'a brother who is a Norm-preacher.'

If a brother be practised in repugnance for the eye,
so that it fades out
and ceases,
well may he be called
'one who is practised in what conforms to the Norm.'

If a brother be set free from grasping
by such repugnance,
fading out
and ceasing of the eye,
well may he be called
'winner of Nibbāna in this very life.'

■

If a brother preach a doctrine of repugnance for the body,
for its fading out,
for its cessation,
he may well be called
'a brother who is a Norm-preacher.'

If a brother be practised in repugnance for the eye,
so that it fades out
and ceases,
well may he be called
'one who is practised in what conforms to the Norm.'

If a brother be set free from grasping
by such repugnance,

fading out
and ceasing of the eye,
well may he be called
'winner of Nibbāna in this very life.'

■

If a brother preach a doctrine of repugnance for the mind,
for its fading out,
for its cessation,
he may well be called
'a brother who is a Norm-preacher.'

If a brother be practised in repugnance for the eye,
so that it fades out
and ceases,
well may he be called
'one who is practised in what conforms to the Norm.'

If a brother be set free from grasping
by such repugnance,
fading out
and ceasing of the eye,
well may he be called
'winner of Nibbāna in this very life.'

■

---

[1] Cf. K.S. ii, 14; iii, 140.

[2] Alaṇ vacanāya lit. 'this is enough for him to be termed. ...

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 155

Paṭhama Nandi-k-Khaya Suttaṃ (Ajjhatta)

The Destruction of the Lure (i)[1]

---

[91]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Brethren, when a brother sees that the eye is impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'[2]

■

When a brother sees that the ear is impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that the nose is impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that the tongue is impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that the body is impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that the mind is impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'"

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 44, 45.

[2] This is called arahatta-phala. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 156

Dutiya Nandi-k-Khaya Suttaṃ (Bāhirana)

The Destruction of the Lure (ii)

---

[91]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Brethren, when a brother sees that objects are impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that sounds are impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,

and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that scents are impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that savours are impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,

and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that tangibles are impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

When a brother sees that mind-states are impermanent,
he, rightly perceiving
'this is the right view,'
is repelled thereby.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,

and it is called
'well-freed.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 157

Tatiya Nandi-k-khaya Suttaṃ (Ajjhattana/Yoniso)

The Destruction of the Lure (iii)

---

[91]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Do ye apply your minds thoroughly,[1] Brethren,
to the eye,
and regard its true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to the eye,
and so regards it,
feels repelled by the eye.

By the destruction of the lure of the eye
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to the ear,
and regard its true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to the ear,
and so regards it,
feels repelled by the ear.

By the destruction of the lure of the ear
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to the nose,
and regard its true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to the nose,
and so regards it,
feels repelled by the nose.

By the destruction of the lure of the nose
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to the tongue,
and regard its true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to the tongue,
and so regards it,
feels repelled by the tongue.

By the destruction of the lure of the tongue
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to the body,
and regard its true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to the body,
and so regards it,
feels repelled by the body.

By the destruction of the lure of the body
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to the mind,
and regard its true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to the mind,
and so regards it,
feels repelled by the mind.

By the destruction of the lure of the mind
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'"

[1] Yoniso manasi-karotha.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 158

Catuttha Nandi-k-khaya Suttaṃ (Bahira/Yoniso)

The Destruction of the Lure (iv)

---

[91]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to objects,
and regard their true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to objects,
and so regards them,
feels repelled by objects.

By the destruction of the lure of objects
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to sounds,
and regard their true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to sounds,
and so regards them,
feels repelled by sounds.

By the destruction of the lure of sounds
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to scents,
and regard their true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to scents,
and so regards them,
feels repelled by scents.

By the destruction of the lure of scents
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to savours,
and regard their true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to savours,
and so regards them,
feels repelled by savours.

By the destruction of the lure of savours
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren, to tangibles,
and regard their true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to tangibles,
and so regards them,
feels repelled by tangibles.

By the destruction of the lure of tangibles
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'

■

Do ye apply your minds thoroughly, Brethren,
to mind-states,
and regard their true nature as impermanent.

He who so applies his mind thoroughly to mind-states,
and so regards them,
feels repelled by mind-states.

By the destruction of the lure of mind-states
comes the destruction of the lure.

By the destruction of the lure of lust
comes the destruction of lust.

By the destruction of lust
comes the destruction of the lure.

By this destruction of the lure
the heart is set free,
and it is called
'well-freed.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 159

Paṭhama Jīvakam-Bavane aka Samādhi Suttaṃ

In Jīvaka's Mango Grove (i)

---

[91]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha in Jivaka's[1] Mango Grove.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

Then the Exalted One thus addressed the brethren:

[92] "Do ye practise concentration, brethren.

