is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 177

Atītena Suttaṃ (13-15)

By Way of the Past (xiii-xv) (Ill — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

Objects, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

Sounds, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

Scents, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

Savours, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

Tangibles, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

Mind-states, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

Objects, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

Sounds, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

Scents, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

Savours, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

Tangibles, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

Mind-states, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,

is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

Objects, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

Sounds, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

Scents, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

Savours, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

Tangibles, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

Mind-states, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 178

Atītena Suttaṃ (16-18)

By Way of the Past (xvi-xviii) (Without the Self — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

Objects, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Sounds, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Scents, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Savours, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Tangibles, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Mind-states, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

Objects, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Sounds, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Scents, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Savours, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Tangibles, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Mind-states, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

Objects, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Sounds, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Scents, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Savours, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Tangibles, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Mind-states, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present..

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,

is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Part III

Sutta 179

Yadanicca Suttaṃ (1-3)

What is Impermanent (i-iii) (Impermanence — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

The eye, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,

by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

The eye, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent, not yet come.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

[96]

§ III
Present

The eye, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 180

Yadanicca Suttaṃ (4-6)

What is Impermanent (iv-vi) (Ill — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

The eye, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

The eye, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is Ill, not yet come.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

The eye, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 181

Yadanicca Suttaṃ (7-9)

What is Impermanent (vii-ix) (Without the Self — Internal)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

The eye, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

The eye, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is without the self, not yet come.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

The eye, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The ear, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,

by right understanding.

The nose, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The tongue, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The body, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

The mind, brethren, is without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 182

Yadanicca Suttaṃ (10-12)

What is Impermanent (x-xii) (Imperemanence — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

Objects, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,

by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,

is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

Objects, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent, of the past.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent, of the future.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

Objects, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent, a thing of the present.

What is impermanent, that is Ill.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,

is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 183

Yadanicca Suttaṃ (13-15)

What is Impermanent (xiii-xv) (Ill — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

Objects, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

Objects, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are Ill, of the past.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are Ill, of the future.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

Objects, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are Ill, a thing of the present.

What is Ill, that is without the self.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Sutta 184

Yadanicca Suttaṃ (16-18)

What is Impermanent (xvi-xviii) (Without the Self — External)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I
Past

Objects, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,

by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,

is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Future

Objects, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are without the self, of the past.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are without the self, of the future.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,

is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Present

Objects, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Sounds, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Scents, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,

by right understanding.

Savours, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Tangibles, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present.

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

Mind-states, brethren, are without the self, a thing of the present..

Of what is without the self (one can say):

'That is not mine.

That am I not.

That is not my self.'

So should it be viewed,
as it really is,
by right understanding.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Part IV

Sutta 185

Ajjhatta Suttaṃ (1-3)

The Personal (i-iii)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I Impermanent

The eye, brethren, is impermanent.

The ear, brethren, is impermanent.

The nose, brethren, is impermanent.

The tongue, brethren, is impermanent.

The body, brethren, is impermanent.

The mind, brethren, is impermanent.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,

is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ II
Ill

The eye, brethren, is Ill.

The ear, brethren, is Ill.

The nose, brethren, is Ill.

The tongue, brethren, is Ill.

The body, brethren, is Ill.

The mind, brethren, is Ill.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,

is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight

that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Without Self

The eye, brethren, is without the self.

The ear, brethren, is without the self.

The nose, brethren, is without the self.

The tongue, brethren, is without the self.

The body, brethren, is without the self.

The mind, brethren, is without the self.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,

is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

Part V

Sutta 186

Bāhira Suttaṃ (1-3)

The External (i-iii)

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

§ I Impermanent

Objects, brethren, are impermanent.

Sounds, brethren, are impermanent.

Scents, brethren, are impermanent.

Savours, brethren, are impermanent.

Tangibles, brethren, are impermanent.

Mind-states, brethren, are impermanent.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,

is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

[97]

§ II
Ill

Objects, brethren, are Ill.

Sounds, brethren, are Ill.

Scents, brethren, are Ill.

Savours, brethren, are Ill.

Tangibles, brethren, are Ill.

Mind-states, brethren, are Ill.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,

is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

§ III
Without Self

Objects, brethren, are without the self.

Sounds, brethren, are without the self.

Scents, brethren, are without the self.

Savours, brethren, are without the self.

Tangibles, brethren, are without the self.

Mind-states, brethren, are without the self.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,
is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,

done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'"

---

[1] The action it has done in the past has yet to be worked out.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 187

Paṭhama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (i)[1]

---

[157] [97]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"'The ocean! The ocean!' Brethren, says the ignorant worldling.

But that, Brethren, is not the ocean
in the discipline of the Ariyan.

That ocean (of the worldling), Brethren, is a heap of water,
a great flood of water.

The eye of a man, Brethren,
is the ocean.

Its impulse is made of objects.

Whoso endureth that object-made impulse, -
of him, Brethren, it is said:

'He hath crossed over.

That ocean of the eye,
with its waves and whirlpools,[2]
its sharks and demons,
the brahmin hath crossed[3]
and gone beyond.

He standeth on dry ground.'

■

The ear of a man, Brethren,
is the ocean.

Its impulse is made of sounds.

Whoso endureth that sound-made impulse, -
of him, Brethren, it is said:

'He hath crossed over.

That ocean of the ear,
with its waves and whirlpools,
its sharks and demons,
the brahmin hath crossed
and gone beyond.

He standeth on dry ground.'

■

The nose of a man, Brethren,
is the ocean.

Its impulse is made of scents.

Whoso endureth that scent-made impulse, -
of him, Brethren, it is said:

'He hath crossed over.

That ocean of the nose,
with its waves and whirlpools,
its sharks and demons,
the brahmin hath crossed
and gone beyond.

He standeth on dry ground.'

■

The tongue of a man, Brethren,
is the ocean.

Its impulse is made of savours.

Whoso endureth that savour-made impulse, -
of him, Brethren, it is said:

'He hath crossed over.

That ocean of the tongue,
with its waves and whirlpools,
its sharks and demons,
the brahmin hath crossed
and gone beyond.

He standeth on dry ground.'

■

The body of a man, Brethren,
is the ocean.

Its impulse is made of tangibles.

Whoso endureth that tangibles-made impulse, -
of him, Brethren, it is said:

'He hath crossed over.

That ocean of the body,
with its waves and whirlpools,
its sharks and demons,
the brahmin hath crossed
and gone beyond.

He standeth on dry ground.'

■

The mind of a man, Brethren,
is the ocean.

Its impulse [98] is made of mind-states.

Whoso endureth that mind-state-made impulse, -
of him, Brethren, it is said:

'He hath crossed over.

That ocean of the mind,
with its waves and whirlpools,
its sharks and demons,
the brahmin hath crossed
and gone beyond.

He standeth on dry ground.'

■

Thus spake the Teacher: -

Whoso hath crossed this monster-teeming sea,
With its devils and fearsome waves impassable,
'Versed in the lore,' 'living the holy life,'
'Gone to world's end,'[4] and 'gone beyond' he's called.

---

[1] Cf. Udāna v, 5, and Comy. 'Here the eye is likened to the ocean because it can never be filled, never satisfied, however much is poured in.' Comy. (duppūraṇ'atthena vā'samuddaṇ' atthena vā) Cf.SnA. 275. Cf. also Dhamma-sangaṇi (B. Psych. Eth.), §§ 597, etc.

[2] At Itiv. 114, sa-rakkhasa, sa-gaha is explained as mātugāma. Sa-ummi is kodh'ūp, ūpāyāsa. Sāvaṭṭa is pañca-kāma-guṇā. Cf. A. ii, 123 (Numerical Sayings, Jayasundere, p. 156 ff.), and infra. § 200.

[3] Atari. A. ii, 46 (aor. of tarati).

[4] Lokantagū.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 188

Dutiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (ii)

---

[157] [98]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"'The ocean! The ocean!'[1] Brethren, says the ignorant worldling.

But that, Brethren, is not the ocean
in the discipline of the Ariyan.

That is a heap of water,
a great flood of water.

There are, Brethren,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are called 'ocean,' Brethren,
in the discipline of the Ariyan.

The world,
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
its hosts of recluses and brahmins,
its devas and mankind,
is for the most part[2] plunged[3] herein,
tangled like a ball of thread,
covered with blight,
become like a woven rope of grass,[4]
unable to cross over the downfall,

the way of woe,
the ruin,
and the round of birth.

■

There are, Brethren,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are called 'ocean,' Brethren,
in the discipline of the Ariyan.

The world,
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
its hosts of recluses and brahmins,
its devas and mankind,
is for the most part plunged herein,
tangled like a ball of thread,
covered with blight,
become like a woven rope of grass,
unable to cross over the downfall,
the way of woe,
the ruin,
and the round of birth.

■

There are, Brethren,
scents cognizable by the nose,

pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are called 'ocean,' Brethren,
in the discipline of the Ariyan.

The world,
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
its hosts of recluses and brahmins,
its devas and mankind,
is for the most part plunged herein,
tangled like a ball of thread,
covered with blight,
become like a woven rope of grass,
unable to cross over the downfall,
the way of woe,
the ruin,
and the round of birth.

■

There are, Brethren,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are called 'ocean,' Brethren,
in the discipline of the Ariyan.

The world,
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
its hosts of recluses and brahmins,
its devas and mankind,
is for the most part plunged herein,
tangled like a ball of thread,
covered with blight,
become like a woven rope of grass,
unable to cross over the downfall,
the way of woe,
the ruin,
and the round of birth.

■

There are, Brethren,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are called 'ocean,' Brethren,
in the discipline of the Ariyan.

The world,
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
its hosts of recluses and brahmins,
its devas and mankind,
is for the most part plunged herein,
tangled like a ball of thread,

covered with blight,
become like a woven rope of grass,
unable to cross over the downfall,
the way of woe,
the ruin,
and the round of birth.

■

There are, Brethren,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are called 'ocean,' Brethren,
in the discipline of the Ariyan.

The world,
with its devas,
its Māras,
its Brahmas,
its hosts of recluses and brahmins,
its devas and mankind,
is for the most part plunged herein,
tangled like a ball of thread,
covered with blight,
become like a woven rope of grass,
unable to cross over the downfall,
the way of woe,
the ruin,
and the round of birth.

[ed1] He in whom lust, malice and ignorance are cast off, - he hath passed over this ocean, with its sharks and demons, with its fearsome waves impassable.

Bond-free, escaped from Death and without base,
Transcending sorrow, to become no more,
Evanishèd, incomparable one -
He hath befooled the King of Death, I say.[5]

---

[1] Comy's interpr. here implies 'wetness' (uda-), kledan'atthena.

[2] Yebhuyyena. 'Except Arahants.' Comy.

[3] Samunnā (= kilinnā, tintā, nimuggā. Comy.). Cf. A. ii, 211.

[4] Reading tantākula-jātā, guḷā-guṇṭhika-jātā for kulakajātā, guṇa-guṇikajātā. of text and Comy. (guṇḍika-). Cf. D. ii, 55; S. ii, 92 (K.S. ii, 64); A. ii, 211 and J.P.T.S., 1919, p. 49.

[5] Cf. K.S. i, 152

[ed1] The PTS Pali and Woodward's translation both include this in the next sutta, but the internal reference is clearly to the ocean of this sutta.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 189

Bālisik'Opama Suttaṃ

The Fisherman

---

[158] [99]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:[ed1]

"Just as a fisherman, Brethren, casts a baited hook
in some deep pool of water, and some fish,
greedy for the bait,[1] gulps it down,
and thus, Brethren, that fish that gulps down the fisherman's hook comes by misfortune,
comes to destruction,
becomes subject to the pleasure of the fisherman, - even so, Brethren,
there are these six hooks in the world,
to the sorrow of beings,
to the harm of living things.

What six?

There are, Brethren,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight therein,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'hook-swallower,'

'come by misfortune from Māra,'
'come to destruction,'
'become subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight therein,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'hook-swallower,'
'come by misfortune from Māra,'
'come to destruction,'
'become subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
scents cognizable by the nose,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight therein,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,

such an one is called
'hook-swallower,'
'come by misfortune from Māra,'
'come to destruction,'
'become subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight therein,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'hook-swallower,'
'come by misfortune from Māra,'
'come to destruction,'
'become subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight therein,
welcomes them,

persists in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'hook-swallower,'
'come by misfortune from Māra,'
'come to destruction,'
'become subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight therein,
welcomes them,
persists in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'hook-swallower,'
'come by misfortune from Māra,'
'come to destruction,'
'become subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

§

There are, Brethren,
objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful

and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight not therein,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'one that has not taken Māra's hook,'
'hook-breaker,'
hook-shatterer,'
'one that is scatheless,'
'not subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
sounds cognizable by the ear,
sounds desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight not therein,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'one that has not taken Māra's hook,'
'hook-breaker,'
hook-shatterer,'
'one that is scatheless,'
'not subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
scents cognizable by the nose,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight not therein,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'one that has not taken Māra's hook,'
'hook-breaker,'
hook-shatterer,'
'one that is scatheless,'
'not subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
savours cognizable by the tongue,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight not therein,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'one that has not taken Māra's hook,'
'hook-breaker,'
hook-shatterer,'

'one that is scatheless,'
'not subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
tangibles cognizable by the body,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight not therein,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
such an one is called
'one that has not taken Māra's hook,'
'hook-breaker,'
hook-shatterer,'
'one that is scatheless,'
'not subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'

■

There are, Brethren,
mind-states cognizable by the mind,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

If a brother delight not therein,
welcomes them not,
persists not in clinging to them,
such an one is called

'one that has not taken Māra's hook,'
'hook-breaker,'
hook-shatterer,'
'one that is scatheless,'
'not subject to the pleasure of the Evil One.'"

---

[1] Āmisa-cakkhu = kilesa-lola (Comy. on. Jāt. v, 91). Lit. 'with an eye for flesh.' Cf. K.S. ii, 153.

[ed1] The PTS Pali and Woodward's translation both include the below in this sutta, but the internal reference is clearly to the ocean of the previous sutta.

He in whom lust, malice and ignorance are cast off, - he hath passed over this ocean, with its sharks and demons, with its fearsome waves impassable.

Bond-free, escaped from Death and without base,
Transcending sorrow, to become no more,
Evanishèd, incomparable one -
He hath befooled the King of Death, I say.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 190

Khīra-Rukkh'Opama Suttaṃ

The Sap-Tree[1]

---

[159] [99]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in objects cognizable by the eye
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling objects, [100] not to speak of considerable objects,
cognizable by the eye,
come into the range of the eye,[2] they overspread the heart.[3]

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in sounds cognizable by the ear
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling sounds,

not to speak of considerable sounds,
cognizable by the ear,
come into the range of the ear
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in scents cognizable by the nose
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling scents,
not to speak of considerable scents,
cognizable by the nose,
come into the range of the nose
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in savours cognizable by the tongue
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling savours,
not to speak of considerable savours,
cognizable by the tongue,
come into the range of the tongue
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in tangibles cognizable by the body
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling tangibles,
not to speak of considerable tangibles,
cognizable by the body,

come into the range of the body
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in mind-states cognizable by the mind
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling mind-states,
not to speak of considerable mind-states,
cognizable by the mind,
come into the range of the mind
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

§

Suppose, Brethren, a sap-tree, either a bo-tree
or a banyan
or fig-tree
or bunched fig-tree
or any tender, young tree.

Then if a man cuts into it with a sharp axe, whenever he does so
the sap flows out,
does it not?"

"Yes, lord."

"Why so?"

"Because sap is in it, lord."|| ||

■

"Just so, Brethren, if in any brother or sister,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in objects cognizable by the eye
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling objects,
not to speak of considerable objects,
cognizable by the eye,
come into the range of the eye,
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in sounds cognizable by the ear
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling sounds,
not to speak of considerable sounds,
cognizable by the ear,
come into the range of the ear
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,

that malice,
that infatuation
which is in scents cognizable by the nose
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling scents,
not to speak of considerable scents,
cognizable by the nose,
come into the range of the nose
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in savours cognizable by the tongue
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling savours,
not to speak of considerable savours,
cognizable by the tongue,
come into the range of the tongue
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in tangibles cognizable by the body
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling tangibles,
not to speak of considerable tangibles,
cognizable by the body,
come into the range of the body
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation

which is in mind-states cognizable by the mind
exists,
be not abandoned,
then, when even trifling mind-states,
not to speak of considerable mind-states,
cognizable by the mind,
come into the range of the mind
they overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists,
that malice exists,
that infatuation exists,
that lust is not yet abandoned
that malice is not yet abandoned
that infatuation is not yet abandoned.

§

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in objects cognizable by the eye
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable objects,
not to speak of trifling objects,
cognizable by the eye,
come into the range of the eye,
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in sounds cognizable by the ear
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable sounds,
not to speak of trifling sounds,
cognizable by the ear,
come into the range of the ear
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,

that malice,
that infatuation
which is in scents cognizable by the nose
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable scents,
not to speak of trifling scents,
cognizable by the nose,
come into the range of the nose
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in savours cognizable by the tongue
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable savours,
not to speak of trifling savours,
cognizable by the tongue,
come into the range of the tongue
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in tangibles cognizable by the body
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable tangibles,
not to speak of trifling tangibles,
cognizable by the body,
come into the range of the body
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation

which is in mind-states cognizable by the mind
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable mind-states,
not to speak of trifling mind-states,
cognizable by the mind,
come into the range of the mind
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

§

Suppose, Brethren, a sap-tree, either a bo-tree
or banyan
or fig-tree
or bunched fig-tree
that is dried up,
sapless,
past its season,[4]
and a man with a sharp axe cut into it.

Would sap come out?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Why not?"

"Because no sap is in it, lord."

"Just so, Brethren if in any brother or sister,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in [101] objects cognizable by the eye
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable objects,
not to speak of trifling objects,
cognizable by the eye,
come into the range of the eye,
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in sounds cognizable by the ear
exists not,
is abandoned,

then, when even considerable sounds,
not to speak of trifling sounds,
cognizable by the ear,
come into the range of the ear
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in scents cognizable by the nose
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable scents,
not to speak of trifling scents,
cognizable by the nose,
come into the range of the nose
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned

that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in savours cognizable by the tongue
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable savours,
not to speak of trifling savours,
cognizable by the tongue,
come into the range of the tongue
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in tangibles cognizable by the body
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable tangibles,

not to speak of trifling tangibles,
cognizable by the body,
come into the range of the body
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned.

■

If in any brother or sister, Brethren,
that lust,
that malice,
that infatuation
which is in mind-states cognizable by the mind
exists not,
is abandoned,
then, when even considerable mind-states,
not to speak of trifling mind-states,
cognizable by the mind,
come into the range of the mind
they do not overspread the heart.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, that lust exists not,
that malice exists not,
that infatuation exists not,
that lust is abandoned
that malice is abandoned
that infatuation is abandoned."

---

[1] Cf. M. i, 429. Caloptris gigantea (Pali Dict.). Here it means any sappy tree.

[2] Cakkhussa āpāthaṇ āgacchanti. Cf. Vin. i, 184; M. i, 190; A. iii, 37; Buddh. Psych Eth., 199 n.

[3] Cittaṇ pariyādiyanti See supra. § 134 n.

[4] Sukkho, koḷāpo, tero(tira)-vassika (for text's thero). 'More than a year old' Infra, § 202.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 191

Koṭṭhika Suttaṃ

Koṭṭhika[1]

---

[101]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta and the venerable Koṭṭhika the Great were staying near Benares, at Isipatana in the Antelope Park.

[2] Then the venerable Koṭṭhika the Great, rising from his solitude at eventide,
went to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

[3] So seated
he said to the venerable Sāriputta: —

"How now, friend?

Is the eye the bond of objects,
or are objects the bond of the eye?

Is the ear the bond of sounds,
or are sounds the bond of the ear?

Is the nose the bond of scents,
or are scents the bond of the nose?

Is the tongue the bond of savours,
or are savours the bond of the tongue?

Is the body the bond of tangibles,
or are tangibles the bond of the body?

Is mind the bond of mind-states,
or are mind-states the bond of the mind?"

■

[4] "Not so, friend Koṭṭhika.

The eye is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,

but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The ear is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The nose is not the bond of scents,
nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The tongue is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The body is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The mind is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

§

[5] Suppose, friend,
two oxen,
one white and one black,
tied by one rope
or one yoke-tie.

Would one be right in saying that the black ox is the bond for the white one, or that the white ox is the bond for the black one?"

"Surely not, friend."

"No, friend.

It is not so.

But the rope
or the yoke-tie [102] which binds the two, —
that is the bond that unites them.

So it is that the eye is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The ear is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The nose is not the bond of scents,
nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but that desire and lust that arise

owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The tongue is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The body is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The mind is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

§

[6] If the eye, friend,
were the bond of objects,
or if objects were the bond of the eye,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the eye, friend,
is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,

but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the ear, friend,
were the bond of sounds,
or if sounds were the bond of the ear,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the ear, friend,
is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the nose, friend,
were the bond of scents,
or if scents were the bond of the nose,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the nose, friend,
is not the bond of scents,

nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the tongue, friend,
were the bond of savours,
or if savours were the bond of the tongue,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the tongue, friend,
is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the body, friend,
were the bond of tangibles,
or if tangibles were the bond of the body,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the body, friend,
is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the mind, friend,
were the bond of mind-states,
or if mind-states were the bond of the mind,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the mind, friend,
is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

§

[7] Now by this method
it is to be understood,

as I have stated:

That the eye is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The ear is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The nose is not the bond of scents,
nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The tongue is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The body is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The mind is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

§

[8] There is in the Exalted One an eye, friend.

The Exalted One sees an object with the eye.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One an ear, friend.

The Exalted One hears sounds with the ear.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One a nose, friend.

The Exalted One smells scents with the nose.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One a tongue, friend.

The Exalted One tastes savours with the tongue.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One a body, friend.

The Exalted One contacts tangibles with the body.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One a mind, friend.

The Exalted One cognizes mind-states with the mind.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

[9] By this method, friend, you are to understand, as I said before:

That the eye is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The ear is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The nose is not the bond of scents,
nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The tongue is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The body is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The mind is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

---

[1] Supra, § 161. This may be another ease of Koṭṭhika's arranging with Sāriputta to 'play' at teacher and pupil, so as to aid the former to win proficiency as a teacher. Cf. Comy. on M. i, 293, i.e., Pap. Sūd., ii, 335. (The suggestion is that of Mrs. Rhys Davids.)

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 192

Kāmabhū Suttaṃ

Kāmabhū

---

[165] [102]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Ānanda and the venerable Kāmabhū were staying near Benares, at Isipatana in the Antelope Park.

[2] Then the venerable Kāmabhū,
rising from his solitude at eventide,
went to visit the venerable Ānanda,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

[3] So seated
he said to the venerable Ānanda: —

"How now, friend?

Is the eye the bond of objects,
or are objects the bond of the eye?

Is the ear the bond of sounds,
or are sounds the bond of the ear?

Is the nose the bond of scents,
or are scents the bond of the nose?

Is the tongue the bond of savours,
or are savours the bond of the tongue?

Is the body the bond of tangibles,
or are tangibles the bond of the body?

Is mind the bond of mind-states,
or are mind-states the bond of the mind?"

■

[4] "Not so, friend Kotthika.

The eye is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,

but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The ear is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The nose is not the bond of scents,
nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The tongue is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The body is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The mind is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

§

[5] Suppose, friend,
two oxen,
one white and one black,
tied by one rope
or one yoke-tie.

Would one be right in saying that the black ox is the bond for the white one, or that the white ox is the bond for the black one?"

"Surely not, friend."

"No, friend.

It is not so.

But the rope
or the yoke-tie which binds the two, —
that is the bond that unites them.

So it is that the eye is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The ear is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The nose is not the bond of scents,
nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but that desire and lust that arise

owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The tongue is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The body is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The mind is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

§

[6] If the eye, friend,
were the bond of objects,
or if objects were the bond of the eye,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the eye, friend,
is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,

but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the ear, friend,
were the bond of sounds,
or if sounds were the bond of the ear,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the ear, friend,
is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the nose, friend,
were the bond of scents,
or if scents were the bond of the nose,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the nose, friend,
is not the bond of scents,

nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the tongue, friend,
were the bond of savours,
or if savours were the bond of the tongue,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the tongue, friend,
is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the body, friend,
were the bond of tangibles,
or if tangibles were the bond of the body,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the body, friend,
is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

■

If the mind, friend,
were the bond of mind-states,
or if mind-states were the bond of the mind,
then this righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill
could not be proclaimed.

But since the mind, friend,
is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but the desire and lust
which are in them
is the bond,
therefore is the righteous life
for the utter destruction of Ill proclaimed.

§

[7] Now by this method
it is to be understood,

as I have stated:

That the eye is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The ear is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The nose is not the bond of scents,
nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The tongue is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The body is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The mind is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

§

[8] There is in the Exalted One an eye, friend.

The Exalted One sees an object with the eye.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One an ear, friend.

The Exalted One hears sounds with the ear.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One a nose, friend.

The Exalted One smells scents with the nose.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One a tongue, friend.

The Exalted One tastes savours with the tongue.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One a body, friend.

The Exalted One contacts tangibles with the body.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

■

There is in the Exalted One a mind, friend.

The Exalted One cognizes mind-states with the mind.

But in the Exalted One is no desire and lust.

Wholly heart-free is the Exalted One.

[9] By this method, friend, you are to understand, as I said before:

That the eye is not the bond of objects,
nor are objects the bond of the eye,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The ear is not the bond of sounds,
nor are sounds the bond of the ear,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The nose is not the bond of scents,
nor are scents the bond of the nose,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The tongue is not the bond of savours,
nor are savours the bond of the tongue,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The body is not the bond of tangibles,
nor are tangibles the bond of the body,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond.

The mind is not the bond of mind-states,
nor are mind-states the bond of the mind,
but that desire and lust that arise
owing to these two,
that is the bond."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 193

Udāyī Suttaṃ

Udāyin[1]

---

[102]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Ānanda and the venerable Udāyin were staying at Kosambī in Ghosita Park.

Then the venerable Udāyin, rising at eventide from his solitude,
went to visit the venerable Ānanda,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the [103] exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Udāyin said to the venerable Ānanda: —

"Is it possible, friend Ānanda, just as this body has in divers ways been defined,
explained,
set forth by the Exalted One, as being without the self, — is it possible in the same way to describe the consciousness, to show it,
make it plain,
set it forth,
make it clear,
analyze and expound it
as being also without the self?"

"Just as this body has been defined,
explained,
set forth by the Exalted One, friend Udāyin, so also is it possible to describe this consciousness,
to show it,
make it plain,
set it forth,
make it clear,
analyze and expound it
as being also without the self.

Owing to the eye and object arises eye-consciousness, does it not, friend?"

"Yes, friend."

"Well, if the condition,
if the cause
of the arising of eye-consciousness should altogether,
in every way,
utterly come to cease without remainder, would any eye-consciousness be evident?"

"Surely not, friend."

"Well, friend, it is by this method
that the Exalted One has explained,
opened up,
and shown
that this consciousness also
is without the self.

Again, owing to ear and sounds, friend, arises ear-consciousness,
does it not?"

"It does, friend."

"Well, if the condition,
if the cause
of the arising of ear-consciousness should cease altogether,
in every way,
utterly,
without remainder,
would any ear-consciousness be evident?"

"Surely not, friend."

"Well, friend, it is by this method
that the Exalted One has explained,
opened up,
and shown
that this consciousness also
is without the self.

Again, owing to nose and scents, friend, arises nose-consciousness,
does it not?"

"It does, friend."

"Well, if the condition,
if the cause
of the arising of nose-consciousness should cease altogether,
in every way,
utterly,
without remainder,
would any nose-consciousness be evident?"

"Surely not, friend."

"Well, friend, it is by this method
that the Exalted One has explained,
opened up,
and shown
that this consciousness also
is without the self.

Again, owing to tongue and savours, friend, arises tongue-consciousness,
does it not?"

"It does, friend."

"Well, if the condition, if the cause of the arising of tongue-consciousness should cease altogether,
in every way,
utterly,
without remainder,
would any tongue-consciousness be evident?"

"Surely not, friend."

"Well, friend, it is by this method
that the Exalted One has explained,
opened up,
and shown
that this consciousness also
is without the self.

Again, owing to body and things tangible, friend, arises body-consciousness,
does it not?"

"It does, friend."

"Well, if the condition, if the cause of the arising of body-consciousness should cease altogether,
in every way,
utterly,
without remainder,
would any body-consciousness be evident?"

"Surely not, friend."

"Well, friend, it is by this method
that the Exalted One has explained,
opened up,
and shown

that this consciousness also
is without the self.

Again, owing to mind and mind-states arises mind-consciousness,
does it not?"

"Yes, friend."

"Well, if the condition, if the cause for the arising of mind- [104] consciousness
should cease altogether,
in every way,
utterly,
without remainder,
would any mind-consciousness be evident?"

"Surely not, friend."

"Well, friend, it is by this method
that the Exalted One has explained,
opened up,
and shown
that this consciousness also
is without the self.

Suppose, friend, that a man should roam about in need of heart of wood,[2] searching for heart of wood, looking for heart of wood, and,
taking a sharp axe,
should enter a forest.

There he sees a mighty plantain-trunk, straight up,
new-grown,
of towering height.

He cuts it down at the root.

Having cut it down at the root he chops it off at the top.

Having done so he peels off the outer skin.

But he would find no pith inside.

Much less would he find heart of wood.

Even so, friend, a brother beholds no trace of the self nor of what pertains to the self in the sixfold sense-sphere.

So beholding, he is attached to nothing in the world.

Unattached, he is not troubled.

Untroubled, he is of himself utterly set free.

[3] So that he realizes,

"Destroyed is rebirth.

Lived is the righteous life.

Done is the task.

For life in these conditions there is no hereafter.'

---

[1] Supra, §123.

[2] Cf. K.S. iii. 119.

[3] Parinibkhāyati.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 194

Āditta-Pariyāya Suttaṃ

On Fire[1]

---

[168] [104]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, a discourse (illustrated) by fire, a Norm-discourse.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is that discourse?

It were a good thing, Brethren, if the organ of sight were seared with a red-hot iron pin,[2]
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame.

Then would there be no grasping of the marks [105] or details of objects cognizable by the eye.

The consciousness might stand fast,
being firmly bound[3]
by the satisfaction
either of the marks
or the details (of the objects).

Should one die at such a time,
there is the possibility
of his winning one of two destinies,
either Purgatory
or rebirth in the womb of an animal.

Seeing this danger, Brethren,
do I so declare.

■

It were a good thing, Brethren, if the organ of hearing were pierced with an iron spike,
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame.

Then would there be no grasping
of the marks or details
of objects cognizable by the ear.

The consciousness might stand fast,
being firmly bound
by the satisfaction
either of the marks
or the details (of the objects).

Should one die at such a time,
there is the possibility
of his winning one of two destinies,
either Purgatory
or rebirth in the womb of an animal.

Seeing this danger, Brethren,
do I so declare.

■

It were a good thing, Brethren, if the organ of smell were pierced with a sharp claw,[4]
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame.

Then would there be no grasping
of the marks or details
of objects cognizable by the nose.

The consciousness might stand fast,
being firmly bound
by the satisfaction
either of the marks
or the details (of the objects).

Should one die at such a time,
there is the possibility
of his winning one of two destinies,
either Purgatory
or rebirth in the womb of an animal.

Seeing this danger, Brethren,
do I so declare.

■

It were a good thing, Brethren, if the organ of taste
were seared with a sharp razor,
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame.

Then would there be no grasping
of the marks or details of objects cognizable by the tongue.

The consciousness might stand fast,
being firmly bound
by the satisfaction
either of the marks
or the details (of the objects).

Should one die at such a time,
there is the possibility
of his winning one of two destinies,
either Purgatory
or rebirth in the womb of an animal.

Seeing this danger, Brethren,
do I so declare.

■

It were a good thing, Brethren, if the organ of touch[5]
were seared with a sword,
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame.

Then would there be no grasping
of the marks or details
of objects cognizable by the nose.

The consciousness might stand fast,
being firmly bound
by the satisfaction
either of the marks
or the details (of the objects).

Should one die at such a time,
there is the possibility
of his winning one of two destinies,
either Purgatory
or rebirth in the womb of an animal.

Seeing this danger, Brethren,
do I so declare.

■

It were a good thing, Brethren, to be asleep.

For sleep, I declare,
is barren for living things.

It is fruitless for living things,
I declare.

It is dull[6] for living things,
I declare.

For (if asleep)
one would not be applying his mind to such imaginings as would enslave him, so that (for instance)
he would [106] break up the Order.[7]

Seeing this[8] danger (of being awake), Brethren, do I so declare.

§

As to that, Brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple thus reflects: -

'Let alone searing the organ of sight with an iron pin,
on fire,
all ablaze,

a glowing mass of flame,
what if I thus ponder:

"Impermanent is the eye,
impermanent are objects, impermanent is eye-consciousness, impermanent is eye-contact,
the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to eye-contact,
- that also is impermanent."'

■

Let alone splitting the organ of hearing with an iron spike,
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame,
what if I thus ponder:

"Impermanent is the ear,
impermanent are sounds, impermanent is ear-consciousness, impermanent is ear-contact,
the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to ear-contact,
- that also is impermanent."'

■

Let alone piercing the organ of smell with a sharp claw,
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame,
what if I thus ponder:

"Impermanent is the nose, impermanent are scents, impermanent is nose-consciousness, impermanent is nose-contact,
the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to nose-contact,
- that also is impermanent."'

■

Let alone splitting the organ of taste with a sharp razor,
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame,
what if I thus ponder:

"Impermanent is the tongue,
impermanent are savours, impermanent is tongue-consciousness, impermanent is tongue-contact,
the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to tongue-contact,
- that also is impermanent."'

■

Let alone searing the organ of touch with a sword,
on fire,
all ablaze,
a glowing mass of flame,
what if I thus ponder:

"Impermanent is the body,
impermanent are tangibles, impermanent is body-consciousness, impermanent is body-contact,

the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to body-contact,
- that also is impermanent."'

■

Let alone sleeping,
let me thus ponder:

"Impermanent is the mind, impermanent are mind-states, impermanent is mind-consciousness, impermanent is mind-contact,
the weal or woe or neutral state experienced
which arises owing to mind-contact,
- that also is impermanent."'

§

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the eye,
is repelled by objects,
is repelled by eye-consciousness,
is repelled by eye-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to eye-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the ear,
is repelled by sounds,

is repelled by ear-consciousness,
is repelled by ear-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to ear-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the nose,
is repelled by scents,
is repelled by nose-consciousness,
is repelled by nose-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to nose-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the tongue,
is repelled by savours,
is repelled by tongue-consciousness,
is repelled by tongue-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to tongue-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the body,
is repelled by things tactile,
is repelled by body-consciousness,
is repelled by body-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to body-contact.

■

So seeing, brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple
is repelled by the mind,
is repelled by mind-states,
is repelled by mind-consciousness,
is repelled by mind-contact,
is repelled by that weal or woe or neutral state experienced,
which arises owing to mind-contact.

■

Being repelled by these,
he lusts not for them.

Not lusting he is set free.

In this freedom
comes insight
that it is a being free.

Thus he realizes:

'Rebirth is destroyed,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task.

For life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

Such, Brethren, is the Norm discourse (illustrated) by fire."

---

[1] Supra, § 28; Vin. i, 21; K.S. iii, 62.

[2] Quoted at VM. 1, 36, where the translator has: 'better an iron wire heated ... than the faculty of sight grasping details. ...' At J. (F) iii, 532, trans in vol.

iii, p 316 (Francis and Neil), there is a similar passage showing that a brother under the influence of personal beauty should not set his affections on mental or physical attributes, 'for should he die at such a moment, he is reborn in hell and the like evil states ... Therefore it is good that the eye of the senses should be touched with a red-hot iron pin.'

[3] Gadhitaṇ. Comy. reads 'gathitaṇ = ganthitaṇ, baddhaṇ.' Cf. UdA. 120.

[4] Nakha-cchedana, lit. 'nail-split.'

[5] Kāyindriya (generally applied to the skin).

[6] Momūhaṇ.

[7] Here doubtless Devadatta is thought of.

[8] Text has vañjhaṇ jīvitānaṇ, possibly inserted by error, for only one MS. has it. Usually vañjha, 'barren,' is associated with its opposite, saphala, fruitful.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 195

Paṭhama Hattha-Pād'Upamā Suttaṃ

The Simile of Hand and Foot (1)[1]

---

[171] [107]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Where there is a hand, Brethren,
there are seen
taking up and putting down.[2]

Where there is a foot,
there are seen,
coming and going.

Where is a limb,
there are seen
bending in and stretching out.

Where there is belly,
there hunger and thirst are seen.

§

Just so, Brethren, where is eye,
there arises
owing to eye-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where is ear,
there arises
owing to ear-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where isnose,
there arises

owing to nose-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where is tongue,
there arises
owing to tongue-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where is body,
there arises
owing to body-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where is mind,
there arises
owing to mind-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

§

Where the hand is not,
no taking up or laying down is seen.

Where the foot is not,
no coming or going is seen.

Where a limb is not,
no bending in or stretching out is seen.

Where belly is not,
there no hunger or thirst is seen.

§

Just so, Brethren, where eye is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to eye-contact.

Where is ear is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to ear-contact.

Where nose is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to nose-contact.

Where tongue is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to tongue-contact.

Where body is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to body-contact.

Where mind, is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to mind-contact.

---

[1] Buddh. Psych., p. 84.

[2] Hatthe-su, etc. Not dat. plur. but hatthe, sing, with expletive su. Comy. takes it as hatthe su, vijjamānesu.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
3. Samudda Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

3. The Chapter on the Ocean

Sutta 196

Dutiya Hattha-Pād'Upamā Suttaṃ

The Simile of Hand and Foot (2)

---

[172] [107]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Where there is a hand, Brethren,
there are seen
taking up and putting down.

Where there is a foot,
there are seen,
coming and going.

Where is a limb,
there are seen
bending in and stretching out.

Where there is belly,
there hunger and thirst are seen.

§

Just so, Brethren, where is eye,
there arises
owing to eye-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where is ear,
there arises
owing to ear-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where isnose,
there arises

owing to nose-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where is tongue,
there arises
owing to tongue-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where is body,
there arises
owing to body-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

Where is mind,
there arises
owing to mind-contact
one's personal weal and woe.

§

Where the hand is not,
no taking up or laying down is seen.

Where the foot is not,
no coming or going is seen.

Where a limb is not,
no bending in or stretching out is seen.

Where belly is not,
there no hunger or thirst is seen.

§

Just so, Brethren, where eye is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to eye-contact.

Where is ear is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to ear-contact.

Where nose is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to nose-contact.

Where tongue is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to tongue-contact.

Where body is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to body-contact.

Where mind, is not,
no personal weal or woe arises
owing to mind-contact."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 197

Āsīvis'Opama Suttaṃ

The Snake[1]

---

[172] [107]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Suppose, Brethren, four snakes,
of fierce heat
and fearful [108] venom.

Then a man comes by,
fond of his life,
not loving death,
fond of happiness and loathing pain.[2]

Suppose men say to him:

'Here, good fellow, are four snakes,
of fierce heat
and fearful venom.[3]

From time to time
they must be roused up, bathed and fed,
from time to time
they must be put to bed.[4]

Now, good fellow,
whenever one of these four snakes,
of fierce heat
and fearful venom,
gets angry,
then you will come by your death or mortal pain.[5]

So do as you think fit, my man.'

■

Then suppose, Brethren, that man in mortal terror of those four snakes,
of fierce heat
and fearful venom,
wanders here and there,
and they tell him:

'See here, good fellow.

Five murderous foes
are following close upon your tracks, saying,

"Whenever we see him,
we will slay him."

So do as you think fit, my man.'

■

But, Brethren, that man,
in terror of the four snakes,
of fierce heat
and fearful venom,
in terror of the five murderous foes,
might wander here and there,
and men might say to him:

'Here, good fellow, is a sixth, a murderous housebreaker,[6] who with uplifted sword follows close upon your tracks, saying,

"As soon as I see him, I'll cut his head off."

So do as you think fit, my man.'

■

Then, Brethren, that man,
in terror of the four snakes,
of fierce heat
and fearful venom,
in terror of the five murderous foes,
in terror of the sixth,
the murderous housebreaker
with drawn sword,
might wander here and there.

■

Then he sees an empty village.

Whatever house he may enter
he finds it empty,
deserted
and void.

Therein, whatever crock he may handle,
he finds it empty
and void.

Then they might say to him:

'Now, good fellow,
robbers who plunder village's are going to plunder this deserted one.

So do as you think fit, my man.'

■

[109] Then, Brethren, that man,
in terror of the four snakes,
of fierce heat
and fearful venom,
in terror of the five murderous foes,
in terror of the sixth,
the murderous housebreaker
with drawn sword,
in terror of the village-plunderers, might roam here and there.

■

Then suppose he sees a great broad water,
the hither side beset with fears and dangers,
but the further side secure and free from fears,
but no boat wherein to cross,
nor any bridge for going forth and back.

Then, Brethren, it might occur to that man:

'Here is a great, broad water,
the hither side beset with fears and dangers,
but the further side secure and free from fears,
but no boat wherein to cross,
nor any bridge for going forth and back.

How now if I gather grass, sticks,
branches
and leaves,
bind together a raft,[7] and mounting thereon

and striving with hands and feet cross safely to the further shore?'

And suppose he does so.

Crossed over,
gone beyond,
the brahmin[8] stands on dry land.

§

Now, Brethren, this simile have I made to illustrate my meaning.

And the interpretation of it is this: -

'The four snakes
of fierce heat
and fearful venom,' Brethren, - that is a name for the four great essentials,[9] the elements of earth,
water,
fire
and air.

■

'The five murderous foes,' Brethren, - that is a name for the fivefold factors of grasping,
to wit:
the grasping factor of body,
the grasping factor of feeling, the grasping factor of perception, the grasping factor of the activities, the grasping factor of consciousness.

■

'The sixth,
the murderous housebreaker
with uplifted sword,' - that is a name for passionate desire.

■

'The empty village,' Brethren, - that is a name for the personal sixfold sense-sphere.

For if a man,
however wise,
clever,
intelligent he be,
searches it through
by way of the eye,
he finds it empty,
finds it void,
unoccupied.

If he searches it through
by way of the ear,
he finds it empty,
finds it void,
unoccupied.

If he searches it through
by way of the nose,
he finds it empty,
finds it void,
unoccupied.

If he searches it through
by way of the tongue,
he finds it empty,
finds it void,
unoccupied.

If he searches it through
by way of the body,
he finds it empty,
finds it void,
unoccupied.

If he searches it through
by way of the mind,
he finds it empty,
finds it void,
unoccupied.[10]

■

'The village-plunderers,' Brethren, - that is a name for the external sixfold sense-sphere.

For the eye, Brethren, destroys with entrancing shapes, the ear destroys with entrancing sounds, the nose destroys with entrancing scents, the tongue destroys with entrancing savours, [110]
the body destroys with entrancing tangibles, the mind destroys with entrancing mind-states.

■

'The great, broad water,' Brethren, - that is a name for the fourfold flood[11] of desire,
becoming,

view
and ignorance.

■

'The hither shore,' Brethren, beset with fears and dangers,- that is a name for the person-pack.[12]

■

'The further shore,' Brethren, secure and safe from fears, - that is a name for Nibbāna.

■

'The raft,' Brethren, - that is a name for the Ariyan Eightfold Path,
to wit:|| ||

Right view,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.[ed1]

■

'Striving with hands and feet,' Brethren, - that is a name for energy and effort.[13]

■

'Crossed over,
gone beyond,
the brahmin stands on dry land,' Brethren, - that is a name for the Arahant.

---

[1] Āsīvisa. This sermon was preached, acc. to Mahāvaṇsa, xii (Geiger, p. 84), by the thera Majjhantika to the dwellers of Kasmīra and Gandhāra. Cf. A. ii, 110. Comy. [?] treats us to a long discourse on snakes and their ways. These four he calls kaṭṭha-, pūti, aggi-, sattha-mukhā. These are reared by rājahs and are used, among other purposes, 'to bite robbers.' Cf. Expositor, ii, 393; SnA. 458; Pugg. 48.

[2] Cf. K.S. 11, 69.

[3] Ghora-visā = dunnimmadana-visā Suggested derivs. of āsitta-visa, asita-visa, asi-sudisa-v. Comy.

[4] I read with Comy., saṇvesetabbā (S. l-3), who so explains, giving rein to his imagination to the extent of several pages.

[5] Maraṇa-mattaṇ dkkhaṇ (pain 'as bad as death' or 'just death').

[6] Antacaro, lit. 'one who goes inside' as opposed to cora, a highwayman or footpad.

[7] Cf. M. 1, 134; Ud. viii, 6.

