"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the destruction of craving
and the path that goes to the destruction of craving.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the destruction of craving?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the destruction of craving.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the destruction of craving?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the destruction of craving.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the destruction of craving.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the destruction of craving.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 30

Acchariya Suttaṃ

The Wonderful

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the wonderful
and the path that goes to the wonderful.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the wonderful?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the wonderful.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the wonderful?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the wonderful.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the wonderful.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the wonderful.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 31

Abbhuta Suttaṃ

The Marvelous

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the marvelous
and the path that goes to the marvelous.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the marvelous?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the marvelous.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the marvelous?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the marvelous.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the marvelous.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the marvelous.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 32

Anītika Suttaṃ

The Free from Ill[1]

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the free from ill
and the path that goes to the free from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the free from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the free from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the free from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the free from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the free from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the free from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Anītika, 'free from dukkha' Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 33

Anītika-Dhamma Suttaṃ

The State of Freedom from Ill

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the state of freedom from ill
and the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the state of freedom from ill?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the state of freedom from ill.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the state of freedom from ill?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the state of freedom from ill.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the state of freedom from ill.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the state of freedom from ill.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 34

Nibbāna Suttaṃ

Nibbāna[1]

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, Nibbāna
and the path that goes to Nibbāna.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is Nibbāna?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called Nibbāna.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to Nibbāna?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to Nibbāna.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you Nibbāna.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to Nibbāna.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Here and at S. i. 136; VibhA. 314, Comy. derives from ni-vānaṇ (= ni-taṇhā).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 35

Avyāpajjha Suttaṃ

The Harmless

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the harmless
and the path that goes to the harmless.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the harmless?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the harmless.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the harmless?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the harmless.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the harmless.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the harmless.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 36

Virāga Suttaṃ

Dispassion

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, dispassion
and the path that goes to dispassion.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is dispassion?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called dispassion.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to dispassion?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on dispassion,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to dispassion.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you dispassion.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to dispassion.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 37

Suddhi Suttaṃ

Purity

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, purity
and the path that goes to purity.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is purity?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called purity.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to purity?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on purity,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to purity.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you purity.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to purity.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 38

Mutti Suttaṃ

Release[1]

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, release
and the path that goes to release.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is release?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called release.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to release?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on release,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to release.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you release.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to release.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] Text misprints mattiñ ca for muttiñ ca.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 39

Anālaya Suttaṃ

Non-attachment

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, non-attachment
and the path that goes to non-attachment.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is non-attachment?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called non-attachment.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to non-attachment?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on non-attachment,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to non-attachment.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you non-attachment.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to non-attachment.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 40

Dīpa Suttaṃ

The Island[1]

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the island
and the path that goes to the island.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the island?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the island.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the island?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the island,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the island.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the island.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the island.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

---

[1] For these titles cf. xlii, §7. [But ?]

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 41

Lena Suttaṃ

The Cave of Shelter

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the cave of shelter
and the path that goes to the cave of shelter.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the cave of shelter?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the cave of shelter.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the cave of shelter?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the cave of shelter,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the cave of shelter.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the cave of shelter.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the cave of shelter.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 42

Tāṇa Suttaṃ

The Stronghold

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the stronghold
and the path that goes to the stronghold.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the stronghold?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the stronghold.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the stronghold?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the stronghold,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the stronghold.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the stronghold.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the stronghold.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 43

Saraṇa Suttaṃ

The Refuge

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the refuge
and the path that goes to the refuge.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the refuge?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the refuge.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the refuge?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the refuge,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the refuge.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the refuge.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the refuge.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
43. Asaṇkhata Saṃyutta
2. Dutiya Vagga

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

43. Kindred Sayings about Uncompounded

2. Part 2

Sutta 44

Parāyaṇa Suttaṃ

The Goal

---

[263]

§ I

Mindfulness of Body

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the brethren, saying:

"Brethren."

"Lord," responded those brethren to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One thus spake:

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Mindfulness relating to body.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I taught ye the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ II

Calm

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Calm.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ III

Insight

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Insight.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cha-Samādhi

The Six-fold Concentration

---

§ IV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Concentration together with thought directed and sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ V

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Concentration without directed thought, but with thought sustained only.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Concentration without thought either directed or sustained.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Concentration that is empty.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ VIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Concentration that is signless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ IX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Concentration that is aimless.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Satipaṭṭhānā

The Four Stations of Mindfulness

---

§ X

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating body in body,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating feeling in feeling,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind in mind,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states,
ardent, self-possessed, mindful,
by restraining the coveting and dejection that are in the world.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Sammappadhānā

The Four Best Efforts

---

§ XIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states not yet arisen
shall not arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that evil, unprofitable states that have arisen
shall be abandoned.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVI

[16]["I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states not yet arisen
shall arise.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother originates desire
that good, profitable states that have arisen
shall be established,
shall not be confused,
shall be made better,
grow to increase,
be practised
and fulfilled.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Cattāro Iddhipādā

The Four Bases of Effective Power

---

§ XVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with desire.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with energy.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with idea.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the basis of effective power
which is attended by concentration and effort,
compounded with investigation.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañc'indriyāni

The Five Faculties

---

§ XXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the faculty of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Pañca-Balāni

The Five Powers

---

§ XXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of faith,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXIX

[29]["I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the power of wisdom,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Satta Sambojjhaṇgā

The Seven Factors of Wisdom

---

§ XXXII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,

the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
investigation of the Norm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is energy,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is zest,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is calm,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is
concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,

in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XXXVIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises the factor of wisdom which is disinterestedness,

which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Aṭṭhaṇgika Maggo

The Ariyan Eightfold Path

---

§ XXXIX

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right view,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XL

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right aim,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right speech,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right action,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIII

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right living,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,

feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLIV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right effort,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,

founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLV

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right mindfulness,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

§ XLVI

"I will teach you, Brethren, the goal
and the path that goes to the goal.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, Brethren, is the goal?

The destruction of lust, Brethren,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, -
that is called the goal.

And what, Brethren, is the path
that goes to the goal?

Herein, Brethren, a brother practises right concentration,
which is founded on singleness of heart,
founded on the goal,
founded on cessation,
whicb leads to giving up.

He strives,
puts forth energy,
exerts bis mind and strives.

That, Brethren, is called
'the path that goes to the goal.'

Thus, Brethren, have I shown you the goal.

Thus have I taught ye the way that goes to the goal.

Whatever should be done
by a teacher that seeks the welfare of his disciples,
in compassion,
feeling compassion,
that have I done for you.

Here, Brethren, are the roots of trees.

Here are empty places.

Do you meditate.

Be not remiss.

Be not remorseful hereafter.

This is our instruction to you."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed[1]

Sutta 1

Khemā Therī Suttaṃ

Sister Khemā the Elder[2]

---

[265]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Now on that occasion the sister Khemā, after going her rounds among the Kosalans, took up her quarters at Toraṇavatthu, between Sāvatthī and Sāketa.[3]

Now the rājah Pasenadi of Kosala was journeying from Sāketa to Sāvatthī, and midway between Sāketa and Sāvatthī he put up for one night at Toraṇavatthu.

Then the rājah Pasenadi of Kosala called a certain man and said:

"Come thou, good fellow!
Find out some recluse or brahmin such that I can wait upon[4] him to-day."

"Even so, your majesty," said that man in reply to the rājah Pasenadi of Kosala, and after wandering through all Toraṇavatthu he saw not anyone,
either recluse or brahmin,
on whom the rājah Pasenadi might wait.

Then that man saw the sister Khemā, who had come [266] to reside at Toraṇavatthu.

And on seeing her he went back to the rājah Pasenadi of Kosala, and said: —

"Your majesty, there is no recluse or brahmin in Toranavattthu such that your majesty can wait upon him.

But your majesty,
there is a sister named Khemā, a woman disciple of that Exalted One, who is Arahant,
an All-enlightened One.

Now of this lady a lovely rumor has gone abroad, that she is sage,
accomplished,
shrewd,
widely learned,

a brilliant talker,[5]
of goodly ready wit.

Let your majesty wait upon her."

So the rājah Pasenadi of Kosala went to visit the sister Khemā, and on coming to her saluted and sat down at one side.

So seated he said to her: —

"How say you, lady?

Does the Tathāgata exist after death?"[6]

"That the Tathāgata exists after death, maharājah, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

"How say you, lady?

So the Tathāgata does not exist after death."

"That also, maharājah,
is not revealed by the Exalted One."

"What then, lady?

Does the Tathāgata both exist and not exist after death?"

"That also, maharājah,
is not revealed by the Exalted One."

"Then, lady,
the Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death."

"That also, maharājah,
is not revealed by the Exalted one."

§

"How then, lady?

When asked, 'Does the Tathāgata exist after death?'
you reply,
'That is not revealed by the Exalted One.'

When asked, 'Does the Tathāgata not exist after death?'
you reply,
'That is not revealed by the Exalted One.'

When asked, 'Does the Tathāgata both exist and not exist after death?'
you reply,
'That is not revealed by the Exalted One.'

When asked, 'Does the Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death?'
you reply,
'That is not revealed by the Exalted One.'

Pray, lady, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Exalted One?"

"Now in this matter, maharājah,
I will question you.

Do you reply as you think fit.

Now how say you, maharājah?

[267] Have you some accountant, some ready-reckoner or calculator,[7]

able to count the sand in Ganges, thus:

'There are so many thousand grains, or so many hundreds of thousands of grains of sand?'"

"No indeed, lady."