To a brother who is composed
there is a manifestation of a thing's reality.[2]

And what, Brethren, is manifested as it really is?

The impermanence of the eye, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of objects is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of eye-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of eye-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to eye-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the ear, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of sounds is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of ear-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of ear-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to ear-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the nose, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of scents is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of nose-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of nose-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to nose-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the tongue, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of savours is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of tongue-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of tongue-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to tongue-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the body, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of tangibles is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of body-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of body-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to body-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the mind, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of mind-states is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of mind-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of mind-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to mind-contact that also is manifested as it really is

Do ye practise concentration, brethren.

To a brother who is composed
there is a manifestation of a thing's reality."

---

[1] Cf. Sisters, 148 n. Jīvaka was physician to Bimbisāra, rajah of Magadha.

[2] Yathābhūtaṇ okkhāyati. I follow Comy., who says paññāyati, pākaṭaṇ hoti, tho meaning of akkhāyati. But Pali Dict. s.v. (the only instance of the word) takes it as meaning 'to lie low, be restrained.' Three Sinhalese MSS. of text read pakkhāyati. Text and my MSS. of Comy. read okkhāyati.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 160

Dutiya Jīvakam-Bavane aka Paṭisallāna Suttaṃ

In Jīvaka's Mango Grove (ii)

---

[92]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
in Jivaka's Mango Grove.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

Then the Exalted One thus addressed the brethren:

"Do ye practise application to solitude,[1] brethren.

To a brother who is solitary
there is a manifestation of a thing's reality.

And what, Brethren, is manifested as it really is?

The impermanence of the eye, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of objects is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of eye-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of eye-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to eye-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the ear, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of sounds is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of ear-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of ear-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to ear-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the nose, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of scents is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of nose-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of nose-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to nose-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the tongue, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of savours is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of tongue-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of tongue-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to tongue-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the body, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of tangibles is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of body-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of body-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to body-contact that also is manifested as it really is

■

The impermanence of the mind, Brethren, is manifested as it really is
the impermanence of mind-states is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of mind-consciousness is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of mind-contact is manifested as it really is,
the impermanence of the weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to mind-contact that also is manifested as it really is

Do ye practise application to solitude, brethren.

To a brother who is solitary
there is a manifestation of a thing's reality.'

---

[1] Paṭisallāne yogaṇ āpajjatha. Cf. p. 51, n. 2.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 161

Paṭhama Koṭṭhita Suttaṃ (Anicca)

Koṭṭhika (i)

---

[145]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
in Jivaka's Mango Grove.

Then the venerable Koṭṭhika[1] the Great came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One:

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me the Norm in brief,
hearing which teaching from the Exalted One
I might dwell solitary,
remote,
earnest,
ardent
and aspiring."

§

"What is impermanent, Koṭṭhika, -
you should put away desire for that.

And what is impermanent?

The eye, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Objects, Koṭṭhika, are impermanent.

You should put away desire for them.

Eye-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Eye-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to eye-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The ear, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Sounds, Koṭṭhika, are impermanent.

You should put away desire for them.

Ear-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Ear-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to ear-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The nose, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Scents, Koṭṭhika, are impermanent.

You should put away desire for them.

Nose-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Nose-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to nose-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The tongue, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Savours, Koṭṭhika, are impermanent.

You should put away desire for them.

Tongue-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Tongue-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to tongue-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The body, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Tangibles, Koṭṭhika, are impermanent.

You should put away desire for them.

Body-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Body-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to body-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The mind, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Mind-states, Koṭṭhika, are impermanent.

You should put away desire for them.

Mind-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

Mind-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to mind-contact, Koṭṭhika, is impermanent.

You should put away desire for that.

■

What is impermanent, Koṭṭhika, -
you should put away debire for that."

---

[1] Koṭṭhita. Cf. Brethren, 6 and n., M. i, 292 f.; K.S. ii, 79.
He was famous for his proficiency in jhāna. Infra, § 191

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 162

Dutiya Koṭṭhita Suttaṃ (Dukkha)

Koṭṭhika (ii)

---

[93]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha in Jivaka's Mango Grove.

Then the venerable Koṭṭhika the Great came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,

and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One:

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me the Norm in brief,
hearing which teaching from the Exalted One
I might dwell solitary,
remote,
earnest,
ardent
and aspiring."

§

"What is Ill, Koṭṭhika, -
you should put away desire for that.

And what is Ill?

The eye, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Objects, Koṭṭhika, are Ill.

You should put away desire for them.

Eye-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Eye-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to eye-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The ear, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Sounds, Koṭṭhika, are Ill.

You should put away desire for them.

Ear-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Ear-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to ear-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The nose, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Scents, Koṭṭhika, are Ill.

You should put away desire for them.

Nose-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Nose-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to nose-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The tongue, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Savours, Koṭṭhika, are Ill.

You should put away desire for them.