[8] Brāhmaṇa, the Arahant Cf. K.S. i, 67 n.

[9] Mahābhūtā. Cf. DhsA. 300 (Expos. 395); SnA. 458.

[10] 'By anything of the nature of "I" or "mine."' Comy. Cf. B. Psy. Eth., §§ 597, etc.

[11] Ogha.

[12] Sakkāya. Cf. K.S. iii, 86 n.

[13] Viriyārambhassa. Comy. and MSS. read viriyassa.

[ed1] From SN 5.45.1 - Woodward

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 198

Rath'Ūpama Suttaṃ

Delighting In

---

[175] [110]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Proficient in three ways, Brethren,
a brother dwells to the full
with ease and pleasure in this very life, and he has strong grounds[1]
for the destruction of the āsavas.

In what three things?

He keeps guard on the door of the faculties,
he is moderate in eating, he is given to watchfulness.

§

And how, Brethren, does a brother keep guard on the door of the faculties?

Herein a brother,
seeing an object with the eye,[2]
is not misled by its outer view nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of eye uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of eye, attains control thereof.

■

When he hears a sound with the ear, he is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of ear uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of ear,
attains control thereof.

■

When with the nose he smells a scent,
he is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of nose uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of nose, attains control thereof.

■

When with the tongue he tastes a savour,
he is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one

who dwells with the faculty of tongue uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of tongue, attains control thereof.

■

When with body he contacts tangibles,
he is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of body uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of body, attains control thereof.

■

When with mind he cognizes a mind-state, [111] he is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of ear uncontrolled,
he applies himself to such control,
sets a guard over the faculty of ear,
attains control thereof.

§

Suppose, Brethren, on level ground at the crossing of the four highways[3] a car be drawn by thoroughbreds, with a goad set in rest therein,[4] and a clever trainer, a driver who tames steeds.

He mounts thereon,
with his left hand holding the reins, and in his right he takes the goad, and drives the car forward and backward, whither and how he wills.

Just so, Brethren, a brother practises the guard over the six faculties, he practises for their restraint, for their taming,
for their calming.

That, Brethren, is how a brother keeps a guard over the faculties.

§

And how, Brethren, is a brother moderate in eating?

Herein, Brethren, a brother takes his food thoughtfully and prudently,
not for sport,
not for indulgence,
not for personal charm and adornment,
but sufficient for the support
and upkeep of body,

to allay its pains,
to help the practice of the righteous life,
with the thought:

'My former feeling I check
and set on foot
no new feeling.

So shall I keep going,
be blameless
and live at ease.'

Just as a man, Brethren, anoints a wound just for the healing of it, or just as he oils an axle enough for carrying the load, even so
thoughtfully and prudently
does a brother take his food,
not for sport,
not for indulgence,
not for personal charm and adornment,
but sufficient for the support
and upkeep of body,
to allay its pains,
to help the practice of the righteous life,
with the thought:

'My former feeling I check
and set on foot
no new feeling.

So shall I keep going,
be blameless
and live at ease.'

That, Brethren, is how a brother is moderate in eating.

§

And how, Brethren, is a brother given to watchfulness?

Herein, Brethren, by day
a brother walks up and down and sits,
and so cleanses his heart
from states that may hinder.|| ||

By night, for the first watch,
a brother walks up and down and sits,
and so cleanses his heart
from states that may hinder.|| ||

In the middle watch of the night, lying on his right side, he takes up the posture of a lion, resting one foot on the other, and thus collected and composed fixes his thought on rising up again.

In the last watch of the night, at early dawn,
he walks up and [112] down and sits,
and so cleanses his heart
from states that may hinder.

Thus, Brethren, is a brother given to watchfulness.

So, Brethren, possessed of these three things,
a brother dwells to the full
with ease and pleasure in this very life,

and so has strong grounds
for the destruction of the āsavas."

---

[1] Yoni, as source or origin. Cf. A. ii, 76, where yoni āraddhā is explained by Comy. as paññā. In the present passage Comy. says kāraṇaṇ c'assa paripuṇṇaṇ yeva hoti The passage occurs at A. i, 118. [But ?]

[2] Cf. § 120.

[3] Cf. M. i, 124 - A. iii, 28.

[4] Odhasta-patoda. (Comy. odhasta = ratha-majjhe ṭhapita.) At M. Lord Chalmers trans. 'lying ready to hand': AA. ad loc. cit., 'resting on the rail.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 199

Kumm'Opama Suttaṃ

The Tortoise

---

[177] [112]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Formerly, Brethren, a tortoise, a shell-back,
was questing for its prey
at eventide
along a river bank.

A jackal also, Brethren, was questing for its prey
at eventide
along that river bank.

Now, Brethren, that tortoise, that shell-back saw from afar that jackal
questing for its prey.

So drawing its neck and four limbs[1] into its shell
it crouched down at leisure and kept still.

Then the jackal,
seeing that tortoise,
the shell-back,
from afar,
came up to it,
and on reaching it
kept watching it
with the thought:[2]

'As soon as the tortoise,
the shell-back,
puts out one or other of its five limbs, I'll seize it,
crack and eat it.'

But, Brethren, as the tortoise,
the shell-back,
did not put out one or other of its five limbs, the jackal was disgusted with the tortoise
and went away,
not having got a chance.

Even so, Brethren, Māra, the Evil One,
is for ever on the watch unceasingly,
with the thought:

'Maybe I shall get a chance to catch one of these,
by way of eye
by way of the ear,
by way of the nose,
by way of the tongue,
by way of the body,
by way of the mind.'

§

Wherefore, Brethren, do ye abide keeping watch over the doors of the faculties.

Seeing an object with the eye,
be not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of eye uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of eye, attain control thereof.

■

Hearing a sound with the ear,
be not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of ear uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of ear,
attain control thereof.

■

When with the nose smelling a scent, be is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of nose uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,

set a guard over the faculty of nose, attain control thereof.

■

When with the tongue tasting a savour,
be is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of tongue uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of tongue, attain control thereof.

■

When with body contacting tangibles,
be is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of body uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of body, attain control thereof.

■

When with mind he cognizing a mind-state,
be is not misled by its outer view
nor by its lesser details.

Since coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
might overwhelm one
who dwells with the faculty of ear uncontrolled,
do ye apply yourselves to such control,
set a guard over the faculty of ear,
attain control thereof.

So long, Brethren, as ye abide keeping watch over the doors of the faculties, Māra, the Evil One, will go away in disgust, not getting a chance,
as the jackal did not get a chance from the tortoise."

[113] E'en as the tortoise in its own shell's shelter[3] Withdraws its limbs, so may the brother holding,
Composed, intent, thoughts in his mind arisen,[4]
Leaning on naught,[5] injuring ne'er his neighbour,
From evil freed wholly,[6] speak ill of no man.

---

[1] Soṇḍi-pañcimāni.

[2] Cf. S. ii, 270 for the simile of the cat and mouse.

[3] I give Mrs. Rhys Davids' version of the same stanza, occurring at K.S. 1, 12, which well preserves the rhythm of the Pali here.

[4] Attano mano-vitakke. Comy.

[5] Anissito, 'not on craving or view.' Comy.

[6] Parinibbuto, 'freed from kilesas utterly.' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 200

Paṭhama Dāru-k-Khandh'Opama Suttaṃ

The Log of Wood (i)[1]

[4] Nandi-rāga.

[5] Yogam āpajjati, 'applies himself to.'

[6] Cf. K.S. iii, Bk. x.

[7] Sañkaseara-samācāro. Cf. S. i. 66; UdA. 297, 'thinking others are talking of my faults.'

[8] Kasambu-jāto. See Udana v, 5.

[9] Upagacchāmi. [VM. 600, upagamanaṇ - upādānaṇ.]

[ed1] From: SN 4.35.64

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 201

Dutiya Dāru-k-Khandh'Opama Suttaṃ

The Log of Wood (ii)

---

[171] [115]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying at Kimbilā,[1] on the bank of the river Ganges.

Now the Exalted One saw a great log being carried down Ganges' stream, and on seeing it he called to the Brethren, saying:

"Brethren, do ye see yonder great log being carried down Granges' stream?"

"Yes, lord."

"Now, Brethren, if the log does not ground on this bank
or the further bank,
does not sink in mid-stream, does not stick fast on a shoal, does not fall into human or non-human bands, is not caught in a whirlpool, does not rot inwardly, - that log, Brethren,
will float down to ocean,
will slide down to ocean,
will tend towards ocean.

And why?

Because, Brethren, Ganges' stream floats down to ocean, slides down to ocean,
tends towards ocean.

In like manner, Brethren, if ye do not ground on this shore
or that shore,
if ye sink not in mid-stream, if ye stick not fast on a shoal, if ye fall not into hands human or non-human,

if ye be not caught in a whirlpool, if ye rot not inwardly, - then, Brethren,
ye shall float down to Nibbāna ye shall slide down to Nibbāna, ye shall tend towards Nibbāna.

Because, Brethren, perfect view floats towards Nibbāna, slides towards Nibbāna, tends towards Nibbāna.

§

[116] At these words
the venerable Kimbila said to the Exalted One: -

"What, lord, is 'this bank'?

What is 'the other bank'?

What is 'sinking in mid-stream'?

What is 'sticking fast on a shoal'?

What is 'falling into hands human or nonhuman'?

What is 'being caught in a whirlpool'?

What is 'rotting inwardly'?"

■

"'This bank,' Kimbila,
is a name for the sixfold personal sense-sphere.

'That bank,' Kimbila,
is a name for the external sixfold sense-sphere.

'Sinking in mid-stream,' Kimbila, is a name for the lure and lust.

And what, Kimbila, is 'being caught by humans'?

In this matter, brother, a householder lives in society, rejoices with them that rejoice, sorrows with them that sorrow, takes pleasure with them that take pleasure, suffers with them that suffer, makes a link with all manner of business that befalls.

This, Kimbila, is
'being caught by humans.'

And what, Kimbila, is 'being caught by non-humans'?

In this matter, Kimbila, such and such an one lives the righteous life with the wish to be reborn in the company of some class of devas, with the thought:

'May I,
by virtue
or practice or by some austerity
or by righteous living, become a deva
or one of the devas.'

This, Kimbila, is
'being caught by non-humans.'

'Being caught in a whirlpool,' Kimbila, is a name for the pleasure of the five senses.

And what, brother, is 'rotting inwardly'?

Herein, Kimbila, a brother is guilty of some foul offence, of such a nature that no pardon thereof is declared[2].

That is 'rotting inwardly.'"

---

[1] Cf. S. v, 323, where the brother Kimbila (Brethren, 105, 125) lives in the village of this name, in the Bamboo Grove.

[2] Vuṭṭhānaṇ (rehabilitation after unfrocking). Here txt omits na, which is clearly needed and is read by two MSS. Cf. Vin. ii, 7; Asḷ. 399.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 202

Avassuta-Pariyāya Suttaṃ

Lustful[1]

---

[182] [116]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakyans,[2] near Kapilavatthu, in the Banyan Park.

Now at that time there was a newly built mote-hall[3] of the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu,
not long made,
never yet dwelt in
by recluse
or brahmin
or any other human being.

Then the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu came to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
they saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
they said to the Exalted One: -

"Here, lord, is a newly built mote-hall
of the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu,
not long made,
never yet dwelt in
by recluse
or brahmin
or any other human being.

Let our lord, the Exalted One, be the first to make use of it.

When the Exalted One has first made use of it, afterwards the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu will use it.

That shall be for the profit and welfare of the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu
for many a long day."

The Exalted One assented by silence.

■

Then the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu, seeing the consent of the Exalted One,
saluted him by the right and went away to the [117] new mote-hall.

Having got it ready in every way, having appointed seats, set a waterpot
and hung up an oil-lamp,[4] they went to the Exalted One, and on coming to him they said: -

"All ready, lord, is the mote-hall.

Seats are appointed.

A waterpot is set.

An oil-lamp is hung.

Let the Exalted One now do what seems good to him."

■

Then the Exalted One robed himself, and taking outer robe and bowl went along with a great company of brethren to the new mote-hall.

On reaching it he had his feet washed,[5] entered the mote-hall
and sat down against the middle pillar, facing the east.

The Order of Brethren also had their feet washed,
entered the mote-hall
and sat down against the western wall, also facing east,
with the Exalted One in front of them.

Then the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu also, having had their feet washed,
entered the mote-hall
and sat down against the eastern wall, having the Exalted One in front of them.

Then the Exalted One taught the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu with a pious talk[6]
till far into the night, established them,
roused
and made them happy.

Then he dismissed them with these words:

"The night is far spent, Gotamas.[7]

Do ye now what seems good to you."

"It is well, lord,"
said the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu in obedience to the Exalted One.

And they rose up, saluted the Exalted One by the right and went away.

§

Now not long after the departure of the Sakyans of Kapilavatthu the Exalted One said to the venerable Moggallāna the Great: -

"Moggallāna, the Order of Brethren is now freed of sloth [118] and torpor.[8]

Bethink thee, Moggallāna, of a pious talk to the Order of Brethren.

My back is aching.

I will stretch it."

"Very well, lord," replied the venerable Moggallāna the Great to the Exalted One.

Then the Exalted One had his robe folded into four and lay down on his right side in the lion-posture, putting one foot on the other,
collected and composed,
with his mind set on rising up again.

■

Thereupon the venerable Moggallāna the Great addressed the Brethren, saying:

"Friends."

"Yes, friend," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

The venerable Moggallāna the Great then said: -

"Friends, I will teach you the way[9] of lusting and also of not lusting.

Do ye apply your ininds carefully and I will speak."

"Very good, friend," replied those brethren to the venerable Moggallāna the Great, who then said: -

"And how, friends, is one lustful?

Herein, friends, a brother,
seeing an object with the eye,
feels attachment for objects that charm, feels aversion from objects that displease, abides with attention to body distracted,[10]
and his thoughts are mean.[11]

He realizes not,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
hearing a sound with the ear,
feels attachment for sounds that charm, feels aversion from sounds that displease,
abides with attention to body distracted,
and his thoughts are mean.

He realizes not,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
smelling a scent with the nose,
feels attachment for scents that charm, feels aversion from scents that displease,
abides with attention to body distracted,
and his thoughts are mean.

He realizes not,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
tasting a savour with the tongue,
feels attachment for savours that charm, feels aversion from savours that displease,
abides with attention to body distracted,
and his thoughts are mean.

He realizes not,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,

that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
contacting a tangible with the body,
feels attachment for tangibles that charm, feels aversion from tangibles that displease,
abides with attention to body distracted,
and his thoughts are mean.

He realizes not,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
feels attachment for mind-states that charm, feels aversion from mind-states that displease,
abides with attention to body distracted,
and his thoughts are mean.

He realizes not,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,

unprofitable states that have arisen
cease without remainder.

■

This brother, friends, is called
'lustful after objects cognizable by the eye',
'lustful after sounds cognizable by the ear',
'lustful after scents cognizable by the nose',
'lustful after savours cognizable by the tongue',
'lustful after tangibles cognizable by the body',
'lustful after mind-states cognizable by the mind.'

■

When a brother so abides, friends,
if Māra[12] come upon him by way of the eye, Māra gets access,[ed1]
Māra gets an opportunity.

If [119] Māra come upon him by way of the ear,
Māra gets an opportunity.[13]

If Māra come upon him by way of the nose,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the tongue,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the body,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the mind,
Māra gets access,

Māra gets an opportunity.

■

Suppose, friends, a shed thatched with reeds
or grass,
dry and sapless,
more than a season old.

Then if a man comes upon it from the eastern quarter
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get access,
the fixe would get opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from the western quarter
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get access,
the fixe would get opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from the northern quarter
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get access,
the fixe would get opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from the southern quarter quarter
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get access,
the fixe would get opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from below
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get access,
the fixe would get opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from above, - from whatever side
with a bundle of blazing grass,

the fire would get access,
the fixe would get opportunity.

■

Even so, friends, when a brother so abides,
if Māra come upon him by way of the eye,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the ear,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the nose,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the tongue,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the body,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the mind,
Māra gets access,
Māra gets an opportunity.

■

So dwelling, friends,
objects overcome a brother,
a brother overcomes not objects.

Sounds overcome a brother, a brother overcomes not sounds.

Scents overcome a brother, a brother overcomes not scents.

Savours overcome a brother, a brother overcomes not savours.

Tangibles overcome a brother, a brother overcomes not tangibles.

Mind-states overcome a brother, a brother overcomes mind-states.

■

This brother, friends, is called
'conquered by objects,
conquered by sounds,
conquered by scents,
conquered by savours,
conquered by tangibles, conquered by mind-states not conqueror of them.'

Conquered,
not conquering,[ed2]
evil, unprofitable states,
passion-fraught,
leading to rebirth overcome him,
states unhappy,
whose fruit is pain,
whose future is rebirth, decay
and death.

Thus, friends, one is lustful.

§

And how, friends, is one free from lust?

Herein, friends, a brother,
seeing an object with the eye,
is not attached to objects that charm
nor averse from objects that displease.

He abides with attention to body settled,
and his thoughts are boundless.

He realizes,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
come to cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
hearing a sound with the ear,
is not attached to sounds that charm,
nor averse from sounds that displease.

He abides with attention to body settled,
and his thoughts are boundless.

He realizes,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
come to cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
smelling a scent with the nose,
is not attached to scents that charm,
nor averse from scents that displease.

He abides with attention to body settled,
and his thoughts are boundless.

He realizes,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
come to cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
tasting a savour with the tongue,
is not attached to savours that charm,
nor averse from savours that displease.

He abides with attention to body settled,
and his thoughts are boundless.

He realizes,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
come to cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
contacting a tangible with the body,
is not attached to tangibles that charm,
nor averse from tangibles that displease.

He abides with attention to body settled,
and his thoughts are boundless.

He realizes,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
come to cease without remainder.

■

Herein, friends, a brother,
cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
is not attached to mind-states that charm,
nor averse from mind-states that displease.

[120] He abides with attention to body fixed,
and his thoughts are boundless.

He realizes,
in its true nature,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
wherein those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen
come to cease without remainder.

■

This brother, friends, is called
'not lustful after objects cognizable by the eye',
'not lustful after sounds cognizable by the ear',
'not lustful after scents cognizable by the nose',
'not lustful after savours cognizable by the tongue',
'not lustful after tangibles cognizable by the body',
'not lustful after mind-states cognizable by the mind.'

■

When a brother so abides, friends,
if Māra come upon him by way of the eye,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the ear,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the nose,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the tongue,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the body,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the mind,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

■

Suppose, friends, a house or hall with peaked gable,
built of thick clay,
newly plastered.[14]

Then if a man comes upon it from the eastern quarter
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get no access,
get no opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from the western quarter
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get no access,
get no opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from the northern quarter
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get no access,
get no opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from the southern quarter quarter
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get no access,
get no opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from below
with a bundle of blazing grass,

the fire would get no access,
get no opportunity.

If a man comes upon it from above, - from whatever side
with a bundle of blazing grass,
the fire would get no access,
get no opportunity.

■

Even so, friends, when a brother so abides,
if Māra come upon him by way of the eye,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the ear,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the nose,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the tongue,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the body,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

If Māra come upon him by way of the mind,
Māra gets no access,
Māra gets no opportunity.

■

Moreover, friends, so dwelling, a brother conquers objects, objects do not conquer him;

a brother conquers sounds, sounds do not conquer him;

a brother conquers scents, scents do not conquer him;

a brother conquers savours, savours do not conquer him;

a brother conquers tangibles, tangibles do not conquer him;

a brother conquers mind-states, mind-states do not conquer him.

■

This brother, friends, is called
'conqueror of objects, conqueror of sounds,
conqueror of scents,
conqueror of savours,
conqueror of tangibles, conqueror of mind-states not conquered by them.'

He conquers those evil,
unprofitable states,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust,
leading to rebirth,
states unhappy,
whose fruit is pain,

rebirth,
decay
and death.

Thus, friends, is one free from lust."

§

Thereupon the Exalted One rose up and said to the venerable Moggallāna the Great: -

"Well said! Well said, Moggallāna!

Well indeed have you spoken to the brethren of the way of lustfulness and the way of not lusting."

Thus spake the venerable Moggallāna the Great and the Master was approving of his words, and those brethren were delighted and took pleasure in what was said by the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

---

[1] Avassuta, lit. 'leaky.'

[2] The Buddha's own clan. Cf. K.S. i, 36, iii, 77.

[3] Santhāgāraṇ This introductory part occurs at M. i, 353 Cf. Buddhist India, 20. The word is defined here and at D.A. 1, 256 as 'royal muster-hall' (evaṇ santhaṇ karonti, mariyādānaṇ bandhanti: rājāno tattha sambhavantī ti).

The description of this hall is given at groat length by Comy., and is to bo found in substance at Ud.A. 400. The same words are used at D. iii, 209) (Dialog. iii, 201) to describe the mote-hall of the Pavā Mallas

[4] 'Seats,' of course, are mats, except for the teacher, who sits on a chair on a dais. The waterpot is at the door for foot-washmg. The oil-lamp is for the night's bana-preaching. These customs are still strictly followed in Ceylon.

[5] The method of rinsing the feet on entering a house is described at Vin. ii, 8. Nowadays in Ceylon this is done for each bhikkhu by a dāyaka, or supporter, while another wipes the feet with a cloth.

[6] Comy. calls this pakiṇṇaka (miscellaneous).

[7] Speaking to his brother clansmen he thus addresses them by the name of their clan. Two watches of the night had passed. Comy.

[8] Thīnaṃmiddha, usually one of the hindrances to progress. Here, says Comy., after sitting for two watches they were in a condition to listen more attentively.

[9] Pariyāya, 'method,' also 'teaching.' Comy. kāraṇaṇ.

[10] Supra, § 132. Here kāya is omitted.

[11] Paritta-cetaso, as opposed to appamāṇa-c. below.

[12] Māra. Comy. kilesa-Māro pi devaputta-Māro pi.

[13] Otāraṇ, ārammaṇaṇ. Cf. S. ii, 268, etc. Comy. vivaraṇ, paccayaṇ.

[14] Addāvdlepanā. Cf. M. i, 86.

[ed1] Woodward omits this clause, but includes it in the next section.

[ed2] Woodward omits the first two words here.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 203

Dukkha-Dhamma Suttaṃ

States of Ill

---

[188] [121]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Brethren, when a brother knows,
as they really are,
the arising
and the destruction
of all states of ill,
then indeed sensual pleasures are seen by him.

When he sees sensual pleasures, that desire for sensual pleasures,
that love of sensual pleasures,
that infatuation,[1]
that feverish longing[2]
for sensual pleasures,
which is therein,
does not fasten on him.|| ||

His path abroad
and his lodging at home
are so practised[3] that,
in such a way of life,
coveting and dejection,
those evil,
unprofitable states,
do not fasten on him.

§

And how, Brethren, does a brother know,
as they really are,

both the arising
and the destruction
of all states of ill?

He knows

'Such is body,
such the arising of body,
such is the destruction of body;

Such is feeling,
such the arising of feeling,
such is the destruction of feeling;

Such is perception,
such the arising of perception, such is the destruction of perception;

Such are the activities, such the arising of the activities, such is the destruction of the activities;

Such is consciousness,
such the arising of the consciousness, such is the destruction of the consciousness.

That, Brethren, is how he knows,
as they really are,
both the arising
and the destruction
of all states of ill.

§

And how, Brethren, are sensual pleasures seen by a brother, in such a way that,
so seeing sensual pleasures,
that love of sensual pleasures
that is therein
does not fasten on him?

Suppose, Brethren, there were a pit of charcoal,[4] deeper than a man's height, full of charcoal,
without flame[5]
and smokeless.

And suppose a man should come,
fond of life,
not loving death,
but loathing pain.

Then two strong men lay hold of him,
one by each arm,
and drag him to the pit of charcoal.

He would writhe his body to and fro.

Why so?

[122] That man, Brethren, would know:

'I shall fall into this pit of charcoal.

Owing to that I shall come by death or mortal pain.'

Even so, Brethren, a brother sees sensual pleasures in the likeness of a pit of charcoal, and, so seeing,
that love of sensual pleasures,

that infatuation,
that feverish longing
for sensual pleasures
that is therein
does not fasten on him.

§

And how, Brethren, does a brother so practise his path abroad
and his lodging at home
that, so practising,
so dwelling,
covetousness and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
do not fasten on him?

Suppose, Brethren, a man should enter a forest full of thorns.

To the east of him are thorns.

To the west of him are thorns.

To the north of him are thorns.

To the south of him are thorns.

Below him are thorns.

Above him are thorns.

Wherever he advances or retreats, he has the thought:

'May no thorns pierce me.'

Just so, Brethren, whatsoever object in the world is dear and delightful, - that in the Ariyan discipline is called 'the thorn.'

■

By so understanding, restraint and non-restraint are to be understood.

■

And how, Brethren, comes non-restraint?

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
seeing an object with the eye,
is attached to objects that are dear,
is averse from objects that displease.

He dwells with attention to body distracted,
and his thought is mean.

He knows not that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
hearing a sound with the ear,

is attached to sounds that charm,
is averse from sounds that displease.

He dwells with attention to body distracted,
and his thought is mean.

He knows not that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
smelling a scent with the nose,
is attached to scents that charm,
is averse from scents that displease.

He dwells with attention to body distracted,
and his thought is mean.

He knows not that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
tasting a savour with the tongue,

is attached to savours that charm,
is averse from savours that displease.

He dwells with attention to body distracted,
and his thought is mean.

He knows not that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
contacting a tangible with the body,
is attached to tangibles that charm,
is averse from tangibles that displease.

He dwells with attention to body distracted,
and his thought is mean.

He knows not that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
cognizing a mind-state with the mind,

is attached to mind-states that charm,
is averse from mind-states that displease.

He dwells with attention to body distracted,
and his thought is mean.

He knows not that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

And how, Brethren, comes restraint?

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
seeing an object with the eye,
is not attached to objects that are dear, is not averse from objects that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed on body,
and his thought is boundless.

He knows that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
hearing a sound with the ear,
is not attached to sounds that charm,
is not averse from sounds that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed on body,
and his thought is boundless.

He knows that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
smelling a scent with the nose,
is not attached to scents that charm,
is not averse from scents that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed on body,
and his thought is boundless.

He knows that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
tasting a savour with the tongue,
is not attached to savours that charm,
is not averse from savours that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed on body,
and his thought is boundless.

He knows that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
contacting a tangible with the body,
is not attached to tangibles that charm,
is not averse from tangibles that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed on body,
and his thought is boundless.

He knows that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
is not attached to mind-states that charm,
is not averse from mind-states that displease.

He dwells with attention fixed on body,
and his thought is boundless.

He knows that [123] emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
as they really are,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease.

Even so, Brethren, comes restraint.

§

In that brother, Brethren, so practising,
so dwelling,
sometimes
and full seldom,
through loss of self-control,[6]
there do arise evil,
unprofitable states,
memories and hopes[7]
that are akin to the fetters that bind.

Weak, Brethren, is the arising of his mindfulness,[8] but quickly he abandons (such a state), puts it away,

wipes it out,
makes it go to utter destruction.

Just as if, Brethren, a man should let fall two or three drops of water
into an iron pot,
heated all day long,[9] - that mere trickle of water-drops is soon wiped out, soon used up, brethren.

Even so in that brother,
so dwelling,
sometimes
and full seldom,
through loss of self-control,
there do arise evil,
unprofitable states,
memories and hopes
that are akin to the fetters that bind.

The arising of mindfulness in him is weak, but quickly he abandons it,
puts it away,
wipes it out,
makes it go to utter destruction.

Thus if a brother practise his path abroad
and his lodging at home
in such a way of life,
that coveting and dejection,
those evil, unprofitable states,
do not overwhelm him.[10]

■

Suppose the rajah's royal ministers or friends
or boon companions
or kinsmen
or blood-relations
should bring and offer[11] wealth to a brother so practising and living, and say:

'Come, good man!

Why should these yellow robes torment you?

Why do you parade about with shaven crown and bowl?

Come! Return to the lower life, enjoy possessions
and do deeds of merit.'

But, Brethren, for that brother so practising, so living,
to reject the training and return to the lower life is an impossible thing.

■

[124] Suppose, Brethren, the river Ganges, that slopes,
inclines
and leads towards the east, and a great crowd of folk should come,
armed with pick and basket saying:

'We will make this river Ganges slope,
incline
and lead towards the west,' - what think ye, brethren?

Would that great crowd of folk make the river Ganges so slope,
incline
and lead towards the west?"

"Surely not, lord."

"And why not?"

"Because, lord, as the river Ganges slopes,
inclines
and leads towards the east, it were no easy thing to make it slope,
incline
and lead towards the west, insomuch that fatigue and vexation would be the lot of all that great crowd of folk."

■

"Just so, Brethren,
if the rajah's royal ministers
or friends
or boon companions
or kinsmen
or blood-relations

should come to that brother, so practising,
so dwelling,
and offer him wealth, saying:

'Come, good man!

Why should these yellow robes torment you?

Why do you parade about with shaven crown and bowl?

Come! Return to the lower life.

Enjoy possessions
and do deeds of merit,' -

for that brother to return to the lower life is impossible.

Why?

Because, Brethren, as that brother's heart has for many a long day been bent on detachment, inclined to detachment, turned towards detachment, there is no possibility for him to return to the lower life.'

---

[1] Mucchā, 'swooning or fainting for.'

[2] Pariḷāha.

[3] Text anubuddha? but v.l. anubandha (Burmese MS.). Comy. probably had the reading anubaddha, 'followed' (acc. to which. I translate). B. says yen'ākārena āraññа-vihāraṇ anubandhitvā.

[4] Cf. M. i, 74; K.S. ii, 69.

[5] Vītacchika of text should be vītaccika (vīta-accika).

[6] Sati-sammosa {cf. DA. i, 113. Sati pamussati. Comy.).

[7] Sara-sañkappa. Supra, § 96; M., vol. i, 453.

[8] At the third attempt he succeeds for certain.' Comy. Cf. A. ii, 186.

[9] Divasa-santatta. Cf. M. i, 453 (for the simile); S. i, 169.

[10] Here text has the usual nānussavanti for nānusati of the previous passage.

[11] Abhihaṭṭhuṇ pavāreyyuṇ. Comy. suggests as an example ratanāni abhiharitvā pavāreyyuṇ, adding 'as in the case of the elder Sudinna and the clansman Raṭṭhapāla.' Cf. Vin. iii, 11; M. ii, 54; AA. on. A. i, 24.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 204

Kiṃ Suk'Opama Suttaṃ

The Judas Tree[1]

---

[191] [124]

Thus have I heard:

Now a certain brother went to visit another brother, and on coming to him said: -

"Pray, friend, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?"

"Friend, when a brother understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the destruction of the sixfold sense-sphere, to that extent is his insight fully developed."

■

[125] But that brother was dissatisfied with the other's answer to his question,
and went away to another brother,
and on coming to him said: -

"Pray, friend, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?"

He replied: -

"Friend, when a brother understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the destruction of the five factors of grasping,[2]
to that extent his insight is fully purified."

■

But again that brother, dissatisfied
with the other's answer to his question,
and went away to another brother,
and on coming to him said: -

"Pray, friend, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?"

He replied: -

"Friend, when a brother understands,
as they really are,

the arising and the destruction
of the four great essentials,[3]
to that extent is his insight fully purified."

■

Again that brother was dissatisfied
with the other's answer to his question,
and went away to another brother,
and on coming to him said: -

"Pray, friend, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?"

He replied: -

"Friend, when a brother understands,
as it really is,
that whatsoever is of a nature to arise,
all that is of a nature to cease,
to that extent his insight is fully purified."

§

Thereupon that brother, being dissatisfied,
went to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother said to the Exalted One: -

"Lord, I went to a certain brother and asked this question of him:

'Pray, friend, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?'

At these words, lord,
that brother replied:

'Friend, when a brother understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the destruction
of the sixfold sense-sphere,
to that extent is his insight fully developed.'

■

But I was dissatisfied
with that brother's answer to his question,
and went away to another brother
and asked this question of him:

'Pray, friend, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?'

At these words, lord,
that brother replied:

'Friend, when a brother understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the destruction
of the five factors of grasping,
to that extent his insight is fully purified.'

■

But I was dissatisfied
with that brother's answer, went away to another brother

and asked this question of him:

'Pray, friend, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?'

At these words, lord,
that brother replied:

'Friend, when a brother understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the destruction
of the four great essentials,
to that extent is his insight fully purified.'

■

Again I was dissatisfied with that brother's reply
and went away to another brother
and asked this question of him:

'Pray, friend, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?'

At these words, lord,
that brother replied:

'Friend, when a brother understands,
as it really is,
that whatsoever is of a nature to arise,
all that is of a nature to cease,
to that extent his insight is fully purified.'

So, lord, being dissatisfied with these answers to my question I am come to the Exalted One (and now I ask):

■

Pray, lord, how far is a brother's insight fully purified?"

§

"Suppose, brother, a man who had never seen a Judas tree.

So he went to a certain man who had seen one,[4]
and on coming to him asked him:

'What sort of thing is a Judas tree, master?'

The other replies:

'Well, my man, the Judas [126] tree is blackish, something like a charred stump.'

So, brother, for the time being,
the Judas tree is to him as that other man sees it.

■

Well, the man is not satisfied with the answer to his question, so he goes away to another man who had seen one
and on coming to him asked him:

'What sort of thing is a Judas tree, master?'

The other replies:

'Well, my man, the Judas tree is reddish, something like a lump of flesh.'

So, brother, for the time being the Judas tree is to him as that other man sees it.

■

Still dissatisfied
with the reply to his question, he goes away to another man who had seen one
and on coming to him asked him:

'What sort of thing is a Judas tree, master?'

The other replies:

'Why, my man, a Judas tree is stripped of its bark.[5]

It has its pods burst,[6] something like an acacia tree.'

So, brother, for the time being the Judas tree is to him as that other man sees it.

■

Well, the man is not satisfied
with the reply to his question, so he goes away to see yet another man who had seen a Judas tree,
and on coming to him asked him:

'What sort of thing is a Judas tree, master?'

The other replies:

'Well, my man, the Judas tree is very thick-leaved.[7]

It gives a close shade, just like a banyan tree.'

So, brother, for the time being a Judas tree is to him as that other sees it.

Just so, brother, according as the insight of those good folk
is fully purified,
in accordance with that they give their explanation of it.

■

In the same way, brother, the insight of these worthies
is fully purified
according to their several bents,[8] and they give their explanation accordingly.

■

It is even as some rajah's border-town,[9] brother, strongly built
with walls and towers, and having six gates to it.

This town hath a wise and watchful warden of the gates, who keeps out enemies and welcomes friends.

From the east there comes a pair of swift messengers,
and they say unto the [127] warden of the gates:

'Good fellow, where is the lord of this town?'

And he replies:

'Yonder he sits in the midst where the four ways meet.'

Then those twin messengers deliver unto the lord of the town
the message of the Truth,
and go their ways
by the path by which they came.

■

From the west there comes a pair of swift messengers,
and they say unto the warden of the gates:

'Good fellow, where is the lord of this town?'

And he replies:

'Yonder he sits in the midst where the four ways meet.'

Then those twin messengers
deliver unto the lord of the town
the message of the Truth,
and go their ways
by the path by which they came.

■

From the north there comes a pair of swift messengers,
and they say unto the warden of the gates:

'Good fellow, where is the lord of this town?'

And he replies:

'Yonder he sits in the midst where the four ways meet.'

Then those twin messengers
deliver unto the lord of the town

the message of the Truth,
and go their ways
by the path by which they came.

■

From the south there comes a pair of swift messengers,
and they say unto the warden of the gates:

'Good fellow, where is the lord of this town?'

And he replies:

'Yonder he sits in the midst where the four ways meet.'

Then those twin messengers
deliver unto the lord of the town
the message of the Truth,
and go their ways
by the path by which they came.

■

Now, brother, have I made you a parable, and for your understanding of it this is the explanation: -

'The town,' brother, is a name for the body,
of the four great essentials compounded, of mother and father sprung,[10]
on rice and gruel fed,
impermanent,
of a nature to be worn away,
pounded away,
broken and scattered.

'Having six gates,' brother, - this is a name for the personal sixfold sense-sphere.

'Warden of the gates,' brother, - this is a name for mindfulness.

'Pair of swift messengers,' brother, - this is a name for calm and insight.

'Lord of the town,' brother,[11] - this is a name for consciousness.

'In the midst,
where four ways meet,' brother, - this is a name for the four great essentials, the elements of earth, water, fire and air.

'Message of the Truth,'[12] brother, - this is a name for Nibbāna.

'By the way they came,'[13] brother, - this is a name for the Ariyan Eightfold Path,
to wit:

Right view,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration."[ed1]

---

[1] Kiṇsuka (What d'ye call it?), butea frondosa. Cf. Jāt. ii, No. 248, where the Master is asked by four brethren to explain jhāna, which they understand in four several ways. He explains to them by the parable of the Judas tree, seen differently at four several seasons by these four brethren. The parable here given is told of Brahmadatta, rājah of Benares. Cf. The Jātaka, vol. ii. (Rouse), p. 184; Jātaka Tales, p. 197.

[2] Pañc'ūpādāna-kkandhā. Cf. K.S. iii, passim.

[3] Mahābhūtani.

[4] Dassāvī (usually means 'far-sighted'). Comy. yena kiṇsuko diṭṭha-pubbo.

[5] Text odīraka-jāto, v.l. ocīraka-. Comy. ojīrika-, ocīrika-. Pāli Dict. ocīraka ('with the bark off ').

[6] Ādiṇṇa-sipāṭiko. Cf. M. i, 306.

[7] Bahala-patta-palāso. Comy. has phala-patta-. JA. bāla palāsa.

[8] Yathā yathā adhimuttānaṇ.

[9] Cf. Mrs. Rhys Davids' Buddhism, p. 181; Buddh. Psych., 72.

[10] Cf. supra. § 103.

[11] In Comy.'s story, he is a dissolute young fellow, forced to reform by the two messengers.

[12] Yathābhūta-vacanaṇ, 'telling how it really is.'

[13] Cf. Expos., § 204.

[ed1] From SN 5.45.1 - Woodward

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 205

Vīṇ'Opama Suttaṃ

The Lute[1]

---

[195] [128]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"In whatsoever brother or sister, Brethren, there should arise desire
or lust
or malice
or infatuation
or repugnance of heart
in respect of objects cognizable by the eye, let such refrain his heart from that.

Fearsome and beset with fear is this way,
beset with thorns and jungle,
a devious track,[2]
a wrong path,[3]
hard to travel on.[4]

Followed by the unworthy is this path,
not by the worthy ones.

So with the thought,

"tis no proper path for thee,'

let a man refrain his heart from objects cognizable by the eye.

■

"In whatsoever brother or sister, Brethren, there should arise desire
or lust
or malice

or infatuation
or repugnance of heart
in respect of sounds cognizable by the ear,
let such refrain his heart from that.

Fearsome and beset with fear is this way,
beset with thorns and jungle,
a devious track,
a wrong path,
hard to travel on.

Followed by the unworthy is this path,
not by the worthy ones.

So with the thought,

"tis no proper path for thee,'

let a man refrain his heart from sounds cognizable by the ear.

■

"In whatsoever brother or sister, Brethren, there should arise desire
or lust
or malice
or infatuation
or repugnance of heart
in respect of scents cognizable by the nose,
let such refrain his heart from that.

Fearsome and beset with fear is this way,
beset with thorns and jungle,
a devious track,
a wrong path,
hard to travel on.

Followed by the unworthy is this path,
not by the worthy ones.

So with the thought,

"tis no proper path for thee,'

let a man refrain his heart from scents cognizable by the nose.

■

"In whatsoever brother or sister, Brethren, there should arise desire
or lust
or malice
or infatuation
or repugnance of heart
in respect of savours cognizable by the tongue, let such refrain his heart from that.

Fearsome and beset with fear is this way,
beset with thorns and jungle,
a devious track,
a wrong path,
hard to travel on.

Followed by the unworthy is this path,
not by the worthy ones.

So with the thought,

"tis no proper path for thee,'

let a man refrain his heart from savours cognizable by the tongue.

■

"In whatsoever brother or sister, Brethren, there should arise desire
or lust
or malice
or infatuation
or repugnance of heart
in respect of tangibles cognizable by the body,
let such refrain his heart from that.

Fearsome and beset with fear is this way,
beset with thorns and jungle,
a devious track,
a wrong path,
hard to travel on.

Followed by the unworthy is this path,
not by the worthy ones.

So with the thought,

"tis no proper path for thee,'

let a man refrain his heart from tangibles cognizable by the body.

■

"In whatsoever brother or sister, Brethren, there should arise desire
or lust
or malice
or infatuation
or repugnance of heart
in respect of mind-states cognizable by the mind,
let such refrain his heart from that.

Fearsome and beset with fear is this way,
beset with thorns and jungle,
a devious track,
a wrong path,
hard to travel on.

Followed by the unworthy is this path,
not by the worthy ones.

So with the thought,

"tis no proper path for thee,'

let a man refrain his heart from mind-states cognizable by the mind.

§

Suppose, Brethren, there is growing corn that has reached ripeness, and a lazy watcher of the corn.

Then a cow that devours[5] corn comes down into that corn and eats her fill with ravenous delight.

Even so, Brethren, the ignorant manyfolk, being uncontrolled in the sixfold sense-sphere, eats its fill
with ravenous delight
among the five sensual pleasures.

But suppose, Brethren, that there is growing corn that has reached ripeness and a zealous watcher of the corn.

Then a cow that devours corn
comes trespassing in that corn.

The watcher of the corn seizes her with a firm grip
by the muzzle.

Gripping her muzzle
he gets a firm hold of her forehead
and holds her fast.

So holding her fast
above the forehead,[6]
he gives her a sound drubbing with a stick,
and having so belaboured her,
he lets her go.

■

Then a second time that cow that devours corn comes trespassing in that corn.

Then a second time the watcher of the corn seizes her with a firm grip
by the muzzle.

Gripping her muzzle
he gets a firm hold of her forehead
and holds her fast.

So holding her fast
above the forehead,
he gives her a sound drubbing with a stick,

and having so belaboured her,
he lets her go.

■

Then a third time that cow that devours corn
comes trespassing in that corn.

[129] Then a third time the watcher of the corn seizes her with a firm grip
by the muzzle.

Gripping her muzzle
he gets a firm hold of her forehead
and holds her fast.

So holding her fast
above the forehead,
he gives her a sound drubbing with a stick,
and having so belaboured her,
he lets her go.

So it comes about, Brethren, that the corn-devouring cow, whether she roam in village or forest, whether given to standing[7] or lying down, would never trespass in that corn again:
for she bethinks her
of that last belabouring with a stick.

Just so, Brethren,
when a brother's heart is stirred, stirred strongly
by the sixfold sense-sphere, yet inwardly he stands fast, becomes tranquil,

is one-pointed,
is composed.[8]

§

Suppose, Brethren, the sound of a lute has never been heard by a rajah
or royal minister.

Then he hears the sound of a lute and says:

'Good man, pray what is that sound so entrancing,
so delightful,
so intoxicating,
so ravishing,[9]
of such power to bind?

Then they say to him:

'That, lord, is the sound of what is called a lute,
that sound so entrancing,
so delightful,
so intoxicating,
so ravishing,
of such power to bind.'

Then he says:

'Go, my man.

Fetch me that lute.'

So they fetch him that lute and say to him:

'This, lord, is that lute,
that sound so entrancing,
so delightful,
so intoxicating,
so ravishing,
of such power to bind.'

Then he says:

'Enough of this lute, my man.

Fetch me that sound.'

They say to him:

'This lute so called, lord, consists of divers parts,[10]
a great number of parts.

It speaks
because it is compounded of divers parts,
to wit,
owing to the belly,
owing to the parchment,
the handle,
the frame,[11] the strings, owing to the bridge[12]
and proper effort of a player.

Thus, lord, this lute, so called,
consists of divers parts,
of a great number of parts.

It speaks
because it is compounded of divers parts.'

Then that rājah breaks up that lute into ten or a hundred [130] pieces.

Having done so,
he splinters
and splinters it again.

Having done so,
he burns it in fire,[13] then makes it a heap of ashes and winnows the heap of ashes in a strong wind or lets them be borne down by the swift stream of a river.

Then he says:

'A poor thing[14]
is what you call a lute, my men, whatever a lute may be.

Herein the world is exceeding careless and led astray.'

Even so, Brethren, a brother investigating[15] body as far as there is scope[16] for body, investigating feeling,
as far as there is scope for feeling, investigating perception, as far as there is scope for perception investigating the activities, as far as there is scope for the activities, investigating consciousness, so far as there is scope for consciousness, - in all of these investigations, whatever there be of 'I' or 'I am'

or 'Mine,'
there is none of that for him.

---

[1] 'This parable,' says Comy., 'was given, at Jeta Grove.'

[2] Ummagga. Comy. 'No way for one journeying to the world of devas or mankind or Nibbāna.'