"Then have you some accountant,
ready-reckoner or calculator,
able to reckon the water in the mighty ocean, thus:

'There are so many gallons[8] of water,
so many hundred,
so many thousand,
so many hundreds of thousand gallons of water?'"

"No indeed, lady."

"How is that?"

"Mighty is the ocean, lady,
deep,
boundless,
unfathomable."[9]

"Even so, maharājah,
if one should try to define the Tathāgata
by his bodily form,
that bodily form of the Tathāgata is abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as body, maharājah,
is the Tathāgata.

He is deep,
boundless,
unfathomable,
just like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.[10]

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply.

■

[268] If one should try to define the Tathāgata by feeling,
— that feeling of the Tathāgata is abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as feeling is the Tathāgata, maharājah,
deep,
boundless,
unfathomable
like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply.

■

If one should try to define the Tathāgata by perception,
— that perception of the Tathāgata is abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as perception is the Tathāgata, maharājah,
deep,
boundless,
unfathomable
like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply.

■

If one should try to define the Tathāgata by the activities (sankhara), — those activities of the Tathāgata are abandoned,

cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as the activities is the Tathāgata, maharājah, deep,
boundless,
unfathomable
like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply.

■

If one should try to define the Tathāgata by consciousness,
— that consciousness of the Tathāgata is abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as consciousness is the Tathāgata, maharājah,
deep,
boundless,
unfathomable
like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply."

Then the rājah Pasenadi of Kosala was delighted with the words of the sister Khemā, and took pleasure therein.

And he rose from his seat, saluted her by the right and went away.

§

Now on another occasion the rājah . . .
went to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him and sat down at one side.
So seated he said to the Exalted One: —

"Pray, lord, does the Tathāgata exist after death?"

"Not revealed by me, maharājah, is this matter."

"Then, lord, the Tathāgata does not exist after death."

"That also, maharājah,
is not revealed by me."

"Then, lord, does the Tathāgata both exist and not exist after death?"

"That also, maharājah,
is not revealed by me."

"Then, lord, does the Tathāgata neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"That also, maharājah,
is not revealed by me."

■

'How then, lord?

When asked, 'Does the Tathāgata exist after death?'
you reply,
'That is not revealed by me.'

When asked, 'Does the Tathāgata not exist after death?'
you reply,
'That is not revealed by me.'

When asked, 'Does the Tathāgata both exist and not exist after death?'
you reply,
'That is not revealed by me.'

When asked, 'Does the Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death?'
you reply,
'That is not revealed by me.'

■

Pray, lord, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Exalted One?'

'Now, maharājah, I will question you.

Do you reply as you think fit.

Have you some accountant,
some ready-reckoner or calculator,
able to count the sand in Ganges, thus:

'There are so many thousand grains,
or so many hundreds of thousands of grains of sand?'"

"No indeed, lord."

"Then have you some accountant,
ready-reckoner or calculator,
able to reckon the water in the mighty ocean, thus:

'There are so many gallons of water,
so many hundred,
so many thousand,
so many hundreds of thousand gallons of water?'"

"No indeed, lord."

"How is that?"

"Mighty is the ocean, lord,
deep,
boundless,
unfathomable."

■

"Even so, maharājah,
if one should try to define the Tathāgata
by his bodily form,
that bodily form of the Tathāgata is abandoned,

cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as body, maharājah,
is the Tathāgata.

He is deep,
boundless,
unfathomable,
just like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply.

■

If one should try to define the Tathāgata by feeling,
— that feeling of the Tathāgata is abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as feeling is the Tathāgata, maharājah,
deep,
boundless,

unfathomable
like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply.

■

If one should try to define the Tathāgata by perception,
— that perception of the Tathāgata is abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as perception is the Tathāgata, maharājah, deep,
boundless,
unfathomable
like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply.

■

If one should try to define the Tathāgata by the activities,
— those activities of the Tathāgata are abandoned,
cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as the activities is the Tathāgata, maharājah, deep,
boundless,
unfathomable
like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,'
does not apply.

■

If one should try to define the Tathāgata by consciousness,
— that consciousness of the Tathāgata is abandoned,

cut down at the root,
made like a palm-tree stump,
made something that is not,
made of a nature not to spring up again in future time.

Set free from reckoning as consciousness is the Tathāgata, maharājah, deep,
boundless,
unfathomable
like the mighty ocean.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata both exists and exists not after death,'
does not apply.

To say, 'The Tathāgata neither exists nor not-exists after death,' does not apply."

§

"Wonderful, lord!
Strange it is, lord,
how the explanation both of Master and disciple,
both in spirit and in letter,
will agree, will harmonize,
will not be inconsistent,[11]
— that is, in any word about the highest.[12]

On a certain occasion, lord,
I went to visit the sister Khemā, and asked her the meaning of this matter, and she gave me the meaning in the very words, in the very syllables used by [269] the Exalted One.

Wonderful, lord!
Strange it is, lord,
how the explanation both of Master and disciple
will agree, will harmonize,
in spirit and in letter,
how they will not be inconsistent,
— that is, in any word about the highest.

Well, lord, now we must be going.
We are busy folk.
We have many things to do."

"Do now what you think it time for, maharājah."

Thereupon the rājah Pasenadi of Kosala was delighted with the words of the Exalted One and welcomed them.

And he rose from his seat,
saluted the Exalted One by the right and went away.

---

[1] Avyākata.

[2] For the Sister Khemā see Psalms of the Sisters, p. 81 ff. As a slave-girl in the time of the Buddha Padumuttara, she renounced the world and aspired to be a disciple of a future Buddha, a wish that was fulfilled under the Buddhas Vipassi, Kakusandha, Koṇāgamana, Kassapa, and Gotama. In this last birth she was wife of the rājah Bimbisāra, and of great beauty. Pride in this was destroyed in her by the Master, who conjured up a vision of beauty decaying. She was convinced, entered the Order, and ultimately became Arahant. She was ranked first in insight by the Master (as mahāpaññā) in the list of 'great ones' at A. i, 25; AA. i. 342. Cf. K.S. ii, 160.

[3] Cf. Buddhist India, p. 40.

[4] Payirupāseyyaṇ, lit. 'sit beside as a teacher.'

[5] Citta-kathī.

[6] For this stock question see K.S. ii, 150; iii, 93 ff., 172.

[7] Gaṇaka, muddika, sankhāyaka. Expl. by Comy. (here and) on D. i, 51. He says of them: (a) A faultless reckoner. (b) One skilled in interpreting finger-signs (is this palmistry or counting on the fingers?). (c) A recokoner of groups of numbers. Rhys Davids trans. (b) 'conveyancer.' Is it 'a reader of symbolic gestures'? See in this connexion Bhikkhu Ñaṇtiloka's Die Fragen des Milindo (Leipzig), note to p. 289, which supports this view. See Udāna Comy., 205, on Ud. iii, 9, where these arts are reckoned among the sippāni, arts and sciences. As an example: 'On looking at a tree one could tell at a glance the number of leaves on it.'

[8] Āṭhaka, a measure. Four patthā = one āṭhaka: four āṭhakā = one doṇa (cauldron or trough).

[9] Gambhīra, '84,000 yojanas in depth.' Comy.

[10] Na upeti = 'na yujjati (haud idoneum).' Comy.

[11] The passage occurs at A. v, 320. Text and Comy. differ here. See Appendix for a discussion of the reading.

[12] Agga-padasmiṇ. AA. on A. v. 320, '= nibbāne.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 2

Anurādha Suttaṃ

Anurādha[1]

---

[269]

Thus have I heard:

The Exalted One was once staying near Vesalī, in Great Grove, at the Hall of the Gabled Home.

At that time the venerable Anuradha was staying not far from the Exalted One in a forest hut.

Then a number of heretical Wanderers came to visit the venerable Anuradha, greeted him

and exchanged the courtesies of civil words
and sat down at one side.

So seated, those heretical Wanderers said to the venerable Anuradha: -

"Friend Anuradha, a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest winning,
is proclaimed in (one of) these four ways:

'A Tathāgata, exists after death'

or

'A Tathāgata, does not exist after death,

or

'A Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,

or

'A Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'"

■

Upon this the venerable Anuradha said to those heretical Wanderers: -

"Friends, a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest gain,
is spoken of in other than those four ways,
to wit:

'A Tathāgata, exists after death'

or

'A Tathāgata, does not exist after death,

or

'A Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,

or

'A Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'"

Upon this those heretical Wanderers said of the venerable Anuradha:

"This brother must be a novice, not long ordained.

Or, if he is an elder, he is an ignorant fool."

[270] So those heretical Wanderers, having thus abused the venerable Anuradha, by calling him 'novice' and 'fool,' rose up and went away.

§

Thereupon the venerable Anuradha,
not long after those heretical Wanderers were gone,
thought thus:

"If these heretical Wanderers
were to put me a further question,

how, in answering,
should I tell them the views of the Exalted One without misrepresenting the Exalted One by stating an untruth?

How should I answer
in accordance with his teaching,
so that no one who agrees with his teaching and foUows his views might incur reproach?

■

Thereupon the venerable Anuradha went to the Exalted One
and sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Anuradha thus addressed the Exalted One: -

"I am staying here, lord,
in a forest hut
not far from the Exalted One.

Now a number of heretical Wanderers came to me greeted me
and exchanged the courtesies of civil words
and sat down at one side.