Tongue-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Tongue-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to tongue-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The body, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Tangibles, Koṭṭhika, are Ill.

You should put away desire for them.

Body-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Body-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to body-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The mind, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Mind-states, Koṭṭhika, are Ill.

You should put away desire for them.

Mind-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

Mind-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to mind-contact, Koṭṭhika, is Ill.

You should put away desire for that.

■

What is Ill, Koṭṭhika, -
you should put away debire for that."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 163

Tatiya Koṭṭhita Suttaṃ (Anatta)

Koṭṭhika (iii)

---

[93]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha in Jivaka's Mango Grove.

Then the venerable Koṭṭhika the Great came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,

and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One:

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me the Norm in brief,
hearing which teaching from the Exalted One
I might dwell solitary,
remote,
earnest,
ardent
and aspiring."

§

"What is without the self, Koṭṭhika, -
you should put away desire for that.

And what is without the self?

The eye, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Objects, Koṭṭhika, are without the self.

You should put away desire for them.

Eye-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Eye-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to eye-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The ear, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Sounds, Koṭṭhika, are without the self.

You should put away desire for them.

Ear-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Ear-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to ear-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The nose, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Scents, Koṭṭhika, are without the self.

You should put away desire for them.

Nose-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Nose-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to nose-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The tongue, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Savours, Koṭṭhika, are without the self.

You should put away desire for them.

Tongue-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Tongue-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to tongue-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The body, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Tangibles, Koṭṭhika, are without the self.

You should put away desire for them.

Body-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Body-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to body-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

■

The mind, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Mind-states, Koṭṭhika, are without the self.

You should put away desire for them.

Mind-consciousness, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

Mind-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

The weal or woe or neutral state experienced that arises owing to mind-contact, Koṭṭhika, is without the self.

You should put away desire for that.

■

What is without the self, Koṭṭhika, -
you should put away debire for that."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 164

Micchā-Diṭṭhi Pahāna Suttaṃ

Wrong View

---

[93]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha in Jivaka's Mango Grove.

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,

and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, how knowing,
how seeing,
does one abandon wrong view?"

§

By knowing,
by seeing the eye as impermanent, brother
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing objects as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced

that arises owing to eye-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the ear as impermanent, brother
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing sounds as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to ear-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the nose as impermanent, brother
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing scents as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to nose-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue as impermanent, brother
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing savours as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-contact as impermanent

wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to tongue-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the body as impermanent, brother
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing tangibles as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to body-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the mind as impermanent, brother
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing mind-states as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-consciousness as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to mind-contact as impermanent
wrong view is abandoned."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 165

Sakkāya-Diṭṭhi Pahāna Suttaṃ

The Person Pack[1]

---

[93]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha in Jivaka's Mango Grove.

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,

and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, how knowing,
how seeing,
does one abandon the person-pack view?"

§

"By knowing,
by seeing the eye as impermanent, brother
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing objects as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced

that arises owing to eye-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the ear as impermanent, brother
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing sounds as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to ear-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the nose as impermanent, brother
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing scents as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to nose-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue as impermanent, brother
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing savours as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-contact as impermanent

the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to tongue-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the body as impermanent, brother
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing tangibles as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to body-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the mind as impermanent, brother
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing mind-states as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-consciousness as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to mind-contact as impermanent
the person-pack view is abandoned."

---

[1] Sakkāya. Cf. K.S. iii, 134 n.; for sakkāya-diṭṭhi, ib. 86 n. The first fetter to be abandoned on the Path is the view that this individual-group of five factors, the personality (pañca-khhandha), is permanent, has, was or is, the self.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
1. Nandi-k-Khaya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

1. The Chapter on the Destruction of the Lure

Sutta 166

Attanu-Diṭṭhi Pahāna Suttaṃ

About the Self[1]

---

[93]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha in Jivaka's Mango Grove.

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,

and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, how knowing,
how seeing,
does one abandon speculation about the self?"

§

"By knowing,
by seeing the eye as impermanent, brother
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing objects as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the eye-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced

that arises owing to eye-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the ear as impermanent, brother
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing sounds as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the ear-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to ear-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the nose as impermanent, brother
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing scents as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the nose-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to nose-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue as impermanent, brother
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing savours as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-contact as impermanent

speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the tongue-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to tongue-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the body as impermanent, brother
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing tangibles as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the body-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to body-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

■

By knowing,
by seeing the mind as impermanent, brother
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing mind-states as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the mind-consciousness as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

By knowing,
by seeing the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
that arises owing to mind-contact as impermanent
speculation about the self is abandoned.

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 153, attānu-diṭṭhi

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
2. Saṭṭhi-Peyyālam

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

2. The Sixty Summaries

Suttas 167-186

---

[93]

Part I

Sutta 167

Chandena Suttaṃ (1-3)

By Way of Desire (i-iii) (Impermanence — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I Desire

"What is impermanent, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned.