[3] Kummagga. Skt. ku-marga, 'an evil way.' Cf. Itiv. 117; Sn. 736.

[4] Duhitika, 'beset with robbers.' But Comy. reads dvīhitika, as infra. p. 323 of text. See Pāli Dict. s.v.

[5] Cf. Brethren, verse 446.

[6] Upari-ghaṭāyaṇ ('pot'), like kumbha (of an elephant), not as Pāli Dict. ref. s.v. Comy. dvinnaṇ singānaṇ antare.

[7] Thana-bahula, nisajja bahula.

[8] Comy. explains the four words of the four jhānas respectively.

[9] Mucchaniyya. Comy. mucchitaṇ viya karaṇato mucchissati.

[10] Cf. Mil. Pañh., 53. The parts there given are patta, camma, doṇi, daṇḍa, upaīṇna, tantiyo, koṇa.

[11] Text upaveṇaṇ (v.l. upavīṇe, upadhīraṇe). Comy. has upadhāraṇe = veṭhake (framework).

[12] Koṇaṇ = caturaṇsaṇ sāra-danṇḍakaṇ C.

[13] The stock series of phrases for utter destruction of anything. Cf. K.S. iii, 61. [But ?]

[14] Text asakkirāyaṇ (v.l. asatikirāyaṇ, also the reading of Comy., with expl. asati = lāmaka. JA. i, 285. Tanti-bandhi-lāmakam evā ti attho.

[15] Text samanesati. Comy. sammannesati (expl. as khandha-samma-sanaṇ ... pariyesati), but Pāli Dict., which I follow here, samannesati. The passage is quoted at Mahāniddesa, p. 439, where it is spelt sammannesati.

[16] Gati.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 206

Cha-p-Pāṇaka Suttaṃ

The Six Animals[1]

---

[198] [130]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Suppose, Brethren, a man with a wounded body,
with a festering body,
were to enter a swampy jungle.

Its grasses and thorns pierce his feet and scratch his festering limbs.

That man, Brethren, would feel pain and despair all the more owing to that.

Even so, Brethren, some brother here goes to dwell in village or jungle, and meets with one who rebukes him.[2]

This venerable one and he who thus treats him,[3] saying:

'Such a life (as yours) is a thorn of impurity to the village,' knowing him to be such a thorn, - (these two) are to be understood as restraint and non-restraint.

§

[131] And how, Brethren, is non-restraint?

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
seeing an object with the eye,
is attached to objects that charm,
is averse from objects that displease,
and dwells with attention to body distracted.

His thought is mean,
and he understands not,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen,
cease utterly without remainder.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
hearing a sound with the ear,
is attached to sounds that charm,
is averse from sounds that displease,
and dwells with attention to body distracted.

His thought is mean,
and he understands not,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen,
cease utterly without remainder.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
smelling a scent with the nose,
is attached to scents that charm,
is averse from scents that displease,
and dwells with attention to body distracted.

His thought is mean,
and he understands not,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen,
cease utterly without remainder.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
tasting a savour with the tongue,
is attached to savours that charm,
is averse from savours that displease,
and dwells with attention to body distracted.

His thought is mean,
and he understands not,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen,
cease utterly without remainder.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
contacting a tangible with the body,
is attached to tangibles that charm,

is averse from tangibles that displease,
and dwells with attention to body distracted.

His thought is mean,
and he understands not,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen,
cease utterly without remainder.

■

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
is attached to mind-states that charm,
is averse from mind-states that displease,
and dwells with attention to body distracted.

His thought is mean,
and he understands not,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states that have arisen,
cease utterly without remainder.

§

Suppose, Brethren, a man catches six animals,
of diverse range

and diverse pasturage,
and tethers them with a stout rope.

He catches a snake
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a crocodile,
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a bird,[4],
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a dog,
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a jackal,
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a monkey,
and tethers it with a stout rope.

Having done so, Brethren, he ties them together with a knot in the middle and sets them going.

Now, Brethren, those six animals
of diverse range
and diverse pasturage
would struggle[5] to be off,
each one to his own range and pasture.

The snake would struggle, thinking:
'I'll enter the anthill'.

The crocodile would struggle, thinking:
'I'll enter the water'.

The bird would struggle, thinking:
'I'll mount[6] into the air'.

The dog would struggle, thinking:
'I'll enter the village.'.

The jackal would struggle, thinking:
'I'll go to the charnel-field'.

The monkey would struggle, thinking:
'I'll be off to the forest.'

Now, Brethren, when those six hungry[7] animals grew weary, they would follow after the one of them that was stronger, they would conform to that one,[8] they would become subject to him.

Even so, Brethren, in whatsoever brother attention to body is not practised, not made much of,
the eye struggles to pull him with objects that charm.

Repulsive to him
are [132]
objects that displease.

The ear struggles to pull him with sounds that charm.

Repulsive to him
are sounds that displease.

The nose struggles to pull him with scents that charm.

Repulsive to him
are scents that displease.

The tongue struggles to pull him with savours that charm.

Repulsive to him
are savours that displease.

The body struggles to pull him with tangibles that charm.

Repulsive to him
are tangibles that displease.

The mind struggles to pull him with mind-states that charm.

Repulsive to him
are mind-states that displease.

Thus, Brethren, is non-restraint.

§

And how, Brethren, is restraint?

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
seeing an object with the eye,
is not attached to objects that charm,
nor averse from objects that displease.

He dwells with attention to body established
and his thought is boundless.

He understands,
as it really is,

that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease utterly without remainder.

■

Hearing a sound with the ear,
is not attached to sounds that charm,
nor averse from sounds that displease.

He dwells with attention to body established
and his thought is boundless.

He understands,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease utterly without remainder.

■

Smelling a scent with the nose,
is not attached to scents that charm,
nor averse from scents that displease.

He dwells with attention to body established
and his thought is boundless.

He understands,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,

that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease utterly without remainder.

■

Tasting a savour with the tongue,
is not attached to savours that charm,
nor averse from savours that displease.

He dwells with attention to body established
and his thought is boundless.

He understands,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease utterly without remainder.

■

Contacting a tangible with the body,
is not attached to tangibles that charm,
nor averse from tangibles that displease.

He dwells with attention to body established
and his thought is boundless.

He understands,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,

whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease utterly without remainder.

■

Cognizing a mind-state with the mind,
is not attached to mind-states that charm,
nor averse from mind-states that displease.

He dwells with attention to body established
and his thought is boundless.

He understands,
as it really is,
that emancipation of heart,
that emancipation of wisdom,
whereby those evil,
unprofitable states
that have arisen
come to cease utterly without remainder.

§

Suppose, Brethren, a man catches six animals,
of diverse range
and diverse pasturage,
and tethers them with a stout rope.

He catches a snake
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a crocodile,

and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a bird,
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a dog,
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a jackal,
and tethers it with a stout rope:
he catches a monkey,
and tethers it with a stout rope.

Having done so, Brethren,
he tethers them to a stout peg or post.

Now, Brethren, those six animals
of diverse range
and diverse pasturage
would struggle to be off,
each one to his own range and pasture.

The snake would struggle, thinking:
'I'll enter the anthill'.

The crocodile would struggle, thinking:
'I'll enter the water'.

The bird would struggle, thinking:
'I'll mount into the air'.

The dog would struggle, thinking:
'I'll enter the village.'.

The jackal would struggle, thinking:
'I'll go to the charnel-field'.

The monkey would struggle, thinking:
'I'll be off to the forest.'

Now, Brethren, when those six animals grow weary, they would have to stand, crouch
or lie down
by that peg or post.

Even so, Brethren, in whatsoever brother attention to body is practised and made much of, the eye does not struggle to pull him with objects that charm.

Objects that displease
are not repulsive to him.

The ear does not struggle to pull him with sounds that charm.

Sounds that displease
are not repulsive to him.

The nose does not struggle to pull him with scents that charm.

Scents that displease
are not repulsive to him.

The tongue does not struggle to pull him with savours that charm.

Savours that displease
are not repulsive to him.

The body does not struggle to pull him with tangibles that charm.

Tangibles that displease
are not repulsive to him.

The mind does not struggle to pull him with mind-states that charm.

Mind-states that displease
are not repulsive to him.

Thus, Brethren, is restraint.

'Tethered to a stout peg or post,' Brethren, is a term for attention to body.[9]

Wherefore, Brethren, thus must ye train yourselves:

'We shall practise attention to body.

It shall be made much of,
ridden on,
built upon,
striven with,
accumulated and thoroughly undertaken.'"[10]

---

[1] Vis. Magg. ii, 484, 'the six personal sense-spheres are to be regarded as six creatures: the external sphere as their feeding-ground.'

[2] Vattāraṇ. Comy. codakaṇ.

[3] Evaṇkārā. 'Like a physician.' Comy. Owing to the structure of this sentence the distinction between the two men is obscured. I think the reading should be ayañ ca (the brother), so ca evaṇkār 'the rebuker). Sinh. MSS. read so for kho.

[4] Pakkhiṇ. 'A bird with an elephant's trunk (?).' Comy.

[5] Āviñcheyyuṇ = ākaḍḍheyyuṇ. Comy.

[6] Ḍessāmi (ḍeti) = uppatissāmi. Comy.

[7] Jhattā.

[8] Text anuvidhīyeyyuṇ. Comy. anuvidhāy- (der. from anuvidhāna)

[9] Cf. V.M., 269.

[10] Cf. D. ii, 103; S. ii, 264; Ud. 62.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
35. Saḷāyatana Saṃyutta
§ IV: Paññāsaka Catuttha
4. Āsīvisa Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

35. Kindred Sayings the Sixfold Sphere of Sense

§ IV: The 'Fourth Fifty' Suttas

4. The Chapter on the Snake

Sutta 207

Yava-Kalāpī Suttaṃ

The Sheaf of Corn[ed1]

---

[201] [132]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Suppose, Brethren, a sheaf of corn thrown down at the four crossways.

Then six men come up armed with flails,
and with their six flails beat out that sheaf of corn.

Thus, Brethren, [133] would that sheaf of corn be threshed thoroughly, thus beaten with six flails.

Then suppose a seventh man comes up, armed with a flail,
and threshes that sheaf of corn with his seventh flail.

Thus would that sheaf of corn be still more thoroughly threshed by that seventh flail.

Even so, Brethren, the untaught manyfolk is threshed by the eye
with objects that charm,
is threshed by the ear,
with sounds that charm,
is threshed by the nose,
with scents that charm,
is threshed by the tongue,
with savours that charm,
is threshed by the body,
with tangibles that charm,

is threshed by mind,
with mmd-states that charm.

If that untaught manyfolk, Brethren, thinks of a future becoming,
still more thoroughly is it threshed, just as that sheaf of corn is still more thoroughly threshed by the seventh flail.

Once upon a time, Brethren, the Devas and Asuras were massed for battle.[1]

Then Vepacitti, lord of the Asuras, addressed the Asuras thus:

'Good sirs,[2] if in the battle now set between the Devas and the Asuras the Asuras win the day and the Devas be worsted, then do ye bind Sakka, lord of the Devas, neck,
hand
and foot,
and bring him into my presence in Asura Town.'

And in like manner Sakka, lord of the Devas, thus addressed the Devas of the Thirty Three:

'Good sirs, if in the battle now set between the Devas and the Asuras the Asuras be worsted and the Devas win the day, do ye bind Vepacitti, lord of the Asuras, neck,
hand
and foot,

and bring him into my presence at the Devas' Court of Righteousness.'[3]

Well, Brethren, in that fight the Devas won the day, and the Asuras were worsted.

Then the Devas of the Thirty-Three bound Vepacitti, lord of the Asuras, neck,
hand
and foot,
and brought him into the presence of Sakka, lord of the Devas, to the Devas' Court of Righteousness.

So there, Brethren, was Vepacitti, lord of the Asuras, bound neck,
hand
and foot.

Now when it occurred to Vepacitti, lord of the Asuras, thus:

'Righteous in good sooth are the Devas,[4] unrighteous the Asuras.

Now go I to Deva Town,' [134] straightway he beheld himself freed from that fivefold bondage and possessed

of the five pleasures of the senses, and so endowed had great delight.

But, Brethren, when Vepacitti, lord of the Asuras, thought:|| ||

'Righteous forsooth are the Asuras, unrighteous are the Devas.[5]

Now go I to Asura Town,' thereupon he beheld himself bound with that fivefold bondage and robbed

of the five pleasures of the senses.

Thus subtle, Brethren, is the bondage of Vepacitti, but more subtle still the bondage of Māra.

He who hath conceits, Brethren, is Māra's bondsman.

He who hath no conceits[6] is freed from the Evil One.

'I am,' -
that is a conceit.

'This am I,' -
that is a conceit.

'I shall be,' -
that is a conceit.

'I shall not be,' -
that is a conceit.

'Embodied shall I be,' -
that is a conceit.

'Disembodied shall I be,' -
that is a conceit.

'I shall be conscious,' -
that is a conceit.

'Unconscious shall I be,' -
that is a conceit.

'Neither conscious nor unconscious shall I be,' -
that is a conceit.

A conceit, Brethren, is lust.

A conceit is an imposthume.

A conceit is a barb.

Wherefore, Brethren, ye must say:

'With heart free from conceits will we abide.'

Thus must ye train yourselves.

■

'I am,' -
that is something moved.[7]

'This am I,' -
that is something moved.

'I shall be,' -
that is something moved.

'I shall not be,' -
that is something moved.

'Embodied shall I be,' -
that is something moved.

'Disembodied shall I be,' -
that is something moved.

'I shall be conscious,' -
that is something moved.

'Unconscious shall I be,' -
that is something moved.

'Neither conscious nor unconscious shall I be,' -
that is something moved.

What is moved, Brethren, is lust.

What is moved is an imposthume.

What is moved is a barb.

Wherefore, Brethren, let your thought be:

'With heart immovable
will we abide.'

Thus must ye train yourselves.

■

'I am,' -
is something wavering.

'This am I,' -
is something wavering.

'I shall be,' -
is something wavering.

'I shall not be,' -
is something wavering.

'Embodied shall I be,' -
is something wavering.

'Disembodied shall I be,' -
is something wavering.

'I shall be conscious,' -
is something wavering.

'Unconscious shall I be,' -
is something wavering.

'Neither conscious nor unconscious shall I be,' -
is something wavering.

What wavers, Brethren, is lust.

What wavers is an imposthume.

What wavers is a barb.

Wherefore let your thought be:

'With heart unwavering
will we abide.'

Thus must ye train yourselves.

■

[135] 'I am,' -
is an obsession.[8]

'This am I,' -
is an obsession.

'I shall be,' -
is an obsession.

'I shall not be,' -
is an obsession.

'Embodied shall I be,' -
is an obsession.

'Disembodied shall I be,' -
is an obsession.

'I shall be conscious,' -
is an obsession.

'Unconscious shall I be,' -
is an obsession.

'Neither conscious nor unconscious shall I be,' -
is an obsession.

An obsession, Brethren, is lust.

An obsession is an imposthume.

An obsession is a barb.

Wherefore let your thought be:

'With heart unobsessed
will we abide.'

Thus must ye train yourselves.

■

'I am,' -
is vain imagining.[9]

'This am I,' -
is vain imagining.

'I shall be,' -
is vain imagining.

'I shall not be,' -
is vain imagining.

'Embodied shall I be,' -
is vain imagining.

'Disembodied shall I be,' -
is vain imagining.

'I shall be conscious,' -
is vain imagining.

'Unconscious shall I be,' -
is vain imagining.

'Neither conscious nor unconscious shall I be,' -
is vain imagining.

Vain imaginings, Brethren, are lust.

Vain imaginings are an imposthume.

Vain imaginings are a barb.

Wherefore let your thought be:

'With heart that has slain conceit
will we abide.'

Thus, Brethren, must ye train yourselves.

---

[1] Cf. K.S. i, 283 The sutta is there entitled 'Forbearance.'

[2] Mārisā. Comy., at S. i, 2 explains as 'they who are free from dukkha.'

[3] Sudhammaṇ devasabhaṇ

[4] Comy. 'In that they do not give me cause to weep.'

[5] Comy. 'In that they bind me like a jungle-hog with fivefold bondage, and make me sit here.'

[6] Comy. Taṇhā-diṭṭhi-māna. The first conceit here refers to taṇhā; the second to diṭṭhi; the third to sassata-diṭṭhi (etcrnalist view); the fourth to uccheda-diṭṭhi (the annihilationist view).

[7] Iñjitaṇ.

[8] Papañcitaṇ For papañca see Brethren, p. 343 n.

[9] Cf. K.S. i, 18 n Māna-gataṇ- = māna-pavatti. Comy.

[ed1] American English readers should understand that this means 'wheat'. Properly, as in English English, what Americans call 'corn' should be called 'maize'. Maize was not introduced into India (or so they say) until after it's discovery in America. (However that may have been as early as 300 A.D., by the Chinese who appear to have had active trade with the indians of Mexico as early or earlier than this date and they, in turn, also had active commerse with India at that time.)

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 1

Samādhi Suttaṃ

Concentration[1]

---

[204] [136]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these three feelings, brethren.

What three?

Feeling that is pleasant,
feeling that is painful,
and feeling that is neither pleasant nor painful.

These, Brethren, are the three feelings.

Collected, 'ware, the mindful follower
Of the Awakened One well understands Feelings, and how they come to be, and where They cease, and what the way to feelings' end.[2]
That brother who hath ended them, therefor
No longer hungereth.[3] He is set free.

---

[1] Samādhi.

[2] Text misprints khaya-gāminaṇ.

[3] Nicchāto = nittaṇho. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 2

Sukhaya Suttaṃ

For Pleasure

---

[204] [136]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these three feelings, brethren.

What three?

Feeling that is pleasant,
feeling that is painful,
and feeling that is neither pleasant nor painful.

These, Brethren, are the three feelings.

Pleasure or pain or feeling that is neither,
The inner and the outer, all that's felt -
He knows it to be ill. He sees the world
False,[1] perishable.[2] He sees, by contact with it,[3]
That it is transient, and frees himself.[4]

---

[1] Mosa-dhammaṇ Cf. Sn. v, 738 (as here). 758, where it is explained as nassana-dhammaṇ (Par. Jot., 506. 509).

[2] Palokinaṇ. Comy. palujjana-sabbāvaṇ

[3] Phussa-phussa-vayaṇ passaṇ Comy. ñāṇena phusitvā phusitvā 'va sampassanto (phussa is gerund of phusati). Vayaṇ = ante bhangaṇ (Sn. A.)

[4] Evaṇ tattha virajjati Sinh. MSS. of Comy. read evaṇ vaṭṭaṇ virajjati (is free from the round of rebirth). But Sn. Comy. has tattha vijānāti = dukkha-bhāvaṇ vijānāti

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 3

Pahānena Suttaṃ

By Abandoning

---

[205] [137]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these three feelings, brethren.

What three?

Feeling that is pleasant,
feeling that is painful,
and feeling that is neither pleasant nor painful.

These, Brethren, are the three feelings.

The lurking tendency[1]
to lust for pleasant feeling, Brethren, must be abandoned.

The lurking tendency
to repugnance for painful feeling
must be abandoned.

The lurking tendency to ignorance of feeling that is neither pleasant nor painful must be abandoned.

When in a brother that lurking tendency to lust for pleasant feeling is abandoned, that lurking tendency to repugnance for painful feeling is abandoned, that lurking tendency to ignorance of neutral feeling is abandoned, this abandonment of tendency to lust in a brother is called 'rightly seeing.'

He has cut off craving, broken the bond,[2]
by perfect comprehension of conceit
he has made an end of III.

To feel (the touch of) pleasure, not to know
What feeling is, to see no refuge from it, -
That is the lurking tendency to craving.

To feel (the touch of) pain, but not to know
What feeling is, to see no refuge from it, -
That is the lurking tendency to shunning.

What neither pains nor pleases, as is taught By the Great Sage,[3] - if one delights in that,
Not even thus is he from ill released.

But when a brother, ardent (in his task),
Lets not his mind run riot,[4] thereupon
That wise one every feeling understands.

He, understanding feelings, in this life
Is drug-immune and, when the body dies,
A saint, lore-perfeet, past our reckoning.[5]

---

[1] Anusaya.

[2] Vivattayi. Comy. has the usual variant vāvattayi. For this stock phrase cf. infra. § 5; xliv, § 9.

[3] Bhūri-paññа. Cf. K.S. iii, 121 n.

[4] Sampajaññāṇ na riñcati na jahati. (Comy. 'abandons not composure.' At Sn. v, 156 Comy. says na rittakaṇ karoti.

[5] Saṅkhaṇ nopeti (na upeti). see note to K.S. iii, 33. Comy. says ratto duṭṭho muḷho ti paññattiṇ na upeti

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 4

Pātāla Suttaṃ

The Bottomless Pit[1]

---

[206] [138]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The untaught manyfolk, Brethren, utters this saying:

'There is a bottomless pit in the mighty Ocean.'

But herein, Brethren, the untaught manyfolk utters this saying of what is not,
of what exists not, to wit:

'There is a bottomless pit in the mighty Ocean.'

Now this word 'bottomless pit,' Brethren, is a term for painful bodily feeling.

The untaught manyfolk,
when touched by painful bodily feeling,
weeps and wails,
cries aloud,
knocks the breast
and comes by utter bewilderment.

So, Brethren, it is said:

'The untaught manyfolk
has not emerged from the bottomless pit,[2] does not reach solid ground.'

But the well-taught Ariyan disciple, Brethren, when touched by painful bodily feeling,
weeps not,
wails not,
cries not aloud,
knocks not the breast,
comes not by utter bewilderment.

Thus, Brethren, it is said:

'The well-taught Ariyan disciple has emerged from the bottomless pit, he reaches solid ground.'"[3]

He who cannot bear with patience pains that come upon him, that rack the body,
drain the life,
cause trembling at their touch:

Who weeps and wails,
bursts into tears,
feeble
and void of strength,

From the abyss hath not come forth, nor reached the solid ground.

But he that beareth patiently the pains that come upon him,
That rack the body,
drain the life,
and feareth not their touch,

He hath come forth from the abyss and reached the solid ground.

---

[1] Pātālā. Comy. derives it thus: pātassa alaṇ pariyatto n'atthi ('no end of falling'). See Append., to Brethren, p. 418, where Mrs. Rhys Davids says: 'any circumstance in which one is carried off one's feet, loses balance.'

[2] Text has pātālena for pātāle na.

[3] Gādhañ ca n'ajjhagā. Cf. S. i, 47.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 5

Daṭṭhabba Suttaṃ

By So Regarding

---

[207] [139]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these three feelings, brethren.

What three?

Feelings that are pleasant, feelings that are painful, feeliags that are neither pleasant nor painful.

Pleasant feelings, Brethren, should be regarded as Ill.

Painful feelings should be regarded as a barb.

Neutral feelings should be regarded as impermanence.

When a brother regards pleasant feelings as ill, painful feelings as a barb, neutral feelings as impermanence, such an one is called, Brethren,
'rightly seeing.'|| ||

He has cut off craving,
broken the bond,
by perfect comprehension of conceit
he has made an end of ill.

Who sees that pleasure is an ill and pain a piercing barb,
Who sees the state of neutral feeling is impermanent,
That brother rightly sees indeed and feelings understands,
He, understanding feelings, in this life is drug-immune:
When body dies, - a saint, lore-perfect, past our reckoning.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 6

Sallattena Suttaṃ

By the Barb

---

[207] [139]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"The untaught manyfolk, Brethren,
feels feeling that is pleasant,
feeling that is painful
and feeling that is neutral.

The well-taught Ariyan disciple, Brethren, feels feeling that is pleasant,
feeling that is painful
and feeling that is neutral.

Now herein, Brethren,
what is the distinction, what is the specific feature,[1] what is the difference between the well-taught Ariyan disciple and the untaught manyfolk?"

"For us, lord,
things have the Exalted one as their root,
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed were it
if the meaning of this that has been spoken
were to manifest itself in the Exalted One.

Hearing it from him
the brethren will remember it."[ed1]

"The untaught manyfolk, Brethren,
being touched by feeling that is painful,
weeps and wails,
cries aloud,
knocks the breast,
falls into utter bewilderment.

For he feels a twofold feeling, bodily
and mental.

Suppose, Brethren, they pierce a man with a barb, then with a second barb,
just so, Brethren,
that man feels the pain of two barbs.

Thus does the untaught manyfolk being touched by feeling that is painful, weep and wail,
crie aloud,
knock the breast,
fall into utter bewilderment.

For he feels a twofold feeling,
bodily
and mental.

[140] Touched by that painful feeling he feels repugnance for it.

Feeling that repugnance for the painful feeling, the lurking tendency to repugnance
fastens on him.

Touched by the painful feeling, he delights in pleasant feeling.

Why so?

The untaught manyfolk, Brethren, knows of no refuge from painful feeling save sensual pleasure.

Delighting in that sensual pleasure, the lurking tendency to sensual pleasure fastens on him.

He understands not,
as it really is,
the arising
and the destruction of feelings, nor the satisfaction,
the misery,
the way of escape from feelings.

As he understands them not,
the lurking tendency to ignorance of neutral feeling fastens on him.

If he feels feeling that is pleasant,
he feels it as one in bondage.[2]

If he feels feeling that is painful,
he feels it as one in bondage.

If he feels feeling that is neutral,
he feels it as one in bondage.

This untaught many-folk, Brethren, is called 'in bondage to birth,
death,
sorrow
and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair.'

He is in bondage to ill.

So I declare.

§

But, Brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple, when touched by painful feeling,
weeps not,
wails not,
cries not aloud,
knocks not the breast,
falls not into utter bewilderment.

He feels but one feeling,
the bodily,
not the mental.

Suppose, Brethren, they pierce a man with a barb, but do not pierce him with a second barb.

Thus that man feels but the pain caused by the one barb.

Even so, Brethren, the well-taught Arivan disciple, when touched by painful feeling,
weeps not,
wails not,
cries not aloud,
knocks not the breast,
falls not into utter bewilderment.

He feels but one feeling,
bodily pain,
not mental.

Moreover, he has no repugnance for painful feeling.

As he has no repugnance for it, the lurking tendency to repugnance for painful feeling fastens not on him.

He, when touched by painful feeling, delights not in sensual pleasure.

Why so?

Because, Brethren, the well-taught Ariyan disciple knows of a refuge from painful feeling apart from sensual ease.

As he delights not in sensual ease, the [141] lurking tendency to sensual ease fastens not on bim.

As be understands, as they really are,
both the arising
and the destruction
of these feelings,
the satisfaction,
the misery of them,
the way of escape therefrom,
the lurking tendency to ignorance of neutral feeling fastens not on him.

If he feels a feeling that is pleasant, he feels it as one freed from bondage.

If he feels a feeling that is painful,
he feels it as one that is freed from bondage.

If he feels a neutral feeling,
he feels it as one that is freed from bondage.

This well-taught Axiyan disciple, Brethren, is called
'freed from the bondage of birth, old age,[3]
from sorrow and grief,
from woe,
lamentation
and despair.'

He is freed from the bondage of ill.

So I declare.

Such, Brethren, is the distinction, the specific feature,
the difference between the well-taught Ariyan disciple
and the untaught manyfolk."

"Not swayed by feelings is the sage. Nor ease Nor pain affecteth him of knowledge wide.
Betwixt the wise man and the worldly one Vast is the difference in goodliness.

A searcher of the Norm,[4] of knowledge wide,
Who rightly views this world and that beyond,
Is not heart-harassed by things desired:
By undesired things he is not repelled.

By his disinclination and dislike They're blown away, departed, are no more.
Knowing the stainless path and sorrowless,
He rightly knows, becoming he's o'erpassed."[5]

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 58 for adhippāyoso and the usual phrase that follows.

[2] Saṃyutta.

[3] Jarā, omitted in the former paragraph.

[4] Snñkhātā-dhammassa. Cf. K.S. ii, 36; Sn. 70: -

Aneḷamūgo sutavā satīmā Sañkhala-dhāmmo niyato padhānavā|| || where Comy. expl. = 'pariññāta-dhammo': Sn. 1038. Comy. 'a name for the arahant.'

[5] Bhavassa pāragū.

[ed1] Woodward abridges. This is taken from his translation of SN 4.35.152.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 7

Paṭhama Gelaññha Suttaṃ

Sickness (i)

---

[210] [142]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Vesālī,
in Great Grove,
at the Hall of the Peaked Gable.

Then the Exalted One
at eventide
rising from his solitude

went to visit the sick-ward,
and on reaching it
sat down on a seat made ready.

So seated the Exalted One addressed the Brethren, saying: -

"Brethren, a brother should meet his end[1]
collected and composed.

This is our instruction to you.

§

And how, Brethren, is one collected?

Herein, Brethren, a brother dwells,
as regards body,
contemplating body as transient,[2]
ardent,
composed
and thoughtful,
by having put away[3]
in this world
the dejection arising from craving.

■

He[ed1] dwells,
as regards feeling,
contemplating feeling as transient,
ardent,
composed
and thoughtful,

by having put away
in this world
the dejection arising from craving.

■

He dwells,
as regards mind,
contemplating mind as transient,
ardent,
composed
and thoughtful,
by having put away
in this world
the dejection arising from craving.

■

He dwells,
as regards mind-states,
contemplating mind-states as transient,
ardent,
composed
and thoughtful,
by having put away
in this world
the dejection arising from craving.

■

Thus, Brethren, is a brother collected.

§

And how, Brethren, is a brother composed?

Herein, Brethren, in his going forth and in his returning
a brother acts composedly.

In looking in front
and looking behind,
he acts composedly.

In bending or relaxing (his limbs)
he acts composedly.

In wearing his robe
and bearing outer robe and bowl,
in eating,
drinking,
chewing,
and tasting
he acts composedly.

In easing himself,
in going,
standing,
sitting,
sleeping,
waking,
in speaking
and keeping silence
he acts composedly.

Thus, Brethren, is a brother composed.

Brethren, a brother should meet his end collected and composed.

This is our instruction to you.

§

Now, Brethren, as that brother dwells collected, composed,
earnest,
ardent,
strenuous,
there arises in him
feeling that is pleasant,
and he thus understands:

'There is arisen in me
this pleasant feeling.

Now that is owing to something,
not without cause.

Owing to what?

Owing to this same body.

Now this body is impermanent,
compounded,
arisen owing to something.

It is owing to this impermanent body,
which [143] has so arisen,
that pleasant feeling has arisen as a consequence,
and how can that be permanent?'

Thus he dwells contemplating impermanence
in body and pleasant feeling,
he dwells contemplating their transience,

their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up.

As he thus dwells
contemplating impermanence
in body and pleasant feeling,
contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up
the lurking tendency to lust for body and pleasant feeling is abandoned.

■

Now, Brethren, as that brother dwells collected, composed,
earnest,
ardent,
strenuous,
there arises in him
feeling that is painful,
and he thus understands:

'There is arisen in me
this painful feeling.

Now that is owing to something,
not without cause.

Owing to what?

Owing to this same body.

Now this body is impermanent,
compounded,
arisen owing to something.

It is owing to this impermanent body,
which has so arisen,
that painful feeling has arisen as a consequence,
and how can that be permanent?'

Thus he dwells contemplating impermanence
in body and painful feeling,
he dwells contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up.

As he thus dwells
contemplating impermanence
in body and painful feeling,
contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up
the lurking tendency to repugnance for body and painful feeling is abandoned.

■

Now, Brethren, as that brother dwells collected, composed,
earnest,
ardent,
strenuous,
there arises in him

feeling that is neutral,
and he thus understands:

'There is arisen in me
this neutral feeling.

Now that is owing to something,
not without cause.

Owing to what?

Owing to this same body.

Now this body is impermanent,
compounded,
arisen owing to something.

It is owing to this impermanent body,
which has so arisen,
that neutral feeling has arisen as a consequence,
and how can that be permanent?'

Thus he dwells contemplating impermanence
in body and neutral feeling,
he dwells contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up.

As he thus dwells
contemplating impermanence
in body and neutral feeling,
contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up
the lurking tendency to ignorance

for body and neutral feeling is abandoned.

§

If he feels a pleasant feeling he understands:

'That is impermanent,
I do not cling to it.[4]

It has no lure for me.'

If he feels a painful feeling he understands:

'That is impermanent,
I do not cling to it.

It has no lure for me.'

If he feels a neutral feeling he understands:

'That is impermanent,
I do not cling to it.

It has no lure for me.'

■

If he feels a pleasant feeling,
he feels it as one released from bondage to it.

If he feels a painful feeling,
he feels it as one released from bondage to it.

If he feels a neutral feeling,
he feels it as one released from bondage to it.

■

When he feels a feeling that his bodily endurance has reached its limit.

He understands:

'My bodily endurance has reached its limit.

When he feels a feeling that life has reached its limit.

He understands:

'Life has reached its limit'

He understands:

'When body breaks up,
after life is used up,
all my experiences in this world
will lose their lure
and grow cold.'

Just as, Brethren, because of oil
and because of a wick
a lamp keeps burning,
but, when oil and wick are used up,
the lamp would go out
because it is not fed.

Even so, Brethren, a brother,
when he feels a feeling
that his bodily endurance has reached its limit.

He understands:

'My bodily endurance has reached its limit.

When he feels a feeling that life has reached its limit.

He understands:

'Life has reached its limit'

He understands:

'When body breaks up,
after life is used up,
all my experiences in this world
will lose their lure
and grow cold.'

---

[1] Kālaṇ āgameyya, lit. 'reach his time.'

[2] Kāye kāyānupassī. Comy. nirodhaṇ anupassanto.

[3] Vineyya. I take this as gerund of vineti. But it may be the potential mood. Cf. Sn. 590; Nidd.[2] 577.

[4] Cf. K.S. ii, 57, and for the parable following (shortened here), p. 58. [Ed. text has 68, but it must be 58 as 68 is irrelevant.]

[ed1] Here Woodward has overlooked the "vedanāsu|| pe|| citte dhammesu ~" and included only the section on body. I expand using Woodward's vocabulary. see SN 5.47.5

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 8

Dutiya Gelaññna Suttaṃ

Sickness (ii)

---

[213] [144]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Vesālī,
in Great Grove,
at the Hall of the Peaked Gable.

Then the Exalted One
at eventide
rising from his solitude

went to visit the sick-ward,
and on reaching it
sat down on a seat made ready.

So seated the Exalted One addressed the Brethren, saying: -

"Brethren, a brother should meet his end
collected and composed.

This is our instruction to you.

§

And how, Brethren, is one collected?

Herein, Brethren, a brother dwells,
as regards body,
contemplating body as transient,
ardent,
composed
and thoughtful,
by having put away
in this world
the dejection arising from craving.

■

He dwells,
as regards feeling,
contemplating feeling as transient,
ardent,
composed
and thoughtful,

by having put away
in this world
the dejection arising from craving.

■

He dwells,
as regards mind,
contemplating mind as transient,
ardent,
composed
and thoughtful,
by having put away
in this world
the dejection arising from craving.

■

He dwells,
as regards mind-states,
contemplating mind-states as transient,
ardent,
composed
and thoughtful,
by having put away
in this world
the dejection arising from craving.

■

Thus, Brethren, is a brother collected.

§

And how, Brethren, is a brother composed?

Herein, Brethren, in his going forth
and in his returning
a brother acts composedly.

In looking in front
and looking behind,
he acts composedly.

In bending or relaxing (his limbs)
he acts composedly.

In wearing his robe
and bearing outer robe and bowl,
in eating,
drinking,
chewing,
and tasting
he acts composedly.

In easing himself,
in going,
standing,
sitting,
sleeping,
waking,
in speaking
and keeping silence
he acts composedly.

Thus, Brethren, is a brother composed.

Brethren, a brother should meet his end collected and composed.

This is our instruction to you.

§

Now, Brethren, as that brother dwells collected, composed,
earnest,
ardent,
strenuous,
there arises in him
feeling that is pleasant,
and he thus understands:

'There is arisen in me
this pleasant feeling.

Now that is owing to something,
not without cause.

Owing to what?

Owing to this contact.

Now this contact is impermanent,
compounded,
arisen owing to something.

Owing to this impermanent contact,
which has so arisen,
this pleasant feeling has arisen:

How can that be permanent?[ed1]

Thus he dwells contemplating impermanence
in contact and pleasant feeling,

contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up.

As he thus dwells
contemplating impermanence
in contact and pleasant feeling,
contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up
the lurking tendency to lust for contact and pleasant feeling is abandoned.

■

Now, Brethren, as that brother dwells collected, composed,
earnest,
ardent,
strenuous,
there arises in him
feeling that is painful,
and he thus understands:

'There is arisen in me
this painful feeling.

Now that is owing to something,
not without cause.

Owing to what?

Owing to this contact.

Now this contact is impermanent,
compounded,
arisen owing to something.

It is owing to this impermanent contact,
which has so arisen,
this painful feeling has arisen,
and how can that be permanent?'

Thus he dwells contemplating impermanence
in contact and painful feeling,
he dwells contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up.

As he thus dwells
contemplating impermanence
in contact and painful feeling,
contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up
the lurking tendency to repugnance for contact and painful feeling is abandoned.

■

Now, Brethren, as that brother dwells collected, composed,
earnest,
ardent,
strenuous,
there arises in him

feeling that is neutral,
and he thus understands:

'There is arisen in me
this neutral feeling.

Now that is owing to something,
not without cause.

Owing to what?

Owing to this same contact.

Now this contact is impermanent,
compounded,
arisen owing to something.

It is owing to this impermanent contact,
which has so arisen,
that neutral feeling has arisen,
and how can that be permanent?'

Thus he dwells contemplating impermanence
in contact and neutral feeling,
he dwells contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up.

As he thus dwells
contemplating impermanence
in contact and neutral feeling,
contemplating their transience,
their waning,
their ceasing,
the giving of them up
the lurking tendency to ignorance

for contact and neutral feeling is abandoned.

§

If he feels a pleasant feeling he understands:

'That is impermanent,
I do not cling to it.

It has no lure for me.'

If he feels a painful feeling he understands:

'That is impermanent,
I do not cling to it.

It has no lure for me.'

If he feels a neutral feeling he understands:

'That is impermanent,
I do not cling to it.

It has no lure for me.'

■

If he feels a pleasant feeling,
he feels it as one released from bondage to it.

If he feels a painful feeling,
he feels it as one released from bondage to it.

If he feels a neutral feeling,
he feels it as one released from bondage to it.

■

When he feels a feeling
that his bodily endurance has reached its limit.

He understands:

'My bodily endurance has reached its limit.

When he feels a feeling that life has reached its limit.

He understands:

'Life has reached its limit'

He understands:

'When body breaks up,
after life is used up,
all my experiences in this world
will lose their lure
and grow cold.'

Just as, Brethren, because of oil
and because of a wick
a lamp keeps burning,
but, when oil and wick are used up,
the lamp would go out
because it is not fed.

Even so, Brethren, a brother,
when he feels a feeling
that his bodily endurance has reached its limit.

He understands:

'My bodily endurance has reached its limit.

When he feels a feeling that life has reached its limit.

He understands:

'Life has reached its limit'

He understands:

'When body breaks up,
after life is used up,
all my experiences in this world
will lose their lure
and grow cold.'"

[ed1] Here Woodward has placed this sentence in quotes, but the whole of this thought is already in quotes.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 9

Anicca Suttaṃ

Impermanent

---

[214] [144]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the Brethren, saying: -

"There are these three feelings, Brethren,
impermanent,
compounded,
arising owing to something,
perishable by nature,

changeable by nature,
of a nature to fade away,
of a nature to cease.

What three?

Feeling that is pleasant,
feeling that is painful,
and neutral feeling.

These are the three feelings, Brethren,
impermanent,
compounded,
arising owing to something,
perishable by nature,
changeable by nature,
of a nature to fade away,
of a nature to cease."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
1. Sagāthā Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

1. With Verses

Sutta 10

Phassa-Mūlaka Suttaṃ

Rooted in Contact

---

[215] [144]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the Brethren, saying: -

"There are these three feelings, Brethren,
born of contact,
rooted in contact,
related to contact,[1]
conditioned by contact.

What three?

Feeling that is pleasant,
feeling that is painful,
and neutral feeling.

Owing to contact
that is to be experienced as pleasant,[2] Brethren, arises pleasant feeling.

By the ceasing of that contact
to be experienced as pleasant, that pleasant feeling, - arisen owing to that appropriate[3] contact to be experienced as pleasant, - ceases,
is quenched.

■

[145] Owing to contact
that is to be experienced as painful, Brethren, arises painful feeling.

By the ceasing of that contact
to be experienced as painful, that painful feeling
arisen owing to appropriate contact,
to be experienced as painful,
ceases,
and is quenched.

■

Owing to contact
that is to be experienced as neutral, Brethren, arises neutral feeling.

By the ceasing of that contact
to be experienced as neutral, that neutral feeling
arisen owing to appropriate contact,
to be experienced as neutral,
ceases,
and is quenched.

§

Just as, Brethren, from the putting together and rubbing together of two sticks warmth is born,[4]
heat is produced:
as from the changing and parting of those two sticks the warmth so born ceases
and is quenched, -
just so, Brethren, by the ceasing of that contact[ed1] these three feelings
born of contact,
rooted in contact,
related to contact,
conditioned by contact,
owing to appropriate contact so born, - those feelings so born
come to cease."

---

[1] Phassa-nidāna. Cf. K.S. ii, 67 for the section.

[2] Sukha-vedaniyaṇ. Comy. sukha-vedanāya paccaya-bhūtaṇ

[3] Tajjaṇ = sarūpaṇ. Cf. Buddh. Psych. Ethics, 6 n.

[4] Cf. Mil. Pan., 6; Buddh. Psych., 45; S. v, 212.

[ed1] Woodward omits this necessary phrase.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 11

Raho-Gataka Suttaṃ

Given to Solitude

---

[145]

Thus have I heard:

Then a certain brother went to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
that brother said to the Exalted One: -

"Here, lord, as I was meditating alone this reflection arose in me:

'Three feelings have been spoken of by the Exalted One:
pleasant feeling,
painful feeling
and neutral feeling:
these three.

Now the Exalted One has said:

"Whatsoever is experienced,
that is joined with ill."'[1]

Pray, lord, concerning what was this saying uttered:

'Whatsoever is experienced,
that is joined with ill'?"

"Well said, brother!

Well said, brother!

These three feelings were named by me, and I said also,

'Whatsoever is experienced,
that is joined with ill.'

Now, brother, this saying of mine was uttered concerning the impermanence of compounded things.

■

This saying of mine,

'Whatsoever is experienced,
that is joined with ill,'

[146] was uttered concerning the perishable nature of compounded things.

■

This saying of mine,

'Whatsoever is experienced,
that is joined with ill,'

was uttered concerning transient nature of compounded things.

■

This saying of mine,

'Whatsoever is experienced,
that is joined with ill,'

was uttered concerning their nature to fade away
of compounded things.

■

'Whatsoever is experienced,
that is joined with ill,'

was uttered concerning their nature to cease
of compounded things.

§

Now, brother, I have seen, that the ceasing of the activities is gradual.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech has ceased.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained has ceased.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest has ceased.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing have ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness has ceased.

Both perception and feeling have ceased
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is extinguished,
hatred is extinguished,
illusion is extinguished.

§

Again, brother, I have seen that the mastery of the activities is gradual.[2]

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is mastered.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is mastered.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is mastered.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness is mastered.

Both perception and feeling are mastered
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is mastered,

hatred is mastered,
illusion is mastered.

§

There are these six calmings, brother.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is calmed down.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained[3] is calmed down.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is calmed down.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is calmed down.

In the trance where perception and feeling have ceased,[4] perception and feeling are calmed down.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is calmed down,
hatred is calmed down,
illusion is calmed down."

---

[1] Reading with MSS. of Comy. taṇ dukkha-sannissitaṇ which I follow in preference to reading of our text taṇ dukkhasmiṇ Comy. expl. 'all of that is Ill.'

[2] Anupubbaṇṇ. For this passage see Pts. of Contr., 122.

[3] Vitakka-vicāra. Cf. Buddh. Psych. Eth., 10 n.

[4] Saññā-vedayita-nirodhaṇ, i.e. has attained trance in the subjective world. Comy. has cattāro arūpā gahitā honti

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 12

Paṭhama Ākāsa Suttaṃ

The Sky (i)

---

[146]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Just as, Brethren, divers winds blow in the sky, -
some winds blow from the east,
some from the west,
some from the north,
[147] some from the south, - winds, dusty,
winds dustless,
cool winds
and hot winds,
winds soft
and winds boisterous, -
even so in this body arise divers feelings, -
feelings pleasant,
feelings painful,
also neutral feelings."

As many divers winds blow through the sky, -
From east and west and north and south they blow.
Winds dusty, dustless, cool and hot as well,
Winds boisterous and low, of many kinds, -
So in this body many a feeling rises, Pleasant and painful, feeling that is neither.
A brother who is ardent, self-possessed,
And from the substrate free,[1] well understands
In his awareness feelings of all kinds.
He, understanding feelings, in this life
Is drug-immune and, when the body dies,
A saint, lore-perfect, past our reckoning.[2]

---

[1] Nirūpadhi.