So seated, those heretical Wanderers said to me: -

"Friend Anuradha, a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest winning,
is proclaimed in (one of) these four ways:

'A Tathāgata, exists after death'

or

'A Tathāgata, does not exist after death,

or

'A Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,

or

'A Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'"

■

Upon this I said
to those heretical Wanderers: -

"Friends, a Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest gain,
is spoken of in other than those four ways,
to wit:

'A Tathāgata, exists after death'

or

'A Tathāgata, does not exist after death,

or

'A Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,

or

'A Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'"

Upon this those heretical Wanderers said of me:

"This brother must be a novice, not long ordained.

Or, if he is an elder, he is an ignorant fool."

So those heretical Wanderers, having thus abused me by calling me 'novice' and 'fool,' rose up and went away.

■

Thereupon I,
not long after those heretical Wanderers were gone,
thought thus:

"If these heretical Wanderers
were to put me a further question,
how, in answering,
should I tell them the views of the Exalted One without misrepresenting the Exalted One
by stating an untruth?

How should I answer
in accordance with his teaching,
so that no one who agrees with his teaching
and foUows his views
might incur reproach?

"Now what think you, Anuradha?

Is body permanent or impermanent!"

[271] "Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
what is woe,
what is of a nature to cbange, -
is it proper to regard that thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is feeling permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
what is woe,

what is of a nature to cbange, -
is it proper to regard that thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is perception permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
what is woe,
what is of a nature to cbange, -
is it proper to regard that thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Are the activities permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
what is woe,
what is of a nature to cbange, -
is it proper to regard that thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?"

"Impermanent, lord."

"What is impermanent,
is that weal or woe?"

"Woe, lord."

"Now what is impermanent,
what is woe,
what is of a nature to cbange, -
is it proper to regard that thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Therefore, Anuradha, whatsoever body,
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near, - every body
should be regarded,
as it really is,
by perfect insight,
thus:

'This is not mine.

This am not I.

This is not my self.'

■

Whatsoever feelings
be they past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,

far or near, - every feeling
should be regarded,
as it really is,
by perfect insight,
thus:

'This is not mine.

This am not I.

This is not my self.'

■

Whatsoever perception
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near, -
every perception
should be regarded,
as it really is,
by perfect insight,
thus:

'This is not mine.

This am not I.

This is not my self.'

■

Whatsoever activities
be they past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near, -
every activity
should be regarded,
as it really is,
by perfect insight,
thus:

'This is not mine.

This am not I.

This is not my self.'

■

Whatsoever consciousness
be it past,
future
or present,
inward or outward,
subtle or gross,
low or high,
far or near, -
every consciousness
should be regarded,
as it really is,
by perfect insight,
thus:

'This is not mine.

This am not I.

This is not my self.'

■

So seeing, Anuradha, the well-taught Ariyan disciple feels aversion from body, feels aversion from feeling, feels aversion from perception, feels aversion from the activities, feels aversion from consciousness.

So feeling,
he is dispassionate.

By dispassion
be is set free.

By freedom
comes the knowledge that he is free.

So that he knows:

'Ended is birth,
lived is the righteous life,
done is the task,
for life in such conditions there is no hereafter.'

§

Now what say you, Anuradha?

Do you regard a Tathāgata's, body as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata's, feeling
as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata's, perception
as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata's, activities
as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata's, consciousness
as the Tathāgata?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Now what say you, Anuradha?

Do you regard a Tathāgata, as within body?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Do you regard a Tathāgata, as apart from body?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata, as within feeling?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata, as apart from feeling?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata, as within perception?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata, as apart from perception?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata, as within activities?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata, as apart from activities?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata, as within consciousness?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Do you regard a Tathāgata, as apart from consciousness?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

Now what say you, Anuradha?

Do you regard a Tathāgata, as [272] as having no body, no feeling,
no perception,

no activities,
no consciousness?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Then, Anuradha, since in just this life a Tathāgata, is not met with in truth, in reality,[2]
is it proper for you to pronounce this of him:

'A Tathāgata,
a superman,
one of the best of men,
a winner of the highest gain,
is spoken of in other than those four ways,
to wit:

"A Tathāgata, exists after death,"

or

"A Tathāgata, does not exist after death,"

or

"A Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,"

or

"A Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death."'"

"Surely not, lord."

"Well said! Well said, Anuradha!

Both formerly and now also, Anuradha, it is just sorrow
and the ceasing of sorrow that I proclaim."

---

[1] As at K.S. iii, 99 ff.

[2] The phrase adopted in the Kathāā-vatthu (Points of Controversy) I, 1.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 3

Paṭhama Sāriputta-Koṭṭhika (or Pagata, or Upagata) Suttaṃ

Sāriputta and Koṭṭhita[1] (or 'viewed')

---

[272]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta and the venerable Koṭṭhita the Great were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
at Antelope Wood.

Now the venerable Koṭṭhita the Great,
rising at eventide from his solitary meditation,
came to see the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him,
after the exchange of friendly greetings

and the compliments of courtesy,[2]
sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Kotthita the Great said: -

"How now, friend Sāriputta?

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

-°-

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

-°-

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

-°-

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

§

"How then friend?

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

-°-

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

-°-

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

-°-

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

[373] "What is the reason, friend,
what is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Exalted One?"

§

"To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, exists after death is to view the Tathāgata, as body.[3]

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as body.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as body.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death is to view the Tathāgata, as body.

■

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, exists after death is to view the Tathāgata, as feeling.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as feeling.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as feeling.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death is to view the Tathāgata, as feeling.

■

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, exists after death is to view the Tathāgata, as perception.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as perception.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as perception.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death is to view the Tathāgata, as perception.

■

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, exists after death
is to view the Tathāgata, as the activities.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as the activities.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as the activities.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death is to view the Tathāgata, as the activities.

■

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, exists after death
is to view the Tathāgata, as consciousness.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as consciousness.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, both does and does not exist after death,
is to view the Tathāgata, as consciousness.

To hold, friend, that the Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death
is to view the Tathāgata, as consciousness.

That, friend, is the reason,
that is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Exalted One."

---

[1] See K.S. ii, 79 and n. At K.S. iii, 143-50 the same couple discuss matters. Our text reads Koṭṭhika. The sub-title (pagataṇ) may refer to rūpa- etc. -gataṇ of the text; I cannot find the word elsewhere. (The Uddāna or summary at the end of text, vol. iv, has paganaṇ [?].)

[2] For this oft-recurring phrase see Comy. on S. i, 67 (K.S. i, 92): 'Such as mutual inquiries after health, etc. By all such a pleasant even current is set flowing, as of blended hot and cold streams of water.'

[3] Rūpa-gataṇ etaṇ, lit. 'this is gone to body.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 4

Dutiya Sāriputta-Koṭṭhika (or Samudaya) Suttaṃ

Sāriputta and Koṭṭhita (ii) (or 'arising')

---

[273]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta and the venerable Koṭṭhita the Great were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
at Antelope Wood.

Now the venerable Koṭṭhita the Great,
rising at eventide from his solitary meditation,
came to see the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him,
after the exchange of friendly greetings

and the compliments of courtesy,
sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Kotthita the Great said: -

"How now, friend Sāriputta?

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

"How then friend?

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

"What is the reason, friend,
what is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Exalted One?"

§

"By not knowing, friend, by not seeing body
as it really is:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the arising of body
as it really is:

by not knowing,
by not seeing the ceasing of body and the way that goes to the ceasing of body,
as they really are,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

"The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

By not knowing, friend, by not seeing feeling
as it really is:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the arising of feeling
as it really is:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the ceasing of feeling and the way that goes to the ceasing of feeling,
as they really are,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

By not knowing, friend, by not seeing perception
as it really is:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the arising of perception
as it really is:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the ceasing of perception and the way that goes to the ceasing of perception,
as they really are,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

By not knowing, friend, by not seeing the activities
as they really are:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the arising of the activities
as it really is:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the ceasing of the activities and the way that goes to the ceasing of the activities,
as they really are,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

By not knowing, friend, by not seeing consciousness
as it really is:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the arising of consciousness
as it really is:
by not knowing,
by not seeing the ceasing of consciousness
and the way that goes to the ceasing of consciousness,
as they really are,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

§

"By knowing, friend,
by seeing body
as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the arising of body

as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the ceasing of body
and the way that goes to the ceasing of body,
as they really are,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

"By knowing, friend,
by seeing feeling
as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the arising of feeling
as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the ceasing of feeling
and the way that goes to the ceasing of feeling,
as they really are,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

By knowing, friend,
by seeing perception
as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the arising of perception
as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the ceasing of perception
and the way that goes to the ceasing of perception,
as they really are,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

By knowing, friend,
by seeing the activities
as they really are:
by knowing,
by seeing the arising of the activities
as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the ceasing of the activities
and the way that goes to the ceasing of the activities,
as they really are,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

By knowing, friend,
by seeing consciousness
as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the arising of consciousness
as it really is:
by knowing,
by seeing the ceasing of consciousness
and the way that goes to the ceasing of consciousness,
as they really are,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

[274] That, friend, is the reason,
that is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Tathāgata."[1]

---

[1] It is to be remembered that Tathāgata, is defined by the Comy. here and elsewhere as equivalent to satta, any being. The question is that common to all, 'What becomes of us after death?' not only 'What becomes of the Tathāgata, (as Buddha)?' There are many passages, however, where the Master refers to himself in this connexion. At the Udāna Comy., p. 340, Tathāgata = attā, 'the self.' At M. i, 338 it = a Saint. See Brethren, 393, n. 4; K.S. iii, 95 n. Perhaps 'liberated being' is the best term for general use

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 5

Tatiya Sāriputta-Koṭṭhika (or Pema) Suttaṃ

Sāriputta and Koṭṭhita (iii) (or 'affection')

---

[274]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sāriputta and the venerable Koṭṭhita the Great were staying at Benares,
in Isipatana,
at Antelope Wood.