And what is impermanent?

The eye, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

What is impermanent, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned."

§ II
Lust

"What is impermanent, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is impermanent?

The eye, brethren, is impermanent.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is impermanent.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

What is impermanent, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned."

§ III
Desire and Lust

"What is impermanent, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is impermanent?

The eye, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

What is impermanent, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned."

---

[94]

Sutta 168

Chandena Suttaṃ (4-6)

By Way of Desire (iv-vi) (Ill — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I Desire

"What is Ill, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned.

And what is Ill?

The eye, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

What is Ill, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned."

§ II
Lust

"What is Ill, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is Ill?

The eye, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

What is Ill, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned."

§ III
Desire and Lust

"What is Ill, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is Ill?

The eye, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

What is Ill, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned."

Sutta 169

Chandena Suttaṃ (7-9)

By Way of Desire (vii-ix) (Without the Self — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I Desire

"What is without self, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned.

And what is without self?

The eye, brethren, is without self.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is without self.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is without self.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is without self.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is without self.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is without self.

Desire for that must be abandoned.

What is without self, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned."

§ II
Lust

"What is without self, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is without self?

The eye, brethren, is without self.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is without self.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is without self.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is without self.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is without self.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is without self.

Lust for that must be abandoned.

What is without self, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned."

§ III
Desire and Lust

"What is without self, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is without self?

The eye, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The ear, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The nose, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The tongue, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The body, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

The mind, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

What is without self, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned."

Sutta 170

Chandena Suttaṃ (10-12)

By Way of Desire (x-xii) (Imperemanence — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I Desire

"What is impermenent, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned.

And what is impermanent?

Objects, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

What is impermenent, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned."

§ II
Lust

"What is impermenent, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is impermanent?

Objects, brethren, are impermanent.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

What is impermenent, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned."

§ III
Desire and Lust

"What is impermenent, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is impermanent?

Objects, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

What is impermenent, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned."

Sutta 171

Chandena Suttaṃ (13-15)

By Way of Desire (xiii-xv) (Ill — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I Desire

"What is Ill, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned.

And what is Ill?

Objects, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Scents, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, is Ill.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

What is Ill, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned."

§ II
Lust

"What is Ill, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is Ill?

Objects, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Scents, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, is Ill.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

What is Ill, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned."

§ III
Desire and Lust

"What is Ill, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is Ill?

Objects, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Scents, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, is Ill.

Desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

What is Ill, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned."

Sutta 172

Chandena Suttaṃ (16-18)

By Way of Desire (xvi-xviii) (Without the Self — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I Desire

"What is without self, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned.

And what is without self?

Objects, brethren, is without self.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, is without self.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Scen ts, brethren, is without self.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, is without self.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, is without self.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, is without self.

Desire for them must be abandoned.

What is without self, brethren, -
desire for that must be abandoned."

§ II
Lust

"What is without self, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is without self?

Objects, brethren, is without self.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, is without self.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Scents, brethren, is without self.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, is without self.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, is without self.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, is without self.

Lust for them must be abandoned.

What is without self, brethren, -
lust for that must be abandoned."

§ III
Desire and Lust

"What is without self, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned.

And what is without self?

Objects, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for them must be abandoned.

Sounds, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for them must be abandoned.

Scents brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for them must be abandoned.

Savours, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for them must be abandoned.

Tangibles, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for them must be abandoned.

Mind-states, brethren, is without self.

Desire and lust for them must be abandoned.

What is without self, brethren, -
desire and lust for that must be abandoned."

Part II

Sutta 173

Atītena Suttaṃ (1-3)

By Way of the Past (i-iii) (Impermanence — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

The eye, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

The body, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,

is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

The eye, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.[1]

The ear, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

The body, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

The eye, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

The body, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[95]

Sutta 174

Atītena Suttaṃ (4-6)

By Way of the Past (iv-vi) (Ill — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

The eye, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

The ear, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

The nose, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

The body, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

The mind, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

The eye, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

The ear, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

The nose, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

The body, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

The mind, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,

is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

The eye, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

The ear, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

The nose, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

The body, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

The mind, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 175

Atītena Suttaṃ (7-9)

By Way of the Past (vii-ix) (Without the Self — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

The eye, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

The ear, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

The nose, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

The tongue, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

The body, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

The mind, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

The eye, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

The ear, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

The nose, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

The tongue, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

The body, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

The mind, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

The eye, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

The ear, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

The nose, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

The tongue, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

The body, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

The mind, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,

is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 176

Atītena Suttaṃ (10-12)

By Way of the Past (x-xii) (Imperemanence — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

Objects, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,

is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

Objects, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

Objects, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