[2] Cf. xxxvi, § 3.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 13

Dutiya Ākāsam Suttaṃ

The Sky (ii)

---

[147]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Just as, Brethren, divers winds blow in the sky, -
some winds blow from the east,
some from the west,
some from the north,
some from the south, -
winds, dusty,
winds dustless,
cool winds
and hot winds,
winds soft
and winds boisterous, -
even so in this body arise divers feelings, -
feelings pleasant,
feelings painful,
also neutral feelings."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 14

Āgāra Suttaṃ

The Guest-House[1]

---

[147]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Suppose, Brethren, a guest-house.

Thither come from the eastern quarter folk who take up their residence therein, from the western quarter folk who take up their residence therein, from the northern quarter folk who take up their residence therein, from the southern quarter folk who take up their residence therein, noblemen take up their residence therein, brahmins take up their residence therein, commoners take up their residence therein, serfs take up their residence therein.[2]

Even so, Brethren, in this body divers feelings arise, feelings pleasant,
feelings painful,
feelings neutral.

Pleasant feelings arise that are carnal.[3]

Painful feelings arise that are carnal.

Neutral feelings arise that are carnal.

Likewise arise feelings pleasant that are free from a carnal taint,

feelings painful
that are free from a carnal taint,

feelings neutral
that are free from a carnal taint.

---

[1] Āgantuk'āgāra. Cf. S. v. 51.

[2] Vessā and suddā.

[3] Sāmisa, lit. 'with a fleshy bait.' Kāma-aissitā, 'such as may arise in the first trance. The mental feelings are experienced in the fourth trance.' Comy Cf. M. iii, 217-19; M.A. 279; VibhA. 268.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 15

Paṭhama Santakam (aka Ānanda) Suttaṃ

Property (1)[1]

---

[148]

Then the venerable Ānanda came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Pray, lord, what are the feelings?

What is the arising of feelings?

What is the ceasing of feelings?

What the way leading to the ceasing of feelings?

What is the satisfaction?

What is the misery?

What is the refuge from feeling?"

■

"There are these three feelings, Ānanda:
pleasant feeling,
painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

These, Ānanda, are called feeling.

By the arising of contact
comes the arising of feelings.

By the ceasing of contact comes the ceasing of feelings.

This Ariyan Eightfold Path
is the way leading to the ceasing of feelings, namely:

Right belief,
right intention,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness,
right contemplation.[ed1]

That pleasure,
that mental ease
which arises owing to feeling, -
that is called:

'the satisfaction of feeling.'

As to the feelings which are impermanent,
painful,
changeable by nature, -
these are called:

'the misery of feeling.'

That restraint of desire and lust for feeling, that abandoning of desire and lust for feeling, - that is the refuge from feeling.

§

Moreover, Ānanda, I have seen,
the ceasing of the activities to be gradual.[2]

When one has attained the first trance,
speech has ceased.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained has ceased.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest has ceased.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing have ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness has ceased.

Both perception and feeling have ceased
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is extinguished,
hatred is extinguished,
illusion is extinguished.

§

Again, Ānanda, I have seen
that the mastery of the activities is gradual.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is mastered.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is mastered.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is mastered.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness is mastered.

Both perception and feeling are mastered
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is mastered,
hatred is mastered,
illusion is mastered.

§

There are these six calmings, Ānanda.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is calmed down.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is calmed down.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is calmed down.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is calmed down.

In the trance where perception and feeling have ceased, perception and feeling are calmed down.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is calmed down,
hatred is calmed down,
illusion is calmed down."

---

[1] Santakaṇ, 'what belongs to one' (idoneus).

[2] Anupubba. Cf. supra, § 11.

[ed1] Woodward abridges including only the first and the last term. I have inserted the remainder from SN 5.45.1. Note that he has changed there the first and last terms from those used here.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 16

Dutiya Santakam (aka Ānanda) Suttaṃ

Property (2)

---

[149]

Then the venerable Ānanda came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side, the Exalted One said to the venerable Ānanda: -

"What, Ānanda, is feeling?

What is the arising of feelings?

What is the ceasing of feelings?

What the way leading to the ceasing of feelings?

What is the satisfaction?

What is the misery?

What is the refuge from feeling?"

■

"For us, lord,
things have the Exalted one as their root,
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed were it
if the meaning of this that has been spoken
were to manifest itself in the Exalted One.

Hearing it from him
the brethren will remember it."

"Then listen, Ānanda.

Apply your mind closely and I will speak."

"Even so, lord," replied the venerable Ānanda.

■

The Exalted One said: -

"There are these three feelings, Ānanda:
pleasant feeling,

painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

These, Ānanda, are called feeling.

By the arising of contact
comes the arising of feelings.

By the ceasing of contact
comes the ceasing of feelings.

This Ariyan Eightfold Path
is the way leading to the ceasing of feelings,
namely:

Right belief,
right intention,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right contemplation.

That pleasure,
that mental ease
which arises owing to feeling, -
that is called:

'the satisfaction of feeling.'

As to the feelings which are impermanent,
painful,
changeable by nature, -
these are called:

'the misery of feeling.'

That restraint of desire and lust for feeling,
that abandoning of desire and lust for feeling, -
that is the refuge from feeling.

§

Moreover, Ānanda, I have seen,
the ceasing of the activities to be gradual.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech has ceased.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained has ceased.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest has ceased.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing have ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness has ceased.

Both perception and feeling have ceased
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is extinguished,
hatred is extinguished,
illusion is extinguished.

§

Again, Ānanda, I have seen
that the mastery of the activities is gradual.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is mastered.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is mastered.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is mastered.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness is mastered.

Both perception and feeling are mastered
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is mastered,
hatred is mastered,
illusion is mastered.

§

There are these six calmings, Ānanda.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is calmed down.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is calmed down.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is calmed down.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is calmed down.

In the trance where perception and feeling have ceased, perception and feeling are calmed down.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is calmed down,
hatred is calmed down,
illusion is calmed down."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 17

Paṭhama Aṭṭhaka Suttaṃ

Eightfold (i)[ed1]

---

[149]

Then a number of brethren came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As they sat at one side those brethren said to the Exalted One: -

"Pray, lord, what are the feelings?

What is the arising of feelings?

What is the ceasing of feelings?

What the way leading to the ceasing of feelings?

What is the satisfaction?

What is the misery?

What is the refuge from feeling?"

■

"There are these three feelings, Ānanda:
pleasant feeling,
painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

These, brethren, are called feeling.

By the arising of contact
comes the arising of feelings.

By the ceasing of contact
comes the ceasing of feelings.

This Ariyan Eightfold Path
is the way leading to the ceasing of feelings,
namely:

Right belief,
right intention,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness,
right contemplation.

That pleasure,
that mental ease
which arises owing to feeling, -
that is called:

'the satisfaction of feeling.'

As to the feelings which are impermanent,
painful,
changeable by nature, -
these are called:

'the misery of feeling.'

That restraint of desire and lust for feeling,
that abandoning of desire and lust for feeling, -
that is the refuge from feeling.

§

Moreover, brethren, I have seen,
the ceasing of the activities to be gradual.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech has ceased.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained has ceased.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest has ceased.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing have ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness has ceased.

Both perception and feeling have ceased
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is extinguished,
hatred is extinguished,
illusion is extinguished.

§

Again, brethren, I have seen
that the mastery of the activities is gradual.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is mastered.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is mastered.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is mastered.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness is mastered.

Both perception and feeling are mastered
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is mastered,
hatred is mastered,
illusion is mastered.

§

There are these six calmings.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is calmed down.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is calmed down.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is calmed down.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is calmed down.

In the trance where perception and feeling have ceased, perception and feeling are calmed down.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is calmed down,
hatred is calmed down,
illusion is calmed down."

---

ed1 Woodward abridges this entire sutta noting: "The same as §15. 'Eightfold' means, ceasing, mastering and the six calmings there described."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 18

Dutiya Aṭṭhaka Suttaṃ

Eightfold (ii)

---

[149]

Then a number of brethren came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As they[1] sat at one side, the Exalted One said to them: -

"What, brethren, is feeling?

What is the arising of feelings?

What is the ceasing of feelings?

What the way leading to the ceasing of feelings?

What is the satisfaction?

What is the misery?

What is the refuge from feeling?"

■

"For us, lord,
things have the Exalted one as their root,
their guide,
their resort.

Well indeed were it
if the meaning of this that has been spoken
were to manifest itself in the Exalted One.

Hearing it from him
the brethren will remember it."

"Then listen, brethren.

Apply your minds closely and I will speak."

"Even so, lord," replied the brethren.

■

The Exalted One said: -

"There are these three feelings, brethren:
pleasant feeling,

painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

These, brethren, are called feeling.

By the arising of contact
comes the arising of feelings.

By the ceasing of contact
comes the ceasing of feelings.

This Ariyan Eightfold Path
is the way leading to the ceasing of feelings,
namely:

Right belief,
right intention,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right contemplation.

That pleasure,
that mental ease
which arises owing to feeling, -
that is called:

'the satisfaction of feeling.'

As to the feelings which are impermanent,
painful,
changeable by nature, -
these are called:

'the misery of feeling.'

That restraint of desire and lust for feeling,
that abandoning of desire and lust for feeling, -
that is the refuge from feeling.

§

Moreover, brethren, I have seen,
the ceasing of the activities to be gradual.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech has ceased.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained has ceased.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest has ceased.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing have ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness has ceased.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness has ceased.

Both perception and feeling have ceased
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is extinguished,
hatred is extinguished,
illusion is extinguished.

§

Again, brethren, I have seen
that the mastery of the activities is gradual.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is mastered.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is mastered.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is mastered.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite space,
perception of objects is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of infinite consciousness,
perception of the realm of infinite space is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of nothingness,
the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness is mastered.

When one has attained the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception,
the perception of the realm of nothingness is mastered.

Both perception and feeling are mastered
when one has attained the cessation of perception and feeling.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is mastered,
hatred is mastered,
illusion is mastered.

§

There are these six calmings, brethren.

When one has attained the first trance,
speech is calmed down.

When one has attained the second trance,
thought initial and sustained is calmed down.

When one has attained the third trance,
zest is calmed down.

When one has attained the fourth trance,
inbreathing and outbreathing is calmed down.

In the trance where perception and feeling have ceased, perception and feeling are calmed down.

For the brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
lust is calmed down,
hatred is calmed down,
illusion is calmed down."

[1] All MSS. have nissinno, which should read nisinne.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 19

Pañca-k-aṇga Suttaṃ

Fivetools[1]

---

[149]

Now Fivetools, the carpenter, came to visit the venerable Udāyi[2]
and on coming to him,
saluted him
and sat down at [150] one side.

So seated Fivetools, the carpenter,
said to the venerable Udāyi: -

"Pray, master Udāyi, how many feelings are spoken of by the Exalted One?"

■

"Three feelings, carpenter, are spoken of by the Exalted One, -
pleasant feeling,
painful feeling
and feeling that is neither pleasant nor painful.

These are the three."

At these words Fivetools, the carpenter,
said to the venerable Udāyi: -

"Not three feelings
were spoken of by the Exalted One, master Udāyi.

There are two feelings, -
pleasant
and painful feeling.

As to this neutral feeling,
it was spoken of by the Exalted One as belonging to pure and perfect bliss."[3]

■

Then a second time the venerable Udāyi said to the carpenter Fivetools: -

"Not two feelings, carpenter,
were spoken of by the Exalted One.

Three feelings were spoken of by the Exalted One, -
pleasant,

painful
and neutral feelings.

These are the three so spoken of."

Then a second time also Fivetools, the carpenter,
said to the venerable Udāyi: -

"No, master Udāyi.

Not three feelings
were spoken of by the Exalted One, master Udāyi.

There are two feelings, -
pleasant
and painful feeling.

As to this neutral feeling,
it was spoken of by the Exalted One
as belonging to pure and perfect bliss."

■

Then a third time the venerable Udāyi
said to the carpenter Fivetools: -

"Not two feelings, carpenter,
were spoken of by the Exalted One.

Three feelings were spoken of by the Exalted One, -
pleasant,
painful
and neutral feelings.

These are the three so spoken of."

Then a third time also Fivetools, the carpenter,
said to the venerable Udāyi: -

"No, master Udāyi.

Not three feelings
were spoken of by the Exalted One, master Udāyi.

There are two feelings, -
pleasant
and painful feeling.

As to this neutral feeling,
it was spoken of by the Exalted One
as belonging to pure and perfect bliss."

So neither could convince the other.

§

Now the venerable Ānanda overheard the talk between the venerable Udāyi and Fivetools, the carpenter.

Thereupon the venerable Ānanda went to the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Just now Fivetools, the carpenter, came to visit the venerable Udāyi
and on coming to him,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated Fivetools, the carpenter,
said to the venerable Udāyi: -

'Pray, master Udāyi,
how many feelings are spoken of by the Exalted One?'

■

'Three feelings, carpenter,
are spoken of by the Exalted One, -
pleasant feeling,
painful feeling
and feeling that is neither pleasant nor painful.

These are the three.'

At these words Fivetools, the carpenter,
said to the venerable Udāyi: -

'Not three feelings
were spoken of by the Exalted One, master Udāyi.

There are two feelings, -
pleasant
and painful feeling.

As to this neutral feeling,
it was spoken of by the Exalted One
as belonging to pure and perfect bliss.'

■

Then a second time the venerable Udāyi
said to the carpenter Fivetools: -

'Not two feelings, carpenter,
were spoken of by the Exalted One.

Three feelings were spoken of by the Exalted One, -
pleasant,
painful
and neutral feelings.

These are the three so spoken of.'

Then a second time also Fivetools, the carpenter,
said to the venerable Udāyi: -

'No, master Udāyi.

Not three feelings
were spoken of by the Exalted One, master Udāyi.

There are two feelings, -
pleasant
and painful feeling.

As to this neutral feeling,
it was spoken of by the Exalted One
as belonging to pure and perfect bliss.'

■

Then a third time the venerable Udāyi
said to the carpenter Fivetools: -

'Not two feelings, carpenter,
were spoken of by the Exalted One.

Three feelings were spoken of by the Exalted One, -
pleasant,
painful
and neutral feelings.

These are the three so spoken of.'

Then a third time also Fivetools, the carpenter,
said to the venerable Udāyi: -

'No, master Udāyi.

Not three feelings
were spoken of by the Exalted One, master Udāyi.

There are two feelings, -
pleasant
and painful feeling.

As to this neutral feeling,
it was spoken of by the Exalted One
as belonging to pure and perfect bliss.'

So neither could convince the other."

■

Then the Exalted One said: -

"Though it was true, Ānanda, Fivetools the carpenter did not agree with the explanation of the brother Udāyi, nor would the latter agree with the explanation of the former, though it was true.

■

[151] There are two feelings, Ānanda, in mv way of explaining.

There are also three feelings, Ānanda,
in my way of explaining.

There are also five feelings, Ānanda,
in my way of explaining.

There are also six feelings, Ānanda,
in my way of explaining.

There are also eighteen feelings, Ānanda,
in my way of explaining.

There are also thirty-six feelings, Ānanda,
in my way of explaining.

There are also one hundred and eight[4] feelings in mv way of explaining,
Ānanda.

■

Such is the exposition of the Norm taught by me, Ānanda.

Though I have thus expounded my method of teaching the Norm, Ānanda, of those who will not approve of,
will not agree with,
each other's exposition of it,
however well said and spoken, -
of such you may expect this:

They will dwell quarrelsome,
wrangling,
disputatious,
wounding each other with the weapons of the tongue.[5]

■

Now such is the method of the Norm,
as expounded by me.

When I have so expounded it,
those who approve of,
agree with,
each other's exposition of it, being well said andspoken, -
of such you may expect this:

They will dwell in harmony,
courteous,
without quarrelling,
like milk and water mixed,
looking on one another
with the eye of affection.

§

There are these five sensual elements, Ānanda.

What five?

Objects cognizable by the eve,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

Sounds[ed1] cognizable by the ear,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

Scents cognizable by the nose,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

Savours cognizable by the tongue,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

Tangibles cognizable by the body,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, Ānanda, are the five sensual elements.

■

That pleasure,
that happiness
that arises owing to the five sensual elements, - that, Ānanda,
is called 'sensual pleasure.'

Now, Ānanda, there may be some who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
aloof from sensua1ity,
aloof from evil conditions,
enters on the first trance,
which is accompanied by thought directed and sustained,
which is born of solitude,
easeful and zestful,
and abides therein.

This, [152] Ānanda, is another pleasure
still more excellent
still more exquisite
than that one.

There may be some, Ānanda, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
by the calming down of thought directed and sustained,
enters on the inward calm,
that single-mindedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sustained,
born of mental balance,
zestful and full of ease,
which is the second trance.

This, Ānanda, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, Ānanda, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
by the fading out of zest
becomes balanced
and remains mindful and composed,
and experiences with the body
the happiness of which the Ariyans aver:

'The balanced thoughtful man
dwells happily.'

Then he enters on the third trance
and abides therein.

This, Ānanda, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, Ānanda, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
rejecting pleasure and pain,
by the coming to an end of the joy and sorrow
which he had before,
enters on
and abides in
the fourth trance,
which is free of pain
and free of pleasure,
but is a state of perfect purity
of balance
and equanimity.

This, Ānanda, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, Ānanda, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the perception of [153] objects,
by the coming to an end
of perception of resistance,[6]
by not attending to perception of diversity,
with the idea of
'infinite[7] is space,' attains
and abides in
the realm of the infinity of space.

This, Ānanda, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, Ānanda, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite space,

with the idea of
'infinite is consciousness,'
attains
and abides in
the realm of infinite consciousness.

This, Ānanda, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, Ānanda, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite consciousness,
with the idea:
'There is nothing at all,'
attains
and abides in
the realm of nothingness.

This, Ānanda, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, Ānanda, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of nothingness,
attains
and abides in
the realm which neither is nor is not perception.

This, Ānanda, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, Ānanda, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, Ānanda, another [154] pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, Ānanda, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm which neither is nor is not perception,
attains
and abides in (a state which is) the cessation of perception and feeling.[8]

This, Ānanda,
is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
(than that other).

But, Ānanda,
there is a possibility
that the Wanderers who hold other views might aver:

'Gotama the recluse spoke of the cessation of perception and feeling,
and proclaims that as pleasure.

What is the meaning of this
and how is this?'

The Wanderers who hold other views, Ānanda, should be replied to thus:

'Friends, the Exalted One did not proclaim that
as pleasure in connection with just pleasant feeling:
but wheresoever, friends, pleasure is obtained,
the Exalted One proclaims just that pleasure, howsoever
and of whatsoever nature, as pleasure.'"[9]

---

[1] Pañcak' aṇga. According to Comy. the five angāni constituting the tools of a carpenter are vasi-pharasu (adze), nikkhādana (chisel), daṇḍa (measurmg-stick), muggara (gavel), kāḷa-sutta (blackened thread): Western carpenters use a chalked thread. Cf. Mil. P., 413; J.P.T.S., 1884, 76-8: also nāṭī a hollow reed. (Ceylon carpenters use a bambu joint for holding nails, etc., and small tools.)

[2] Cf. supra. §[xxxv] 133. M. i,396, 447. Here Comy. calls him paṇḍita thera

[3] Cf. infra, xlii, § 24, Santaṇ, Comy. 'Sā pi sant'aṭṭhena paṇīt'aṭṭhena ca sukhan ti vutta nirodho.' for paṇīta see Buddh Psych. Eth., 266 n.

[4] The number ot the khandhas (thirty-six in a threefold way).

[5] Cf. Udān., 67.

[6] Paṭigha (here in its psychological sense) = saññā The resistance offered to outward-going consciousness, by which one becomes aware of something.

[7] Text has anatta in this and the next, para., following the Sinhalese MSS. But nl and it are so similar in Sinhalese script that they are often indistinguishable. Burmese MSS. read ananta and Comy. does not notice the passage, so I translate according to ananta, always used in this stock formula.

[8] Saññā-vedayita-nirodha.

[9] Cf. Buddh. Psych., 119.

[ed1] Woodward here has used 'Objects' for all the senses, presumably in error as usually he distinguishes the various objects of the senses as it is found in the Pali.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
2. Raho-Gata Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

2. The Chapter on Solitude

Sutta 20

Bhikkhunā Suttaṃ

By A Brother

---

[154]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are two feelings, brethren,
in mv way of explaining.

There are also three feelings, brethren,
in my way of explaining.

There are also five feelings, brethren,
in my way of explaining.

There are also six feelings, brethren,
in my way of explaining.

There are also eighteen feelings, brethren,
in my way of explaining.

There are also thirty-six feelings, brethren,
in my way of explaining.

There are also one hundred and eight feelings in mv way of explaining,
brethren.

■

Such is the exposition of the Norm taught by me, brethren.

Though I have thus expounded my method of teaching the Norm, brethren, of those who will not approve of,
will not agree with,
each other's exposition of it,
however well said and spoken, -
of such you may expect this:

They will dwell quarrelsome,
wrangling,
disputatious,
wounding each other with the weapons of the tongue.

■

Now such is the method of the Norm,
as expounded by me.

When I have so expounded it,
those who approve of,
agree with,
each other's exposition of it,
being well said andspoken, -
of such you may expect this:

They will dwell in harmony,
courteous,
without quarrelling,
like milk and water mixed,
looking on one another
with the eye of affection.

§

There are these five sensual elements, brethren.

What five?

Objects cognizable by the eve,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

Sounds cognizable by the ear,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

Scents cognizable by the nose,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

Savours cognizable by the tongue,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

Tangibles cognizable by the body,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, brethren, are the five sensual elements.

■

That pleasure,
that happiness
that arises owing to the five sensual elements, -
that, brethren,
is called "sensual pleasure."

Now, brethren, there may be some who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, brethren, a brother,
aloof from sensua1ity,
aloof from evil conditions,
enters on the first trance,
which is accompanied by thought directed and sustained,
which is born of solitude,
easeful and zestful,
and abides therein.

This, brethren, is another pleasure
still more excellent
still more exquisite
than that one.

There may be some, brethren, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, brethren, a brother,
by the calming down of thought directed and sustained,
enters on the inward calm,
that single-mindedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sustained,
born of mental balance,
zestful and full of ease,
which is the second trance.

This, brethren, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, brethren, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, brethren, a brother,
by the fading out of zest
becomes balanced
and remains mindful and composed,
and experiences with the body
the happiness of which the Ariyans aver:

'The balanced thoughtful man
dwells happily.'

Then he enters on the third trance
and abides therein.

This, brethren, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, brethren, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

And what is that?

■

Herein, brethren, a brother,
rejecting pleasure and pain,
by the coming to an end
of the joy and sorrow
which he had before,
enters on
and abides in
the fourth trance,
which is free of pain
and free of pleasure,
but is a state of perfect purity
of balance
and equanimity.

This, brethren, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, brethren, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, brethren, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the perception of objects,
by the coming to an end
of perception of resistance,
by not attending to perception of diversity,
with the idea of
'infinite is space,'
attains
and abides in
the realm of the infinity of space.

This, brethren, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, brethren, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, brethren, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite space,
with the idea of
'infinite is consciousness,'
attains
and abides in
the realm of infinite consciousness.

This, brethren, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, brethren, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, brethren, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite consciousness,
with the idea:
'There is nothing at all,'
attains

and abides in
the realm of nothingness.

This, brethren, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, brethren, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, brethren, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of nothingness,
attains
and abides in
the realm which neither is nor is not perception.

This, brethren, is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
than that other.

There may be some, brethren, who aver:

'This is the supreme pleasure and happiness
that beings can experience.'

But of that view of theirs
I do not allow.

Why not?

There is, brethren, another pleasure,
still more excellent and exquisite than this.

■

And what is that?

Herein, brethren, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm
which neither is nor is not perception,
attains
and abides in (a state which is)
the cessation of perception and feeling.

This, brethren,
is a pleasure
still more excellent,
still more exquisite
(than that other).

§

But, brethren,
there is a possibility

that the Wanderers who hold other views might aver:

'Gotama the recluse spoke
of the cessation of perception and feeling,
and proclaims that as pleasure.

What is the meaning of this
and how is this?'

The Wanderers who hold other views, brethren, should be replied to thus:

'Friends, the Exalted One did not proclaim that
as pleasure in connection with just pleasant feeling:
but wheresoever, friends, pleasure is obtained,
the Exalted One proclaims just that pleasure,
howsoever
and of whatsoever nature,
as pleasure.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight[1]

Sutta 21

Moḷiya-Sīvaka Suttaṃ

Sīvaka

---

[154]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha, in the Bamboo Grove, at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Now on that occasion
the Wanderer Sīvaka of the Top-knot[2] paid a visit to the Exalted One.

On coming to him
he greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and [155] courtesies,
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Slvaka of the Top-knot
said to the Exalted One: -

"There are some recluses and brahmins, master Gotama, who say thus,
who hold this view:

'Whatsoever pleasure or pain or mental state a human being experiences, all that is due to a previous act.'

Now what says master Gotama about this?"

§

"Now, Sīvaka, in this connection
there are some sufferings originating from bile.[3]

You ought to know by experience,[4] Sīvaka, that this is so.

And this fact,
that sufferings originate from bile,
is generally acknowledged by the world as true.

Now, Sīvaka, those recluses and brahmins
who say thus,

who hold this view, that
'whatsoever pleasure or pain or mental state a human being experiences,
all that is due to a previous act',
both in what is known by personal experience
and in what is generally acknowledged by the world as true, -
in both they go too far.

Wherefore I declare those recluses and brahmins to be in the wrong.

■

Also, Sīvaka,
in this connexion,
there are some sufferings
originating from phlegm.

You ought to know by experience, Sīvaka,
that this is so.

And this fact,
that sufferings originate from phlegm,
is generally acknowledged by the world as true.

Now, Sīvaka, those recluses and brahmins
who say thus,
who hold this view, that
'whatsoever pleasure or pain or mental state a human being experiences,
all that is due to a previous act',
both in what is known by personal experience
and in what is generally acknowledged by the world as true, -
in both they go too far.

Wherefore I declare those recluses and brahmins
to be in the wrong.

■

Also, Sīvaka,
in this connexion,
there are some sufferings
originating from wind.

You ought to know by experience, Sīvaka,
that this is so.

And this fact,
that sufferings originate from wind,
is generally acknowledged by the world as true.

Now, Sīvaka, those recluses and brahmins
who say thus,
who hold this view, that
'whatsoever pleasure or pain or mental state a human being experiences,
all that is due to a previous act',
both in what is known by personal experience
and in what is generally acknowledged by the world as true, -
in both they go too far.

Wherefore I declare those recluses and brahmins
to be in the wrong.

■

Also, Sīvaka,
in this connexion,
there are some sufferings
originating from from the union of bodily humours,[5].

You ought to know by experience, Sīvaka,
that this is so.

And this fact,
that sufferings originate from the union of bodily humours,
is generally acknowledged by the world as true.

Now, Sīvaka, those recluses and brahmins
who say thus,
who hold this view, that
'whatsoever pleasure or pain or mental state a human being experiences,
all that is due to a previous act',
both in what is known by personal experience
and in what is generally acknowledged by the world as true, -
in both they go too far.

Wherefore I declare those recluses and brahmins
to be in the wrong.

■

Also, Sīvaka,
in this connexion,
there are some sufferings
originating from changes of the seasons.

You ought to know by experience, Sīvaka,
that this is so.

And this fact,
that sufferings originate from changes of the seasons,
is generally acknowledged by the world as true.

Now, Sīvaka, those recluses and brahmins
who say thus,
who hold this view, that
'whatsoever pleasure or pain or mental state a human being experiences,
all that is due to a previous act',
both in what is known by personal experience
and in what is generally acknowledged by the world as true, -
in both they go too far.

Wherefore I declare those recluses and brahmins
to be in the wrong.

■

Also, Sīvaka,
in this connexion,
there are some sufferings
originating from stress of untoward happenings,[6].

You ought to know by experience, Sīvaka,
that this is so.

And this fact,
that sufferings originate from stress of untoward happenings,
is generally acknowledged by the world as true.

Now, Sīvaka, those recluses and brahmins
who say thus,
who hold this view, that
'whatsoever pleasure or pain or mental state a human being experiences,
all that is due to a previous act',
both in what is known by personal experience
and in what is generally acknowledged by the world as true, -
in both they go too far.

Wherefore I declare those recluses and brahmins
to be in the wrong.

■

Also, Sīvaka,
in this connexion,
there are some sufferings
originating from sudden attacks from without,[7].

You ought to know by experience, Sīvaka,
that this is so.

And this fact,
that sufferings originate from sudden attacks from without,
is generally acknowledged by the world as true.

Now, Sīvaka, those recluses and brahmins
who say thus,
who hold this view, that
'whatsoever pleasure or pain or mental state a human being experiences,
all that is due to a previous act',
both in what is known by personal experience
and in what is generally acknowledged by the world as true, -
in both they go too far.

Wherefore I declare those recluses and brahmins
to be in the wrong.

■

Also, Sīvaka,
in this connexion,
there are some sufferings
originating from ripeness of one's karma.

You ought to know by experience, Sīvaka,
that this is so.

And this fact,
that sufferings originate from ripeness of one's karma,
is generally acknowledged by the world as true.

Now, Sīvaka, those recluses and brahmins
who say thus,
who hold this view, that
'whatsoever pleasure or [156] pain or mental state a human being experiences,
all that is due to a previous act',
both in what is known by personal experience

and in what is generally acknowledged by the world as true, -
in both they go too far.

Wherefore I declare those recluses and brahmins
to be in the wrong."

■

At these words the Wanderer Sīvaka of the Top-knot said to the Exalted One: -

"Excellent, master Gotama![ed1]

Excellent it is, master Gotama!

Even as one raises what is fallen or shows forth what is hidden, or points out the way
to him that wanders astray, or holds up a light in the darkness so that they who have eyes may see objects,
— even so in divers ways has Dhamma, been set forth by master Gotama.

I myself go for refuge to Gotama,
the Exalted One,
to Dhamma
and the Order of monks.

May the worthy Gotama accept me as a follower
from this day forth,
so long as life lasts,
as one who has so taken refuge."

With bile, phlegm, wind, the union Of humours, seasons' changes and the stress
Of circumstance and awkward happenings,
The ripeness of one's karma makes the eighth.

---

[1] See end of § 22.

[2] Moliya, having his hair tied in a moli. Cf. K.S. ii. 9 n. He may have been a physician. Cf. A. iii, 356: Thag. 14.

[3] Cf. Mil. Pañh., 134, and S.B.E. xxxv, p. 191, Where Nāgasena is questioned on the sinlessness of the Buddha by King Milinda, and quotes this sulta. See infra. p. 161 n. [see inset] A. ii, 87.

[4] Sāmaṇ.

[5] MSS. of Comy. agree in reading sannipātāni for text's sannipātikāni. Cf. the additional note on p. 161. [see inset]

[6] Visama-parihārajāni, e.g. 'as when one goes out hastily at night and is bitten by a snake,' Comy. In the passage quoted above, Mil. P., 134. Prof. Rhys Davids trans. 'avoiding of dissimilarities.' Comy. at A. ii, 87, 'by sitting or standing too long' (any excess).

[7] Opakkamikāni, e.g. 'arrested as a robber or adulterer.' Comy. M.P. gives as example the wounding of the Buddha's foot by a splinter of rock. The word means 'chance external happenings.'

[ed1] Abridged with no recent example. Taken from AN 2.11.17

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight

Sutta 22

Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Suttaṃ

One Hundred and Eight

---

[156]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you an exposition of the Norm, brethren, according to the method of the one hundred and eight.

And what, brethren, is that exposition of the Norm?

There are two feelings, brethren, in my way of expounding.

There are also three,
five,
six,
eighteen,
thirty-six,
and one hundred and eight feelings.

And what, brethren, are the two feelings?

They are bodily and mental feelings.

These, brethren, are called 'the two feelings.'

And what, brethren, are the three feelings?

They are pleasant, painful and neutral feelings.

These, brethren, are called 'the three feelings.'

And what, brethren, are the five feelings?

They are the controlling powers[1] of pleasure, pain,
joy,
grief
and indifference.

These, brethren, are 'the five feelings'.

And what, brethren, are the six feelings?

They are the feeling
born of eye-contact,
ear-contact,
nose-contact,
tongue-contact,
body-contact
and mind-contact.

These, brethren, are 'the six feelings'.

And what, brethren, are the eighteen feelings?

They are the six ways of giving attention[2] to joy, grief
and indifference.

These, brethren, are 'the eighteen feelings'.

[157] And what, brethren, are the thirty-six feelings?

They are the six forms of joy concerned with the worldly life, the six forms of joy concerned with giving up:[3] they are the six forms of grief concerned with the worldly life and six forms of grief concerned with giving up: there are six forms of indifference concerned with the worldly life and six forms of indifference concerned with giving up.

These, brethren, are called 'the thirty-six feelings.'

And what, brethren, are the one hundred and eight feelings?

There are thirty-six feelings of the past, thirty-six of the future,
and thirty-six feelings of the present time.

These, brethren, are the one hundred and eight feelings, and this is the method of expounding the Norm according to the one hundred and eight.

---

[1] indriyāni.

[2] Upavicārā.

[3] Nekkhamma

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight

Sutta 23

Bhikkhu Suttaṃ

The Brother

---

[157]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha, in the Bamboo Grove, at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then a certain brother came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side that brother said this: -

"What, lord, are the feelings?

What the arising of feelings?

What is the way leading to the arising of feelings?

What is the ceasing of feelings?

What is the way leading to their ceasing?

What is the satisfaction,
the misery of feelings,
what is the way of escape from feelings?"

■

"There are these three feelings, brother:
pleasant feelings,
painful feelings
and neutral feelings.

These, brother, are called
'the three feelings.'

From the arising of contact
comes the arising of feelings.

Craving is the way
leading to the arising of feelings.

By the ceasing of contact comes the ceasing of feeling.

This Ariyan Eightfold Path, to wit:

Right belief,
right intention,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right contemplation,
is the way leading to the ceasing of feelings.

The pleasure and happiness which arise owing to feeling, - that is the satisfaction in feeling.

The misery of feeling
is the impermanence,
the pain,
the unsubstantial nature of feeling.

The abolishing of desire and lust,
the abandoning of desire and lust, -
that is the escape from feelings."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight

Sutta 24

Pubbeñāṇa Suttaṃ

Knowledge of the Past

THUS have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord" responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Formerly, brethren,
before my enlightenment, when I was not yet fully enlightened, but a Bodliisat,
this thought occurred to me:

'What now are feelings?

What is the arising of feelings?

What is the ceasing of feelings?

What the way leading to the ceasing of feelings?

What is the satisfaction,
what is the misery of feelings?

What is the way of escape from feelings?'

§

Then, brethren, I thought thus:

'There are these three feelings:

They are pleasant, painful and neutral feelings.

These are called "the three feelings."

From the arising of contact
comes the arising of feelings.

Craving is the way
leading to the arising of feelings.

By the ceasing of contact
comes the ceasing of feeling.

This Ariyan Eightfold Path, to wit:
right view
right intention [aim][ed1]
right speech,
right doing [action],
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right [concentration] contemplation,
is the way leading to the ceasing of feelings.

The pleasure and happiness
which arise owing to feeling, -
that is the satisfaction in feeling.

The misery of feeling
is the impermanence,
the pain,
the unsubstantial nature of feeling.

The abolishing of desire and lust,
the abandoning of desire and lust, -
that is the escape from feelings.'

§

At the thought, brethren,

'This is feeling,' -

things not heard of before[1]
there arose in me vision,
there arose in me knowledge,
insight arose,
wisdom arose,
light arose.

At the thought:

'This is the arising of feeling,' -

things not heard of before
there arose in me vision,
there arose in me knowledge,
insight arose,
wisdom arose,
light arose.

At the thought:

'This is the way leading to the arising of feeling,' -

things not heard of before
there arose in me vision,
there arose in me knowledge,
insight arose,
wisdom arose,
light arose.

At the thought:

'This is the ceasing of feeling,' -

things not heard of before
there arose in me vision,
there arose in me knowledge,
insight arose,

wisdom arose,
light arose.

At the thought:

'This is the way leading to the ceasing of feeling' -

things not heard of before
there arose in me vision,
there arose in me knowledge,
insight arose,
wisdom arose,
light arose.

At the thought:

'This is the satisfaction,
the misery of feeling,
this is the escape from feeling,' -

things not heard of before
there arose in me vision,
there arose in me knowledge,
insight arose,
wisdom arose,
light arose."

---

[1] Pubbe ananussutesu dhammesu. Cf. K.S. ii, 7 nn.

[ed1] Woodward differs in his translation at SN 4.35.145, here and SN 4.42.12

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight

Sutta 25

Bhikkhunā Suttaṃ

By A Brother

---

[158]

Thus have I heard:

Once a number of brethren came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side those brethren said this: -

"What, lord, are the feelings?

What the arising of feelings?

What is the way leading to the arising of feelings?

What is the ceasing of feelings?

What is the way leading to their ceasing?

What is the satisfaction,
the misery of feelings,
what is the way of escape from feelings?"

■

"There are these three feelings, brethren:
pleasant feelings,
painful feelings
and neutral feelings.

These, brethren, are called
'the three feelings.'

From the arising of contact
comes the arising of feelings.

Craving is the way
leading to the arising of feelings.

By the ceasing of contact
comes the ceasing of feeling.

This Ariyan Eightfold Path, to wit:

Right belief,
right intention,
right speech,

right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right contemplation,
is the way leading to the ceasing of feelings.

The pleasure and happiness
which arise owing to feeling, -
that is the satisfaction in feeling.

The misery of feeling
is the impermanence,
the pain,
the unsubstantial nature of feeling.

The abolishing of desire and lust,
the abandoning of desire and lust, -
that is the escape from feelings."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight

Sutta 26

Paṭhama Samaṇa-Brāhmaṇā Suttaṃ

Recluses and Brahmins (i)

---

[158]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these three feelings, brethren.

What three?

Pleasant feeling,
painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins understand not as they really are
the arising,
the destruction,
the satisfaction
and misery of,
the escape from,
these three feelings,
[those recluses[ed1] [159] or those brahmins are approved neither among recluses as recluses,
nor among brahmins as brahmins,
nor have those venerable ones
even in this present life
understood of themselves,
nor realized
what is the good
of being either recluse or brahmin,
nor lived in the attainment thereof.

But those recluses and brahmins who have understood as they really are
the arising,
the destruction,
the satisfaction
and misery of,
the escape from,
these three feelings,
those recluses or those brahmins are approved both among recluses as recluses,

and among brahmins as brahmins,
and those venerable ones
even in this present life
have understood of themselves,
and realized
what is the good
of being either recluse or brahmin, and lived in the attainment thereof.]

---

ed1 Woodward notes: The words in brackets are abbreviated in the text and are to be supplied from S. ii, 14 (K.S. ii, 12). I have used the version found in the reference, his "words in brackets" are slightly different].

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight

Sutta 27

Dutiya Samaṇa-Brāhmaṇā Suttaṃ

Recluses and Brahmins (ii)

---

[159]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these three feelings, brethren.

What three?

Pleasant feeling,
painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins understand not as they really are
the arising,
the destruction,
the satisfaction
and misery of,
the escape from,
these three feelings,
those recluses or those brahmins are approved
neither among recluses as recluses,
nor among brahmins as brahmins,
nor have those venerable ones
even in this present life
understood of themselves,
nor realized
what is the good
of being either recluse or brahmin,
nor lived in the attainment thereof.

But those recluses and brahmins
who have understood as they really are
the arising,
the destruction,
the satisfaction
and misery of,
the escape from,
these three feelings,
those recluses or those brahmins are approved both among recluses as recluses,

and among brahmins as brahmins,
and those venerable ones
even in this present life
have understood of themselves,
and realized
what is the good
of being either recluse or brahmin,
and lived in the attainment thereof."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight

Sutta 28

Tatiya Samaṇa-Brāhmaṇā Suttaṃ

Recluses and Brahmins (iii)

---

[159]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these three feelings, brethren.

What three?

Pleasant feeling,
painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins understand not the arising of feeling,
the ceasing of feeling,
the way leading to the ceasing of feeling,
those recluses or those brahmins are approved
neither among recluses as recluses,
nor among brahmins as brahmins,
nor have those venerable ones
even in this present life
understood of themselves,
nor realized
what is the good
of being either recluse or brahmin,
nor lived in the attainment thereof.

But those recluses and brahmins
who have understood the arising of feeling,
the ceasing of feeling,
the way leading to the ceasing of feeling,
those recluses or those brahmins are approved both among recluses as recluses,
and among brahmins as brahmins,
and those venerable ones
even in this present life
have understood of themselves,
and realized
what is the good

of being either recluse or brahmin,
and lived in the attainment thereof.]

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
36. Vedanā Saṃyutta
3. Aṭṭha-Sata-Pariyāya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

36. Kindred Sayings about Feeling

3. The Method of the Hundred and Eight

Sutta 29

Suddhika-Vedanā Nirāmisa Suttaṃ

Purified and Free from Carnal Taint[1]

---

[159]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these three feelings, brethren.

What three?

Pleasant feeling,
painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

§

There is, Brethren, a zest that is carnal, there is a zest that is not carnal there is a zest that is still less carnal than the other.

There is a pleasure that is carnal, there is a pleasure that is not carnal, there is a pleasure that is still less carnal than the other.

There is an indifference that is carnal, there is an indifference that is not carnal, there is an indifference that is still less carnal than the other.

There is a release that is carnal, there is a release that is not carnal, there is a release that is still less carnal than the other.

§

And what, Brethren, is the zest that is carnal?

There are these five sensual elements, brethren.

What five?

Objects cognizable by the eye,
desirable,
[160] pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Sounds cognizable by the ear,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Scents cognizable by the nose,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Savours cognizable by the tongue,
desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Tangibles cognizable by the body,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.[ed1]

These, Brethren, are the five sensual elements.

Whatsoever zest, Brethren, arises owing to these five,
that is called
'zest that is carnal.'

■

And what, Brethren, is zest that is not carnal?

Herein a brother,
aloof from sensua1ity,
aloof from evil conditions,
enters on the first trance,
which is accompanied by thought directed and sustained,
which is born of solitude,
easeful and zestful,
and abides therein.

By the calming down of thought directed and sustained,
enters on the inward calm,

that one-pointedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sustained,
born of mental balance,
zestful and easefull,
which is the second trance,
and abides therein.

This, Brethren, is called
'zest that is not carnal.'

■

And what, Brethren, is the zest that is still less carnal than the other?

That zest which arises in a brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
who can look upon his heart
as released from lust,
as released from hatred,
as released from illusion - that zest, Brethren, is called 'the zest that is still less carnal than that other.'

§

And what, Brethren, is pleasure that is carnal?

There are these five sensual elements, brethren.

What five?

Objects cognizable by the eye,
desirable,

pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Sounds cognizable by the ear,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Scents cognizable by the nose,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Savours cognizable by the tongue,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Tangibles cognizable by the body,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, Brethren, are the five sensual elements.

Whatsoever pleasure and happiness, Brethren, arises owing to these five,
that is called
'pleasure that is carnal.'

■

And what, Brethren, is the pleasure that is not carnal?

Herein a brother,
aloof from sensua1ity,
aloof from evil conditions,
enters on the first trance,
which is accompanied by thought directed and sustained,
which is born of solitude,
easeful and zestful,
and abides therein.

By the calming down of thought directed and sustained,
enters on the inward calm,
that one-pointedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sustained,
born of mental balance,
zestful and easefull,
which is the second trance,
and abides therein.

By the fading out of zest
he abides indifferent, mindful and composed,
and experiences pleasure through the body.

Having entered on the third trance, which the Ariyans describe in these terms:

'He who is indifferent and mindful dwells happily,'

he abides therein.

This, Brethren, is called
'pleasure that is not carnal.'

■

And what, Brethren, is the pleasure that is still less carnal than the other?

That pleasure which arises in a brother
who has destroyed the āsavas,
who can look [161] upon his heart
as released from lust,
as released from hatred,
as released from illusion - that pleasure, Brethren, is called 'the pleasure that is still less carnal than that other.'

§

And what, Brethren, is the indifference that is carnal?

There are these five sensual elements, brethren.

What five?

Objects cognizable by the eye,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Sounds cognizable by the ear,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Scents cognizable by the nose,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Savours cognizable by the tongue,
desirable,
pleasant,

delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

■

Tangibles cognizable by the body,
desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, Brethren, are the five sensual elements.

Whatsoever indifference, Brethren, arises owing to these five,
that is called
'indifference that is carnal.'