Now the venerable Koṭṭhita the Great,
rising at eventide from his solitary meditation,
came to see the venerable Sāriputta,
and on coming to him,
after the exchange of friendly greetings

and the compliments of courtesy,
sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Kotthita the Great said: -

"How now, friend Sāriputta?

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

§

"How then friend?

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

■

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

■

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

■

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

■

"What is the reason, friend,
what is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Exalted One?"

§

"When one has not abandoned passion for body, friend, when one has not abandoned desire for body, when one has not abandoned afiection for body, when one has not abandoned thirst for body, when one has not abandoned feverish longing for body, when one has not abandoned craving for body,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

When one has not abandoned passion for feeling, friend, when one has not abandoned desire for feeling, when one has not abandoned afiection for feeling, when one has not abandoned thirst for feeling, when one has not abandoned feverish longing for feeling, when one has not abandoned craving for feeling,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

When one has not abandoned passion for perception, friend, when one has not abandoned desire for perception, when one has not abandoned afiection for perception, when one has not abandoned thirst for perception, when one has not abandoned feverish longing for perception, when one has not abandoned craving for perception,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

When one has not abandoned passion for the activities, friend, when one has not abandoned desire for the activities, when one has not abandoned afiection for the activities, when one has not abandoned thirst for the activities, when one has not abandoned feverish longing for the activities, when one has not abandoned craving for the activities,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

When one has not abandoned passion for consciousness, friend, when one has not abandoned desire for the consciousness, when one has not abandoned afiection for the consciousness, when one has not abandoned thirst for the consciousness, when one has not abandoned feverish longing for the consciousness,
when one has not abandoned craving for the activities,
one holds the view:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

§

When one has abandoned passion for body, friend, when one has abandoned desire for body, when one has abandoned afiection for body, when one has abandoned thirst for body, when one has abandoned feverish longing for body, when one has abandoned craving for body,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

When one has abandoned passion for feeling, friend, when one has abandoned desire for feeling, when one has abandoned afiection for feeling, when one has abandoned thirst for feeling, when one has abandoned feverish longing for feeling, when one has abandoned craving for feeling,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

When one has abandoned passion for perception, friend, when one has abandoned desire for perception, when one has abandoned afiection for perception, when one has abandoned thirst for perception, when one has abandoned feverish longing for perception, when one has abandoned craving for perception,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

When one has abandoned passion for the activities, friend, when one has abandoned desire for the activities, when one has abandoned afiection for the activities, when one has abandoned thirst for the activities, when one has abandoned feverish longing for the activities, when one has abandoned craving for the activities,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

When one has abandoned passion for consciousness, friend, when one has abandoned desire for the consciousness, when one has abandoned afiection for the consciousness, when one has abandoned thirst for the consciousness, when one has abandoned feverish longing for the consciousness,
when one has abandoned craving for the activities,
this view does not occur:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

'The Tathāgata, exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.'

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 6

Catuttha Koṭṭhita-Koṭṭhika (or Ārāma) Suttaṃ

Koṭṭhita and Sāriputta (iv) (or 'Delight')

---

[274]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Koṭṭhita and the venerable Sāriputta the Great were staying at Benares, in Isipatana,
at Antelope Wood.

Now the venerable Sāriputta the Great,
rising at eventide from his solitary meditation,
came to see the venerable Koṭṭhita,
and on coming to him,
after the exchange of friendly greetings

and the compliments of courtesy,
sat down at one side.

So seated the venerable Kotthita the Great said: -

"How now, friend Koṭṭhita?

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend."

§

"How then friend?

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

■

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

■

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

■

When I ask the question:

'Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?'

you reply:

'This is unrevealed by the Exalted One, friend.'

■

[275] "What is the reason, friend,
what is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Exalted One?"

§

"For one who delights in body, who enjoys body,
rejoices in body,
who knows not,
who sees not,
as it really is,
the ceasing of body,
there is the view:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.'

■

For one who delights in feeling, who enjoys feeling,
rejoices in feeling,
who knows not,
who sees not,
as it really is,
the ceasing of feeling,
there is the view:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

For one who delights in perception, who enjoys perception,
rejoices in perception,
who knows not,
who sees not,
as it really is,
the ceasing of perception,
there is the view:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

"For one who delights in the activities, who enjoys the activities, rejoices in the activities,
who knows not,
who sees not,
as it really is,
the ceasing of the activities,
there is the view:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

For one who delights in consciousness, who enjoys consciousness,
rejoices in consciousness,
who knows not,
who sees not,
as it really is,
the ceasing of consciousness,
there is the view:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

§

But when he no longer delights in body, when he no longer enjoys body,
rejoices in body,
and is one who knows,
who sees,

as it really is,
the ceasing of body,
this view does not occur:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

When he no longer delights in feeling, when he no longer enjoys feeling,
rejoices in feeling,
and is one who knows,
who sees,
as it really is,
the ceasing of feeling,
this view does not occur:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

When he no longer delights in perception, when he no longer enjoys perception,
rejoices in perception,
and is one who knows,
who sees,

as it really is,
the ceasing of perception,
this view does not occur:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

When he no longer delights in the activities, when he no longer enjoys the activities,
rejoices in the activities,
and is one who knows,
who sees,
as it really is,
the ceasing of the activities,
this view does not occur:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

When he no longer delights in consciousness, when he no longer enjoys consciousness,
rejoices in consciousness,
and is one who knows,
who sees,

as it really is,
the ceasing of consciousness,
this view does not occur:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

That, friend, is the reason,
that is the cause
why this thing is not revealed by the Exalted One."

§

"But, friend, can there be any other way of showing why[ed1] this is not revealed by the Exalted One"

"There can, friend.

He who delights in becoming,
enjoys becoming,
rejoices in becoming,
who knows not,
who sees not,
as it really is,
the ceasing of becoming, -
for him such views exist:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

§

But for him who delights not in becoming, enjoys not becoming,
rejoices not in becoming,
who knows,
who sees,
as it really is,
the ceasing of becoming, -
for him such views do not exist:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

That, friend, is another way of showing why this was not revealed by the Exalted One."

§

"But, friend, can there be any other way of showing why this is not revealed by the Exalted One"

"There can, friend.

He who delights in grasping,
enjoys grasping,
rejoices in grasping,
who knows not,
who sees not,
as it really is,
the ceasing of grasping, -
for him such views exist:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

§

But for him who delights not in grasping, enjoys not grasping,
rejoices not in grasping,
who knows,
who sees,
as it really is,

the ceasing of grasping, -
for him such views do not exist:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

That, friend, is another way of showing
why this was not revealed by the Exalted One."

§

"But, friend, can there be any other way of showing
why this is not revealed by the Exalted One"

"There can, friend.

He who delights in craving, enjoys craving,
rejoices in craving,
who knows not,
who sees not,
as it really is,
the ceasing of craving, -
for him such views exist:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

§

But for him who delights not in craving, enjoys not craving,
rejoices not in craving,
who knows,
who sees,
as it really is,
the ceasing of craving, -
for him such views do not exist:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.

The Tathāgata, exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, both exists and exists not after death.

The Tathāgata, neither exists nor not-exists after death.

■

That, friend, is another way of showing
why this was not revealed by the Exalted One."

§

"But, friend, can there be any other way of showing
why this is not revealed by the Exalted One"

[276] "Now, friend Sāriputta, why do you want any further explanation?

For a brother who is freed, friend Sāriputta, by the destruction of craving, there is nothing more left to point to as a growing."[1]

---

[1] Text has vaḍḍhaṇ n'atthi paññāpanāya, 'to point to as growth.' The Burmese has vaṭṭaṇ (tesaṇ) n'atthi p., as at S. iii, 59 (K.S. iii, 52, where see note). Cf. S. i, 15 (K.S. i, 23 n.). There is, however, a v.l. vattaṇ. Comy. is silent here, but on loc. cit. above takes vaṭṭaṇ as the wheel of existence or as cause, lit. 'going on.'

[ed1] Woodward has 'how' here, but these are explanations of why, not how, and this is the wording he has previously used throughout.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 7

Moggalāna (or Āyatana) Suttaṃ

Moggallāna (or 'Sphere')

---

[276]

Thus have I heard:

Then the Wanderer, Vacchagotta,[1] came to visit Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of civilities
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Vacchagotta,
said to the venerable Moggallāna the Great: -

"How say you, master Moggallāna?

Is the world eternal?"

"This is not revealed by the Exalted One, Vaccha."

■

"How then, master Moggallāna.

Is the world not eternal, then?"

"This too, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Then is the world finite, master Moggallāna?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Then, master Moggallāna, is the world infinite?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"How say you, master Moggallāna?

"Is life[2] the same as body?"

"That is not revealed by the Exalted One, Vaccha."

■

"How then, master Moggallāna?

Is life one thing and body another?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

[277] "Then tell me this, master Moggallāna.

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

§

"Now, master Moggallāna, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why the Wanderers of other views, when questioned on these points answer that:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

■

"Now, master Moggallāna, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why Gotama the recluse,

when questioned thus,
does not answer that:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

'The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'"?