■

And what, Brethren, is the indifference that is not carnal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother,
by the abandoning of pain, by the destruction of the happiness and dejection
which he had before,
having entered upon that state which is neither pleasant nor painful, that utter purity of mindfulness reached by indifference, which is the fourth trance,
and abides therein.

This, Brethren, is called
'the indifference that is not carnal.'

■

And what, Brethren, is the indifference that is still less carnal than that other?

In a brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
who can look upon his heart
as released from lust,
as released from hatred
as released from illusion, there arises indifference.

This, Brethren, is called
'the indifference that is still less carnal than that other.'

§

And what, Brethren, is the release that is carnal?

Release that is concerned with (material) objects is carnal.

Release that is concerned with immaterial objects is not carnal.

And what, Brethren, is the release that is still less carnal than that other?

In a brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
who can look upon his heart
as released from lust,
as released from hatred
as released from illusion, there arises a release.

This, Brethren, is called
'the release that is still less carnal than that other.'

---

[1] Cf. supra. § 14.

[ed1] Woodward here has abridged, but indicates he would use 'Objects' for all the senses as he did in SN 4.36.19, presumably in error as usually he distinguishes the various objects of the senses as it is found in the Pali.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Peyyāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

1. First Repetition

Sutta 1

Manāpā Amanāpā (aka Mātu-Gāma) Suttaṃ

Charming and Not Charming

---

[162]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Possessed of five qualities, Brethren, woman is altogether without charm for a man.

What five?

She is not beauteous in form,
not possessed of wealth,
not moral,
she is slack,
she gets no offspring.

Possessed of these five qualities, Brethren, a woman is altogether without charm for a man.

§

Possessed of five qualities, Brethren, woman is altogether charming to a man.

What five?

She is beauteous in form,
possessed of wealth,
moral,
vigorous
and gets offspring.

Possessed of these five qualities, Brethren,
a woman is altogether charming to a man."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Peyyāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

1. First Repetition

Sutta 2

Manāpā Amanāpā (aka Purisa) Suttaṃ

Charming and Not Charming (ii)

---

[162]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Possessed of five qualities, Brethren,
man is altogether without charm for a woman.

What five?

He is not beauteous in form,
not possessed of wealth,
not moral,
he is slack,
he gets no offspring.

Possessed of these five qualities, Brethren,
a man is altogether without charm for a woman.

§

Possessed of five qualities, Brethren, man is altogether charming to a woman.

What five?

He is beauteous in form,
possessed of wealth,
moral,
vigorous
and gets offspring.

Possessed of these five qualities, Brethren, a man is altogether charming to a woman."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Peyyāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

1. First Repetition

Sutta 3

Āveṇika-Dukkha Suttaṃ

Special

---

[162]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these five special[1] woes, Brethren, which a woman has to undergo as apart from a man.

What five?

Herein, Brethren, a woman at a tender age goes to her husband's family and leaves her relatives behind.

That is the first special woe.

Again, Brethren, a woman is subject to menses.

That is the second woe.

[163] Again, Brethren, a woman is subject to pregnancy.

That is the third woe.

Again, Brethren, a woman has to bring forth.

That is the fourth woe.

Again, Brethren, a woman has to wait upon[2] a man.

That is the fifth special woe which a woman has to undergo
as apart from a man.

These, Brethren, are the five special woes which a woman has to undergo
as apart from a man."

---

[1] Āveṇikā (a word of doubtful origin), def. by Comy. as paṭipugga-likāni (idoneus), asadhāraṇāni purisehi (not in common with males).

[2] Pāricariyaṇ upeti.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Peyyāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

1. First Repetition

Sutta 4

Tīhi Dhammehi Suttaṃ

Three Things

---

[163]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Possessed of three things, Brethren, a woman,
as a rule,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woes,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.[1]

What three?

Herein, Brethren, a woman stays at home with heart haunted by the taint of stinginess.[2]

At noontide she stays at home with heart haunted by jealousy.[3]

At eventide she stays at home with heart haunted by sensuality and lust.

These are the three things, Brethren, possessed of which a woman,
as a rule,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woes,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

---

[1] The stock phrase apāya, duqgati, vinipāta, niraya. According to Comy. the first is a synonym for purgatory generally ('hell' eternal not existing for the Buddhist), the second is dukkhassagati, the third vināsa-nipāta, the fourth is purgatory proper, nir-aya, 'a going asunder.' See Ud.A. 418; Dialog, ii, 91 n.

[2] Comy. 'she will not give food to her crying children.'

[3] Comy. 'she is jealous of her husband's doings.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Peyyāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

1. First Repetition

Suttas 5-14

Anuruddho I: Kaṇha-Pakkho

Anuruddha 1. The Dark Side[1]

---

[163]

Thus have I heard:

Then the venerable Anuruddha[2] came to visit the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Herein, lord, with clairvoyant eye,
purified and superhuman,
I behold womankind,
after death,
when body breaks [164] up,
being reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

Of what qualities possessed, lord,
is a woman reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory?"

Sutta 5

Kodhano Suttaṃ

Wrathful

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and[ed1] she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is wrathful,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 6

Upanāhī Suttaṃ

Grudging

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is grudging,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 7

Issukī Suttaṃ

Envious

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is envious,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 8

Maccharena Suttaṃ

Through Stinginess

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is stingy,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 9

Aticārī Suttaṃ

Adulteress

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is an adulteress,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 10

Dussīlam Suttaṃ

Immorality

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is immoral,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 11

Appassuto Suttaṃ

Of Small Knowledge

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is of small knowledge,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 12

Kusīto Suttaṃ

Indolent

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is indolent,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 13

Muṭṭhassati Suttaṃ

Muddle-headed

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She is faithless,
and she is shameless,
and she is unscrupulous,
and she is muddle-headed,
and she is of weak wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

§

Sutta 14

Pañcaveram Suttaṃ

The Fivefold Guilty Dread[3]

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

What five?

She takes life,
and she takes what [165] is not given,
and she acts wrongly in sense-desixes, and she tells lies,
and she indulges in fermented and distilled liquor, intoxicants causing sloth.

These are the five things possessed of which
a woman,
after death,
when body breaks up,
is reborn in the Waste,
the Way of Woe,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory."

---

[1] Kaṇha-pakkha (the dark fortnight of the moon), as opp. to § 15 infra. The title seems to refer to S. ii, xvi, 7 (K.S. ii, 139), the waxing and waning of good qualities.

[2] Anuruddha was noted for his clairvoyant powers. He is proclaimed (A. i, 23) as best of those who had 'the heavenly eye.' Cf. K.S. ii, chap. xix (of Moggallāna).

[3] Cf. K.S. ii, 48. These are to be guarded against by the five charges (pañcasīla).

[ed1] Woodward has omitted the 'ands'.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Peyyāla Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

2. Second Repetition

Suttas 15-24

Anuruddho II: Sukka-Pakkho

Anuruddha 2. The Bright Fortnight

---

[165]

Thus have I heard:

Then the venerable Anuruddha came to visit the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"Herein, lord, with clairvoyant eye,
purified and superhuman,
I behold womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
being reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

Of what qualities possessed, lord,
is womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World?"

Sutta 15

Akodhano Suttaṃ

Not Wrathful

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,

and she is scrupulous,
and she is not wrathful,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 16

Anupanāhī Suttaṃ

Not Grudging

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,
and she is scrupulous,
and she is not grudging,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 17

Anissukī Suttaṃ

Not Envious

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,
and she is scrupulous,
and she is not envious,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 18

Amacchāri Suttaṃ

Not Stingy

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,
and she is scrupulous,
and she is not stingy,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 19

Anaticārī Suttaṃ

No Adulteress

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,
and she is scrupulous,
and she is no adulteress,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 20

Sīlavā Suttaṃ

Moral

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,
and she is scrupulous,
and she is moral,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 21

Bahussuto Suttaṃ

Of Wide Knowledge

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,

after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,
and she is scrupulous,
and she is of wide knowledge,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 22

Viriya Suttaṃ

Energetic

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,
and she is scrupulous,
and she is energetic,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 23

Sati Suttaṃ

Has Her Wits About Her

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She is faithful,
and she is modest,
and she is scrupulous,
and she has her wits about her,
and she is rich in wisdom.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Sutta 24

Pañcasīla Suttaṃ

Observes the Fivefold Charges

"Possessed of five things, Anuruddha, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World.

What five?

She abstains from taking life, and she abstains from taking what is not given,
and she abstains from acting wrongly in sense-desixes, and she abstains from telling lies,
and she abstains from indulgence in fermented and distilled liquor, intoxicants causing sloth.

These are the five things possessed of which, womankind,
when body breaks up,
after death,

is reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heavenly World."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 25

Visāradā Suttaṃ

Confident

---

[165]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these five powers in a woman, brethren.

What five?

The power of beauty,[1]
the power of wealth,
the power of kin,
the power of sons,[2]
the power of virtue.

These are the five.

Possessed of these five powers, Brethren, womenfolk dwell at home in confidence."

---

[1] Rūpa = rūpa-sampatti.

[2] Puttā. Daughters are not welcomed in Indian families. The word, however, may be rendered by 'children.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 26

Pasayhā Suttaṃ

By Force

---

[166]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these five powers in a woman, brethren.

What five?

The power of beauty,
the power of wealth,
the power of kin,
the power of sons,
the power of virtue.

These are the five.

Possessed of these five powers, Brethren,
a woman dwells at home overpowering her husband."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 27

Abhibhūyya Suttaṃ

By Conquering

---

[166]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these five powers in a woman, brethren.

What five?

The power of beauty,
the power of wealth,
the power of kin,
the power of sons,
the power of virtue.

These are the five.

Possessed of these five powers, Brethren, a woman continues to[1] get the better of her husband."

---

[1] Vattati.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 28

Eka Suttaṃ

One

---

[166]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Possessed of one power, Brethren, a man continues to get the better of a woman.

What power?

By the power of authority.

Neither the power of her beauty, nor her power of wealth,
nor her power of kin,
nor her power of sons,
nor her power of virtue can avail[1] a woman who is mastered by the power of authority.

---

[1] Tāyati

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 29

Aṇga Suttaṃ

Quality

---

[166]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these five powers in a woman, brethren.

What five?

The power of beauty,
the power of wealth,
the power of kin,
the power of sons,
the power of virtue.

§

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
but not of the power of wealth.

Thus is she defective by one quality.

But suppose her possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth then is she complete by that quality.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
but not of the power of kin.

Then is she defective by that one quality.

But suppose her possessed
of the power of beauty,

and of the power of wealth
and of the power of kin
then is she complete by that quality.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
and of the power of kin,
but not of the power of sons.

Then is she defective by that one quality.

But suppose her possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
and of the power of kin,
and of the power of sons
then is she complete by that quality.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
and of the power of kin,
and of the power of sons
but not of the power of virtue.

Then is she defective by that one quality.

But suppose her possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
and of the power of kin,
and of the power of sons

and of the power of virtue
then is she complete by that quality.

Such, Brethren, are the five powers of womanfolk."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 30

Nāsenti Suttaṃ

They Overthrow

---

[167]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these five powers in a woman, brethren.

What five?

The power of beauty,
the power of wealth,
the power of kin,
the power of sons,
the power of virtue.

§

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
but not of the power of virtue.

They cause her overthrow.

They do not let her stay[1] in the family.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
but not of the power of virtue.

They cause her overthrow.

They do not let her stay in the family.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
and of the power of kin,
but not of the power of virtue.

They cause her overthrow.

They do not let her stay in the family.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
and of the power of kin,
and of the power of sons
but not of the power of virtue.

They cause her overthrow.

They do not let her stay in the family.

But suppose,[ed1] Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of beauty,
and of the power of wealth
and of the power of kin,
and of the power of sons,
and of the power of virtue.

They let her stay in the family

They do not cause her overthrow.

■

But suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of virtue,
but not of the power of beauty.

They let her stay in the family

They do not cause her overthrow.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of virtue,
but not of the power of wealth.

They let her stay in the family

They do not cause her overthrow.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of virtue,
but not of the power of kin.

They let her stay in the family

They do not cause her overthrow.

■

Suppose, Brethren, a woman is possessed
of the power of virtue,
but not of the power of sons.

They let her stay in the family

They do not cause her overthrow.

Such, Brethren, are the five powers of womanfolk."

---

[1] Vāsenti. Pali Dict. takes the word as simply 'preserve'; but Comy. says: 'Saying "she hath trespassed beyond bounds," they take her by the neck and throw her out. They do not "let her stay" in the family.'

[ed1] PTS text and Woodward omit this variation which is included in the BJT. Further, I believe the subsequent versions should follow in diminishing number of powers rather than singly so that the sutta ends with the woman possessing only virtue and no other powers but is still retained by the family, but no text supports this.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 31

Hetu Suttaṃ

Because of[1]

---

[167]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these five powers in a woman, brethren.

What five?

The power of beauty,
the power of wealth,
the power of kin,
the power of sons,
the power of virtue.

§

But it is not because of the power of beauty, wealth,
kin,
or sons
that a woman is reborn after death
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World,
when body breaks up.

It is because of virtue, Brethren,
that a woman is reborn after death
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World,
when body breaks up.

Such, Brethren, are the five powers of womanfolk."

---

[1] Hetu

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 32

Ṭhāna Suttaṃ

Condition[1]

---

[167]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"There are these five conditions, Brethren, hard to be won
by a woman who has wrought no merit.

What five?

[168] She may wish:

'Oh that I may be reborn in a proper[2] family.'

That is the first condition
which is hard to be won
by a woman who has wrought no merit.

■

She may wish:

'Born in a proper family,
may I go (as wife) to a proper family.'

That, Brethren, is the second condition
which is hard to be won
by a woman who has wrought no merit.

■

She may wish:

'Born in a proper family,
gone (as wife) to a proper family,
may I dwell in the home
without a rival.'[3]

That, Brethren, is the third condition
which is hard to be won
by a woman who has wrought no merit.

■

She may wish:

'Born in a proper family,
gone (as wife) to a proper family,
dwelling in the home without a rival,
may I have a son.'

That, Brethren, is the fourth condition
which is hard to be won
by a woman who has wrought no merit.

■

She may wish:

'Born in a proper family,
gone (as wife) to a proper family,
dwelling in the home without a rival,
possessed of a son,
may I continue to have mastery over my husband.'

That, Brethren, is the fifth condition
which is hard to be won
by a woman who has wrought no merit.

Such, Brethren, are the five conditions which are hard to be won by a woman who has wrought no merit.

§

There are these five conditions, Brethren, easily won
by a woman who has wrought merit.

What five?

She may wish:

'Oh that I may be reborn in a proper family.'

That is the first condition
easily won
by a woman who has wrought merit.

■

She may wish:

'Born in a proper family,
may I go (as wife) to a proper family.'

That, Brethren, is the second condition
easily won
by a woman who has wrought merit.

■

She may wish:

'Born in a proper family,
gone (as wife) to a proper family,
may I dwell in the home
without a rival.'

That, Brethren, is the third condition
easily won
by a woman who has wrought merit.

■

She may wish:

'Born in a proper family,
gone (as wife) to a proper family,
dwelling in the home without a rival,
may I have a son.'

That, Brethren, is the fourth condition
easily won
by a woman who has wrought merit.

■

She may wish:

'Born in a proper family,
gone (as wife) to a proper family,
dwelling in the home without a rival,
possessed of a son,
may I continue to have mastery over my husband.'

That, Brethren, is the fifth condition
easily won
by a woman who has wrought merit.

Such, Brethren, are the five conditions which are easily won
by a woman who has wrought merit.

---

[1] Ṭhānaṃ

[2] Patirūpa.

[3] Asapattī, another wife.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 33

Visārada-Vāda Suttaṃ

Confident

---

[168]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One once addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"Possessed of five things, Brethren, womenfolk dwell confident at home.

What five?

A woman abstains from taking life, from taking what is not given,
from wrong practice in sensual lusts, from falsehood
and from fermented liquor, distilled liquor,
intoxicants giving rise to sloth.

Possessed of these five things, Brethren, a woman dwells confident at home."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
37. Mātugāma Saṃyutta
3. Tatiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

37. Kindred Sayings about Womankind

3. Third Chapter

Sutta 34

Vaḍḍī Suttaṃ

Growth

---

[168]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One said to the brethren:

"Increasing in five growths, brethren, the Ariyan woman disciple increases in the Axiyan growth, takes hold of the essential, takes hold of the better.[1]

What five?

[169] She grows in faith,[2] grows in virtue,
in learning,
in generosity,
in wisdom.

Making such growth, brethren, she takes hold of the essential, she takes hold of the better."

Who in this world in faith and virtue grows,
In wisdom, generosity and lore -
A virtuous disciple, in this world
She wins what is essential for herself.[3]

---

[1] Sārādāyinī ca varādāyinī ca.

[2] As at S. i, 21, 'faith' means that she believes in karma, and its fruit.

[3] Sāraṃ attano.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 1

Nibbānaṃ Suttaṃ

Nibbāna

---

[170]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka[1] village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,[2] came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Nibbāna, Nibbāna!'[3] is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend, what is Nibbāna?"

"The destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, friend,
is called Nibbāna."

"But is there, friend, any path,
any approach
to the realization of this Nibbāna?

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the realization of this Nibbāna?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, for the realization of Nibbāna,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the realization of Nibbāna."

[171] A goodly[4] path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the realization of this Nibbāna
and a proper occasion[5] for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Nālaka, of Magadha, was the native village of Sāriputta, and is frequently mentioned in Psalms of the Brethren, q v. He died there (S. v. 161).

[2] Jambu-khādaka, 'the name of one of Sāriputta's nephews, a 'clothed' (channa) Wanderer.' Comy.

[3] Cf. Pts. of Contr., 144 n.; Buddhism., 180.

[4] Bhaddaka.

[5] Alañ ca.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 2

Arahatta Suttaṃ

Arahantship

---

[171]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"They say, 'Arahantship, Arahantship' friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend, what is Arahantship?"

"The destruction of lust, friend,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Arahantship."

"But is there, friend, any path,
any approach
to the realization of this Arahantship?

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the realization of this Arahantship?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
for the realization of Arahantship,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the realization of Arahantship."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the realization of this Arahantship
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 3

Dhamma-Vādī Suttaṃ

Norm-preacher

---

[171]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"Who, pray, friend Sāriputta,
are Norm-preachers in the world,
who are well-practised in the world,
who are happy ones in the world?"

"They, friend, who teach a Norm
for abandoning lust in the world,
for abandoning hatred in the world,
for abandoning illusion in the world,
they are Norm-preachers in the world.

They, friend, who are practised
in the abandoning of lust,
in the abandoning of hatred
in the abandoning of illusion,
they are well practised in the world.

They, friend, whose lust is abandoned,
cut off at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to grow again in the future,
of a nature not to arise again;
they whose hatred is abandoned,
cut off at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to grow again in the future,
of a nature not to arise again;
they whose illusion is abandoned,
cut off at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to grow again in the future,
of a nature not to arise again -
they, friend, are happy ones in the world."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach

to the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion?"

[172] "There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
for the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of this lust,

this hatred,
this illusion
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 4

Kim Atthiya? Suttaṃ

What Is It?

---

[172]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"What is it, friend,
for which the righteous life is lived under Gotama the recluse?"[1]

"For the comprehension of ill, friend, the righteous life is lived
under Gotama the recluse."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
for the comprehension of this ill?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
for the comprehension of this ill."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
for the comprehension of this ill?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
for the comprehension of this ill
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
for the comprehension of this ill."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
for the comprehension of this ill
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Cf. Dialog. i, 56 ff.: 'The fruits of the life of a recluse.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 5

Assāsa Suttaṃ

Comfort[1]

---

[172]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Won comfort, won comfort!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray how far has a man won comfort?"

"In so far, friend, as one understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the ceasing,
the satisfaction
and the misery of,
and the escape from,
the sixfold sense-sphere,
just so far, friend,
has he won comfort."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the realization of this comfort?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the realization of this comfort."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the realization of this comfort?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
to the realization of this comfort
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the realization of this comfort."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the realization of this comfort
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Assāsa, lit. 'quiet breathing.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 6

Param'Assāsa Suttaṃ

Supreme Comfort

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Supreme comfort, supreme comfort!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray how far has a man won supreme comfort?"

"In so far, friend, as one understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the ceasing,
the satisfaction
and the misery of,
and the escape from,
the sixfold sense-sphere,
just so far, friend,
has he won supreme comfort."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the realization of this supreme comfort?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the realization of this supreme comfort."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the realization of this supreme comfort?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the realization of this supreme comfort
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the realization of this supreme comfort."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the realization of this comfort
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 7

Vedanā Suttaṃ

Feeling

---

[173]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Feeling, feeling!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is feeling?"

"There are these three feelings, friend:
pleasant feeling,
painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

These are the three feelings."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the comprehension of these feelings?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the comprehension of these feelings."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the comprehension of these feelings?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the comprehension of these feelings
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the comprehension of these feelings."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the comprehension of these feelings
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 8

Āsavā Suttaṃ

Āsavā[1]

---

[173]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Āsava, āsava!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is āsava?"

"There are these three āsavas, friend:
sensuality,
becoming[2],
ignorance.

These are the three āsavas,."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
to the abandoning of these āsavas,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] See Introd., v, of K.S. iii; Expos., 11, 476, where they arc referred to as 'intoxicants.' Lord Chalmers, Majjhima trans., vol. i, calls them 'cankers.'

[2] Bhav'āsava, in the sense of the nidāna of rebirth. Sometimes four are named, the above with the addition of diṭṭhi. 'view.' Cf. Expos. 03-5.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 9

Avijjā Suttaṃ

Ignornace

---

[173]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Ignorance, ignorance!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is ignorance?"

"Not understanding about ill, friend,
not understanding about the arising of ill,
not understanding about the ceasing of ill,
not understanding about the way leading to the ceasing of ill, - this, friend, is called 'ignorance.'"

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of this ill?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of this ill."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of this ill?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
to the abandoning of this ill
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach

to the abandoning of this ill."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of this ill
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 10

Taṇhā Suttaṃ

Craving

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Craving, craving!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is craving?"

"There are these three cravings, friend:
the craving for sense delight,
the craving for becoming,
the craving for not-becoming.[1]

These are the three cravings."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these cravings?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these cravings."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these cravings?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the abandoning of these cravings
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these cravings."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these cravings
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Vi-bhava, generally 'excessive wealth' (intensified existence); but here vi- is a negative prefix. Cf. Dialog, iii, 208.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 11

Ogha Suttaṃ

Flood[1]

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'The flood, the flood!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is 'the flood'?"

"There are these four floods, friend:
the flood of sensuality,
the flood of becoming,
the flood of opinion,
the flood of ignorance.

These are the four floods."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these floods?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these floods."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these floods?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the abandoning of these floods
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these floods."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these floods
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Ogha. Cf. J.P T.S., 1919, p. 45.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 12

Upādāna Suttaṃ

Grasping

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Grasping, grasping!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is grasping?"

"There are these four graspings, friend:
the grasping after sensuality,
the grasping after opinion,
the grasping after rule and ritual,[1]
the grasping after theory of self.[2]

These are the four graspings."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these graspings?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these graspings."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these graspings?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the abandoning of these graspings
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these graspings."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these graspings
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Sīla-b-bata.

[2] Atia-vāda.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 13

Bhava Suttaṃ

Becoming

---

[174]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Becoming, becoming!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

[175] Pray what is becoming?"

"There are these three becomings, friend:
becoming in the world of sense, becoming in the heaven-world of form,
and becoming in the heaven-world that is formless.[1]

These are the three becomings."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these becomings?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these becomings."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these becomings?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the abandoning of these becomings
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these becomings."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these becomings
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] The three worlds of kāma, rūpa, and arūpa

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 14

Dukkha Suttaṃ

Suffering

---

[175]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Suffering, suffering!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is suffering?"

"There are these three forms of suffering,[1] friend:
the sort of suffering caused by pain,
the sort caused by the activities,
the sort caused by the changeable nature of things.

These are the three sorts of suffering."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the comprehension of these forms of suffering
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Dukkhatā, the abstract of dukkhaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 15

Sakkāya Suttaṃ

The Person-pack[1]

---

[175]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the folk of Magadha,
at Nālaka village.

Then the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Rose-apple-eater,
said to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Person-pack, person-pack!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is the person-pack?"

"These five factors of grasping,[2] friend, were called 'person-pack' by the Exalted One,
to wit:
the factor of grasping body,
that of grasping feeling,
that of grasping perception,
that of grasping the activities,
and the factor of grasping consciousness.

These five factors of grasping, friend,
were called 'person-pack' by the Exalted One."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the comprehension of this person-pack
to wit:

Right view,
[176] right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,

right effort,
right mindfulness,
right contemplation[ed1].

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Sakkāya, one's own group or personality. Cf. K.S. iii, 135, 153.

[2] Cf. K.S. iii, 64.

[ed1] Woodward has here changed his translation from 'concentration.' (or it is just an oversight).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
38. Jambukhādaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

38. Kindred Sayings about Jambukhādaka

Sutta 16

Dukkara Suttaṃ

Hard to Do

[3] We might translate 'would it be long ere one who has practised ...,' which would seem to suit the answer given. Comy. says 'such an one, if instructed at dawn, will achieve success at nightfall; if instructed at nightfall, he will succeed at dawn.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 1

Nibbāna Suttaṃ

Nibbāna

---

[177]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā[1]
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka,[2] the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Nibbāna, Nibbāna!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend, what is Nibbāna?'

"The destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, friend,
is called Nibbāna."

"But is there, friend, any path,
any approach
to the realization of this Nibbāna?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the realization of this Nibbāna?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
for the realization of Nibbāna,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach

to the realization of Nibbāna."

[178] "A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the realization of this Nibbāna
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

---

[1] Reading Ukkāvelā for text's Ukkavelā. At S. v, 163 we have Ukkacelā, and both here and there MSS. are confused. The letters v and c in Sinhalese are easily mistaken. I would read -vela at both places. The Udāna Comy. (p. 322) on Ud. vi, 1, calls it Ukkāvelā, a village near Vesāli, the capital of the Vajjī Cf. Uruvelā, Vin. i, etc.

[2] The Sinhalese texts and Comy. read Sāmañcakāni and Sāmaṇḍakāni, possibly a corruption for Sāmannakāni, son of a wanderer, at Brethren, 40. I cannot find other mention of him.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 2

Arahatta Suttaṃ

Arahantship

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"They say, 'Arahantship, Arahantship' friend Sāriputta.

Pray, friend, what is Arahantship?

"The destruction of lust, friend,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Arahantship."

"But is there, friend, any path,
any approach
to the realization of this Arahantship?

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the realization of this Arahantship?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
for the realization of Arahantship,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach

to the realization of Arahantship."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the realization of this Arahantship
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 3

Dhamma-Vādī Suttaṃ

Norm Preacher

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"Who, pray, friend Sāriputta,
are Norm-preachers in the world,
who are well-practised in the world,
who are happy ones in the world?"

"They, friend, who teach a Norm
for abandoning lust in the world,
for abandoning hatred in the world,
for abandoning illusion in the world,
they are Norm-preachers in the world.

They, friend, who are practised
in the abandoning of lust,
in the abandoning of hatred
in the abandoning of illusion,
they are well practised in the world.|| ||

They, friend, whose lust is abandoned,
cut off at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to grow again in the future,
of a nature not to arise again;
they whose hatred is abandoned,
cut off at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to grow again in the future,
of a nature not to arise again;
they whose illusion is abandoned,
cut off at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to grow again in the future,
of a nature not to arise again -
they, friend, are happy ones in the world."|| ||

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
for the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of this lust,
this hatred,
this illusion
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 4

Kim Atthiya? Suttaṃ

What Is It?

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"What is it, friend,
for which the righteous life is lived
under Gotama the recluse?"

"For the comprehension of ill, friend,
the righteous life is lived
under Gotama the recluse."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
for the comprehension of this ill?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
for the comprehension of this ill."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
for the comprehension of this ill?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
for the comprehension of this ill
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach

for the comprehension of this ill."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
for the comprehension of this ill
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 5

Assāsa Suttaṃ

Comfort

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Won comfort, won comfort!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray how far has a man won comfort?"

"In so far, friend, as one understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the ceasing,
the satisfaction
and the misery of,
and the escape from,
the sixfold sense-sphere,
just so far, friend,
has he won comfort."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the realization of this comfort?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the realization of this comfort."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the realization of this comfort?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
to the realization of this comfort
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,

right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the realization of this comfort."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the realization of this comfort
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 6

Param'Assāsa Suttaṃ

Supreme Comfort

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Supreme comfort, supreme comfort!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray how far has a man won supreme comfort?"

"In so far, friend, as one understands,
as they really are,
the arising and the ceasing,
the satisfaction
and the misery of,
and the escape from,
the sixfold sense-sphere,
just so far, friend,
has he won supreme comfort."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the realization of this supreme comfort?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the realization of this supreme comfort."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the realization of this supreme comfort?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the realization of this supreme comfort
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,

right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the realization of this supreme comfort."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the realization of this comfort
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 7

Vedanā Suttaṃ

Feeling

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Feeling, feeling!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is feeling?"

"There are these three feelings, friend:
pleasant feeling,
painful feeling,
neutral feeling.

These are the three feelings."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the comprehension of these feelings?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the comprehension of these feelings."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the comprehension of these feelings?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the comprehension of these feelings
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the comprehension of these feelings."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the comprehension of these feelings
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 8

Āsavā Suttaṃ

Āsavā

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Āsava, āsava!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is āsava?"

"There are these three āsavas, friend:
sensuality,
becoming,
ignorance.

These are the three āsavas,."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
to the abandoning of these āsavas,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these āsavas,
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 9

Avijjā Suttaṃ

Ignornace

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Ignorance, ignorance!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is ignorance?"

"Not understanding about ill, friend,
not understanding about the arising of ill,
not understanding about the ceasing of ill,
not understanding about the way leading to the ceasing of ill, -
this, friend, is called 'ignorance.'"

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of this ill?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of this ill."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of this ill?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend,
to the abandoning of this ill
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of this ill."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of this ill
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 10

Taṇhā Suttaṃ

Craving

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Craving, craving!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is craving?"

"There are these three cravings, friend:
the craving for sense delight,
the craving for becoming,
the craving for not-becoming.

These are the three cravings."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these cravings?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these cravings."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these cravings?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the abandoning of these cravings
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these cravings."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these cravings
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 11

Ogha Suttaṃ

Flood

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'The flood, the flood!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is 'the flood'?"

"There are these four floods, friend:
the flood of sensuality,
the flood of becoming,
the flood of opinion,
the flood of ignorance.

These are the three floods."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these floods?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these floods."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these floods?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the abandoning of these floods
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these floods."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these floods
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 12

Upādāna Suttaṃ

Grasping

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Grasping, grasping!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is grasping?"

"There are these four graspings, friend:
the grasping after sensuality,
the grasping after opinion,
the grasping after rule and ritual,
the grasping after theory of self.

These are the four graspings."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these graspings?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these graspings."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these graspings?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the abandoning of these graspings
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these graspings."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these graspings
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 13

Bhava Suttaṃ

Becoming

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Becoming, becoming!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is becoming?"

"There are these three becomings, friend:
becoming in the world of sense, becoming in the heaven-world of form,
and becoming in the heaven-world that is formless.

These are the three becomings."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the abandoning of these becomings?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the abandoning of these becomings."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the abandoning of these becomings?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the abandoning of these becomings
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the abandoning of these becomings."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the abandoning of these becomings
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 14

Dukkha Suttaṃ

Suffering

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Suffering, suffering!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is suffering?"

"There are these three forms of suffering, friend:
the sort of suffering caused by pain,
the sort caused by the activities,
the sort caused by the changeable nature of things.

These are the three sorts of suffering."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the comprehension of these forms of suffering
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the comprehension of these forms of suffering
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 15

Sakkāya Suttaṃ

The Person-Pack

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"'Person-pack, person-pack!' is the saying, friend Sāriputta.

Pray what is the person-pack?"

"These five factors of grasping, friend,
were called 'person-pack' by the Exalted One,
to wit:
the factor of grasping body,
that of grasping feeling,
that of grasping perception,
that of grasping the activities,
and the factor of grasping consciousness.

These five factors of grasping, friend,
were called 'person-pack' by the Exalted One."

"But, friend, is there any way,
any approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack?"

"There is such a path, friend,
there is such an approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack."

"And what is that path, friend,
what is that approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack?"

"It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, friend, to the comprehension of this person-pack
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,

right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Such, friend, is this path,
this approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack."

"A goodly path, friend,
a goodly approach
to the comprehension of this person-pack
and a proper occasion for earnestness too, friend!"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
39. Sāmaṇḍaka Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

39. Kindred Sayings about Sāmaṇḍaka

Sutta 16

Dukkaraṃ Suttaṃ

Hard to Do

---

[178]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta was staying among the Vajjī,
at Ukkāvelā
on the banks of the river Ganges.

Then Sāmaṇḍaka, the Wanderer, came to visit the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer Sāmaṇḍaka said this to the venerable Sāriputta: -

"Pray, friend Sāriputta, what is hard to do in this Norm-discipline?"

"Going forth, friend, is hard to do in this Norm-discipline."

"But, friend, for one who has gone forth, what is hard to do?"

"For one who has gone forth, friend, to feel delight
is a thing hard to do."

"But, friend Sāriputta, what can be hard to do for one who feels delight?"

"The practice of what is in conformity with the Norm, friend, is hard to do for him who feels delight."

"What then, friend?

Would one who has long practised in conformity with the Norm become an Arahant?"

"After no long time, friend."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 1

Sa-Vitakka Suttaṃ

Together with Thought Directed

---

[179]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna[1] the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great
addressed the brethren, saving:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here,
this consideration arose in me:[2]

'They speak of the first trance, the first trance!

Now what is the first trance?'

Then I thought:

'Herein when a brother,
aloof from sensuality,
aloof from evil states,
attains the first trance
which is accompanied by thought directed and sustained,[3]
which is born of solitude,
full of zest,
and ease,
and abides therein,
this is called 'the first trance.'

Now, friends, aloof from sensuality,
aloof from evil states,
I entered on the first trance
which is accompanied by thought directed and sustained,
which is born of solitude,
full of zest,
and ease,
and abode therein.

But, friends, when I had remained in this condition
(and had emerged from trance),
perception and work of mind
connected with sensuality
still continued.[4]

Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power[5]
came [180] to me and said:

'Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss[6]
in the first trance, brahmm!

Make steadfast thy mind in the first trance.

In the first trance
make the mind one-pointed.[7]

In the first trance
compose the mind.'

So after that, friends,
aloof from sensuality,
aloof from evil states,
I entered on the first trance
which is accompanied by thought directed and sustained,
which is born of solitude,
full of zest,
and ease,
and abode therein.

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.'"

---

[1] Spelt throughout in text with one l, hut undoubtedly should be spelt as here.

[2] Cf. K.S. ii, 184.

[3] Sa-vitakka, a property of the first trance.

[4] Kāma-sahagatā. 'Pañca-nīvaraṇa-sahagatā. i.e the five hindrances of sensual life induced him to give up his efforts (hāna-bhāqiyā) Comy., which adds the words I have bracketed in the text trsns.

[5] Iddhiyā.

[6] Mā pamādo, hero aorist of pamajjati, Cf. S ii, 273.

[7] Ekodi-karohi.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 2

A-Vitakka Suttaṃ

Without Directed Thought[1]

---

[180]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here, this consideration arose in me:[ed1]

'They say "the second trance, the second trance!"

Now what is the second trance?'

Then, friends, this occurred to me:

'Herein when a brother,
by the calming down
of thought directed and sustained, attains the inward calm,
that one-pointedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sustained,
born of concentration,
zestful and full of ease,
which is the second trance,
and abides therein,
this is called the second trance.'

So I, friends, by the calming down
of thought directed and sustained,
attaining the inward calm,
that one-pointedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sustained,
born of concentration,
zestful and full of ease,
entered on the second trance
and abode therein.

But when I had so done
(and had emerged from trance),
perception and work of mind

connected with directed thought
still continued.

Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power
came to me and said:

"Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss in the second trance, brahmin!

Make steadfast thy mind in the second trance.

In the second trance make the mind one-pointed.

In the second trance compose the mind."

So after that, friends, by the calming down
of thought directed and sustained,
attaining the inward calm,
that one-pointedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sustained,
born of concentration,
zestful and full of ease,
I entered upon
and abode in the second trance.

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.'"

---

[1] Avitakka.

[ed1] Woodward summarizes the nidana with: "(I thought, friends):"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 3

Sukha Suttaṃ

By Happiness

[1811]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great
addressed the brethren, saving:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here,
this consideration arose in me:

'They say "the third trance, the third trance!"

Now what is the third trance?'

Then, friends, this occurred to me:

'Herein a brother,
by the fading out of zest,
abides balanced
and remains mindful and composed,
and experiences with the body
that ease of which the Ariyans aver:

"The balanced,
thoughtful man
dwells happily."|| ||

Thus he enters on and abides in the third trance.

This is called "the third trance."'

So I, friends, by the fading out of zest, abiding balanced
and remaining mindful and composed,
experienceing with the body
that ease of which the Ariyans aver:

'The balanced,
thoughtful man
dwells happily.'|| ||

entered the third trance
and abode therein.

But when I had thus abode
(and had emerged from trance),
perception and work of mind connected with zest
still continued.

Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power
came to me and said:

'Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss in the third trance, brahmin!

Make steadfast thy mind in the third trance.

In the third trance make the mind one-pointed.

In the third trance compose the mind.'

So after that, friends, by the fading out of zest, abiding balanced
and remaining mindful and composed,
experienceing with the body
that ease of which the Ariyans aver:

'The balanced,
thoughtful man
dwells happily.'|| ||

entered the third trance
and abode therein.

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 4

Upekkhā Suttaṃ

Balanced

---

[181]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great
addressed the brethren, saving:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here,
this consideration arose in me:

'They say "the fourth trance,
the fourth trance!"

Now what is the fourth trance?"

Then, friends, this occurred to me:

'Herein a brother,
rejecting pleasure,
rejecting pain,
by the coming to an end of the joy and sorrow which he had before, enters on and abides in
the fourth trance,
which is freed from pleasure,
freed from pain,
but is a state
of perfect purity of balance and equanimity.

This is called "the fourth trance."'

So I, friends,
rejecting pleasure,
rejecting pain,
by the coming to an end of the joy and sorrow which I had before,
entered on and abode in
the fourth trance,
which is freed from pleasure,
freed from pain,
but is a state
of perfect purity of balance and equanimity.

But when I had thus abode
(and had emerged from trance),
perception and work of mind
connected with happiness still continued.

[182] Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power
came to me and said:

'Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss in the fourth trance, brahmin!

Make steadfast thy mind in the fourth trance.

In the fourth trance make the mind one-pointed.

In the fourth trance compose the mind.'

So after that,
rejecting pleasure,
rejecting pain,
by the coming to an end of the joy and sorrow which I had before,
entered on and abode in
the fourth trance,
which is freed from pleasure,
freed from pain,
but is a state
of perfect purity of balance and equanimity.

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 5

Ākāsanañ-c'Āyatana Suttaṃ

Space

---

[182]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great
addressed the brethren, saving:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here,
this consideration arose in me:

'They say "the realm of infinite space, the realm of infinite space!"

Now what is the realm of infinite space?'

Then, friends, this occurred to me:

'Herein a brother,
passing utterly beyond the perception of objects,
by the coming to an end
of the perception of resistance,
by not attending to perception of diversity,
with the idea of
"infinite is space,"
enters on and abides in
the realm of infinite space.

This is called "the realm of infinite space."'

So I, friends,
passing utterly beyond the perception of objects,
by the coming to an end
of the perception of resistance,
by not attending to perception of diversity,
with the idea of
'infinite is space,'
entered on and abode in the realm of infinite space.

But when I had thus abode
(and had emerged from trance),
perception and work of mind
connected with the perception of objects,
still continued.

Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power
came to me and said:

'Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss in the realm of infinite space, brahmin!

Make steadfast thy mind in the realm of infinite space.

In the realm of infinite space make the mind one-pointed.

In the realm of infinite space compose the mind.'

So after that, friends,
passing utterly beyond the perception of objects,
by the coming to an end
of the perception of resistance,
by not attending to perception of diversity,
with the idea of
'infinite is space,'
I entered on and abode in the realm of infinite space.

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 6

Viññānañ-c'Āyatana Suttaṃ

Consciousness

---

[183]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great
addressed the brethren, saving:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here,
this consideration arose in me:

'They say "the realm of infinite consciousness,
the realm of infinite consciousness!"

Now what is the realm of infinite consciousness?'

Then, friends, this occurred to me:

'Herein a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite space,
with the idea:
"Endless[1] is consciousness,"
enters on and abides in
the realm of infinite consciousness.

This is called "the realm of infinite consciousness.'

So I, friends,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite space,
with the idea:
'Endless is consciousness,'
entered on and abode in
the realm of infinite consciousness.

But when I had thus abode
(and had emerged from trance),
perception and work of mind
connected with the perception of the realm of infinite space, still continued.

Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power
came to me and said:

'Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss in the realm of infinite consciousness, brahmin!

Make steadfast thy mind in the realm of infinite consciousness.

In the realm of infinite consciousness make the mind one-pointed.

In the realm of infinite consciousness compose the mind.'

So after that, friends,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite space,
with the idea:
'Endless is consciousness,'
entered on and abode in
the realm of infinite consciousness

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.'"

---

[1] As above, at xxxvi, § 19, I read anantaṃ for text's anattaṃ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 7

Ākiñcaññ'Āyatana Suttaṃ

---

[183]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great
addressed the brethren, saving:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here,
this consideration arose in me:

'They say "the realm of nothingness,
the realm of nothingness!"

Now what is the realm of nothingness?'

Then, friends, this occurred to me:

'Herein a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite consciousness,
with the idea:
"There is nothing at all,"
enters on and abides in
the realm of nothingness.

This is called "the realm of nothingness."'

[184] So I, friends,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite consciousness,
with the idea:
'There is nothing at all,'
entered on and abode in
the realm of nothingness.

But when I had thus abode
(and had emerged from trance),
perception and work of mind
connected with the perception of the realm of infinite consciousness, still continued.

Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power
came to me and said:

'Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss in the realm of nothingness, brahmin!

Make steadfast thy mind in the realm of nothingness.

In the realm of nothingness make the mind one-pointed.

In the realm of nothingness compose the mind.'

So after that, friends,
passing utterly beyond the realm of infinite consciousness,
with the idea:
'There is nothing at all,'
entered on and abode in
the realm of nothingness.

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 8

N'eva-Saññā-nā-Saññ'Āyatana Suttaṃ

Neither-Perceiving-nor-non-Perceiving

---

[184]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great
addressed the brethren, saving:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here,
this consideration arose in me:

'They say "the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception, the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception!"

Now what is the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception?'

Then, friends, this occurred to me:

'Herein a brother,
passing utterly beyond the realm of nothingness,
enters on and abides in
the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception.

This is called "the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception."'

So I, friends,
passing utterly beyond the realm of nothingness,
entered on and abode in
the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception.

But when I had thus abode
(and had emerged from trance),
perception and work of mind
connected with the perception of the realm of nothingness, still continued.

Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power
came to me and said:

'Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss in the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception, brahmin!

Make steadfast thy mind in the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception.

In the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception make the mind one-pointed.

In the realm of neither-perception-nor-non-perception compose the mind.'

So after that, friends,
passing utterly beyond the realm of nothingness,
entered on and abode in
the realm of nothingness.

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.' ti" ti.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 9

A-Nimitta Suttaṃ

The Unconditioned[1]

---

[185]

[1][olds] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Moggallāna the Great
addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Yes, brother," replied those brethren
to the venerable Moggallāna the Great.

"Friends, when I was meditating alone here,
this consideration arose in me:

'They say "The unconditioned heart's rapture, the unconditioned heart's rapture!"

Now what is the unconditioned heart's rapture?'

Then, friends, this occurred to me:

'Herein a brother,
paying no attention to any or all distinguishing marks,
enters on and abides in
that rapture of heart which is without conditions.

This is called "the unconditioned heart's rapture.'

So I, friends,
paying no attention to any or all distinguishing marks,
entered on and abode in
that rapture of heart which is without conditions.

But when I had thus abode
(and had emerged from trance), there came consciousness that followed after distinguishing marks.[2]

Thereupon, friends, the Exalted One
by magic power
came to me and said:

'Moggallāna,
Moggallāna,
be not remiss in the unconditioned heart's rapture, brahmin!

Make steadfast thy mind in the unconditioned heart's rapture.

In the unconditioned heart's rapture make the mind one-pointed.

In the unconditioned heart's rapture compose the mind.'

So after that, friends,
paying no attention to any or all distinguishing marks,
entered on and abode in
that rapture of heart which is without conditions.

Now, friends, if anyone would say rightly:

'Helped by the Master
the disciple won great super-knowledge,'

he would say of me:

'Helped by the Master
did the disciple win great super-knowledge.'"