§

"The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha, regard the eye thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha, regard the ear thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha, regard the nose thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha, regard the tongue thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha, regard the body thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha, regard the mind thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

That is why the Wanderers of other views, when thus questioned, reply:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

§

But, Vaccha, the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the eye thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the ear thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the nose thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the tongue thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the body thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the mind thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

Therefore the Tathāgata,
when thus questioned,
does not reply:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

§

Thereupon the Wanderer Vacchagotta rose from his seat and went to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him courteously,
and after the exchange of civilities
sat down at one side.

So seated
the Wanderer Vacchagotta said to the Exalted One: -

"How now, master Gotama?

Is the world eternal?"

"It is not revealed, Vaccha, that the world is eternal."

■

"How then, master Gotama.

Is the world not eternal, then?"

"This too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the world is not eternal."

■

"Then is the world finite, master Gotama?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed that the world is finite."

■

"Then, master Gotama, is the world infinite?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the world is infinite."

■

"How say you, master Gotama?

"Is life the same as body?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that life is the same as body."

■

"How then, master Gotama?

Is life one thing and body another?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that life is one thing and body another."

■

"Then tell me this, master Gotama.

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the Tathāgata exists after death"

■

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the Tathāgata does not exist after death"

■

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the Tathāgata both exists and does not exist after death"

■

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the Tathāgata neither exists nor does not exist after death"

§

"Now, master Gotama, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why the Wanderers of other views,
when questioned on these points answer that:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

■

"Now, master Gotama, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why the master Gotama,

when questioned thus,
does not answer that:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'?

§

"The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha, regard the eye thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha,
regard the ear thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha,
regard the nose thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha,
regard the tongue thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha,
regard the body thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha,
regard the mind thus:

'This is mine.

This am I.

This is my self.'

■

That is why the Wanderers of other views,
when thus questioned, reply:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

§

But, Vaccha, the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the eye thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the ear thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the nose thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the tongue thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the body thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

The Tathāgata, Vaccha,
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
regards the mind thus:

'This is not mine.

This I am not.

This is not my self.'

■

Therefore the Tathāgata,
when thus questioned,
does not reply:

[278] 'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

§

"Wonderful, master Gotama!

Strange it is, master Gotama,
how the explanation both of Master and disciple,
both in spirit and in letter,
can agree,
can harmonize,
cannot be inconsistent,
that is, as regards any essential phrase.

Now, master Gotama, I went to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and I asked him this same thing,
and he replied to me
in the very same words and syllables
as the worthy Gotama.

Wonderful, master Gotama!

Strange it is, master Gotama,
how the explanation both of master and disciple,
both in spirit and in letter,
will agree,
will harmonize,
will not suffer loss,[3]
that is, in any word about the highest."

---

[1] At S. iii, 257-63 (K.S. iii, 203), [sic 202] 'The wanderer of the Vaccha clan' asks the same questions of the Buddha, who replies that through ignorance of body, its arising, its ceasing and the way of its oeasing, these opinions arise.

[2] Jīva.

[3] Vihāyissati. Cf. supra, p.269.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 8

Vaccha (or Bandha or Khandha) Suttaṃ

Vaccha (or 'Bond')

---

[278]

Thus have I heard:

Then the Wanderer, Vacchagotta, came to visit the Exalted One
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of civilities
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Vacchagotta,
said to the Exalted One: -

"How now, master Gotama?

Is the world eternal?"

"It is not revealed, Vaccha, that the world is eternal."

■

"How then, master Gotama.

Is the world not eternal, then?"

"This too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the world is not eternal."

■

"Then is the world finite, master Gotama?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the world is finite."

■

"Then, master Gotama, is the world infinite?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the world is infinite."

■

"How say you, master Gotama?

Is life the same as body?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that life is the same as body."

■

"How then, master Gotama?

Is life one thing and body another?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that life is one thing and body another."

■

"Then tell me this, master Gotama.

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

■

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the Tathāgata, exists after death"

■

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the Tathāgata, does not exist after death"

■

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death"

■

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed, that the Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not exist after death"

§

"Now, master Gotama, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why the Wanderers of other views,
when questioned on these points answer that:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

■

"Now, master Gotama, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why the master Gotama,
when questioned thus,
does not answer that:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'?

§

"The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha,
regard the body as the self,[1] regard the self as having body, regard body as being in the self,
regard the self as being in the body.

They regard feeling as the self regard the self as having feeling, regard feeling as being in the self,
regard the self as being in feeling.

They regard perception as the self regard the self as having perception,

regard perception as being in the self,
regard the self as being in perception.

They regard the activities as the self regard the self as having the activities, regard the activities as being in the self,
regard the self as being in the activities.

They regard consciousness as the self,
regard the self as having consciousness,
or consciousness as being in the self,
or the self as being in the consciousness.

■

That is why the Wanderers of other views, when thus questioned, reply:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

But the Tathāgata, Vaccha
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
does not regard body as the self,
does not regard the self as having body,
does not regard body as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in the body.

He does not regard feeling as the self,
does not regard the self as having feeling,
does not regard feeling as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in feeling.

He does not regard perception as the self,
does not regard the self as having perception,
does not regard perception as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in perception.

He does not regard the activities as the self,
does not regard the self as having the activities,

does not regard the activities as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in thethe activities.

He does not regard consciousness as the self,
does not regard the self as having consciousness,
does not regard consciousness as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in consciousness.

■

Therefore the Tathāgata,
when thus questioned,
does not reply:

'The world [279] is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

§

Thereupon the Wanderer Vacchagotta rose from his seat and went to see Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
saluted him courteously,
and after the exchange of civilities
sat down at one side.

So seated
the Wanderer Vacchagotta said to Moggallāna the Great: -

"How say you, master Moggallāna?

Is the world eternal?"

"This is not revealed by the Exalted One, Vaccha."

■

"How then, master Moggallāna.

Is the world not eternal, then?"

"This too, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Then is the world finite, master Moggallāna?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Then, master Moggallāna, is the world infinite?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"How say you, master Moggallāna?

"Is life the same as body?"

"That is not revealed by the Exalted One, Vaccha."

■

"How then, master Moggallāna?

Is life one thing and body another?"

"That too, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Then tell me this, master Moggallāna.

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

§

"Now, master Moggallāna, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why the Wanderers of other views,
when questioned on these points answer that:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

■

"Now, master Moggallāna, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why Gotama the recluse,
when questioned thus,
does not answer that:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'"?

§

"The Wanderers of other views, Vaccha,
regard the body as the self,
regard the self as having body,
regard body as being in the self,
regard the self as being in the body.

They regard feeling as the self
regard the self as having feeling,
regard feeling as being in the self,
regard the self as being in feeling.

They regard perception as the self regard the self as having perception,
regard perception as being in the self,
regard the self as being in perception.

They regard the activities as the self
regard the self as having the activities,
regard the activities as being in the self,
regard the self as being in the activities.

They regard consciousness as the self,
regard the self as having consciousness,
or consciousness as being in the self,
or the self as being in the consciousness.

Therefore the Wanderers of other views, when questioned thus,
reply:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

§

But the Tathāgata, Vaccha
the Arahant,
the Fully Enlightened One,
does not regard body as the self,
does not regard the self as having body,
does not regard body as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in the body.

He does not regard feeling as the self,
does not regard the self as having feeling,
does not regard feeling as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in feeling.

He does not regard perception as the self,
does not regard the self as having perception,
does not regard perception as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in perception.

He does not regard the activities as the self,
does not regard the self as having the activities,
does not regard the activities as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in thethe activities.

He does not regard consciousness as the self,
does not regard the self as having consciousness,
does not regard consciousness as being in the self,
does not regard the self as being in consciousness.

Therefore when questioned on these things he does not reply:

'The world is eternal,'

or:

'The world is not eternal,'

or:

'The world is finite,'

or:

'The world is infinite,'

or:

'Life is the same as body,'

or:

'Life is one thing and body is another,'

or:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'

§

"Wonderful, master Moggallāna!

Strange it is, master Moggallāna,
how the explanation both of Master and disciple,
both in spirit and in letter,
can agree,
can harmonize,
cannot be inconsistent,
that is, as regards any essential phrase.

Now, master Moggallāna, I went to visit Gotama the recluse,
and I asked him this same thing,
and he replied to me
in the very same words and syllables
as the worthy Moggallāna.

Wonderful, master Moggallāna!

Strange it is, master Moggallāna,
how the explanation both of master and disciple,
both in spirit and in letter,
will agree,
will harmonize,
will not suffer loss,
that is, in any word about the highest."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 3.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 9

Kutūhala-Sālā Suttaṃ

The Debating Hall[1]

---

[279]

Thus have I heard:

Then the Wanderer, Vacchagotta, came to visit the Exalted One
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of civilities
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Vacchagotta,
said to the Exalted One: -

"Master Gotama, some time ago, on some former occasions, when a number of sectarians of different views, both recluses and brahmins, who were Wanderers,
had met together
and were sitting in the Debating Hall, this topic of talk arose: -

'Pūraṇa Kassapa[2] here, who has a crowd of followers,
who is teacher of a crowd,
a well-known and famous founder of theories,[3]
one in high repute among the manyfolk, when speaking of a disciple
who had passed away,
who had made [280] an end, thus describes his rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

But if one of his disciples is a superman,
one who has won the highest gain,
when speaking of such a disciple
who has passed away,
who has made an end,
he describes him in terms of rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."'