---

[1] Animitta ceto-samādhi, 'without attributes or distinguishing mark.'

[2] Nimittānusāri-viññāṇaṃ - i.e. consciousness that was still tainted with rāgā-dosa-moha. Cf. Sn.A (Param. Jot., ii, 343).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 10

Sakka Suttaṃ

Sakka

---

[185]

[1] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then, just as a strong man might stretch out his bent arm or bend his outstretched arm, even so did the venerable Moggallāna the Great vanish from Jeta Grove
and appear among the Devas of the Thirty-Three.

[186]

1.

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with five hundred of the devatas,[1]
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir,[2] Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with six hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with seven hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with eight hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with eight thousand of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

2.

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith[3] in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
[187] perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,[4]
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,[5]
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.[6]

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering[7]
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,[8]
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,[9]
untarnished,
giving freedom,[10]
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession [188] unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,

seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,

worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,

praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,

World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),

which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,

the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,

walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted

(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,

Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

3.

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence[11] in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:

in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great

and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great

said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

[189]

4.

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,

whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:

in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,

in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,

walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sakka, lord of the devas,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sakka, lord of the devas: -

"Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,

Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,

a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,

walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O lord of the devas,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O lord of the devas,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

---

[1] Devatā. There is often no distinction drawn between deva and devatā (see Pāli Dict, s.v.), but here the words seem used in reference to humans who have been born in deva-loka owing to their faith, as related in the section following.

[2] Mārisa. See supra, xxxv, § 207 n.

[3] Avecca-pasādena, 'unshaken (acala) faith in the ten points and the thirteen causal actions.' Comy. Cf. Dialog. ii, 251 n.

[4] Text has wrongly -dhamma for -damma.

[5] Akālika. Cf. K.S. 1, 15 n.

[6] Those on the Fourfold Path in its twofold division.

[7] Text reads avecca here but not further on.

[8] Cf. Dialog, ii, 85, 100 n.

[9] A-sabalehi.

[10] Bhujissehi. Text reads bhuñj-; spelt bhojisiya at S., i, 44.

[11] As at S. 1, 87, adhigaṇhanti = abhibhavanti. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
40. Moggallāna Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

40. Kindred Sayings about Moggallāna

Sutta 11

Candana, Suyāma, Santusita, Sunimmita, Vasavatti

I Candano[1]

Candana

---

[1] THUS have I heard:

ONCE the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then, just as a strong man might stretch out his bent arm
or bend his outstretched arm,
even so did the venerable Moggallāna the Great vanish from Jeta Grove
and appear among the Devas of the Thirty-Three.

1.

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with five hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with six hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,

and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

2.

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,

worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:

virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully

is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,

seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,

worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,

praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,

World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),

which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,

the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

3.

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,

in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:

in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:

in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:

in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great

and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

4.

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,

World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,

virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,

the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,

whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:

in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,

the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,

in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,

praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,

World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Candana, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Candana, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,

virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,

the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

II
Suyāmo

Suyāma

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with five hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with six hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

2.

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him

saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,

untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,

worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:

virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully

is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,

seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,

worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,

praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,

World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),

which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

3.

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great

and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great

said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

4.

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,

praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,

World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,

walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,

unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,

seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,

walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,

whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:

in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Suyāma, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Suyāma, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

III
Santusito

Santusita

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with five hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with six hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

2.

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,

unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),

which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,

the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,

walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted

(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,

Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,

walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,

virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,

came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,

whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

3.

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him

saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great

said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

4.

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,

untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,

in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,

walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Santusita, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Santusita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,

Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,

a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,

walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

IV Sunimmito

Sunimmita

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with five hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with six hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

2.

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him

saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,

untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,

worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:

virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully

is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,

seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,

worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,

praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,

World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),

which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

3.

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great

and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great

said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

4.

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,

praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,

World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,

walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,

unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,

seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,

walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,

whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:

in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Sunimmita, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Sunimmita, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

V
Vasavatti[2]

Vasavatti

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with five hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with six hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand of the devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World."

2.

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,

unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),

which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,

the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm

is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,

walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted

(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,

Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,

walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,

virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,

came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,

whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

-°-

'Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

3.

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him

saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great

said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,

the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,

some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

Such going to take refuge in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

Such going to take refuge in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

Such going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Buddha.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Norm.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

'Good indeed, as you say, my good sir, Moggallāna,
is the going to take refuge in the Order of Brethren.

It is indeed the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some beings are born here in the Happy State,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

4.

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with five hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,

untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with six hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,

giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with seven hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,

in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,

the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,

All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession

of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,

when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with eight hundred devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,

the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,

leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,

walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-o-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,

the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

§

Then Vasavatti, son of a deva,
together with eight thousand devatas,
came to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great
and on coming to him
saluted him
and stood at one side.

As they thus stood,
the venerable Moggallāna the Great
said to Vasavatti, son of a deva: -

"Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One, perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,

Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,

a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,

walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, O son of a deva,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, O son of a deva,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,

the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

■

"Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha,
saying thus:

'Tis he, that Exalted One,
Arahant,
All-enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
Happy One,
World-knower,
unsurpassed Charioteer of men to be tamed,
Teacher of devas and mankind,
the Buddha,
the Exalted One.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Buddha
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here

in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm,
saying thus:

'Well proclaimed by the Exalted One
is the Norm,
seen in this very life,
a thing not involving time,
inviting one to come and see,
leading onward,
to be known for themselves by the wise.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Norm
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,

after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.'

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order, saying thus:

'Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking uprightly,
walking in the right path,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
namely, the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men.

That is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples.

Worthy of honour are they,
worthy of reverence,
worthy of offerings,
worthy of salutations with clasped hands,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.'

Such going to win possession
of unwavering faith in the Order
is the reason why,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,
the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible.

-°-

Good indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
as you say,
is the going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,

unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind.

Indeed, my good sir, Moggallāna,
such going to win possession unwavering
of the virtues loved by the Ariyans,
virtues unbroken,
whole,
unspotted,
untarnished,
giving freedom,
praised by the wise:
virtues which are untainted
(by craving or delusion),
which lead to concentration of mind,
when body breaks up,
after death,
some bemgs are born here
in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.

Of these, some devas win excellence in ten things,
to wit:
in the heavenly life,
the heavenly colour,
the heavenly bliss,
the heavenly fame,
the heavenly supremacy,
in heavenly objects,
the heavenly sounds,
the heavenly scents,

the heavenly savours
the heavenly things tangible."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. i, 75.

[2] Vasavatti. Cf. S. i, 133; It. 94, 112 (a class of devas who control what others havo created). The foregoing three and this one seem to be selected as representatives with Candana of the five divisions (?) of the next, or Kāma-world.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 1

Saṇyojana Suttaṃ

Fetter

---

[190]

Thus have I heard:

Once a number of elder brethren were staying at Macchikasaṇḍa[1]
in Wild Mango Grove.

Now on that occasion,
as this number of elder Brethren, after going their rounds
and eating their meal,
were sitting together in conclave at the pavilion,[2]
the following chance talk arose: -

"Fetters and things that tend to fetter, friend, - are these two things different in spirit
and in letter,[3]
or are-they one and the same spirit,
but different in letter?"

Thereupon the matter was expounded by divers brethren
in divers ways
thus: -

"Friend, a fetter and things that tend to fetter, - both of them are different in spirit
and different in letter."

While others expounded the matter thus:

"Friend, a fetter and things that tend to fetter, -
both of these are one and the same in spirit,
but different in letter." -

Now at that time Citta,[4] the housefather, had arrived at Migapathaka[5] on some business or other.

And Citta, the [191] housefather, heard it said that a number of elder Brethren,
after going their rounds
and eating their meal,
were sitting together in conclave at the pavilion,
and that the following chance talk had arisen: -

"Fetters and things that tend to fetter, friend, -
are these two things different in spirit
and in letter,

or are-they one and the same spirit,
but different in letter?"

And that thereupon the matter was expounded
by divers brethren
in divers ways
thus: -

"Friend, a fetter and things that tend to fetter, - both of them are different in spirit
and different in letter."

While others expounded the matter thus:

"Friend, a fetter and things that tend to fetter, -
both of these are one and the same in spirit,
but different in letter." -

So Citta, the housefather, went to visit those elder Brethren, and on coming to them
he saluted them
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Citta the housefather said to those elder brethren: -

"I heard, my lords, the rumour that a number of elder brethren,
after going their rounds
and eating their meal,
were sitting together in conclave at the pavilion,
and that the following chance talk had arisen: -

'Fetters and things that tend to fetter, friend, -
are these two things different in spirit
and in letter,
or are-they one and the same spirit,
but different in letter?'

And that thereupon the matter was expounded
by divers brethren
in divers ways
thus: -

'Friend, a fetter and things that tend to fetter, -
both of them are different in spirit
and different in letter.'

While others expounded the matter thus:

'Friend, a fetter and things that tend to fetter, -
both of these are one and the same in spirit, but different in letter.' -

Is it so?"

"It is so, housefather."

"Now, my lords, these two things, the fetter
and the things that tend to fetter, are different both in spirit
and in letter.

Now, my lords, I will make you a comparison.

Maybe some wise ones here will know the meaning of what I say.

Suppose, my lords, a black steer and a white steer are yoked together
by one rope
or one yoke.

Now he who should say that the black steer is the fetter to the white one, or the white one to the black one, - would he in so saying be saying rightly?"

"Not so, housefather.

The black steer is not a fetter to the white one, nor is the white one a fetter to the black one.

But the fact of their being yoked by one rope
or yoke, -
that is a fetter."

"Well, my lords, just so the eye is not a fetter of objects, nor objects a fetter to the eye.

But the desire and lust that arise
owing to the pair of them, - that is the fetter.

■

The ear is not a fetter to sounds, nor sounds a fetter to the ear.

But the desire and lust that arise
owing to the pair of them, -
that is the fetter.

■

The nose is not a fetter to scents, nor scents a fetter to the nose.

But the desire and lust that arise
owing to the pair of them, -
that is the fetter.

■

The tongue is not a fetter to savours, nor savours a fetter to the tongue.

But the desire and lust that arise
owing to the pair of them, -
that is the fetter.

■

The body is not a fetter to tangibles, nor tangibles a fetter to the body.

But the desire and lust that arise
owing to the pair of them, -
that is the fetter.

■

The mind is not a fetter to mind-states, nor mind-states a fetter to the mind.

But the desire and lust that arise
owing to the pair of them, -
that is the fetter."

"Good for you, housefather.

Well gotten for you, housefather, that in you the eye of wisdom is conversant with[6]
the profound teaching of the Enlightened One."

---

[1] This village ('fishers' clump) near Sāvatthī, was the home of Citta (pron. Chitta) the housefather, to whom the Grove belonged. See Brethren, 107.

[2] An octagonal peaked open-sided 'summer-house,' thatched with palm-leaves, as in Ceylon to-day, but sometimes half-walled and tiled.

[3] Attha and vyañjana.

[4] Citta is on the list of 'great ones' at A. i, 24, 88, as a leading lay-follower versed in Norm-exposition, and is held up as a model at K.S. ii. 159 (see n. 2).

[5] 'The deer-run.' Comy. says it was his tributary village, behind the Ambātaka (wild mango) Grove.

[6] Kamati = vahati, pavattati (travels, proceeds, carries on.) Comy. (Also Comy. at Sn. 177 says Kamati = carati, pavisati.)

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 2

Paṭhama Isidatta Suttaṃ

Isidatta (i)

---

ed1 Rūpa-dhātu. 'Form' or 'Shape' - data = visible object; usually translated by Woodward as 'object'. Thranslating here as 'body' is specially 'unfortunate' in this list where 'kāya' 'body' is one of the sense data.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 3

Dutiya Isidatta Suttaṃ

Isidatta (ii)

---

[193]

Thus have I heard:

Once a number of elder brethren were staying at Macchikasaṇḍa
in Wild Mango Grove.

Then Citta, the housefather, went to visit those elder Brethren,
and on coming to them
saluted them
and sat down at one side.

So seated Citta, the housefather, said to those elder brethren:

"Let my lords the elders accept of me tomorrow's meal."

And those elder brethren accepted by silence.

[194] Thereupon Citta, the housefather, understanding the acceptance of those elder Brethren,
rose from his seat,
saluted the elder brethren by the right
and went away.

Now the elder Brethren, when the night was gone,
robed themselves at early dawn,
and taking bowl and outer robe
went to the dwelling of Citta, the housefather,
and on reaching it
sat down on seats prepared.

Then Citta, the housefather, came to those elder Brethren, and saluting them
sat down at one side.

So seated, Citta, the housefather,
said to the venerable (chief) elder: -

"As to these divers views that arise in the world, my lord elder,
such as:

Eternal is the world,
not eternal is the world,
finite is the world,
infinite is the world,
life and body are the same,
life and body are different,
the Tathāgata, exists after death,
he exists not,
he both exists and exists not,

he neither exists nor exists not,
also as to the sixty-two heretical views
set forth in the Brahmajala,[1] -

Owing to the existence of what, lord,
do these views prevail?

Owing to the nonexistence of what do these views not prevail?"

At these words
the venerable chief elder was silent.

■

Then a second time did Citta, the housefather, say to the venerable (chief) elder: -

"As to these divers views that arise in the world, my lord elder,
such as:

Eternal is the world,
not eternal is the world,
finite is the world,
infinite is the world,
life and body are the same,
life and body are different,
the Tathāgata, exists after death,
he exists not,
he both exists and exists not,
he neither exists nor exists not,
also as to the sixty-two heretical views
set forth in the Brahmajala, -

Owing to the existence of what, lord,
do these views prevail?

Owing to the nonexistence of what
do these views not prevail?"

And a second time,
at these words
the venerable chief elder was silent.

■

Then a third time did Citta, the housefather, say to the venerable (chief) elder: -

"As to these divers views that arise in the world, my lord elder,
such as:

Eternal is the world,
not eternal is the world,
finite is the world,
infinite is the world,
life and body are the same,
life and body are different,
the Tathāgata, exists after death,
he exists not,
he both exists and exists not,
he neither exists nor exists not,
also as to the sixty-two heretical views
set forth in the Brahmajala, -

Owing to the existence of what, lord,
do these views prevail?

Owing to the nonexistence of what
do these views not prevail?"

And a third time,
at these words

the venerable chief elder was silent.

§

Now on that occasion the venerable Isidatta was the junior of all that order of brethren.

Then the venerable Isidatta
said to the venerable chief elder: -

"My lord, may I reply to this question of Citta, the housefather?"

"Do you reply, Isidatta, to the question of Citta, the housefather."

[Then said the venerable Isidatta]:

"Now, housefather, your question was this,
was it not?

'As to these divers views
that arise in the world, my lord elder,
such as:

Eternal is the world,
not eternal is the world,
finite is the world,
infinite is the world,
life and body are the same,
life and body are different,
the Tathāgata, exists after death,
he exists not,

he both exists and exists not,
he neither exists nor exists not,
also as to the sixty-two heretical views
set forth in the Brahmajala, -

Owing to the existence of what, lord,
do these views prevail?

Owing to the nonexistence of what
do these views not prevail?'"

"Yes, lord."

"Now, housefather,
as to those divers views that arise in the world, such as:

Eternal is the world,
not eternal is the world,
finite is the world,
infinite is the world,
life and body are the same,
life and body are different,
the Tathāgata, exists after death,
he exists not,
he both exists and exists not,
he neither exists nor exists not,
also as to the sixty-two heretical views
set forth in the Brahmajala, -

it is owing to the person-pack view[2] that [195] they arise, and if the person-pack view exists not, they do not exist."

§

"But, lord, how comes the person-pack view to be?"

"Herein, housefather, the untaught manyfolk,[3] who discern not those who are Ariyans, who are unskilled ill the Ariyan doctrine, who are untrained in the Ariyan doctrine, who discern not those who are worthy ones, who are unskilled in the worthy doctrine, untrained in the worthy doctrine, -

They regard body as the self, they regard the self as having body, body as being in the self,
the self as being in the body.

They regard feeling as the self -
they regard feeling as the self,
they regard feeling as having body, feeling as being in the self,
the self as being in feeling.

They regard perception as the self -
they regard perception as the self,
they regard perception as having body, perception as being in the self,
the self as being in perception.

They regard the activities as the self -
they regard the activities as the self,
they regard the activities as having body, the activities as being in the self,
the self as being in the activities.

They regard consciousness as the self -
they regard consciousness as the self,

they regard consciousness as having body, consciousness as being in the self,
the self as being in consciousness.

That, housefather, is how the person-pack view arises."

§

"But, lord, how is there no person-pack view?"

"Herein, housefather, the well-taught Ariyan disciple, who discerns those who are Ariyans, who is skilled in the Ariyan doctrine, who is trained in the Ariyan doctrine, who discerns those who are worthy ones, who is skilled in the worthy doctrine, well trained in the worthy doctrine, - such regards not body as the self, regards not the self as having body, nor body as being in the self, nor the self as being in body.

He regards not feeling as the self -
he regards not feeling as the self,
he regards not feeling as having body, nor feeling as being in the self, nor the self as being in feeling.

He regards not perception as the self -
he regards not perception as the self,
he regards not perception as having body, nor perception as being in the self, nor the self as being in perception.

He regards not the activities as the self -
he regards not the activities as the self,
he regards not the activities as having body, nor the activities as being in the self, nor the self as being in the activities.

He regards not consciousness as the self -
he regards not consciousness as the self,
he regards not consciousness as having body, nor consciousness as being in the self, nor the self as being in consciousness.

That is how, housefather, there is no person-pack view."

"Whence comes the worthy Isidatta,[4] my lord?"

"I come from Avanti,[5] housefather."

"Lord, there is at Avanti a clansman named Isidatta, an [196] unseen friend of ours, who has gone forth (from the household life).

Has your reverence seen him?"

"I have, housefather."

"Pray where, lord, does that venerable one now dwell?"

At these words the venerable Isidatta was silent.

"Is youx reverence the worthy[6] Isidatta?"

"I am, housefather."

"Then may the worthy Isidatta take his pleasure at Macchikasaṇḍa.

Lovely is Wild Mango Grove!

I will do my best to supply the worthy Isidatta with the requisites of robes and alms
and lodging,
of comforts
and medicines in time of sickness."

"That is kindly said, housefather."[7]

§

Thereupon Citta, the housefather, was glad of what was said by the venerable Isidatta and welcomed it.

Then with his own hand he served and satisfied those elder brethren with food both hard and soft.

And those elder Brethren, having eaten their fill, withdrew their hands from their bowls, rose up
and went away.

Then the venerable chief elder said to the venerable Isidatta: -

"Well for you, friend, that this question arose.

This question did not occur to me.

Therefore, friend Isidatta, if on another occasion such a question arises, do you reply in like manner."

Then the venerable Isidatta,
having set his lodging in order,
took bowl and outer robe
and departed from Macchikasaṇḍa, and in thus departing from Macchikasaṇḍa he was gone for good and came not back any more.

---

[1] The well-known first Suttanta of D. 1 (Dialog. 1). Preached in the early days of the Master, this must have been often repeated, so as to be familiar to brethren and laymen alike, antedating this collection.

[2] Sakkāya-diṭṭhi. Cf. K.S. iii, 134, 153 n. [Ed.: note is to § 103]

[3] Cf. K.S. iii, 3.

[4] See Brethren, 107. He had been, by correspondence, the 'unseen friend,' referred to here, of Citta, who had informed him of the Norm. He then became ordained, acquired super-knowledge, visited the Master, and became Arahant. Cf. AA. 387.

[5] Avanti is north of the Vinhya Mts., the site of the school founded by Mahā-Kaecāna. See Rhys Davids' Buddhist India, p. 1.

[6] Ayya

[7] Kalyāṇaṇ vuccati Formula for a polite refusal, acceptance always being by silence.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 4

Mahaka Suttaṃ

Mahaka

---

[196]

Thus have I heard:

Once a number of elder brethren were staying at Macchikasaṇḍa
in Wild Mango Grove.

Then Citta, the housefather, went to visit those elder [197] Brethren, and on coming to them
saluted them
and sat down at one side.

So seated Citta, the housefather, said to those elder brethren:

"Let my lords the elders accept of me tomorrow's meal."

And those elder brethren accepted by silence.

Thereupon Citta, the housefather,
understanding the acceptance of those elder Brethren,
rose from his seat,
saluted the elder brethren by the right
and went away.

Now the elder Brethren, when the night was gone,
robed themselves at early dawn,
and taking bowl and outer robe
went to the dwelling of Citta, the housefather,
and on reaching it
sat down on seats prepared.

Then Citta, the housefather, with his own hand served the elder brethren with choice butter and milk-rice till they had eaten enough.

Now when the elder brethren had eaten their fill and withdrawn hand from bowl they rose from their seats
and went away.

And Citta, the housefather,
saying:

"Gather up the remains,"[1]

followed in the steps of the elder brethren.

Now on that occasion
there was a sweltering[2] heat, and the elder brethren walked with bodies melting away,[3] methinks, since they had eaten well of the meal.

And at that time the venerable Mahaka was the junior of that company of brethren.

Then said the venerable Mahaka to the venerable Chief Elder: -

"It were well, my lord Chief,
if a cool wind should blow
and there were a thunderstorm
and the sky should rain down drop by drop."[4]

"It were indeed well, friend Mahaka,
if a cool wind should blow
and there were a thunderstorm
and the sky should rain down drop by drop."

Thereupon the venerable Mahaka so wrought by magic [198] power that a cool wind blew and there was a thunderstorm and the sky rained down drop by drop.

Now Citta, the housefather, had this thought:

"Why, even the junior of this company of brethren has such magic power!"

Now when the venerable Mahaka reached the Pleasance he said to the venerable chief elder:

"Enough of this, lord!"

"Yes, friend Mahaka,
enough of this!

You have done enough.

Service enough[5] has heen done, friend Mahaka."

So the elder brethren went to the residence, but the venerable Mahaka went to his own lodging.

Then Citta, the housefather, came to see the venerable Mahaka,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Citta, the housefather, said to the venerable Mahaka: -

"Well for me, sir,
if the worthy Mahaka would show me something superhuman, some miracle of magic."

"Then, housefather,
do you put a cloak on the verandah and scatter[6] a bundle of grass."

"Very well, sir,"
said Citta, the housefather, and did as he was bidden.

Then the venerable Mahaka went into his lodging and shot the bolt of the door, and so wrought by magic power that a flame came through the keyhole and the parts about the door-bar and set the grass on fire but not the cloak.

Then Citta, the housefather,
in alarm,
with hair on end,
beat out the cloak
and stood aside.

Then the venerable Mahaka came out of his lodging and said to Citta, the housefather:

"Enough of this, housefather!"

"Yes, my lord Mahaka,
enough of this!

Enough has been done, my lord Mahaka.

Enough service has been done, my lord Mahaka.

Let my lord, the worthy Mahaka, take his pleasure in Macchikasaṇḍa.

Delightful is Wild Mango Grove.

I will do my best to supply the worthy Mahaka with the requisites of robes
and alms,
and lodging,
comforts
and medicines in time of sickness."

"That is kindly said, housefather."

Then the venerable Mahaka,
having set his lodging in order, [199]
took bowl and outer robe and left Macchikasaṇḍa, and in thus departing from Macchikasaṇḍa

he was gone for good and came not back again.[7]

---

[1] Vissajjetha. Comy. reads vissajjetvā.

[2] Text kuṭṭhita, wrongly, I think, for Sinh. MSS of text and Comy. on text read kikiṭa and kīkiṭa (see Dict.), which Comy. explains as *kuṭhita, heṭṭhā santatta-vālikāya, upari ātāpena carati, tikhiṇan ti attho*o ('hot sand below and burning heat above'), adding: 'anyhow, this word (pada) is in the ungarbled Tipiṭaka-teaching of the Buddha.'

[3] Paveliyamānena. Comy. says apavilīyamānena.

[4] Cf. K.S. i, 129 n.

[5] Pūjitam ettāvatā.

[6] Okāsehi = vippakiri. Comy.

[7] Such iddhi, purely to impress, is strongly censured. Vinaya Texts, iii, 80.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 5

Paṭhama Kāmabhū Suttaṃ

Kāmabhū (i)

---

[199]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Kāmabhū was staying at Macchikasaṇḍa
in Wild Mango Grove.

Then Citta, the housefather, came to visit the venerable Kāmabhū,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat,
the venerable Kāmabhū said to Citta, the housefather: -

"'Pure-limbed,[1] white-canopied, one-wheeled, the car rolls on.
Lo! he that cometh: faultless, stream-cutter, bond-less he.'

Of this that is said in brief, housefather, how say you the Full meaning should be regarded?"

"Was this said by the Exalted One, sir?"

"It was, housefather."

"Then, sir, do you wait a moment while I look into the meaning of it."

So Citta, the housefather, was silent a moment, and then said to the venerable Kamabhū: -

"'Pure-limbed,' sir, is a term for the virtues.

'White-canopied,' sir, is a term for release.[2]

'One-wheeled,' sir, is a term for mindfulness.

'Rolls on,' sir,
is a term for coming and going.

'Car,' sir,
is a term for body,
of the four great essentials compounded,[3]
of parents sprung,
on rice- [200] gruel fed,
impermanent,
of a nature to be worn away,
pounded away,

broken
and scattered.

Lust, sir, is a fault.

Hatred is a fault.

Illusion is a fault.

In a brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
these are abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm-tree,
made things that have ceased to be,
so that they cannot sprout again in time to come.

Therefore a brother who has destroyed the āsavas is 'faultless.'[4]

'That cometh,'[5] sir, is a term for the Arahant.

'Stream,' sir,
is a term for craving.

In a brother who has destroyed the āsavas,
this is abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm-tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot sprout again in time to come.

Therefore, sir, a brother who has destroyed the āsavas is called 'stream-cutter.'

Lust, sir, is a bond.

Hatred is a bond.

Illusion is a bond.

In a brother who has destroyed the āsavas
these are abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like the stump of a palm-tree,
made something that has ceased to be,
so that it cannot sprout again in time to come.

Therefore, sir, a brother who has destroyed the āsavas is called 'boundless.'

Thus, sir, as regards what was said by the Exalted One:

'Pure-limbed, white-canopied, one-wheeled, the car rolls on.
Lo! he that eometh: faultless, stream-cutter, bond-less he.'

thus, sir, should be understood in full the meaning of this saying in brief."

"Good for you, housefather!

Well gotten for you, housefather,
that in you
the eye of wisdom is conversant with the profound teaching of the Enlightened One!"

---

[1] Nelanga = 'niddosa (n'etaṇ).' Comy. See K.S. ii, 189; Ud. 76. § 5; Ud.A. 370 (nelagga), where the same words are said of the dwarf-brother Lakuṇṭaka. Cf. Asl. 398 (Expos. 506).

[2] Vinmtti, 'the fruits of Arahantship,' Comy. who remarks that this was a hard thing for a layman to know: that it must be called an inference of Citta's, not a proof that he was Arahant. The brother is perhaps naturally, slow to admit a layman's, insight.

[3] Cf. supra. § [xxxv] 103 n.

[4] Anīgha. For the word see Pāli Dict. Anīgha is properly an-igha, not nīgha, as here explained by the housefather. Comy. 'niddukkha.'

[5] Text has ayantante for ayantan ti.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 6

Dutiya Kāmabhū Suttaṃ

Kāmabhū (ii)

---

[200]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Kāmabhū was staying at Macchikasaṇḍa
in Wild Mango Grove.

Then Citta, the housefather, came to visit the venerable [201] Kāmabhū,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Citta, the housefather, said to the venerable Kāmabhū: -

"Sir, how many activities[1] are there?"

"There are three activities, housefather:
those of body,
those of speech
those of mind."

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather, pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But what, sir, is the activity of body, what is the activity of speech, what is the activity of mind?"

"In-breathing and out-breathing, housefather, is the activity of body;
thought directed and sustained is the activity of speech:
perception and feeling
are the activity of mind."

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But why, sir, are in-breathing and out-breathing the activity of body?

Why is thought directed and sustained the activity of speech?

Why are perception and feeling the activity of mind?"

"In-breathing and out-breathing, housefather, are bodily processes,
dependent on body.

Therefore are they called
'the activity of body.'

First one directs thought and sustains it, then one utters speech.

Therefore is thought directed and sustained called 'the activity of speech.'

Perception and feeling
are mental processes dependent on mind.

Therefore are they called
'the activity of mind'."

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But how, sir, comes the attainment of the ceasing of perception and feeling?"

"A brother, housefather, in attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling does not think:

'I shall attain,
the ceasing of perception and feeling',
'I am attaining,
the ceasing of perception and feeling',
'I have attained
the ceasing of perception and feeling,'
but his mind has [202] been so practised that it leads him on to the state of being such."[2]

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But, sir, in attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling, what states cease first?

Is it the activity of body or of speech or of mind?"

"In so attaining, housefather, a brother's activity of speech ceases first,[3] then that of body,
then that of mind."

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But a brother who has so attained, how does he differ from a dead man, from one who bas made an end?

"In a dead man, housefather, in one who bas made an end,
the activity of body
has ceased,
become calmed
the activities of speech
has ceased,
become calmed
the activities of mind
has ceased,
become calmed

Life has run out,
vital heat has ceased,
the faculties are scattered.

In him, housefather, who has attained the ceasing of perception and feeling,
the activity of body
also has ceased,
become calmed
the activities of speech
also has ceased,
become calmed
the activites of mind
also has ceased,
become calmed.

But his life has not run out, vital beat has not ceased, the faculties have become clarified.

That is the difference between a dead man, one who bas made an end, and one who has attained the ceasing of perception and feeling."

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But how comes about the emerging from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling?"

"In emerging from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling, housefather,
a brother does not think:

'I will now emerge, from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling', 'I am emerging,
from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling',
'I have now emerged from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling,' but his mind has been so practised that it leads him on to the state of being such."

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But wben a brother is thus emerging from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling, what states arise first?

Is it activity of body, activity of speech,
or activity of mind?

"In a brother so emerging from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling, housefather, activity of mind arises first,
next activity of body,
and last activity of speech."

[203] "Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But when a brother has so emerged
from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling, how many contacts touch him?

"When a brother has so emerged from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling, housefather, three contacts touch him:
the void,
the signless
and the aimless contact."[4]

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But when one has so emerged
from attaining the ceasing of perception and feeling, how does a brother's mind tend,
slope,
incline?"[5]

"His mind tends to detachment,[6] housefather, it slopes to detachment, it inclines to detachment."

"Well said, sir," said Citta, the housefather,
pleased with the venerable Kāmabhū's reply,
and welcomed it.

Then he asked a further question: -

■

"But, sir, how many states are most useful
for the attainment of the ceasing of perception and feeling?'

"Indeed, housefather, you ask last
what you ought to have asked first!

Yet will I explain to you.

Two states are most useful, housefather,
for the attainment of the ceasing of perception and feeling, - calm and insight."

---

[1] Saṅkhārā [sp. text: saṇkhara; PED: Saṅkhāra. The section also occurs at M. i, 301. Lord Chalmers (Dialogues, v, 215) translates 'plastic forces.'

Comy. = sañkharīyati, nibbattīyatī ti'

[2] Tathattāya upaneti or 'leads to thusness' (a term for Nibhāna) Cf. S. v, 90; Points of Controversy, 338, n. 1, where the S. passage is overlooked.

[3] In first jhāna speech ceases.

[4] Suññato, animitto, appaṇihito phasso. For those terms see Buddh. Psych. Eth., 92 ff. and notes. He is 'empty' of lust, etc., freed from the three marks or signs of nicca, adukkha, attā and, being experienced in dukkha, he desires nothing, fixes his aim on nothing but Nibbāna. Comy. refers to V.M. 658. At Paṭisambh., ii, 35, the homily begins: 'Brethren, there are three deliverances, that of the void, the signless, the aimless.' Cf. Expos., ii, 301.

[5] The usual phrase for a river's course to tho sea, ninna, poṇa, pabbhāra.

[6] Viveka 'Nibbāna.' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 7

Godatta Suttaṃ

Godatta

---

[203]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Godatta[1] was staying at Macchikasaṇḍa
in Wild Mango Grove.

Then Citta, the housefather, came to visit the venerable Godatta,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at [204] one side.

As he thus sat, the venerable Godatta said to Citta, the housefather: -

"Housefather, this heart's release and this utterly unworldly[2] heart's release, and this heart's release that is by the void and that which is signless, - are these states diverse in spirit, diverse in letter,
or are they the same both in spirit
and in letter?"

"There is one view of the question,[3] sir, according to which these states are diverse both in spirit and in letter.

But there is another view, sir, according to which they are one and the same both in spirit and in letter."

§

"But what, sir, is that view
according to which they are diverse both in spirit
and in letter?

Herein,[4] sir, a brother dwells suffusing one quarter of the world with his heart possessed of kindliness:
so also the second,
third
and fourth quarters:

and in like manner above,
below,
across,[5]
everywhere,
for all sorts
and conditions,[6] -
the whole world
does he abide suffusing with a heart possessed of kindliness that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.[7]

■

Again sir, a brother dwells
suffusing one quarter of the world with his heart possessed of compassion:
so also the second,
third
and fourth quarters:
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts
and conditions, -
the whole world
does he abide suffusing with a heart possessed of compassion
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,

free from enmity
and untroubled.

■

Again sir, a brother dwells
suffusing one quarter of the world with his heart possessed of sympathy:
so also the second,
third
and fourth quarters:
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts
and conditions, -
the whole world
does he abide suffusing with a heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

■

Again sir, a brother dwells
suffusing one quarter of the world with his heart possessed of equanimity:
so also the second,
third
and fourth quarters:
and in like manner above,
below,

across,
everywhere,
for all sorts
and conditions, -
the whole world
does he abide suffusing
with a heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

This, sir, is callcd
'the heart's release by a boundless heart.'

§

And what, sir, is the heart's release that is utterly unworldly?

Herein, sir, a brother,
passing utterly beyond the sphere of infinite consciousness,
with the idea of
'there is nothing at [205] all,"
reaches and abides in the sphere of nothingness.

This, sir, is called
'the utterly unworldly heart's release.'

§

And what, sir, is the heart's release bv the void?

Herein, sir, a brother goes to the forest or the root of a tree or a lonely spot,
and thus reflects:

'Void is this of self or of what pertains to self.'

This, sir, is called the heart's release by the void.

§

And what, sir, is the heart's release that is signless?

Herein, sir, a brother,
without thought of all signs, reaches and abides in that tranquillity of heart that is signless.

This, sir, is called
'the heart's release that is signless.'

Such, sir, is the view of the question according to which states are diverse both in spirit
and in letter.

§

And what, sir, is the view
according to which states are one and the same,
both in spirit
and in letter?

Lust, sir, sets a limit.[8]

Hate sets a limit.

Illusion sets a limit.

In the brother who has destroyed the āsavas
these are abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to become,
of a nature not to grow again in future time.

Of all the boundless ways[9]
of heart's release,
the unshaken[10] heart's release
is deemed supreme among them.

Truly that unshaken heart's release
is void of lust,
void of hate,
void of illusion.

Lust, sir, is a hindrance.[11]

Hate is a hindrance.

Illusion is a hindrance.

In the brother who has destroyed the āsavas
these are abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to become,
of a nature not to grow again in future time.

Of all the unobstructed ways of heart's release,
the unshaken heart's release
is deemed supreme among them.

Truly that unshaken heart's release
is void of lust,
void of hate,
void of illusion.

Lust, sir, causes distinctive signs.

Hate causes distinctive [206] signs.

Illusion causes distinctive signs.

In the brother who lias destroyed the āsavas
these are abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made unable to become,
of a nature not to grow again in future time.

Of all the signless ways of heart's release the unshaken heart's release
is deemed supreme among them.

Truly that unshaken heart's release
is void of lust,

void of hate,
void of illusion.

Such, sir, is the view
according to which these states are one and the same,
both in spirit
and in letter."

---

[1] Is this the Godatta of Brethren, 281? The story there reminds one of that of Balaam and his ass. His fallen ox, cruely beaten by him, spoke with a human voice, and prayed that both might be reborn in reversed position. Godatta gave up all and 'took orders.'

[2] Ākiñcaññā 'without possessions or clinging.'

[3] Pariyāya.

[4] Cf. M. i, 38. The four brahma-vihāras or 'sublime states,' or 'dwellings' of thought. 'Heart' is more literally 'mind': 'citta, which is mind (mano), which is consciousness (viññāṇa) See K.S., ii, 65. we should say, 'will.' See infra. xlii, 8; V.M., cap. ix, pp. 294-3I7.

[5] Tiriyaṇ expl. at V.M. 308 as 'the intermediate quarters.'

[6] Text reads sabb'atthatāya, but commentators read sabb'attatāya which I follow here. V.M. Comy. 'without distinction of persons.'

[7] Avyāpajjhaṇ = 'niddukkhaṇ.' V.M. Comy.

[8] Pamāna-karaṇa Comy. says it means 'taking the measure of a man.' One does not know his nature till rāga-dosa, etc., arise.

[9] 'The four paths and the four fruits.' Comy.

[10] Akuppa - 'arahatta-phala-ceto-vimutti (which is the topmost of all paths).' Comy.

[11] Kiñcanaṇ = palibodha, a hindrance, lit. 'a something.' Cf. Udāna, ii, 6, where the sages are called akiñcanā, worldlings sakiñcanā ('with the somethinga'), hampered by possessions.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 8

Nigaṇṭha Suttaṃ

Nigaṇṭha

---

[206]

Now at that time the Nigaṇṭha,[1] Nāṭa's Son, had come to Macchikasaṇḍa together with a great company of the Nigaṇṭhas.

Now Citta, the housefather, heard it said:

"The Nigaṇṭha, Nāta's Son, has come to Macchikasaṇḍa together with a great company of the Nigaṇṭhas."

So Citta, the housefather, with a number of followers, went to visit the Nigaṇṭha, Nāṭa's Son,
and on coming to him greeted him in friendly wise,

and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

As he thus sat,
the Nigaṇṭha, Nāta's Son, said to Citta, the housefather:

"Hast thou faith, housefather,
in the teaching of Gotama, the recluse,
that there is a mental balance
without thought directed and sustained,
that there is a ceasing
of thought directed and sustained?"

"Herein, sir, I do not walk with faith in the teaching[2] of Gotama, the recluse,
that there is a mental balance
without thought directed and sustained,
that there is a ceasing
of thought directed and sustained."

At these words, the Nigaṇṭha, Nāta's Son, looking round[3] on his own company, said:

"I would have you look, sirs,
how straight is this housefather Citta,
how guileless[4] is this housefather Citta, how ingenuous is this housefather Citta!

Why, he who should think there can be any ceasing
of thought directed and sustained, might think the mind could be caught in a net, or that Gangā's stream could be held back with his own fist!"

"Now what think you sir?
Which is the more excellent, knowledge or faith?"

"Why, housefather, knowledge is more excellent than faith."[5]

"Now I, sir, if I so desire, aloof from lusts,
aloof from states that are evil,
can enter upon the first trance,
which is joined with thought directed and sustained,
born of solitude,
zestful and easeful,
and can abide therein.

I, sir, if I so desire,
by the calming down
of thought directed and sustained[ed1] by entering on the inward calm,
that single-mindedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sained, born of mental blance,
zestful and full of ease,
can enter on the second trance and abide therein.

I, sir, if I so desire,
by the fading ut of zest become balanced and remain mindful and composed, and experience with the body
the happiness of which the Ariyans aver:
'The balanced thoughtful man dwells happily' can enter on the third trance and abide therein.

I, sir, if I so desire,
by abandoning ease and pain,
by the coming to an end of the joy and sorrow which I had before,

can enter on the fourth trance
which is free of pain and free of pleasure, a state of perfect purity of balance and equanimity, and abide therein.

Thus knowing, sir,
thus seeing,
believing what other recluse or brahmin, should I hold
that there is a mental balance
without thought directed and sustained, or that there is a ceasing of thought directed and sustained?"

At these words,
the Nigaṇṭha, Nāta's Son, looking around on his company, said:

"I would have you look, sirs,
how crooked is this housefather,
how crafty,
how counterfeiting is this housefather Citta!"

'Now, indeed, sir, we understand your saying:
'I would have ye look, sirs,
how straight is this housefather Citta,
how guileless,
how honest is this housefather Citta.'

And now indeed we understand your saying:

'I would have ye look, sirs,
how crooked is this housefather Citta,
how crafty,
how dishonest is this housefather Citta.'

If, sir, your first assertion was true, your last was false.

And if your last was true, your first was false.

Now here, sir,
these ten reasonable questions[6] arise.

If you know the way to [208] reply to them, you should give me a counter-blow along with your company.

One question,
one explanation,
one answer.[7]

Two questions,
two explanations,
two answers.

Three questions,
three explanations,
three answers.

Four questions,
four explanations,
four answers.

Five questions,
five explanations,
five answers.

Six questions,
six explanations,
six answers.

Seven questions,
seven explanations,
seven answers.

Eight questions,
eight explanations,
eight answers.

Nine questions,
nine explanations,
nine answers.

Ten questions,
ten explanations,
ten answers."

Then Citta, the housefather, getting no reply to these ten reasonable questions, rose up from his seat and went away.

---

[1] He was Vardhamāna, the head of the Jain community. Cf. D. i, 57. The word means 'free from bonds.'

[2] I.e., 'not with faith only.' Comy. says that to assert faith in a teaching is the method of those who have not declared aññā, realization. [MO: This is speaking about the second jhana, something attainable by ordinary laymen. Citta was a Non-returner, and I don't believe non-returners were said to have aññā,]

[3] Reading apaloketvā, as below, with Sinh. MSS. and MSS. of Comy. Text has ulloketvā.

[4] Reading asaṭha for text's asaṭṭha.

[5] The three 'jewels' of the Jains — unlike the three later so called of the Buddhists — were morals, faith, and knowledge.

[6] Saha-dhammikā = sa-kāraṇā. Comy. says these are the Kumāra-pañha or 'novice's catechism' of ten questions. Cf. KhP. 2: D. i. 94.

[7] Text veyyākaraṇaṇ. MSS. of Comy. byākaraṇaṇ.

[ed1] Woodward abridges the jhāna formulas. I have unabridged them according to his version in SN 4.36.19.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 9

Acela Suttaṃ

The Unclothed (Ascetic)

---

[208]

Thus have I heard:

Now at that time Kassapa,[1] the Unclothed, an old family friend,
had come to Macchikasaṇḍa.

And Citta, the housefather, heard it said:

"They say our old family friend, Kassapa, the Unclothed, has come to Macchikasaṇḍa."

So Citta, the housefather, went to visit Kassapa, the Unclothed,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly wise,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, Citta, the housefather, said to Kassapa, the Unclothed:

"How long have you been a Wanderer, worthy Kassapa?"

"Full thirty years, housefather, have I been a Wanderer."

"In those thirty years, sir, have you come by any superhuman experience,[2]
any truly Ariyan excellence of knowledge and insight,
any comfortable life?"

"In these full thirty years, housefather, that I have been a Wanderer, I have never come by any superhuman experience, nor any truly Ariyan excellence of knowledge and insight, nor any comfortable life, -
nothing but nakedness
and a shaven crown
and dusting away the gravel."[3]

[209] At these words Citta, the housefather, said to Kassapa, the Unclothed: -

"A strange thing indeed!

A wonder indeed,
the good teaching of the Norm!

To think that in full thirty years one should come by no superhuman experience, no truly Ariyan excellence of knowledge and insight,

nor any comfortable life, -
nothing but nakedness
and a shaven crown
and dusting away the gravel!"

"But you, housefather, - how long is it since you entered on the life of the disciple?"

"I too, sir, have been full thirty years a disciple."

"But in those full thirty years, housefather,
have you come by any superhuman experience,
any truly Ariyan excellence of knowledge and insight,
any comfortable life?"

"How should it not be so, sir?

I, sir, when I so desire, aloof from lust,
aloof from states that are evil,
can enter upon the first trance,
which is joined with thought directed and sustained,
born of solitude,
zestful and easeful,
and abide therein.

I, sir, when I so desire,[ed1]
by the calming down of thought directed and sustained, entering on the inward calm,
that single-mindedness of will,
apart from thought directed and sustained,
born of mental balance,
zestful and fll of ease, can enter on the second trance

and abide therein.

I, sir, if I so desire,
by the fading out of zest become balanced and remain mindful and composed, and experiencing with the body the happiness of which the Arians aver:
'The balanced thoughtful man dwells happily' can enter on the third trance
and abide therein.

I, sir, if I so desire,
by rejecting pleasure and pain,
by the coming to an end of the joy and sorrow which I had before,
can enter on the fourth trance
and abide therein.

Why, sir, if I should make an end earlier than the Exalted One,
'twere no wonder if the Exalted One should pronounce thus of me:

'There is no fetter,
bound by which Citta, the housefather, could come back again to this world.'"

At these words Kassapa, the Unclothed, said to Citta, the housefather: -

"A strange thing, indeed!

A wonder, indeed,
the good teaching of the Norm!

To think that a householder, one who wears white clothes, should come to such superhuman experience, such truly Ariyan excellence of knowledge and wisdom, such comfortable living.

Oh, housefather,
may I get ordination in this Norm-discipline?

May I get full ordination?"

Thereupon Citta, the housefather, took Kassapa, the Un- [210] clothed, to some elder brethren.

And on coming to them he said: -

"Sirs, this is Kassapa, the Unclothed, an old family friend of ours.

Let the elders ordain this man.

Let them give him full ordination.

I for my part will do my best to supply the requisites of robes, alms
and lodging,
and comforts and medicines in time of sickness."[4]

So Kassapa, the Unclothed, got ordination in the Norm-diseipline, got full ordination.

And not long after he was ordained did the venerable Kassapa, dwelling solitary,
secluded,

zealous,
ardent
and aspiring,
in no[5] long time
attain that goal supreme of the righteous life, to win which the clansmen rightly go forth from home to the homeless.

So that in that very life,
of himself,
he fully understood it,
realized it
and abode therein,
and knew:

"Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter."

So the venerable Kassapa was yet another of the Arahants.

---

[1] Cf. Dialog, i, 223 ff.; S. ii, 19, 22 for this Kassapa, the Unclothed.

[2] Uttari-manussa-dhamma. Comy. explains that the ten ways of meritorious action (three of deed, four of speech, three of thought) constitute the normal good man's life. Anything beyond this is utttariṇ-. Cf. M. i, 68 f., Sunakkhatta's attack, and iii, 157, where the Buddha asks the same question of Anuruddha. Buddh. Psych., 105.

[3] Pāvāḷā-nipphoṭanāya according to text. The word occurs here only. Paii Dict. expl. as 'plucking out the hair' (?), but Comy. reads (pavāḷa, gritty soil), and explains that a bunch of peacock's feathers was used for beating away dust and grit from the place where one sits on the ground, a painful thing for the naked!

[4] Cf. supra. Mahaka, xli, § 4.

[5] Text omits na.

[ed1] Woodward abridges this and the following. I have picked up his wording from SN 4.35.19 pg152. His abridgment of the 4th jhāna does not fit his rendering there.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
41. Citta Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

41. Kindred Sayings about Citta

Sutta 10

Gilāna-Dassana Suttaṃ

Seeing the Sick

---

[210]

Thus have I heard:

Now at that time Citta, the housefather, was sick, afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

Then a number of devas that dwell in gardens,[1] forest
and trees,
devas that dwell in healing herbs
and forest trees,

gathered and came together
and said to Citta, the housefather: -

"Aspire thus, housefather:

'In future time may I be a rajah,
a world-ruler.'"

At these words Citta, the housefather, replied to those devas that dwell in gardens, forest
and trees,
devas that dwell in healing herbs
and forest trees:

"That is a thing impermanent,
that is a thing unstable,
that must pass
and be left behind."

At these words
the comrades and blood-relations of Citta, the housefather, said to him: -

"Set up mindfulness, good master!

Talk not at random."

[211] "What have I said that makes you tell me to set up mindfulness and talk not at random?"

"Why, good master, you said this:

'That is a thing impermanent,
that is a thing unstable,

that must pass
and be left behind.'"

"Yes, but I said that to the devas that dwell in gardens, forest
and trees,
devas that dwell in healing herbs
and forest trees, who said to me:

'Aspire thus, housefather:

"In future time may I be a rajah,
a world-ruler."'"

"What significance, housefather, did the devas that dwell in gardens,
forest
and trees,
devas that dwell in healing herbs
and forest trees see,
so as to say:

'Aspire thus, housefather:

"In future time may I be a rajah,
a world-ruler."'"

"Those devas that dwell in gardens, forest
and trees,
devas that dwell in healing herbs
and forest trees
thought thus:

'This Citta, the housefather, is a virtuous man,

of a lovely nature.

If he aspire to be in future time a rajah,
a world-ruler,
the righteous aspiration of the heart, righteous in its very purity, will prove a blessing to the virtuous man, will bring forth righteous fruit.

Seeing such significance did those that dwell in gardens,
forest
and trees,
devas that dwell in healing herbs
and forest trees say:

'Aspire thus, housefather:

"In future time may I be a rajah,
a world-ruler."'

Then I said to them:

'That is a thing impermanent,
that is a thing unstable,
that must pass
and be left behind.'"

"Then, good master, do you instruct us."

"Wherefore thus must ye train yourselves:

'Possessed of faith unfaltering in the Buddha will we be,
saying:

"'Tis he,
that Exalted One,

Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
perfect in knowledge and practice,
world knower,
unsurpassed charioteer of men to be tamed,
teacher of devas and mankind,
a Buddha,
an Exalted One."

Possessed of faith unfaltering in the Norm will we be,
saying:

"Well proclaimed by the Exalted One is the Norm, a thing to be seen in this very life, not a thing of time,
inviting to come and see,
leading onward,
to be realized by them that are wise, each for himself."

Possessed will we be of faith unfaltering in the Order,
saying:

"Walking righteously
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples, walking in the right way
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
walking dutifully
is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples,
to wit,
the four pairs of men,
the eight sorts of men, [212]
that is the Exalted One's Order of Disciples, worthy of honour,
worthy of respect,

worthy of offerings,
worthy to be saluted with uplifted palms,
a field of merit unsurpassed for the world.

Whatsoever worthy offering there be in our clan, all that shall be imparted without favour to righteous ones[2]
that are of lovely nature."'

Thus must ye train yourselves."

So, when he had inclined the hearts of his comrades and blood-relations towards the Buddha, the Norm
and the Order,
when he had established them in giving up, Citta, the housefather, made an end.

---

[1] According to Comy. they are fairies that dwell on flowers and fruits.

[2] Comy. appropriates these qualities for the bhikkhus.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 1

Caṇḍa-Gāmaṇī Suttaṃ

Wrathful[1]

---

[213]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī at Jeta Grove
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then Wrathful, the headman, came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him,
he saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Wrathful, the headman, said to the Exalted One: -

"Pray, lord, what is the reason, what is the cause,
why such and such an one
is styled 'wrathful,'
and what the reason,
what the cause
why such and such an one is styled 'kindly'?"[2]

"Herein, headman, a certain man's passion is not abandoned.

Owing to that others harass him.

Harassed by others
he shows vexation.

Thus is he styled 'wrathful.'

■

Resentment is not abandoned.

Owing to that
others harass him.

Harassed by others
he shows vexation.

Thus is he styled 'wrathful.'

■

Illusion is not abandoned.

Owing to that
others harass him.

Harassed by others
he shows vexation.

Thus is he styled 'wrathful.'

That, headman, is the reason, that is the cause
why such and such an one is styled 'wrathful.'

§

Now herein, headman, if a certain man's passion is abandoned,
owing to that
others do not harass him.

Unharassed by others
he shows no vexation.

Thus is he styled 'kindly.'

Resentment is abandoned.

Owing to that others do not [214] harass him.

Unharassed by others
he shows no vexation.

Thus he is styled 'kindly.'

If illusion be abandoned, others do not harass him.

Unharassed by others
he shows no vexation.

Thus is he styled 'kindly.'

That is the reason,
that is the cause, headman, why a certain one is styled 'kindly.'"

At these words Wrathful, the headman,
said to the Exalted One: -

"Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point the way to him that wanders astray, or hold up a light in the darkness that they who have eyes may behold objects, - even as in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.

To the Exalted One, lord,
I go for refuge,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,

from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

---

[1] Caṇḍa (pron Chanda). Comy. says the nickname was applied by the elder brothren who compiled the texts. The term gāmaṇi, which gives the title to this collection or saṇyutta, is applied to any chieftain of a band, village headman, or company-manager, etc.

[2] Sūrata (su-rata) Gk. εὐμεής

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 2

Tālapuṭa Suttaṃ

Leaf-basket[1]

---

[214]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha, at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.[ed1]

Then Tālaputa, the stage-manager, came to the Exalted One,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Tālapuṭa, the stage-manager,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were actors,
to wit:

Speaking of stage-players they said:

'A player who on the stage
or in the arena
makes people laugh
and delights them
by his counterfeiting of the truth,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the [215] company of the Laughing Devas.'

What says the Exalted One in this matter?"

"Enough, manager!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

■

Then a second time did Tālapuṭa, the stage-manager, say to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were actors,
to wit:

Speaking of stage-players they said:

'A player who on the stage
or in the arena

makes people laugh
and delights them
by his counterfeiting of the truth,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the company of the Laughing Devas.'

What says the Exalted One in this matter?"

Then a second time did the Exalted One respond:

"Enough, manager!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

■

Then a third time didTālapuṭa, the stage-manager, say to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were actors,
to wit:

Speaking of stage-players they said:

'A player who on the stage
or in the arena
makes people laugh
and delights them
by his counterfeiting of the truth,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the company of the Laughing Devas.'

What says the Exalted One in this matter?"

"True it is
I did not permit your question,
saying:

'Enough, manager!

Let be.

Ask me not this question.'

Nevertheless I will expound this thing to you.

In the case of those beings, manager,
who aforetime were not free from lusts, but were bound with the bond of lust -
in such cases,
a player
who on the stage
or in the arena
brings about lustful states of mind, so that such beings become still more lustful;

In the case of those beings, manager,
who aforetime were not free from resentment, but were bound with the bond of resentment -
in such cases,
a player
who on the stage
or in the arena
brings about resentful states of mind, so that such beings become still more resentful;

In the case of those beings, manager,
who aforetime were not free from illusion, but were bound with the bond of illusion -
in such cases,
a player

who on the stage
or in the arena
brings about illusory states of mind, so that such beings become still more deluded;

being himself drugged and slothful, he drugs and makes others slothful, - such an one,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Purgatory of Laughter.[2]

Now if his view of the matter is as you say:

'Whatsoever player on the stage
or in the arena
makes people laugh
and delights them
by his counterfeiting of the truth,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the company of the Laughing Devas,' then I declare his view is perverted.

Now, manager, I declare that for one who is guilty of perverted view there are two paths open, one is Purgatory
and the other is rebirth as an animal."[3]

At these words, Tālapuṭa, the stage-manager, cried aloud
and burst into tears.

[Then said the Exalted One: -]

"That was why I disallowed your question, saying:

'Enough, manager!

Let be.

Ask me not this question.'

[216] "But, lord, I am not lamenting for that.

I lament at the thought that for many a long day I have been cheated,
deceived
and led astray
by teacher after teacher, actors,
in the belief that a player on the stage
or in the arena
makes people laugh
and delights them
by his counterfeiting of the truth,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the company of the Laughing Devas.

Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -
even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.

To the Exalted One I go for refuge,
to the Norm
and to the Order.

O that I might gain ordination from the Exalted One, that I might gain full ordination."

So Tālapuṭa, the stage-manager, got ordination from the Exalted One,
got full ordination.

And not long after doing so the venerable Tālapuṭa, dwelling solitary,
secluded,
zealous,
ardent
and aspiring,
in no long time
attained that goal supreme of the righteous life, to win which the clansmen rightly go forth from home to the homeless.

So that in that very life,
of himself,
he fully understood it,
realized it
and abode therein,
and knew:

'Destroyed is rebirth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in these conditions
there is no hereafter.'

And the venerable Tālapuṭa, was yet another of the Arahants.

---

[1] Puṭa. Those sectional headings are really mnemonic abbreviations of the full names of the characters. The name tāla-puṭa (a basket of woven palm-leaves so commonly used in the East. Cf. Brethren, p. 418) was given to him, says Comy. because his complexion was bright and cheerful, like the colour of a cluster of ripe palm-fruit, probably referring to the beautiful colour of a bunch of wild dates. But the connexion is not clear. Our text and some MSS. of text and Comy. have tala. After hts ordination, this brother describes his experiences in striking verses, well rendered at Brethren, 369 ff.

[2] Pahāsa niraya. Not a distinctive purgatory, says Comy., but a section of Avīci, where actors in imagination play their parts again, and are 'cooked.'

[3] Cf. M. i, 388; Pts. of Contr., 290.

[ed1] Woodward has here "in Jeta Grove" which he must have just picked up from the previous sutta.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 3

Yodh'Ājīva Suttaṃ

Fighting-man

---

[216]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then Fighting-man,[1] the trainer, came to see the Exalted One
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side,
Fighting-man, the trainer,

said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were fighting-men:

'A fighting-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'[2]

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"Enough, trainer!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

■

Then a second time Fighting-man, the trainer,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were Fighting-men:

'A fighting-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself

and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"Enough, trainer!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

■

Then a third time [217] Fighting-man, the trainer,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were fighting-men:

'A fighting-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"True it is, trainer, that I do not[3] admit your question, and said:

"Enough, trainer!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

Nevertheless I will expound it to you.

In the case of a fighting-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
he must previously have had this low,
mean,
perverse idea:

'Let those beings be tortured,
be bound,
be destroyed,
be exterminated,
so that they may be thought never to have existed.'

Then, so exerting himself,
so putting forth effort,
other men torture him
and make an end of him.

When body breaks up,
after death he is reborn in the Purgatory of Quarrels.[4]

Now if his view was this:

'A fighting-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself

and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight,'

- then I say that view of his is perverted.

Now, trainer, I declare that for one who is guilty of perverted view
one of two paths is open,
either purgatory
or rebirth as an animal."

At these words Fighting-man, the trainer, cried aloud
and burst into tears.

[Then said the Exalted One: -]

"That was why I disallowed your question, trainer,
saying:

'Enough, trainer!

Let be.

Ask me not this question.'"

"But, lord, I am not lamenting for that,
but at the thought that
for many a long day
I have been cheated,
deceived

and led astray
in the past by teacher after teacher, fighting-men, in the belief that any fighting-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -
even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.|| ||

To the exalted One, lord, I go for refuge, to the Norm and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,
from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

---

[1] Yodha-ājīvo. He got his living by fighting, and was thus called by the elders who compiled the texts. Comy. As above, gāmaṇi means here 'head of a band,' possibly 'captain of free-lances.'

[2] Sarañjita.

[3] Labhāmi here, but in the previous section nālaṭṭhaṇ.

[4] Sarājitā Niraya. The texts confuse the two words, sarañjita for the Devaloka and sarājita for the Niraya. As above, Comy. says it is not a distinctive purgatory, but a part of Avīci, where fighting-men of all sorts fight in imagination and are 'cooked.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 4

Hatth'Āroha Suttaṃ

Elephant

---

[218]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then Mahout,[1] the head keeper, came to see the Exalted One
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side, Mahout, the head keeper,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were mahouts:

'A mahout who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"Enough, head keeper!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

■

Then a second time Mahout, the head keeper,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were mahouts:

'A mahout who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort

is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"Enough, head keeper!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

■

Then a third time Mahout, the head keeper,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were mahouts:

'A mahout who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"True it is, head keeper, that I do not admit your question, and said:

'Enough, head keeper!

Let be.

Ask me not this question.'

Nevertheless I will expound it to you.

In the case of a mahout who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
he must previously have had this low,
mean,
perverse idea:

'Let those beings be tortured,
be bound,
be destroyed,
be exterminated,
so that they may be thought never to have existed.'

Then, so exerting himself,
so putting forth effort,
other men torture him
and make an end of him.

When body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the Purgatory of Quarrels.

Now if his view was this:

'A mahout who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort

is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight,'

- then I say that view of his is perverted.

Now, head keeper, I declare that for one who is guilty of perverted view
one of two paths is open,
either purgatory
or rebirth as an animal."

At these words Mahout, the head keeper, cried aloud
and burst into tears.

[Then said the Exalted One: -]

"That was why I disallowed your question, head keeper,
saying:

'Enough, head keeper!

Let be.

Ask me not this question.'

"But, lord, I am not lamenting for that,
but at the thought that
for many a long day
I have been cheated,
deceived
and led astray

in the past by teacher after teacher, mahouts,
in the belief that any mahout who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -
even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.|| ||

To the exalted One, lord, I go for refuge, to the Norm and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,
from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

[1] Hatth'āroha, here the nickname for the head-keeper.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 5

Ass'Āroha Suttaṃ

Horse

---

[218]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha,
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Then Jockey,[1] the head trainer, came to see the Exalted One
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he sat at one side, Jockey, the head trainer,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were cavelry-men:[ed1]

'A cavelry-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"Enough, head trainer!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

■

Then a second time Jockey, the head trainer,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were cavelry-men:

'A cavelry-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort

is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"Enough, head trainer!

Let be.

Ask me not this question."

■

Then a third time Jockey, the head trainer,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, this traditional saying
of teachers of old
who were cavelry-men:

'A cavelry-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.'

What says the Exalted One of this?"

"True it is, head trainer, that I do not admit your question, and said:

'Enough, head trainer!

Let be.

Ask me not this question.'

Nevertheless I will expound it to you.

In the case of a cavelry-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
he must previously have had this low,
mean,
perverse idea:

'Let those beings be tortured,
be bound,
be destroyed,
be exterminated,
so that they may be thought never to have existed.'

Then, so exerting himself,
so putting forth effort,
other men torture him
and make an end of him.

When body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the Purgatory of Quarrels.

Now if his view was this:

'A cavelry-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort

is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight,'

- then I say that view of his is perverted.

Now, head trainer, I declare that for one who is guilty of perverted view
one of two paths is open,
either purgatory
or rebirth as an animal."

At these words Jockey, the head trainer, cried aloud
and burst into tears.

[Then said the Exalted One: -]

"That was why I disallowed your question, head trainer,
saying:

'Enough, head trainer!

Let be.

Ask me not this question.'

"But, lord, I am not lamenting for that,
but at the thought that
for many a long day
I have been cheated,
deceived
and led astray

in the past by teacher after teacher, cavelry-men, in the belief that any cavelry-man who in battle exerts himself,
puts forth effort,
thus exerting himself
and putting forth effort
is tortured
and put an end to by others.

Then, when body breaks up,
after death he is reborn
in the company of the Devas of Passionate Delight.

Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -
even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.|| ||

To the exalted One, lord, I go for refuge, to the Norm and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,
from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

---

[1] Ass'āroha, a nickname as above.

[ed1] Woodward abridges this entire sutta. I have followed the example of §3 above, but have used 'cavalry-man' in place of what, following Woodward's pattern, would have been 'jockey'. It looks like Woodward did not pick up on the idea that this and the previous sutta were all about warriors.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 6

Pacchā-Bhūmaka (or Mataka) Suttaṃ aka Asibandhaka-Putta Suttaṃ

Westlander[1] (or The Dead Man)

---

[218]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying at Nalanda[2] in Pāvārika Mango Grove.

Then Asibandhaka's Son,[3] the headman, came to see the Exalted One and,
on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Asibandhaka's Son, the headman,
said to the Exalted One: -

"Lord, the brahmins of the west, who are carriers of waterpots, wearers of lily-garlands, purifiers by water,
fire-worshippers,
when a man has died and made an end, - they lift him up and carry him out,[4]
call on him by name[5]
and speed him heavenwards.

But the Exalted One, who is Arahant,
an All-enlightened One, is able to bring it about that the whole world,
when body breaks up,
after death
can be reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

"As to that, headman, I will question you.

You may reply as you think fit.

§

Now what think you, headman?

Suppose a case
where a man is a taker of life,
a taker of what is not [219] given,

a wrong-doer in respect of sensual passion,
a liar,
a backbiter,
of bitter speech,
a babbler
and covetous,
of malevolent heart,
of perverted view.

Then a great multitude gathers
and throngs together,
aspires and praises him and goes about with uplifted palms,
saying:

'May this man,
when body breaks up,
after death be reborn[6] in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World.'

Now what think you, headman?

Pray would that man, owing to the aspirations and praises
of that great multitude, owing to their going about with uplifted palms, -
would that man,
when body breaks up,
after death be reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Again, headman, suppose a man hurls a huge, great rock
into a deep,
deep pool of water.

Then a great multitude gathers
and throngs together
and aspires
and praises it
and goes about with uplifted palms,
saying:

'Rise up, good rock!

Float up, good rock!

Float ashore, good rock!'

Now what think you, headman?

Would that huge, great rock, because of the aspirations,
because of the praises, because of the going about with uplifted palms
of that great multitude, - would it rise up or float up or float ashore?"

"Surely not, lord.'

■

"Even so, headman,
whatever man is a taker of life,
a taker of what is not given,
a wrong-doer in respect of sensual passion,
a liar,
a backbiter,

of bitter speech,
a babbler
and covetous,
of malevolent heart,
of perverted view, -
however much a great multitude,
gathering and thronging together, might aspire
and praise him
and go about with uplifted palms,
saying:

'May this man, when body breaks up,
after death
be reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World,'

yet would that man,
when body breaks up,
after death
be reborn in the Woeful Lot,
in the Downfall,
in Purgatory.

§

Now what think you, headman?

Suppose that in this case in a man who abstains from taking life, who abstains from taking what is not given,
who abstains from wrong action
in respect of sensual passion,

who abstains from lying,
who abstains from backbiting,
who abstains from [220] bitter speech and babbling,
who is not covetous,
not of malevolent heart,
a man of right view, -
then a great multitude,
gathering and thronging together,
aspire
and praise him
and go about with uplifted palms,
saying:

'May this man, when body breaks up,
after death
be reborn in the Woeful Lot,
in the Downfall,
in Purgatory'[ed1]

what think you, headman?

Would that man,
because of the aspirations
and praises
and going about with uplifted palms
of that great multitude,
be reborn in the Woeful Lot,
in the Downfall,
in Purgatory?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Suppose again, headman, a man plunges a jar of butter or a jar of oil

into a deep,
deep pool of water,
and breaks it,
and it[7] becomes shreds or fragments
and sinks down to the bottom:
but the butter
or oil
that was in it floats up to the top.

Then suppose a great multitude,
gathering and thronging together, aspires
and praises it,
and goes about with uplifted palms,
saying:

'Sink down, good butter!

Sink in, good butter!

Go to the bottom,
good butter and oil!'

What think you, headman?

Would that butter and oil,
because of the aspirations
and praises
and going about with uplifted palms
of that great multitude, - would they sink down, would they sink in,
would they go to the bottom?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Even so, headman,
whatever man abstains from taking life,
who abstains from taking what is not given,
who abstains from wrong action
in respect of sensual passion,
who abstains from lying,
who abstains from backbiting,
who abstains from bitter speech and babbling,
who is not covetous,
not of malevolent heart,
a man of right view,
however much a great multitude,
gathering and thronging together,
aspire
and praise him
and go about with uplifted palms,
saying:

'May this man, when body breaks up,
after death
be reborn in the Woeful Lot,
in the Downfall,
in Purgatory',

yet would he be reborn in the Happy Lot,
in the Heaven World."

At these words Asibandhaka's Son, the headman,
said to the Exalted One: -

"Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -
even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.|| ||

To the exalted One, lord, I go for refuge,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,
from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

---

[1] Paccha-bhūmaka, probably of the land west of the modern Delhi.

[2] In Magadha, where afterwards was the famous university.

[3] 'Snake charmer.' At § 8 infra he is styled 'follower of the Unclothed.'

[4] Text uyyāpenti (they bring out the body). Sinh. MSS of text have ussayāpenti. Those of Comy. have this and ussuyāpenti, probably a confusion, of the first and ussāpenti Comy. says it is equal to upariyāpenti. With the following argument cf. Dial. i, Tevijja-Sta, pp. 309 ff.

[5] Text saññāpenti Comy. samaññāpenti.

[6] Text should read upapajjatū ti, as ill the next section.

[7] In the text ya and sa should be omitted. They rest on the authority of one MS. only, and Comy. omits them.

[ed1] Woodward has reversed this, having them wish him into the Heaven World.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 7

Desanā (aka Khett'Ūpama) Suttaṃ

Teaching

---

[220]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying at Nalanda in Pāvārika Mango Grove.

Then Asibandhaka's Son, the headman,
came to see [221] the Exalted One and,
on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Asibandhaka's Son, the headman,
said to the Exalted One: -

"Does not the Exalted One, lord, dwell in compassion for every living thing?"

"Yes, headman, the Tathāgata, dwells in compassion for every living thing."

"But, lord, does the Exalted One teach the Norm in full[1] to certain ones,
but to certain others he does not teach the Norm in full?"

"Now, headman, as to this
I shall question you.

Do you reply as you think fit.

§

Now what think you, headman?

Suppose a yeoman farmer[2] here has three fields,
one excellent,
one moderate,
and one poor,
hard,
saltish,
of bad soil

Now what think you, headman?

When that yeoman farmer wants to sow his seed, which field would he sow first,
the excellent field,
the moderate field,
or the one that is poor,
hard,[3]
saltish,
of bad soil?"[4]

"That yeoman farmer, lord, wishing to sow his seed, would first sow the excellent field, and having done so
he would sow the moderate one.

Having so done
he might and might not sow that field that is poor,
hard,
saltish,
of bad soil.

Why so?

Because in any case it might do for cattle-food."

■

"Well, headman, just like that excellent field are my ordained disciples,
both men and women.

I teach them the Norm
that is lovely in its beginning,
lovely in its middle

and lovely in its ending,
both in spirit and in letter.

I make known to them
the righteous life
that is wholly perfect
and utterly pure.

Why is that?

Because, headman,
these people abide with me for their island,
with me for their cave of shelter,
me for their stronghold,
me for their refuge.

■

Then, headman,
just like that moderate field
are my lay-disciples,
both men and women.

I teach them the Norm
that is lovely in its beginning,
lovely in its middle
and lovely in its ending,
both in spirit and in letter.

I make known [222] to them
the righteous life
that is wholly perfect
and utterly pure.

Why is that?

Because, headman,
these people abide with me for their island,
with me for their cave of shelter,
me for their stronghold,
me for their refuge.

■

Then, headman,
just like that field that is poor,
hard,
saltish,
of bad soil,
are my[5] wandering recluses and brahmins that hold other views than mine.

To them also I teach the Norm
that is lovely in its beginning,
lovely in its middle
and lovely in its ending,
both in spirit and in letter.

I make known to them
the righteous life
that is wholly perfect
and utterly pure.

Why is that?

Because if so be they understand
but a single sentence of it,
that would be to their profit and happiness
for many a long day.

§

Again, headman,
suppose a man has three waterpots, one not cracked,
not leaky,
not letting (water) run to waste -[6]
and one waterpot not cracked, but leaky
and letting water run to waste:
and one waterpot that is both cracked and leaky,
and letting water run to waste.

■

Now what think you, headman?

If that man wants to store up water, which pöt would he put it in first, - in the one that is not cracked,
not leaky,
not letting water run to waste?

Or would he put it in the pot that is not cracked,
but leaky,
letting water run to waste?

Or would he put it in the one that is both cracked and leaky, and letting water run to waste?"

■

"Why, lord, that man would first store his water - in the one that is not cracked,
not leaky,

not letting water run to waste, then in the pot
that is not cracked,
but leaky,
letting water run to waste, and as to the one that is both cracked and leaky,
and letting water run to waste he might or he might not put it in that.

Why so?

At any rate the water might do for washing pots."

■

"Well, brahmin, just like that waterpot
that is not cracked,
not leaky,
not letting water run to waste
are my ordained disciples,
both men and women.

I teach them the Norm
that is lovely in its beginning,
lovely in its middle
and lovely in its ending,
both in spirit and in letter.

I make known to them
the righteous life
that is wholly perfect
and utterly pure.

Why is that?

Because, headman,
these people abide with me [223] for their island,
with me for their cave of shelter,
me for their stronghold,
me for their refuge.

■

Again, headman, just like that pot that is not cracked,
but leaky,
letting water run to waste
are my lay-disciples
both men and women.

I teach them the Norm
that is lovely in its beginning,
lovely in its middle
and lovely in its ending,
both in spirit and in letter.

I make known to them
the righteous life
that is wholly perfect
and utterly pure.

Why is that?

Because, headman,
these people abide with me for their island,
with me for their cave of shelter,
me for their stronghold,
me for their refuge.

■

Again, headman,
just like that waterpot

that is both cracked and leaky,
and letting water run to waste,
are mv wandering recluses and brahmms that hold other views than mine.

I teach them the Norm
that is lovely in its beginning,
lovely in its middle
and lovely in its ending,
both in spirit and in letter.

I make known to them
the righteous life
that is wholly perfect
and utterly pure.

Why is that?

Because if so be they understand
but a single sentence of it,
that would be to their profit and happiness
for many a long day.

At these words Asibandhaka's Son
said to the Exalted One: -

"Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -

even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.

To the exalted One, lord, I go for refuge,
to the Norm and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,
from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

---

[1] Sakkaccaṇ

[2] Kassaka, lit. ploughman.

[3] Jangala (jungle), expl. by Comy. as 'stiff, not soft.'

[4] Comy. roads bhūmi for text's bhūmikaṇ. The parable reminds us of that of the Sower in N.T.

[5] Mayhaṇ of the two first comparisons is repeated Here, possibly for the sake of the framework. Nowhere else, as far as I know, does the Buddha call the heretics 'his.' One recalls the saying of Jesus. 'other sheep I have.'

[6] Ahāri, apatihāri. Comy. udakaṇ na harati, na harita-parihāriyeti. Pāli Dict. s.v. has 'worth (?) keeping.' Hāriṇ generally = capax.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 8

Sankha-Dhama Suttaṃ

The Conch[1]

[3] Bahulaṇ bahulaṇ.

[4] Niyyāti (neti), lit. 'goes forth.'

[5] The text's yathā hataṇ should probably be yathābhataṇ, the usual phrase. Cf. A. i, 8, 105; ii, 20 ff; Itiv., 12, 26, etc. The idea of dropping something taken up. The phrase at Itiv. where it reads yathā bhataṇ (?hataṇ) is explained by the gāthā which follows, yathā haritvā nikkhipeyya, which supports the reading hataṇ. See Pāli Dict. which favours the idea of retribution. A.A. on A. i, 8: '= yathā āharitvā ṭhapito.'

[6] Cf. Bk. vii above, § 7.

[7] Cf. Dialog. i, 318, A. v, 299. The conch-blower, trans. 'trumpeter' there, is the town-crier of the east, like the tam-tam man.

[8] Yam pamāṇa-kataṇ kammaṇ = kāmāvacaraṇ (the world of sensuous pleasure), this and the next world. Appamāṇakataṇ is rūpāvacaraṇ Comy. says, 'like the mighty ocean flooding a little creek ... he even reaches up to Brahmā 'At Jāt. ii, No. 169, the saying occurs thus:

Yo ve mettena cittena sabbalok'anukampati Uddhaṇ adho ca tiryañ ca appamāṇena sabbaso, Appamāṇay hitaṇ cittaṇ paripuṇṇaṇ subhāvitaṇ,
Yaṇ pamāṇa-kataṇ kammaṇ na taṇ tatrāvasissati.|| || where Dr. Rouse trans. differently: '(in such a heart) naught narrow or confined can ever be.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 9

Kula Suttaṃ

Clan

---

[228]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was going his rounds among the Kosalans together with a great company of brethren and reached Nalanda.

Then the Exalted One stayed at Nalanda in Pāvārika Mango Grove.

Now at that time Nalanda was stricken with famine, hard to get one's living in,[1] white with men's bones,[2]
its crops grown to mere stubs.[3]

And on that occasion Nāṭa's Son, the Unclothed, was lodging at Nalanda, together with a great following of the Unclothed.

Then Asibandhaka's Son, the headman,
a follower of the Unclothed, came to visit Nāṭa's Son, the Unclothed,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

Then said Nāṭa's Son, the Unclothed, to Asibandhaka's Son, the headman,
as he thus sat: -

"Come thou, headman!

Go and join issue[4] with Gotama, the recluse, and such a goodly report of thee shall be noised abroad,
to wit:

'Asibandhaka's Son, the headman, has joined issue with Gotama, the recluse.'"

"But, how, sir,
shall I join issue with Gotama, the recluse, who is of such great magic power, of such great prestige?"

"Go thou, headman, to visit Gotama, the recluse, and on coming to him say this: -

'Lord, is it not a fact that in divers ways
the Exalted One extols consideration for clansmen,

extols carefulness,
extols compassion for clansmen?'

Now, headman, if Gotama, the recluse, thus questioned replies thus:

'Even so, headman, [229] the Tathāgata,
in divers ways
does extol consideration for clansmen,
does extol carefulness,
does extol compassion for clansmen,' - then do you say thus:

'But, lord, how is it that the Exalted One, with a great company of Brethren, goes about on his rounds
in a place that is stricken with famine, a place hard to get a living in,
that is white with men's bones,
its crops grown to mere stubs?

Surely the Exalted One is acting for the destruction of the clansmen, for the loss of the clansmen, is acting to the injury of the clansmen in so doing.'

Thus questioned by you, headman, with a two-horned question,[5] Gotama, the recluse, will be unable either to vomit it up or to swallow it down."

"Very good, sir,"
said Asibandhaka's Son, the headman, in reply to Nāṭa's Son, the Unclothed, and rose from his seat,

saluted him by the right,
and went away to visit the Exalted One.

On coming to him
he saluted the Exalted One
and sat down at one side.

So seated
Asibandhaka's Son, the headman,
said to the Exalted One:-

"Lord, is it not a fact that in divers ways
the Exalted One extols consideration for clansmen,
extols carefulness,
extols compassion for clansmen?"

"So it is, headman.

The Tathāgata, does in divers ways
does extol consideration for clansmen,
does extol carefulness,
does extol compassion for clansmen"

"Then, lord, how is it that the Exalted One, with a great company of the Brethren, is going his rounds
in a place that is stricken with famine,
hard to get a living in,
white with men's bones,
its crops grown to mere stubs?

Surely the Exalted One in so doing is acting for the destruction of the clansmen, for the loss,

for the injury
of the clansmen."

"Headman,
from ninety and one kalpas ago up to now[6]
I do not remember,
I am not conscious of ever having wronged a clan to the extent even of a cooked meal given in offering.

Those clans were rich,
very rich,
of exceeding great wealth, [230] abounding in gold and silver, abounding in sources of wealth, abounding in wealth of crops.

All that wealth was amassed through charity, amassed through truthfulness, amassed through self-restraint.

There are eight reasons, headman, there are eight causes
for the injury of clans.

Clans meet with injury from rājahs, from robbers,
from fire,
from water,
they find not treasure that is hidden,[7] through sloth they abandon toil, or else in the clan arises a wastrel[8] who scatters, destroys
and breaks up its wealth.

The impermanence of things is the eighth cause.

These, headman, are the eight reasons, the eight causes
for the injury of clans.

Now, headman, since these eight reasons, these eight causes exist
and are found to be,
he who should say thus of me:

'The Exalted One acts for the destruction,
for the loss,
for the injury
of the clans,' -
if he abandon not that saying, if he abandon not that thought, if he give not up adherence to that view, he is cast into Purgatory sure enough."

■

At these words Asibandhaka's Son
said to the Exalted One: -

"Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -

even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.|| ||

To the exalted One, lord, I go for refuge,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,
from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

---

[1] Dvīhitikā (? du-īhihkā), a word of doubtful origin. Comy. explains it as a dilemma, viz.: 'shall we live or shall we not live?' At Vin. iii, 7, Comy. has strange explanations. Considering the neighbouring word salākā-vuttā, I conjecture du-vīhi-tikā (where paddy grows badly)!

[2] Or 'with men's ribs showing white (beneath the skin).'

[3] Salākā-vuttā, 'grown to mere slips and fruitless.' Comy. [Dr. Andersen (Words m S.), J.P.T.S., 1909, p. 128. has 'subsisting by means of pegs; a kind of famine when scraps of food are scraped together with salākas.' But salākas there moans 'slips of wood' used as tickets or 'tallies.' This is an alternative expl. of V.A. l, 175].

[4] Vādaṇ āropehi. Cf. Dialog. i. 15 n., K.S. iii, 13.

[5] Ubhata-koṭlkaṇ pañhaṇ, 'the horns of a dilemma.' Cf. Mil. P., 5, 108.

[6] Dialog. i, 2, the age when Vipassi, the Buddha, was born into the world. A kalpa is reckoned as 1,000 yugas or ages, which make up one day of a Brahmā.

[7] Cf. Khud , 7 [§8] (The Buried Treasure).

[8] Kul'angāra ('clan-charcoal'), wealth-destroyer.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 10

Manicūḷaka Suttaṃ

Crest-jewel

---

[230]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Now at that time in the royal palace among those of the royal retinue who sat together in conclave there arose this topic in casual talk:

"The recluses who are the sons of the Sakyan
are permitted to take gold and silver,

they let gold and silver be offered,
the recluses who are the sons of the Sakyan
accept gold and silver."

Now on that occasion
there sat in that company Jewel-crested,[1] the headman.

Then said the headman:

"My good [231] sirs, say not that!

It is not permitted to the recluses who are the sons of the Sakyan
to take gold and silver, to let gold and silver be offered,
to accept gold and silver.

Rejected by them are gems
and gold,
they have done with gold and silver."

Howbeit, Jewel-crested, the headman, could not convince that company.

So Jewel-crested, the headman, went to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
Jewel-crested, the headman, said to the Exalted One: -

"Lord, in the royal palace here, when those of the royal retinue had gathered and were sitting in conclave, this topic of casual talk arose:

'The recluses who are the sons of the Sakyan
are permitted to take gold and silver,
they let gold and silver be offered,
the recluses who are the sons of the Sakyan
accept gold and silver.'

At these words, lord,
I said to that company:

'0 my good sirs,
say not that!

It is not so.

The recluses who are the sons of the Sakyan
do not take gold and silver, do not permit the offering of gold and silver, do not accept gold and silver.

Rejected by them are gems and gold.

They have done with gold and silver.'

But, lord, I could not convince that company.

Pray, lord, in so explaining did I speak in accordance with the Exalted One's view, without misrepresenting the Exalted One
by stating what is wrong?

Did I answer in conformity with his teaching,
so that no one who is of the same view,[2]

a follower of the Exalted One's view, could give opportunity for censure?"

"Truly, headman, in so explaining you did speak in accordance with my view.

You did not misrepresent me
by stating what is wrong.

You did answer in conformity with my teaching, so that no one who is of my view,
a follower of my view,
could give opportunity for censure.

No, indeed, headman!

It is not permitted to the recluses who are the sons of the Sakyan
to take gold and silver,
to let it be offered,
to accept gold and silver.

They do not take gold and silver, let gold and silver be offered,
accept gold and silver.

Rejected by them are gems and gold.

They have done with [232] gold and silver.

To him, headman, who is permitted to take gold and silver, the five sensual delights are also permitted.

You may downright aver, headman, of him to whom the taking of gold and silver is permitted that he is not a recluse by nature, not of the nature of the Sakyan's sons.

However, headman, this do I declare:

Grass[3] is to be sought for by those in need of grass.

Firewood is to be sought for by those in need of firewood.

A cart is to be sought for by those in need of a cart.

A servant is to be sought for by him who is in need of a servant.

But, headman, in no manner whatsoever do I declare that gold and silver should be accepted or sought for."

---

[1] Maṇicūḷako. He gives the decision laid down by the Second Council at Vesālī. Cf. Vin. ii, 296, for this sutta.

[2] Cf. K.S. ii, 28. Saha-dhammiko, perhaps 'reasonable,' as at p. 208.

[3] 'For thatching one's hut or shelter.' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 11

Bhadraka (Gandhabhaka) Suttaṃ

Lucky[1] (or Bhagandha-Haṭṭhaha)

---

[232]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Mallas[2] at Uruvelakappa, a township of the Mallas.

Then Bhadragaka, the headman, came to visit the Exalted One.

On coming to him he saluted him and sat down at one side.

So seated Bhadragaka, the headman, said to the Exalted One:

"Well for me, lord, if the Exalted One would teach me the arising and the coming to an end of Ill."

■

"If I were to teach you, headman,
the arising and the coming to an end of Ill, beginning with past time, saying,

'Thus it was in the past,'

you would have doubt and perplexity.

■

And if, headman, I were to teach you
the arising and the coming to an end of Ill, beginning with future time, sayhing,

'So will it be in the future,'

you would likewise have doubt and perplexity.

■

But sitting here and now, headman, with you sitting here also,
I will teach you the arising and the coming to an end of Ill.

Do you listen attentively.

Apply your mind and I will speak."

"Even so, lord," replied Bhadragaka to the Exalted One.

§

[233] The Exalted One said:

"Now what think you, headman?

Are there any men in Uruvelakappa owing to whose death
or imprisonment
or loss
or blame
there would come upon you sorrow and suffering,
woe,
lamentation
and despair?"

"There are such men in Uruvelakappa, lord."

■

"But, headman, are there any men in Uruvelakappa owing to whose death
or imprisonment
or loss
or blame,
no sorrow and suffering,
no woe,
lamentation
and despair would come upon you?"

"There are such men in Uruvelakappa, lord."

■

"Now, headman, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why sorrow and suffering,

woe,
lamentation
and despair
would come upon you in respect of some,
but not of the others?"

"In the case of those, lord, owing to whose death
or imprisonment
or loss
or blame
I should suffer sorrow and suffering,
woe,
lamentation
and despair
it is because I have desire and longing for them.

And in the case of the others, lord, owing to whose death
or imprisonment
or loss
or blame,
I should suffer no sorrow and suffering,
woe,
lamentation
and despair
it is because I have not such desire and longing."

■

"You say,
'I have not such desire and longing for them.'

Now, headman, do you shape your course[3] by this Norm, when you have seen and known it, when you have reached it without loss of time, — plunged into it both in respect of the past and of the future, thus:

Whatsoever Ill arising
has come upon me in the past,
— all that is rooted in desire,[4]
is joined to desire.

Whatsoever Ill arising
may come upon me in future time,
— all that is rooted in desire,
is joined to desire.

Desire is the root of Ill."

■

'Wonderful, lord!
Strange it is, lord,
how well said is this saying of the Exalted One:

"Whatsoever Ill arising comes upon me,
— all that is rooted in desire.

Desire is indeed the root of Ill."

Now, lord, there is my boy,
— Ciravāsi is his name.

He lodges away from here.[5]

At the time of rising up, lord,
I send off a man, saying:

"Go, my man, inquire of Ciravāsi."

[234] Then, lord, till that man comes back again, I am in an anxious state,[6] fearing lest some sickness may have befallen Ciravāsi."

■

"Now what think you, headman?

Would sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair come upon you if your boy Ciravāsi were slain or imprisoned
or had loss
or blame?"

"Lord, if such were to befall my boy Ciravāsi, how should I not have sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair?"

"But, headman, you must regard it in this manner:

'Whatsoever Ill arising comes upon me,
— all that is rooted in desire,
is joined to desire.

Desire is indeed the root of Ill.'

■

Now what think you, headman?

When you did not see,
did not hear Ciravāsi's mother, did you feel desire

or longing
or affection for her?"

"No indeed, lord."

"But, headman, when you got sight of her, got hearing of her,
did you then have desire
or longing
or affection for her?"

"Yes, lord."

"Now what think you, headman?

Would sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair come upon you if Ciravāsi's mother were slain
or imprisoned
or had any loss or blame?"

"Why surely, lord, sorrow and grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair
would come upon me."

"So in this manner, headman, must you look upon it:

'Whatsoever Ill arising may come upon me,
— all that is rooted in desire,
is joined to desire.

Desire is indeed the root of Ill.'"

---

[1] The meaning of the name is obscure. Bhadraka (text Bhadragaka) means 'lucky.'

[2] Cf. Brethren, 10. 'The Mallas, a confederation of independent clans, located by the two great Chinese chroniclers on the mountain slopes eastward of the Buddha's own clan.' Text has Malaatā.

[3] Nayaṇñ nehi

[4] Chanda

[5] 'He was acquiring learing (at school). Comy. Pron. Chīra-.

[6] Aññathatta, generally in the meaning of 'otherness, change.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 12

Rāsiya Suttaṃ

Rāsiya

---

[234]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Mallas at Uruvelakappa, a township of the Mallas.

Then Rāsiya,[1] the headman, came to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Rāsiya, the headman,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard, lord, that Gotama the recluse censures all ascetic ways,
that he downright chides and abuses any ascetic who lives a rough life.[2]

Those who say thus, lord, - that [235] Gotama the recluse censures all ascetic ways,

that he downright chides and abuses
any ascetic who lives a rough life,
do they speak in conformity with the Exalted One's view, without misrepresenting the Exalted One
by stating what is wrong?

Do they speak in conformity with his teaching,
so that no one who is of the same view,
a follower of his view,
could give opportunity for censure?"

"They who speak thus, headman, saying that Gotama the recluse
censures all ascetic ways,
that he downright chides and abuses
any ascetic who lives a rough life, - such speak not in accordance with my view, such do misrepresent me in so saying what is wrong.

1.

These two extremes,[3] headman, should not be followed by one who has gone forth from the world:

Devotion to the pleasures of sense, - a low, pagan practice of the manyfolk, not Ariyan,
not bound up with welfare;

and devotion to self-mortification, which is painful,
not Ariyan,
not bound up with welfare.