■

And in like manner, Makkhali of the Cowpen here, who has a crowd of followers,

who is teacher of a crowd,
a well-known and famous founder of theories,
one in high repute among the manyfolk,
when speaking of a disciple
who had passed away,
who had made an end, thus describes his rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

But if one of his disciples is a superman,
one who has won the highest gain,
when speaking of such a disciple
who has passed away,
who has made an end,
he describes him in terms of rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

■

And in like manner, Nāṭa's Son the Unclothed, here, who has a crowd of followers,
who is teacher of a crowd,
a well-known and famous founder of theories,
one in high repute among the manyfolk,
when speaking of a disciple
who had passed away,
who had made an end, thus describes his rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

But if one of his disciples is a superman,
one who has won the highest gain,
when speaking of such a disciple
who has passed away,
who has made an end,
he describes him in terms of rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

■

And in like manner, Sañjaya, Belaṭṭhi's Son, here, who has a crowd of followers,
who is teacher of a crowd,
a well-known and famous founder of theories,
one in high repute among the manyfolk,
when speaking of a disciple
who had passed away,
who had made an end, thus describes his rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

But if one of his disciples is a superman,
one who has won the highest gain,
when speaking of such a disciple
who has passed away,
who has made an end,
he describes him in terms of rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."'

■

And in like manner, Kaccāyana of the Pakuddhas here, who has a crowd of followers,
who is teacher of a crowd,
a well-known and famous founder of theories,
one in high repute among the manyfolk,
when speaking of a disciple
who had passed away,
who had made an end, thus describes his rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

But if one of his disciples is a superman,
one who has won the highest gain,
when speaking of such a disciple
who has passed away,
who has made an end,
he describes him in terms of rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

■

And in like manner, Ajita of the haircloth, here, who has a crowd of followers,
who is teacher of a crowd,
a well-known and famous founder of theories,
one in high repute among the manyfolk,
when speaking of a disciple
who had passed away,
who had made an end, thus describes his rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

But if one of his disciples is a superman,
one who has won the highest gain,
when speaking of such a disciple
who has passed away,
who has made an end,
he describes him in terms of rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

■

Now Gotama the recluse,
who has a crowd of followers,
who is teacher of a crowd,
a well-known and famous founder of theories,
one in high repute among the manyfolk,
when speaking of a disciple
who had passed away,
who had made an end, thus describes his rebirth:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus.

So and so is reborn thus and thus."

But if one of his disciples is a superman,
one who has won the highest gain,
when speaking of such a disciple
who has passed away,
who has made an end,
does not describe him in terms of rebirth,
saying:

"So and so is reborn thus and thus."

But he describes him thus:

"He has cut off craving.

He has broken the bond.

By perfect comprehension of conceit[4] he has made an end of ill."'

§

Of this matter, master Gotama,
I had doubt and wavering, and I thought:

'How is the teaching of Gotama the recluse to be understood in this matter?'"

■

"You may well doubt, Vaccha.

You may well waver.

Moreover, your wavering has arisen on a doubtful point.

As to rebirth, Vaccha,
I declare it to be for what has fuel, not for what is without fuel.[5]

Just as, Vaccha,
a fire with fuel blazes up, but not without fuel,[6] even so, Vaccha, do I declare rebirth to be for what has fuel,
not for what is without fuel."

■

[281] "But, master Gotama, at the time when a flame,
flung by the wind,
goes a very long way,[7]
as to fuel
what says the master Gotama about this?"

"At the time when a flame, Vaceha, flung by the wind
goes a very long way,
I declare that flame
to be supported by the wind.

At that time, Vaecha, the wind is its fuel."

■

"But, master Gotama,
at the time when a being lays aside this body
and rises up again in another body, - what does master Gotama declare to be the fuel for that?"

"At the time, Vacoha, when a being lays aside this body

and rises up again in another body, for that I declare
craving to be the fuel.

Indeed, Vaccha,
craving is on that occasion the fuel."[8]

---

[1] Kutūhala-sālā. Comy. says it was a place where all sorts of sectarians met for debate. It was so called from the noise (kutūhala) that went on in debate, cries of 'What says he? What says he?' Cf. D. i, 179 (where see note to Dialog. i, 244); M. ii, 2.

[2] The six famous theorizers aro referred to.

[3] Tittha-kara, lit. 'ford-maker,' one who purposes to show the way, or ford, or landing-place to salvation. Cf. K.S. i, 93 n. In a bad sense it usually = a quack.

[4] Cf. supra. xxxvi, § 2

[5] For upddāna, fuel, basis, grasping or attachment, see K.S. ii, early chapters.

[6] From Sn. 1074:

Acci yathā vāta-vegena khitto
Aṭṭhaṇ paleti, na upeti sañkhaṇ.|| ||

where Comy. says, 'It goes to its end, it is not reckoned to have gone in this or that direction.'

[7] Dūram pi. 'Even to the home of the Radiant Devas.' Comy.

[8] The Buddhist doctrine, that one is reborn by force of his last dominant thought at the moment of death, either from this world or from another world. This thought is called cuti-citta (decease thought). Hence on his death-bed a man is urged by his friends and relatives to fix his thoughts on profitable things, in order to be reborn accordantly. See the death-bed scene of Citta (supra). The khīṇāsava or Arahant, having no upādāna (fuel or grasping), has no thought attaching him to any object (kiñcana), so his flame flickers out for want of fuel.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 10

Ānanda (or Atthatta) Suttaṃ

Ānanda (or 'The Existence of the Self')[1]

---

[281]

Thus have I heard:

Then the Wanderer, Vacchagotta, came to visit the Exalted One
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of civilities
sat down at one side.

So seated, the Wanderer, Vacchagotta,
said to the Exalted One: -

"Now, master Gotama, is there a self?"

At these words the Exalted One was silent.

"How, then, master Gotama, is there not a self?"

For a second time also the Exalted One was silent.

Then Vacchagotta the Wanderer rose from his seat and went away.

■

Now not long after the departure of Vacchagotta the Wanderer the venerable Ānanda said to the Exalted One: -

"How is it, lord,
that the Exalted One gave no answer to the question of Vacchagotta the Wanderer?"

[282] "If, Ānanda, when asked by the Wanderer:

'Is there a self?'

I had replied to him:

'There is a self,'

then, Ānanda,
that would be siding[2] with the recluses and brahmins who are eternalists.

But if, Ānanda, when asked:

'Is there not a self?'

I had replied that 'It does not exist',

that, Ānanda, would be siding with those recluses and brahmins who are annihilationists.

Again, Ānanda, when asked by the Wanderer:

'Is there a self?'

had I replied that

'There is',

would my reply be in accordance with the knowledge[3] that

'All things are not-self'?"

"Surely not, lord."

"Again, Ānanda, when asked by the Wanderer:

'Is there not a self?'

had I replied that

'There is not',

it would have been more bewilderment for the bewildered Vacchagotta.

For he would have said:

'Formerly indeed I had a self, but now I have not one any more.'"

---

[1] Atth'attā.

[2] Text has tesaṇ etaṇ saddhiṇ abhavissa, but Comy. reads laddhi bhavissati, explaining tesaṇ etaṇ laddhiyā saddhiṇ I think Comy.'s reading preferable.

[3] Anulomaṇ ñāṇassa.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
4. Saḷāyatana Vagga
44. Avyākata Saṃyutta

4. The Book Called the Saḷāyatana-Vagga

Containing Kindred Sayings on the 'Six-Fold Sphere' of Sense and Other Subjects

44. Kindred Sayings about the Unrevealed

Sutta 11

Sabhiya Suttaṃ

Sabhiya[1]

---

[282]

Thus have I heard:

Once the venerable Sabhiya of the Kaccanas was staying at Ñātika in the Brick Hall.

Then the Wanderer Vacchagotta went to visit the venerable Sabhiya,
and on coming to him
greeted him in friendly fashion,
and after the exchange of civilities,
sat down at one side.

So seated the Wanderer Vacchagotta said to the venerable Sabhiya: -

"How say you, master Kaccana?[2]

Does the Tathāgata, exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, not exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, both exist and not exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

■

"Does the Tathāgata, neither exist nor not-exist after death?"

"That, Vaccha, is not revealed by the Exalted One."

§

"Now, master Kaccana, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why Gotama the recluse,
when questioned thus,
does not answer that:

The Tathāgata, exists after death.'

or

'The Tathāgata, does not exist after death?'

or:

'The Tathāgata, both exists and does not exist after death'

or:

'The Tathāgata, neither exists nor does not-exist after death'?

§

"Now as to the reason,
the grounds,
for describing him as 'embodied'
or 'disembodied',
as 'conscious'
or 'unconscious',
as 'neither conscious nor unconscious', -
if such reason,
such grounds,
should cease in every way, entirely,
wholly,
utterly
and without remainder,
by what definition could one describe him as 'embodied'
or 'disembodied',
as 'conscious'

or 'unconscious',
as 'neither conscious nor unconscious?'"[3]

§

"How long have you been ordained, Kaccana?"

"Not long, friend.

Only three years."

"It is indeed a great thing, friend, for one to know thus much in so short a time;[4]
not to speak of things abstruse."[5]

The Book of the Sixfold Sphere.

---

[1] Cf. Sn. pp. 91-102 (Sabhiya-avtta); K.S. iii, 7 n. Formerly a Wanderer, meeting the Master, he became converted and attained Arahantship. At Brethren, 177, one of his name is credited with the well-known verse of Dhammapada, 6, 312:|| ||

Pare ca na vijānanti 'mayam ettha yamāmase.'