Not following after these two extremes, headman, is the Middle Way of approach,
fully known by the Tathāgata,
which giveth vision,
giveth knowledge,
leading to calm,
to supernormal knowledge,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

And what,headman,
is that Middle Way of approach,
fully known by the Tathāgata,
which giveth vision,
giveth knowledge,
leading to calm,
to supernormal knowledge,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna?

It is this Ariyan Eightfold Path, to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,

right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

This, headman, is that Middle Way of approach,
fully known by the Tathāgata,
which giveth vision,
giveth knowledge,
leading to calm,
to supernormal knowledge,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

2.

There are found existing in the world, headman, these three who are given to sensual pleasures.[4]

What three?

(i)

[236] Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth unlawfully
and by violence.

Seeking wealth unlawfully
he gets no ease,
no pleasure for himself,
he shares it not with others,
he does no meritorious deeds.

(ii)

Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth unlawfully
and by violence.

Seeking wealth unlawfully,
he gets ease and pleasure for himself,
but shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds.

(iii)

Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth
and by violence.

Seeking wealth unlawfully,
he gets ease and pleasure for himself,
shares it with others
and does meritorious deeds.

(iv)

Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
by violence and without violence.

Seeking wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
he gets no ease,
no pleasure for himself:
he shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds.

(v)

Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
by violence and without violence.

Seeking wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
but shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds.

(vi)

Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
by violence and without violence.

Seeking wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
shares it with others
and does meritorious deeds.

(vii)

Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth by lawful means,
without violence.

Seeking wealth by lawful means,
he gets no ease,
gets no pleasure for himself,
shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds.

(viii)

Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth by lawful means,
without violence.

Seeking wealth by lawful means,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
but shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds.

[237]

(ix)

Herein, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth by lawful means,
without violence.

Seeking wealth by lawful means,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
shares it with others
and does meritorious deeds.

But he makes use of his wealth
with greed and longing,
he is guilty of offence,
heedless of danger,
blind to his own salvation.[5]

(x)

Herein again, headman, a certain one,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth by lawful means,
without violence.

Seeking wealth by lawful means,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
shares it with others
and does meritorious deeds.

But he makes use of his wealth
without greed and longing,
he is guiltless of offence,
he is heedful of danger and alive to his own salvation.

3.

(i)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth unlawfully
and by violence.

Seeking wealth unlawfully
he gets no ease,
no pleasure for himself,
he shares it not with others,
he does no meritorious deeds —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is blameworthy in three respects.

In what three?

He is blameworthy in the first instance because he seeks wealth by unlawful means and violence.

He gets no ease, gets no pleasure for himself, so he is to blame in the second instance.

He shares not with others and does no meritorious deeds, so he is blameworthy in the third instance.

This one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is blameworthy in these three respects.

(ii)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth unlawfully
and by violence.

Seeking wealth unlawfully,
he gets ease and pleasure for himself,
but shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is blameworthy in two respects,
praiseworthy in one respect.

In what two respects is he blameworthy?

Seeking wealth by [238] unlawful means
and by violence,
he is first to blame for that.

Secondly, in seeking wealth by unlawful means
and by violence,
he shares it not nor does meritorious deeds, that is the second respect.

And what is the one respect in which he is praiseworthy?

In getting ease
and pleasure for himself.

In this respect he is praiseworthy.

So this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is blameworthy in two respects,
praiseworthy in one.

(iii)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth
and by violence.

Seeking wealth unlawfully,
he gets ease and pleasure for himself,
shares it with others
and does meritorious deeds —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is blameworthy in one respect,
praiseworthy in two.

In what respect is he blameworthy?

In seeking wealth by unlawful means
and by violence,
he is blameworthy in this one respect.

And in what two respects is he praiseworthy?

In getting ease
and pleasure for himself.

That is the first.

In sharing with others and doing meritorious deeds.

That is the second respect
in which he is praiseworthy.

So this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is blameworthy in one respect,
praiseworthy in two.

(iv)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
by violence and without violence.

Seeking wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
he gets no ease,
no pleasure for himself:
he shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,

in one respect is praiseworthy, in three respects is blameworthy.

What is the one?

He seeks wealth lawfully,
without violence.

Thus in one respect he is praiseworthy.

In what three respects
is he blameworthy?

In seeking wealth unlawfully, with violence.

That is the first.

In getting neither ease
nor pleasure for himself.

That is the second.

In not sharing or doing meritorious deeds, - that is the third.

Thus in one respect he is praiseworthy, in three respects he is blameworthy.

[239]

(v)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
by violence and without violence.

Seeking wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
but shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
in two respects he is praiseworthy, in two he is blameworthy.

In which two is he praiseworthy?

By seeking wealth lawfully and without violence, -
that is the first respect.

By getting ease
and pleasure for himself, -
that is the second respect
in which he is praiseworthy.

And in what two respects
is he blameworthy?

In seeking it unlawfully and with violence, -
that is the first.

In not sharing
or doing meritorious deeds, -
that is the second respect
in which he is blameworthy.

So in these two respects
he is praiseworthy,

and in these two respects he is blameworthy.

(vi)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
by violence and without violence.

Seeking wealth both lawfully and unlawfully,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
shares it with others
and does meritorious deeds —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is praiseworthy in three respects,
and in one respect blameworthy.

In what three?

By seeking wealth lawfully,
without violence, -
that is the first.

By getting ease
and pleasure for himself, -
that is the second.

By sharing it
and doing meritorious deeds, - that is the third respect in which he is praiseworthy.

And in what one respect
is he blameworthy?

By seeking it unlawfully
and by violence.

That is the one respect.

(vii)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth by lawful means,
without violence.

Seeking wealth by lawful means,
he gets no ease,
gets no pleasure for himself,
shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is praiseworthy in one respect, blameworthy in two respects.

In what one respect
is he praiseworthy?

In seeking wealth lawfully,
without violence.

That is the one.

And what are the two?

In [240] getting neither ease
nor pleasure for himself, -
that is the first.

In not sharing
or doing meritorious deeds, -
that is the second respect
in which he is blameworthy.

So in this one respect
he is praiseworthy,
in these two blameworthy.

(viii)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth by lawful means,
without violence.

Seeking wealth by lawful means,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
but shares it not with others
and does no meritorious deeds —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is praiseworthy in two respects, blameworthy in one.

In what two?

In seeking wealth lawfully
and without violence, -
that is the first.

In getting both ease
and pleasure for himself, -
that is the second.

Then in what one respect
is he blameworthy?

In not sharing
and not doing meritorious deeds.

That is the one respect.

So in these two respects
he is praiseworthy,
in this one blameworthy.

(ix)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth by lawful means,
without violence.

Seeking wealth by lawful means,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure for himself,
shares it with others
and does meritorious deeds.

But he makes use of his wealth
with greed and longing,
he is guilty of offence,
heedless of danger,
blind to his own salvation —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,

is praiseworthy in three respects,
blameworthy in one.

In what three?

In seeking wealth lawfully
and without violence.

That is the first.

In getting both ease
and pleasure for himself.

That is the second.

In sharing it
and doing meritorious deeds.

That is the third.

And in what one respect is he blameworthy?

In using his wealth
with greed and longing,
in being guilty of offence,
heedless of danger
and blind to his own salvation.

That is the one respect
in which he is blameworthy.

So, headman, in these three respects
he is praiseworthy,
in this one respect he is blameworthy.

(x)

Now, headman, this one who,
given to sensual pleasures,
seeks wealth by lawful means,
without violence.

Seeking wealth by lawful means,
he gets ease,
gets pleasure [241] for himself,
shares it with others
and does meritorious deeds.

But he makes use of his wealth
without greed and longing,
he is guiltless of offence,
he is heedful of danger
and alive to his own salvation —

this one, headman,
given to sensual pleasures,
is praiseworthy in four respects.

In what four?

In seeking wealth lawfully,
without violence,
in getting both ease
and pleasure for himself,
in sharing it with others and doing meritorious deeds making use of his wealth without greed and longing, guiltless of offence,
heedful of danger
and in being alive to his own salvation.

So, headman,
this one who is given to sensual pleasures is praiseworthy in these four respects.

4.

(i)

Now there are these three sorts of ascetics who live a rougb life to be found existing in the world, headman.

What three?

Herein, headman, a certain ascetic,
living a rough life,
in faith goes forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer.

He thinks:

'Maybe I shall come to some profitable state.

Maybe I shall realize some superhuman experience,
some truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight.'

So he tortures himself,
goes to extremes in torturing himself.

But he wins thereby
no profitable state.

He realizes no superhuman experience, no truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight.

(ii)

Here again, headman, some ascetic,
living a rough life,
in faith goes forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer.

He thinks:

'Maybe I shall come to some profitable state.

Maybe I shall realize some superhuman experience,
some truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight.'

So he tortures himself,
goes to extremes in torturing himself,
and comes to some profitable state, but he realizes no superhuman experience,
no truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight.

(iii)

Here again, headman, some ascetic,
living a rough life,
in faith goes forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer.

He thinks:

'Maybe I shall come to some profitable state.

Maybe I shall realize some superhuman experience,
some truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight.'

So he tortures himself,
goes to extremes in torturing himself.

He both comes to some profitable state and realizes some superhuman experience, some truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight.

[242]

5.

(i)

Now herein, headman, this ascetic
who lives a rough life,
in faith having gone forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer,
tortures himself,
goes to extremes in torturing himself but comes to no profitable state nor realizes any superhuman experience, or truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight —
this ascetic so living is blameworthy in three respects.

In what three?

He tortures himself,
goes to extremes in torturing himself.

That is the first respect
in which he is blameworthy.

Then he comes to no profitable state.

That is the second.

Then he realizes no superhuman experience,
or truly Ariyan excellence

of knowledge and insight.

That is the third respect in which he is blameworthy.

So, headman, this ascetic
who lives a rough life,
in faith having gone forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer,
torturing himself,
going to extremes in torturing himself
is blameworthy in these three respects.

(ii)

Now herein, headman, this ascetic
who lives a rough life,
in faith having gone forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer,
tortures himself,
goes to extremes in torturing himself
does come to some profitable state, but does not realize any superhuman experience,
or truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight.

Thus he is blameworthy in two respects and is praiseworthy in one.

In what two?

He tortures himself,
goes to extremes in torturing himself.

That is the first respect
in which he is blameworthy.

He does not realize any superhuman experience,
or truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight.

That is the second respect in which he is blameworthy.

And in what one respect is he praiseworthy?

He comes to some profitable state.

That is the one respect in which he is praiseworthy.

So, headman, this ascetic
who lives a rough life,
in faith having gone forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer,
torturing himself,
going to extremes in torturing himself
is blameworthy in two respects, praiseworthy in one respect.

(iii)

Now herein, headman, this ascetic
who lives a rough life,
in faith having gone forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer,
tortures himself,
goes to extremes in torturing himself
who comes to some profitable state, who realizes some superhuman experience,
some truly Ariyan excellence
of knowledge and insight, -
this ascetic, headman, is blameworthy in one respect, praiseworthy in two respects.

In what one respect is he blameworthy?

In torturing himself, in going to extremes in torturing himself.

That is the one respect
in which he is blameworthy.

And in what two respects is he praiseworthy?

In coming to some profitable state.

That is the first.

And in realizing some superhuman experience,
some truly Ariyan [243] excellence
of knowledge and insight.

That is the second respect in whicb be is praiseworthy.

So, headman, this ascetic
who lives a rough life,
in faith having gone forth from the home-life
to the homeless as a Wanderer,
torturing himself,
going to extremes in torturing himself
is in this one respect blameworthy, in these two respects praiseworthy.

6.

There are these three things, headman, belonging to this life,
that are undecaying,
not subject to time,
inviting to come and see,
leading onward (to Nibbāna),

to be realized each for himself
by the wise.

What three?

(i)

Since the lustful man,
because of his lust,
directs thought to his own harm,
directs thought to the harm of others,
to the harm both of himself and of others,
but when lust is abandoned directs thought neither to his own harm
nor to that of others,
nor of both, -
thus these (results) belong to this life,
they are undecaying,
not subject to time,
inviting to come and see,
leading onward (to Nibbāna),
to be realized each for himself
by the wise.

(ii)

Since the depraved man, because of his depravity,
directs thought to his own harm,
directs thought to the harm of others,
to the harm both of himself and of others,
but when depravity is abandoned directs thought neither to his own harm
nor to that of others,
nor of both, -
thus these (results) belong to this life,

they are undecaying,
not subject to time,
inviting to come and see,
leading onward (to Nibbāna),
to be realized each for himself
by the wise.

(iii)

Since the deluded man,
because of his delusion,
directs thought to his own harm,
directs thought to the harm of others,
to the harm both of himself and of others,
but when delusion is abandoned directs thought neither to his own harm
nor to that of others,
nor of both, -
thus these (results) belong to this life,
they are undecaying,
not subject to time,
inviting to come and see,
leading onward (to Nibbāna),
to be realized each for himself
by the wise.

(ii)

These, headman, are the three things belonging to this life,
that are undecaying,
not subject to time,
inviting to come and see,
leading onward (to Nibbāna), to be realized eacb for himself by the wise."

■

[244] At these words Rāsiya, the headman
said to the Exalted One: -

"Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -
even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.|| ||

To the exalted One, lord,
I go for refuge,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,
from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

---

[1] "Heaper" was the name given him by the Elders who compiled the Texts.' Comy.

[2] Lūkha-jīviṇ For the ascetic see Intr. to Dialog. i.8, 206.

[3] Antā. Pāli Dict. 'standards of life.' Comy. koṭṭhāse For the first statment of these see The First Sermon; Vin. 1, 10 (Buddhist Suttas, Rhys Davids); and S v, 421.

[4] Kāmabhogin

[5] Gadhita-mucchita; ajjhāpanna; anādīnava-dassāvī; anissaraṇa-paññā, as at K.S. ii, 181, etc.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
42. Gāmani Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

42. Kindred Sayings about Headmen

Sutta 13

Pātali (or Manāpa) Suttaṃ

Pāṭali[1] (or Charming)

---

[244]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Koliyans[2] at Uttara,
a township of the Koliyans.

Then Pāṭaliya, the headman, came to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated Pāṭaliya, the headman,
said to the Exalted One: -

"I have heard it said, lord,

'Gotama the recluse knows magic.'[3]

Those who thus aver, lord, that Gotama the recluse knows magic, - do they speak in accordance with the Exalted One's view, without misrepresenting the Exalted One
by stating what is wrong?

Do they speak in conformity with his teaching,
so that no one who is of the same view,[4]
a follower of his view,
could give opportunity for censure?

We wish not to speak falsely of the Exalted One, lord."

■

"They who said thus, headman, that I know magic,
do speak in accordance with my view.

They do not misrepresent me
by stating what is wrong.

They do speak in conformity with my teaching, so that no one who is of the same view as I,
who is a follower of my view, could give opportunity for censure."

■

"So then it is true, my friend,[5] though I did not believe those recluses and brahmins when they said:

'Gotama the recluse knows magic.'

So after all,[6] my friend, Gotama the recluse is a trickster."

■

"Now, headman, does he who says that I know magic, - [245] does he in so saying thereby imply that I am a trickster,
saying,

'Such is the Exalted One, such is the Happy One'?

§

Now, headman, in this matter
I will question you.

Do you answer as you think fit.

1.

(i)

Now what think you, headman?

Do you know the hirelings of the Koliyans, who have drooping crests?"[7]

"Yes, lord, I do know them."

"Now what think you, headman?

For what purpose
are these hirelings of the Koliyans,
who have drooping crests?"

"To check robbers, lord,
among the Koliyans
and to carry messages for the Koliyans.

That, lord, is the reason for those hirelings of the Koliyans, who have drooping crests."

■

"Now what think you, headman?

As to those hirelings of the Koliyans, do you know them as honest or as rogues?"

"I know them, lord, as wicked rogues.

If there be any wicked rogues
among the Koliyans,
it is they."

■

"Now, headman, if anyone should say:

'Pāṭaliya, the headman, knows that the hirelings of the Koliyans,
who have drooping crests,
are wicked rogues.

Therefore Pataliya, the headman, is himself a wicked rogue,' - would he be speaking truth in so saying?"

"Surely not, lord.

The hirelings of the Koliyans are one thing, but I am quite another thing,
of quite another nature
from that of the Koliyans' hirelings
who have drooping crests,
of quite another nature!"

■

"So, headman, you will get[8] this said about you:

'Pāṭaliya, the headman, knows that the Koliyans' hirelings with drooping crests
are wicked rogues,
but Pāṭaliya, the headman, is not a wicked rogue.'

Why then does not the Tathāgata, get this [246] said of him:

'The Tathāgata, knows magic,
but the Tathāgata, is not a trickster'?

Magic I do know, headman, and the fruit of magic,
and, how practising,

the trickster,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

(ii)

The taking of life, headman,
do I know
and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who takes life,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

The taking of what is not given, headman,
do I know
and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who takes what is not given,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

Wrong practice in respect of sensual passion, headman,
do I know

and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who has wrong practice in respect of sensual passion,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

The telling of falsehood, headman,
do I know
and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who tells falsehoods,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

Backbiting, headman,
do I know
and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who backbits,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

Bitter speech, headman,
do I know

and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who is of bitter speech,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

Idle babble, headman,
do I know
and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who is an idle babbler,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

Covetousness, headman,
do I know
and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who is covetous,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

Hatred and ill-will, headman,
do I know

and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who hates and bears ill-will,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

Perverted view, headman,
do I know
and the fruits thereof,
and, how practising,
one who perverted view,
when body breaks up,
after death is reborn in the Woeful State,
the Evil Lot,
the Downfall,
in Purgatory, -
that also do I know.

1.

There are, headman, certain recluses and brahmins who teach this,
who have this view:

'Whosoever takes the life of a being -
all such in this very life
suffer sorrow and grief.

Whosoever takes what is not given -
all such in this very life
suffer sorrow and grief.

Whosoever acts wrongly in respect of sensual passion -
all such in this very life
suffer sorrow and grief.

Whosoever tells lies, -
all such in this very life
suffer sorrow and grief.'

(i)

Yet, headman, we see here a certain one,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth.

About him men ask:

'Good fellow, what has this man done,
that,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth?'

And of him they reply:

'Why, my good [247] fellow, this man crushed the rajah's foe and took his life.

Delighted with that the rajah bestowed a gift on him.

That is why that man,
that,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth.'

(ii)

Again, headman, we see here a certain one[9]
with his arms strongly bound behind him
with a stout rope,
with shaven crown,
paraded round to the beat of a harsh-sounding drum,
from street to street,
from crossroads to crossroads,
then led forth by the southern gate,
and to the south of the town
beheaded.

About such an one they ask:

'Good fellow,
what has this man done that he has his arms strongly bound behind him
with a stout rope,
with shaven crown,
paraded round to the beat of a harsh-sounding drum,
from street to street,
from crossroads to crossroads,

then led forth by the southern gate,
and to the south of the town
beheaded?'

And of him they reply:

'Why, my good fellow,
this man was the rajah's foe.

He killed a woman or a man.

So the royal police have caught him and treat him thus.'

Now, how say you, headman?

Have you ever seen or heard of such an one?"

"I have both seen and heard, lord,
of such an one,
and shall again."

"Now, headman, those recluses and brahmins
who thus teach,
who hold this view:

'Whosoever takes the life of a being -
all such in this very life
suffer sorrow and grief;' -

did they speak truth or falsehood?"

"Falsehood, lord."

"Now are those who tell baseless lies good men or bad?"

"Bad, lord."

"Now bad men,
evil-doers, -
do they live wrongly
or rightly?"

"Wrongly, lord."

"And those who live wrongly, - have they wrong views
or right views?"

"Wrong views, lord."

"Now is it proper to put faith in those who hold wrong views?"

"Surely not, lord."

(iii)

[248] "Now, headman, we see here a certain one,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth.

About him men ask:

'Good fellow, what has this man done, that,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,

fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth?'

Then they reply:

'Why, my good fellow, this man,
by crushing the rajah's foe, won a treasure.

The rajah, pleased thereat, gave him a gift.

So this man goes about
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth.'

(iv)

Again, headman, we see here a certain one,
with his arms strongly bound behind him
with a stout rope,
with shaven crown,
paraded round to the beat of a harsh-sounding drum,
from street to street,
from crossroads to crossroads,
then led forth by the southern gate,
and to the south of the town
beheaded.

Then they ask about him:

'Good fellow, what has this man done that,
with his arms strongly bound behind him
with a stout rope,
with shaven crown,
paraded round to the beat of a harsh-sounding drum,
from street to street,
from crossroads to crossroads,
then led forth by the southern gate,
and to the south of the town
beheaded?"

Then they reply:

'This man, my good fellow,
either in village
or in forest
took something with thievish intent.[10]

So the royal police caught him
and treat him thus.'

Now, how say you, headman?

Have you ever seen or heard of such an one?"

"I have both seen and heard, lord,
of such an one,
and shall again."

"Now, headman, those recluses and brahmins
who thus teach,
who hold this view:

Whosoever takes what is not given -
all such in this very life
suffer sorrow and grief;

did they speak truth or falsehood?"

"Falsehood, lord."

"Now are those who tell baseless lies
good men or bad?"

"Bad, lord."

"Now bad men,
evil-doers, -
do they live wrongly
or rightly?"

"Wrongly, lord."

"And those who live wrongly, -
have they wrong views
or right views?"

"Wrong views, lord."

"Now is it proper to put faith
in those who hold wrong views?"

"Surely not, lord."

(v)

"Now, headman, we see here a certain one,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth.

About him men ask:

'Good fellow, what has this man done, that,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth?'

Then they reply:

'Why, my good fellow, this man,
was guilty of [249] intercourse with the wives of the rajah's foe, and the rajah, pleased thereat,
gave him a gift.

So this man goes about
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth.'

(vi)

Again, headman, we see here a certain one,
with his arms strongly bound behind him
with a stout rope,
with shaven crown,
paraded round to the beat of a harsh-sounding drum,
from street to street,
from crossroads to crossroads,

then led forth by the southern gate,
and to the south of the town
beheaded.

Then they ask about him:

'Good fellow, what has this man done that,
with his arms strongly bound behind him
with a stout rope,
with shaven crown,
paraded round to the beat of a harsh-sounding drum,
from street to street,
from crossroads to crossroads,
then led forth by the southern gate,
and to the south of the town
beheaded?'

Then they reply:

'This man, my good fellow,
was guilty of intercourse with women and girls of the clan.

So the royal police caught him
and treat him thus.'

Now, how say you, headman?

Have you ever seen or heard of such an one?"

"I have both seen and heard, lord,
of such an one,
and shall again."

"Now, headman, those recluses and brahmins
who thus teach,
who hold this view:

Whosoever acts wrongly in respect of sensual passion -
all such in this very life
suffer sorrow and grief;

did they speak truth or falsehood?"

"Falsehood, lord."

"Now are those who tell baseless lies
good men or bad?"

"Bad, lord."

"Now bad men,
evil-doers, -
do they live wrongly
or rightly?"

"Wrongly, lord."

"And those who live wrongly, -
have they wrong views
or right views?"

"Wrong views, lord."

"Now is it proper to put faith
in those who hold wrong views?"

"Surely not, lord."

(vii)

"Now, headman, we see here a certain one,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,

with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth.

About him men ask:

'Good fellow, what has this man done, that,
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth?'

Then they reply:

'Why, my good fellow, this man, delighted the rajah with falsehood, and pleased thereat
the rajah gave him a gift.

So this man goes about
garlanded,
be-ringed,
well groomed,
well perfumed,
with hair and beard trimmed,
fostering lust for womenfolk,
like a rajah, forsooth.'

(viii)

Again, headman, we see here a certain one,
with his arms strongly bound behind him
with a stout rope,
with shaven crown,

paraded round to the beat of a harsh-sounding drum,
from street to street,
from crossroads to crossroads,
then led forth by the southern gate,
and to the south of the town
beheaded.

Then they ask about him:

'Good fellow, what has this man done that,
with his arms strongly bound behind him
with a stout rope,
with shaven crown,
paraded round to the beat of a harsh-sounding drum,
from street to street,
from crossroads to crossroads,
then led forth by the southern gate,
and to the south of the town
beheaded?"

Then they reply:

'This man, my good fellow,
by falsehood
spoiled the fortunes[11] of some housefather or housefather's son.

So the royal police caught him
and treat him thus.'

[250] Now, how say you, headman?

Have you ever seen or heard of such an one?"

"I have both seen and heard, lord,
of such an one,
and shall again."

"Now, headman, those recluses and brahmins
who thus teach,
who hold this view:

Whosoever tells lies, -
all such in this very life
suffer sorrow and grief.'

did they speak truth or falsehood?"

"Falsehood, lord."

"Now are those who tell baseless lies
good men or bad?"

"Bad, lord."

"Now bad men,
evil-doers, -
do they live wrongly
or rightly?"

"Wrongly, lord."

"And those who live wrongly, -
have they wrong views
or right views?"

"Wrong views, lord."

"Now is it proper to put faith
in those who hold wrong views?"

"Surely not, lord."

3.

"Wonderful, lord!

Strange it is, lord!

Now, lord, I have a rest-house.

Therein are beds and seats, a waterpot
and a lamp.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins come to reside there, to the best of my power and as well as I can
I share it with them.

Now on a former occasion, lord, four teachers
holding different views, following different systems, came to reside in that rest-house.

(i)

One teacher taught thus,[12]
held this view:

'There is no almsgiving,
no sacrifice,
no offering.

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds.

This world is not,
the world beyond is not.

There is no mother or father, no beings of spontaneous birth.[13]

In the world
are no recluses and brahmins
who have [251] won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
by supernormal power
have realized both this world
and the world beyond,
and proclaim it.'

(ii)

One teacher taught thus, had this view:

'There is almsgiving,
sacrifice,
offering.

There is fruit,
there is result of good and evil deeds.

This world is,
the world beyond is.

There is mother and father,
there are beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world
are recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
have realized by supernormal power
both this world

and the world beyond,
and proclaim it.'

(iii)

One teacher taught thus,[14] had this view:

'For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,
who binds[15]
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,[16]
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,[17]
one heap öf flesh,
no evil results from that,
there is no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit, no coming by any merit.'

[252]

(iv)

One teacher taught thus, had this view:

'For him who acts or makes others act
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,

breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
evil is done.

If with a razor-edged
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
evil results from that,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
therefrom results evil,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
therefrom results merit,
there is coming by merit.'

At this, lord, I had doubt and wavering, and I thought;

'I wonder which of these recluses and brahmins is speaking truth,
which is speaking falsehood?'"

"You might well doubt, headman.

You might well waver.

But it was on a doubtful point that wavering arose in you."

"But I have such faith in the Exalted One, lord:

'The Exalted One
can teach me a teaching herein so that I may abandon my doubt.'"

4.

"There is, headman, a peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.[18]

If you could win mental calm thereby, you would thus abandon your state of doubt.

And what, headman, is that peace of mind
that comes by righteousness?

(i)

Herein, headman, the Ariyan disciple, abandoning the taking of life,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning the taking of what is not given,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning wrong practice in respect of sensual passion,
abstaining therefrom:

abandoning falsehood,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning backbiting,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning bitter speech and idle babble,
abstaining therefrom.

Abandoning covetousness,
he is no more covetous.

Abandoning malevolence and hatred,
his heart becomes freed from ill-will.

Abandoning wrong view,
he becomes one of right view.

This Ariyan disciple, headman,
thus freed from covetousness,[19]
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self- [253] possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by kindliness[ed1],
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing with heart possessed of kindliness
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,

free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"There is no almsgiving,
no sacrifice,
no offering;

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds;

This world is not,
the world beyond is not;

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth;

In the world
are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
by supernormal power
have realized both this world
and the world beyond,
and proclaim it" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,[20]
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,[21]
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

(ii)

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by kindliness,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,

likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart [254] possessed of kindliness
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"There is almsgiving,
sacrifice,
offering.

There is fruit,
there is result of good and evil deeds.

This world is,
the world beyond is.

There is mother and father,
there are beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world
are recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,

who of themselves
have realized by supernormal power
both this world
and the world beyond,
and proclaim it" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

(iii)

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by kindliness,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of kindliness
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,

who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
no evil results from that,
there is no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,

making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

[255]

(iv)

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by kindliness,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of kindliness
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"For him who acts or makes others act
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates

or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
evil is done.

If with a razor-edged
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
evil results from that,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
therefrom results evil,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
therefrom results merit,
there is coming by merit" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

§

5.

(i)

Herein, headman, the Ariyan disciple,
abandoning the taking of life,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning the taking of what is not given,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning wrong practice in respect of sensual passion,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning falsehood,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning backbiting,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning bitter speech and idle babble,
abstaining therefrom.

Abandoning covetousness,
he is no more covetous.

Abandoning malevolence and hatred,
his heart becomes freed from ill-will.

Abandoning wrong view,
he becomes one of right view.

This Ariyan disciple, headman,
thus freed from covetousness,
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by compassion,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing with heart possessed of compassion
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"There is no almsgiving,
no sacrifice,
no offering;

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds;

This world is not,
the world beyond is not;

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth;

In the world
are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
by supernormal power
have realized both this world
and the world beyond,
and proclaim it" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by compassion,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of compassion
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"There is almsgiving,
sacrifice,
offering.

There is fruit,
there is result of good and evil deeds.

This world is,
the world beyond is.

There is mother and father,
there are beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world
are recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
have realized by supernormal power
both this world
and the world beyond,
and proclaim it" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by compassion,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing

with heart possessed of compassion
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
no evil results from that,
there is no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by compassion,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing

with heart possessed of compassion
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"For him who acts or makes others act
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
evil is done.

If with a razor-edged
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
evil results from that,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
therefrom results evil,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
therefrom results merit,
there is coming by merit" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

5.

(ii)

Herein, headman, the Ariyan disciple,
abandoning the taking of life,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning the taking of what is not given,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning wrong practice in respect of sensual passion,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning falsehood,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning backbiting,
abstaining therefrom:

abandoning bitter speech and idle babble,
abstaining therefrom.

Abandoning covetousness,
he is no more covetous.

Abandoning malevolence and hatred,
his heart becomes freed from ill-will.

Abandoning wrong view,
he becomes one of right view.

This Ariyan disciple, headman,
thus freed from covetousness,
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by sympathy,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing with heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"There is no almsgiving,
no sacrifice,
no offering;

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds;

This world is not,
the world beyond is not;

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth;

In the world
are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
by supernormal power
have realized both this world
and the world beyond,
and proclaim it" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death

I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by sympathy,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,

everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"There is almsgiving,
sacrifice,
offering.

There is fruit,
there is result of good and evil deeds.

This world is,
the world beyond is.

There is mother and father,
there are beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world
are recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
have realized by supernormal power
both this world
and the world beyond,
and proclaim it" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by sympathy,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,

who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
no evil results from that,
there is no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by sympathy,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"For him who acts or makes others act
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,

who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
evil is done.

If with a razor-edged
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
evil results from that,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
therefrom results evil,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
therefrom results merit,
there is coming by merit" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

5.

(iii)

Herein, headman, the Ariyan disciple,
abandoning the taking of life,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning the taking of what is not given,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning wrong practice in respect of sensual passion,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning falsehood,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning backbiting,
abstaining therefrom:
abandoning bitter speech and idle babble,
abstaining therefrom.

Abandoning covetousness,
he is no more covetous.

Abandoning malevolence and hatred,
his heart becomes freed from ill-will.

Abandoning wrong view,
he becomes one of right view.

This Ariyan disciple, headman,
thus freed from covetousness,
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by equanimity,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,

across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing with heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"There is no almsgiving,
no sacrifice,
no offering;

There is no fruit,
no result of good or evil deeds;

This world is not,
the world beyond is not;

There is no mother or father,
no beings of spontaneous birth;

In the world
are no recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
by supernormal power
have realized both this world

and the world beyond,
and proclaim it" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by equanimity,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"There is almsgiving,
sacrifice,
offering.

There is fruit,
there is result of good and evil deeds.

This world is,
the world beyond is.

There is mother and father,
there are beings of spontaneous birth.

In the world
are recluses and brahmins
who have won the summit,
who have won perfection,
who of themselves
have realized by supernormal power
both this world
and the world beyond,
and proclaim it" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by equanimity,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"For him who acts
or makes others act:
for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
no evil is done.

Even though with a razor-edged tool
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
no evil results from that,
there is no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -

yet therefrom results no evil,
no coming by any evil.

Though he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
yet therefrom results no merit,
no coming by any merit" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt.

■

Now that Ariyan disciple, headman, thus freed from covetousness
freed from malevolence,
not bewildered
but self-possessed and concentrated,
with a heart possessed by equanimity,
abides suffusing one quarter of the world,
likewise the second,
third and fourth quarters,
likewise above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
the whole world does he abide suffusing
with heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespreading,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and peaceful.

He ponders thus:

'This teacher who teaches thus,
who holds this view:

"For him who acts or makes others act
or makes others act:

for him who mutilates
or makes others mutilate,
who torments
or makes others torment,
who causes grief of himself
or through others,
who enfeebles
or causes others to enfeeble,
who binds
or makes others bind,
who causes life to be taken,
who causes thieving,
breaks into houses,
carries off plunder,
plays the burglar,
lurks in ambush,
who visits another's wife,
who tells lies, -
by one so acting
evil is done.

If with a razor-edged
he should make all beings on earth
one mash of flesh,
one heap öf flesh,
evil results from that,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the right bank of the Ganges
slaying and striking,
mutilating and causing mutilation,
tormenting and causing torment, -
therefrom results evil,
there is coming by evil.

If he should go along
the left bank of the Ganges,
making burnt offerings
and causing them to be made,
sacrificing and causing sacrifice, -
therefrom results merit,
there is coming by merit" -

even if the word of that worthy teacher be true,
yet have I a ground of surety,
for I oppress naught,
or weak or strong.

Herein doubly
I have made the lucky cast,
for I am restrained in body, speech and mind:
and, when body breaks up,
after death
I shall arise in the Happy Lot,
the Heaven World.'

At this thought
gladness springs up in him.

Thus glad,
in him arises joy,
and as he thus rejoices
his body is calmed.

So with body calmed
he feels happiness.

In the happy one
the heart is at peace.

This, headman, is the peace of mind
that comes by righteousness.

Thereby
if you could win the mental calm,
you would abandon this state of doubt."

§

At these words Pāṭaliya, the headman
said to the Exalted One: -

Excellent, lord!

Excellent it is, lord!

Just as if one should raise what is overthrown,
or show forth what is hidden,
or point out the way
to him that wanders astray,
or hold up a light in the darkness
so that they who have eyes may behold objects, -
even so in divers ways
hath the Norm been set forth by the Exalted One.|| ||

To the exalted One, lord, I go for refuge,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

May the Exalted One accept me
as a lay disciple,
as one who hath gone to him for refuge,
from this day forth
so long as life doth last."

---

[1] The word means 'trumpet blower.' Pāṭali-gāma was the ancient name of modern Patna. See Ud.A. 407.

[2] The clan next to the Sakyans.

[3] Māyā, the conjuror's art.

[4] Saha-dhammiko; or is it 'reasonable,' as at text, p. 299?

[5] The man lapses at once into the familiar 'bho,' a less respectful term. He began by saying 'bhante.' Considering, however, that in the sentences below he says bhante again, it is possible that we should read kho here.

[6] Khalu, the emphatic particle; or 'indeed.'

[7] Lamba-cūḷaha bhāṭa. Cf. Buddhist India (Rhys Davids), p. 21: 'The Koliyan central authorities were served by a special body of peons, or police, distinguished, as by a kind of uniform, from which they took their name, by a special head-dress. These particular men had a bad reputation for extortion, and violence.'

[8] Lacchasi (labhissasi). Gk. τεν΄ξεις

[9] Cf. K.S. ii, 91.

[10] Theyya-saṅkhātaṇ ādiyi. Adverb, 'with what is reckoned theft.' Latin furtim.

[11] Atthaṇ bhañji, 'destroyed the good.'

[12] Cf. K.S. iii, 205 [sic 166, SN iii text 205]. The annihilationist view of Ajita, of the hair-garment. Cf. D. 1, 55, etc. (Dialog. i, 69).

[13] Opapātika (upapatti), 'a happener,' they just become in the heaven world - i.e., there was no knowledge of the other body among Buddhists.

[14] The heresy of Pūrana Kassapa (D. i, 55, ete.) He was one of the 'unclothed.'

[15] Bhandato, for text's phandato, aa suggested at K.S. iii, 205, and read there by C.

[16] Ekāgārikaṇ karoto, a rather curious phrase. DA. has ekaṇ eva agāraṇ parivāretvā, 'surrounding a single house'

[17] Maṇsa-khalaṇ.

[18] Dhamma-samādhi, 'by the ten good ways.' Comy.

[19] Supra, xlii, § 8.

[20] Text has apaṇṇakatāya, mayhaṇ (? mihi pro certo est). The passage in MSS. is garbled. Comy. reads apaṇṇaka-thānaṇ, which I follow in my translation. Comy. takes it as anaparadhatāya evaṇ vaitati. The word apaṇṇaka (of doubtful origin) is a synonym for Nibbāna, the sure, the absolute. A sutta at A. i, 113 (cf. V.M. 392) is so called, where Comy. ad loc. says it = aviruddha (unhindered). The way to Nibbāna by the Paths is called apaṇṇaka-paṭipadā.

[21] Kaṭaggaha (kaṭa - kala, good); 'thrower of tho lucky die' = jayaggaha. Comy. Cf. Jāt. iv, 322.

[ed1] Woodward has here 'compassion'. In SN 4.42.8 he has 'kindliness.' The word used should be consistent with the second occurance below. He uses 'compassion' for karuna.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded[1]

1. Part 1

Sutta 1

Kāya-Gatā-Sati Suttaṃ

Body

---

[256]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Mindfulness relating to body.[2]

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.[3]

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.[4]

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Asañkhata-saṇyutta.

[2] Kāyagatā sati.

[3] Cf. supra. § [xxxv] 145.

[4] Comy. - 'i.e. now in the time of your youth and health, with the opportunities now open to you. In old age, in the hour of death, when the Teacher has passed away, you may regret your lost opportunities.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 2

Samatha-Vipassanā Suttaṃ

Calm

---

[256]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

[257] And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Calm and insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 3

Sa-Vitakka-Sa-Vicāra Suttaṃ

Directed Thought[1]

---

[257]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Concentration
accompanied by thought directed and sustained:
concentration
without directed,
but just with sustained, thought:
concentration that is without thought either directed or sustained.[2]

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Vitakka.

[2] For this threefold classification of samādhi see Buddh. Psych. Eth., § 166 (b), n.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 4

Suññata-Samādhi Suttaṃ

Void

---

[257]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Concentration that is void, signless
and aimless.[1]

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Supra, xli, § 6. [sic §7]

Of Related Interest:

MN 121
MN 122

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 5

Sati-Paṭṭhāna Suttaṃ

Stations of Mindfulness[1]

---

[257]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

The four stations of mindfulness.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Sati-paṭṭhānā, of body, feelings, mind, and phenomena. Cf. K.S. iii, 81, for these 37 items (v-xi summed), called bodhipakkhiyā dhammā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 6

Samma-p-Padhāna Suttaṃ

Right Efforts

---

[257]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

The four best efforts.[1]

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] See next chapter. SN 4.43.12.xiii-xvi

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 7

Iddhi-Pāda Suttaṃ

Bases of Effective Power[1]

---

[257]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

The four bases of effective power.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Iddhipādā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 8

Indriya Suttaṃ

Controlling Power

---

[258]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

The five controlling powers.[1]

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Saddhā, viriya, sati, samādhi, paññā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 9

Bala Suttaṃ

Strength

---

[258]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

The five strengths.[1]

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Same as (viii). Saddhā, viriya, sati, samādhi, paññā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 10

Bojjh'Aṇga Suttaṃ

Limbs of Wisdom

---

[258]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

The seven limbs of wisdom.[1]

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Sati, Dhamma-vicaya, viriya, pīti, passaddhi, samādhi, upekkhā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
1. Paṭhama Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

1. Part 1

Sutta 11

Maggena Suttaṃ

By the Path

---

[258]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

The Ariyan Eightfold Path.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown[1] you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you.

---

[1] Text has vedayitaṇ, prob. a misprint for desitaṇ, occurring in other passages.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 12

Asaṇkhata Suttaṃ

The Uncompounded

---

[258]

§ I

Calm

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[259]

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ III

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.[ed1]

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power[1]
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort, compounded with investigation.[2]

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'Indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

[260]

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,

founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

---

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the Uncompounded
and the path that goes to the Uncompounded.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the Uncompounded?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the Uncompounded.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the Uncompounded?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness [261] of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the Uncompounded.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the Uncompounded.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the Uncompounded.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Cf. Dialog. ii, 110 n.

[2] Ib., 246-7.

---

ed1 Woodward has here "without thought directed and sustained, but with thought sustained only".

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 13

Anta Suttaṃ

The End

---

[261]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the end
and the path that goes to the end.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the end?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the end.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the end?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the end.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the end.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the end.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 14

Anāsava Suttaṃ

Without Āsavas

---

[261]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas[1]
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, what is free from the āsavas
and the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is what is free from the āsavas?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called what is free from the āsavas.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to what is free from the āsavas?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to what is free from the āsavas.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you what is free from the āsavas.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to what is free from the āsavas.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] 'The four.' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 15

Sacca Suttaṃ

Truth

---

[261]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth[1]
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the truth
and the path that goes to the truth.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the truth?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the truth.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the truth?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the truth.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the truth.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the truth.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] 'The transcendental,' lokuttara. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 16

Pāra Suttaṃ

The Further Shore

---

[261]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore[1]
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the further shore
and the path that goes to the further shore.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the further shore?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the further shore.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the further shore?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the further shore.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the further shore.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the further shore.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Pāraṇ, 'beyond the round (of rebirth).' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 17

Nipuṇa Suttaṃ

The Subtle

---

[261]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the subtle
and the path that goes to the subtle.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the subtle?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the subtle.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the subtle?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the subtle.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the subtle.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the subtle.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 18

Sududdasa Suttaṃ

The Hard to See

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the hard to see
and the path that goes to the hard to see.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the hard to see?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the hard to see.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the hard to see?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the hard to see.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the hard to see.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the hard to see.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 19

Ajajjara Suttaṃ

The Unfading

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading[1]
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the unfading
and the path that goes to the unfading.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the unfading?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the unfading.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the unfading?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the unfading.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the unfading.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the unfading.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Ajajjara. Vism. 294, quoting, has ajara, 'ageless.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 20

Dhuva Suttaṃ

The Stable

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stable
and the path that goes to the stable.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stable?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stable.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stable?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stable.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stable.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stable.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 21

Apalokita Suttaṃ

The Undecaying

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying[1]
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the undecaying
and the path that goes to the undecaying.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the undecaying?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the undecaying.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the undecaying?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the undecaying.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the undecaying.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the undecaying.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Text has apalokita '('asked permission') with v.l. apalokinaṇ, which, I follow with Comy., who derives it from √luj (the usual derivation of loka).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 22

Anidassana Suttaṃ

The Invisible

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the invisible
and the path that goes to the invisible.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the invisible?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the invisible.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the invisible?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the invisible.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the invisible.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the invisible.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Of Related Interest:

Viññāṇa Anidassana
Is Nibbāna Conditioned?

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 23

Nippapa Suttaṃ

The Taintless

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless[1]
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the taintless
and the path that goes to the taintless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the taintless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the taintless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the taintless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the taintless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the taintless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the taintless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Reading with Comy. nippapañcaṇ (the 'taints' are taṇhā, māna, diṭṭhi) for text's nippāpaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 24

Santa Suttaṃ

The Peace

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the peace
and the path that goes to the peace.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the peace?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the peace.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the peace?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the peace.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the peace.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the peace.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 25

Amata Suttaṃ

The Deathless

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the deathless
and the path that goes to the deathless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the deathless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the deathless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the deathless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the deathless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the deathless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the deathless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 26

Paṇīta Suttaṃ

The Excellent

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the excellent
and the path that goes to the excellent.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the excellent?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the excellent.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the excellent?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the excellent.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the excellent.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the excellent.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 27

Siva Suttaṃ

The Blissful

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful[1]
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the blissful
and the path that goes to the blissful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the blissful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the blissful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the blissful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the blissful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the blissful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the blissful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Sivaṇ, the Vedic Shiva. Comy. dassit'atthena (?). At Sn.A. 173, 411 Comy. gives the word as a synonym of khema (which follows here). At S. i. 181 Comy. takes it as equivalent to Settha.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 28

Khema Suttaṃ

The Security

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the security
and the path that goes to the security.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the security?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the security.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the security?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the security.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the security.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the security.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 29

Taṇhakkhaya Suttaṃ

Destruction of Craving

---

[262]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