[2] His clan-name, just as the Buddha is called by his clan-name 'Gotama' by non-adherents.

[3] I.e., since the Tathāgata, or any saint, in fact, at death undergoes asesa-virāga-nirodha (utter cessation of all that one can speak of), it is for lack of words that a definition is not given.

[4] Yassa pi etaṇ ettakena kālena ... kāranaṇ bhaveyya. Comy.

[5] Abhikkante, lit. 'in the going beyond' or 'far.' Comy. channāā-katā (secret things).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Honour to him, the Exalted One, Arahant, Buddha Supreme

Sutta 1

Avijjā Suttaṃ

Ignorance

---

[1]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."[1]

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"When ignorance leads the way,[2] by the reaching of states unprofitable, shamelessness and recklessness follow in its train.

In one who is swayed by ignorance and is void of sense, wrong view has scope.[3]

Wrong view gives scope for wrong aim, [2] wrong aim for wrong speech, wrong speech for wrong action, wrong action for wrong living, wrong living for wrong effort, wrong effort for wrong mindfulness, and wrong mindfulness gives scope for wrong concentration.

§

But, monks, when knowledge leads the way, by the attainment of profitable states, the sense of shame and self-restraint follow in its train.

In one who is swayed by knowledge and has good sense,
right view has scope.

Right view gives scope for right aim,
right aim for right speech, right speech for right action,

right action for right living, right living for right effort, right effort for right mindfulness, and right mindfulness gives scope for right concentration."

---

[1] In this volume I revert to the use of the word 'monks' (bhikkhū) in preference to 'brethren,' as being less misleading. See Mrs. Rhys Davids's remarks on the subject in the Introduction to Vol. IV of this series.

[2] Lit. 'goes before.'

[3] Pahoti = uppajjati. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 2

Upaḍḍha Suttaṃ

The Half[1]

---

[2]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying among the Sakyans at Sakkara,
a Sakyan township.

Then the venerable Ānanda came to the Exalted One,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Ānanda said this:

"The half of the holy life,[2] lord, it is friendship with what is lovely,[3] association with what is lovely, intimacy with what is lovely!"

"Say not so, Ānanda!

Say not so, Ānanda!

It is the whole,
not the half,
of the holy life, -
this friendship,
this association,
this intimacy with what is lovely.

Of a monk who is a friend,
an associate,
an intimate
of what is lovely
we may expect this, -
that he will develop the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, Ānanda, does such a monk develop and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

[3] Herein,[4] Ānanda, he cultivates right view, which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
which is based on detachment,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, Ānanda, is how a monk who is a friend,
an associate,
an intimate of what is lovely,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

This is the method, Ānanda,
by which you are to understand how the whole of this holy life
consists in friendship,
in association,
in intimacy
with what is lovely.

Indeed, Ānanda, beings liable to rebirth are liberated from rebirth;
beings liable to decay,
liable to death,
liable to grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair,
are liberated therefrom
because of my friendship with what is lovely.[5]

It is by this method, Ānanda, that you are to understand how the whole of this holy life
consists in friendship,
in association,
in intimacy with what is lovely."

[1] At S. i, 87 (Kosala-saṇyutta), to which Comy. refers here, the Buddha relates this incident to Pasenadi, rājah of Kosala. Cf. K.S. i, 112-3 n.

[2] Brahmacariya = ariya-magga. Comy.

[3] Kalyāṇa. The word 'lovely' was originally suggested by Mrs. Rhys Davids (K.S. i, 112 n.) to express 'beauty, physical and moral,' being exactly what is meant by ὅρα προδθιλῆ in the Bible at N.T., Phil iv, 8 ('whatsoever things are lovely').

[4] Idha, 'here,' as usually, imasmiṃ sāsane (in this teaching). Comy.

[5] Mamaṃ kalyāṇamittaṃ āgamma (which last word Comy. takes as ārabbha, sandhāya, paṭicca, 'beginning with, concerned with, owing to' me). Comy. remarks that the above-mentioned statements could not be known as facts by Ānanda, who was sekha, learner, only; whereas Sāriputta, an adept (in the next sutta), knew them well.

---

* Download SPIonic Greek font to view this correctly.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 3

Sāriputta Suttaṃ

Sāriputta

---

[3]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Now the venerable Sāriputta came to visit the Exalted One, and on coming to him saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated he said this:

"The whole of the holy life, lord,
consists in friendship,

in association,
in intimacy with what is lovely."

"Well said! Well said, Sāriputta!

The whole,
consists in friendship,
in association,
in intimacy with what is lovely.

Of a monk who is a friend,
an associate,
an intimate
of what is lovely
we may expect this, -
that he will develop the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, Sāriputta, does such a monk develop and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein, Sāriputta, he cultivates right view,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

likewise right speech,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, Sāriputta, is how a monk who is a friend,
an associate,
an intimate of what is lovely,

cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

This is the method, Sāriputta,
by which you are to understand how the whole of this holy life
consists in friendship,
in association,
in intimacy
with what is lovely.

Indeed, Sāriputta, beings liable to rebirth are liberated from rebirth;
beings liable to decay,
liable to death,
liable to grief,
woe,
lamentation
and despair,
are liberated therefrom
because of my friendship with what is lovely.

It is by this method, Sāriputta,
that you are to understand how
the whole of this holy life
consists in friendship,
in association,
in intimacy with what is lovely."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 4

Brāhmaṇa Suttaṃ

The Brahmin

[2] Cf. K.S. ii, n,; [But ?, no page or sutta #] A. i, 36. [again ?; pg. 56?]

[3] Four, according to Comy. The fittings were of silver.

[4] Brahma = seṭṭha. Comy.

[5] Cf. S. i, 33; K.S. i, 45; S. iv, 291; K.S. iv, 199.

[6] 'With the passions.' Comy.

[7] Text anicchā; Comy. aniñja.

[8] Text dhamma-sannāho. Comys. vary between camma and vamma (both meaning armour).

[9] Cf. the other chariot-simile, K.S. i, 45.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 5

Kim Attha? Suttaṃ

To What Purpose?[1]

---

[6]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a number of monks came to visit the Exalted One saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
those monks said this to the Exalted One:

"Here, lord, the wanderers holding other views ask us this question:

'What is it, friends,
for which the holy life is lived under Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, lord,
we thus reply to those wanderers holding other views:

'It is for the full understanding of ill, friends, that the holy life is lived under Gotama the recluse.'

Thus questioned, lord,
and thus replying,
do we state the views of the Exalted One,
without misrepresenting the Exalted One
by stating an untruth?

Do we answer in accordance with his teaching,
so that no one who agrees with his teaching and follows his views could incur reproach?"

■

"Truly, monks, thus questioned
and thus replying, ye do state my views
without misrepresenting me
by stating an untruth.

You do answer in accordance with my teaching,
so that no one who agrees with my teaching and follows my views

could incur reproach
in stating that it is for the full understanding of Ill that the holy life is lived under my rule.[2]

■

But if, monks, the wanderers holding other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there any way, is there any practice for the full understanding of this Ill?' -

thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye reply to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a Way,
there is indeed a practice
for the full understanding of this ill.'

And what, monks, is that Way, what that practice?

It is this very Ariyan eightfold way;
to wit:

right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

This, monks, is the Way,
this is the practice
for the full understanding of this Ill.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

---

[1] Text kimattha. Title kimatthi. Uddāna kimatthiyo.

[2] As at K.S. iv, 27, 87; Dialog. i, 192; Mil.P., 49,101.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 6

Paṭhama Aññataro Bhikkhu Suttaṃ

A Certain Monk (a)

---

[6]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a certain monk came to visit the Exalted One
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
that monk said this to the Exalted One:

[7] "'The holy life!|| ||

The holy life!'

Lord, is the saying.

Pray, lord, what is the holy life, and what the ending of the holy life?"

"The holy life, monk,
is just this Ariyan eightfold way;
to wit:

right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

Whatsoever destroys lust, destroys hatred,
destroys illusion, monk,
is this holy life."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 7

Dutiya Aññataro Bhikkhu Suttaṃ

A Certain Monk (b)

---

[7]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a certain monk came to visit the Exalted One
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
that monk said this to the Exalted One:

"'The restraint of lust,
the restraint of hatred, the restraint of illusion,'
lord, is the saying.

Pray, lord, what does this restraint imply?"

"It implies, monk,
the realm of Nibbāna.[1]

By it is meant the destruction of the āsavas."[2]

§

At these words that monk said to the Exalted One:

"'The deathless! The deathless!'
lord, is the saying.

Pray, lord, what is the deathless, and what the way to the deathless?"

"That which is the destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, monk, - that is called 'the deathless.'

This same Ariyan eightfold way is the way to the deathless;
to wit:

right view,
right aim,
right speech,

right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

---

[1] Nibbāna-dhātu. Nothing spatial is implied.

[2] = Arahattaṇ. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 8

Vibhaṇga Suttaṃ

Analysis

---

[7]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks, the Ariyan eightfold way.

I will analyze it for you.

Do ye listen.

Give careful heed and I will speak."

"Yes, lord," said those monks in assent to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One then said:

"What, monks, is the Ariyan eightfold way?

It is
right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

§

And what, monks, is right view?

It is the knowledge of Ill, knowledge of the arising of ill, knowledge [8] of the ceasing of ill, and knowledge of the practice leading to the ceasing of ill.

That, monks, is called 'right view.'

■

And what, monks, is right aim?

It is the aim to renounce, the aim to be free from malice, the aim to be harmless.

That, monks, is called 'right aim.'

■

And what, monks, is right speech?

It is the avoiding of lying speech, the avoiding of calumny, of cutting speech,
of wanton speech.

That, monks, is called 'right speech.'

■

And what, monks, is right action?

It is the avoiding of taking life,
the avoiding of stealing, the avoiding of unchastity.

That, monks, is called 'right action.'

■

And what, monks, is right living?

Herein, monks, the Ariyan disciple, by abandoning a wrong way of life, gets his living by a right way of life.

That is called 'right living.'

■

And what, monks, is right effort?

Herein a monk puts forth desire [to do],
makes an effort,
begins to strive,
applies his mind,
lays hold of his mind
to prevent the arising of ill,
unprofitable states
not yet arisen.

As to ill,
unprofitable states that have arisen,
he puts forth desire
makes an effort,
begins to strive,
applies his mind,
lays hold of his mind
to destroy them.

As to profitable states
that have not yet arisen,
he puts forth desire
makes an effort,
begins to strive,
applies his mind,
lays hold of his mind
for their arising.

As to profitable states
that have already arisen,
he puts forth desire,
makes an effort,

begins to strive,
applies his mind,
lays hold of his mind
for their continuance, for their non-confusion,[1] for their more-becoming,
increase,
culture
and fulfilment.

That, monks, is called 'right effort.'[2]

■

And what, monks, is right mindfulness?[3]

Herein a monk abides contemplating body in body (as transient),
ardent,
self-possessed,
mindful,
by restraining the dejection in the world
that arises from coveting.

He abides contemplating feelings in feelings (as transient),
ardent,
self-possessed,
mindful,
by restraining the dejection in the world
that arises from coveting.

He abides contemplating mind in mind (as transient),
ardent,
self-possessed,

mindful,
by restraining the dejection in the world
that arises from coveting.

He abides contemplating mind-states in mind-states (as transient),
ardent,
self-possessed,
mindful,
by restraining the dejection in the world
that arises from coveting.

This, monks, is called 'right mindfulness.'

■

[9] And what, monks, is right concentration?

Herein a monk, aloof from sensuality, aloof from evil states, enters on the first trance, which is accompanied by thought directed and sustained, born of solitude,
easeful and zestful,
and abides therein.

By the calming down of thought directed and sustained, he enters on the inward calm, that one-pointedness of mind, apart from thought directed and sustained, that is born of mental balance, zestful and easeful,
that is the second trance.

Then, by the fading out of zest, he abides indifferent,

mindful and composed,
and experiences ease through the body.

Having entered on the third trance, which the Ariyans describe in these terms:

"He who is indifferent and mindful dwells happily,"[4]

he abides therein.

Then, by the abandoning of ease,
by the abandoning of discomfort, by the destruction of the happiness and unhappiness that he had before,
having entered on that state which is neither pleasant nor painful, that utter purity of mindfulness reached by indifference, which is the fourth trance,
he abides therein.

This, monks, is called 'right concentration.'"

---

[1] Asammosāya.

[2] These are called the 'four right efforts' (sammappadhānāni). Cf. infra, Book V.

[3] Cf. K.S. iv, 160 ff.

[4] Similar phrases are in the Upānishads (e.g., kaṭha-).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 9

Sūka Suttaṃ

Bearded Wheat[1]

---

[9]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Suppose, monks, the spike of bearded wheat
or bearded barley
be wrongly aimed,[2]
when pressed by hand or foot will it pierce[3] hand or foot, will it draw blood?

It cannot be so.

Why not?

Because the spike is wrongly aimed.

■

Just so, monks, it cannot be that the monk whose view is wrongly aimed, whose way-culture is wrongly aimed,
can pierce through ignorance,
draw knowledge
and realize Nibbāna.

Why not?

Because his view is wrongly aimed.

■

[10] But, monks, suppose that the spike of bearded wheat
or bearded barley
be well aimed.

When pressed by hand or foot, it is certain[4] that it will pierce hand or foot and draw blood.

Why so?

Because, monks, the spike is well aimed.

■

Just so, monks, it is certain that the monk whose view is well aimed, whose way-culture is well aimed,
can pierce through ignorance,
draw knowledge,
and realize Nibbāna.

Why so?

Because, monks, of the right aim of his view.

§

And how does a monk
by well aimed view,
by well aimed way-culture,
so pierce through ignorance,
draw knowledge
and realize Nibbāna?

Herein, monks, he cultivates right view,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
which is based on detachment,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That is how this monk,
by well aimed view,
by well aimed path-culture, pierces through ignorance,
draws knowledge
and realizes Nibbāna."

---

[1] Sūka (text suka throughout). Cf. A. i, 8; Dhp. 311 (kuso yathā duggahīto); KhpA. 86.

[2] Micchā-panihitaṇ ('so as not to pierce.' Comy.).

[3] Text here and below bhindissati (v.l. chijjati); but A. and Comys. bhecchati (fut. of bhindati), chijjati, DhpA. checchati.

[4] Thānaṇ vijjati.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
1. Avijjā Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

1. On Ignorance

Sutta 10

Nandiya Suttaṃ

Nandiya

---

[10]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then Nandiya[1] the wanderer came to the Exalted One, and on reaching him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated, Nandiya the wanderer said this to the Exalted One:

"What conditions are there, master Gotama, which when cultivated and made much of,
lead to Nibbāna,
have Nibbāna for their goal,
end in Nibbāna?"

"There are eight conditions, Nandiya, which when cultivated and made much of,
lead to Nibbāna,
have Nibbāna for their goal,
end in Nibbāna,
to wit:

right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

These eight conditions, Nandiya, when cultivated and made much of,
lead to Nibbāna,
have Nibbāna for their goal,
end in Nibbāna."

At these words Nandiya the wanderer said this to the-Exalted One:

[11] "Wonderful, master Gotama!

Wonderful, master Gotama!

Even as one raises what is fallen or shows forth what is hidden, or points out the way
to him that wanders astray, or holds up a light in the darkness so that they who have eyes may see objects,

— even so in divers ways
has Dhamma, been set forth by master Gotama.

I myself go for refuge to Gotama,
the Exalted One,
to the Norm
and to the Order of Brethren.

May the worthy Gotama accept me as a lay disciple, as one who has gone to him for refuge from this day forth, so long as I have life."

---

[1] Name of a bhikkhu at M. i, 205, 462; iii, 155. Here Comy. calls him channa- (? secret) paribbājako.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 11

Paṭhama Vihāra Suttaṃ

Way of Dwelling (a)[1]

---

[11]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, I desire to dwell in solitude for half a month.

I am not to be visited by any save by him alone who brings my food."[2]

"So be it, lord"
replied those monks to the Exalted One.

Thus no one visited the Exalted One
save the one who brought his food.

Now at the end of that half-month the Exalted One,
leaving his solitude,
addressed the monks, saying:

"Monks, I have been dwelling partly[3] in the same manner as I did after I first attamed enlightenment.

Thus I came to know
what is experienced as a result of wrong view,
and what is experienced as a result of right view
what is experienced as a result of wrong aim,
and what is experienced as a result of right aim
what is experienced as a result of wrong speech, and what is experienced as a result of right speech
what is experienced as a result of wrong action,
and what is experienced as a result of right action
what is experienced as a result of wrong living, and what is experienced as a result of right living
what is experienced as a result of wrong effort, and what is experienced as a result of right effort
what is experienced as a result of wrong mindfulness, and what is experienced as a result of right mindfulness

what is experienced as a result of wrong concentration,
and what is experienced as a result of right concentration:

likewise what is experienced as a result of desire,[4] what is experienced as a result of directed thought,[5] what is experienced as a result of perception.

§

When desire is not suppressed,
directed thought is not suppressed,
perception is not suppressed.

Owing to these
there is experience.[6]

■

When desire is suppressed, but directed [12] thought
and perception
are not suppressed,
owing to these
there is experience.

■

When desire
and directed thought
are suppressed,
but not perception,
then there is experience.)[7]

■

When desire
and directed thought
and perception,
are suppressed,
owing to that there is experience.

■

For one who has not attained
there is the effort to do so.[8]

When that state is attained, owing to that there is experience."[9]

---

[1] I follow Comy. in the numbering of suttas. Text calls this section §11. [Ed.: changed in later versions of the PTS Pali.]

[2] Piṇḍa-pāta-nīhāraka Cf. infra on text 320.

[3] Padesena. Cf. Asḷ 30; Expos. i, 38. It seems to mean partim, i.e. for two weeks he examined certain states, and for three months (as below) certain other states.

[4] The eight kinds of lustful thoughts. Comy.

[5] The first trance.

[6] Vedayitaṇ.

[7] Text brackets parts not found in Burmese MSS. 1-2.

[8] Text atthi āyāmaṇ, but Comy. vāyāman ti = viriyaṃ.

[9] Comy. 'Super-worldly experiences of the fourth path.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 12

Dutiya Vihāra Suttaṃ

Way of Dwelling (b)

---

[12]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, I desire to dwell in solitude
for three months.

I am not to be visited by any
save by him alone who brings my food."

"So be it, lord"
replied those monks to the Exalted One.

Thus no one visited the Exalted One
save the one who brought his food.

Now at the end of those three months the Exalted One,
leaving his solitude,
addressed the monks, saying:

"Monks, I have been dwelling partly[1]
in the same manner as I did after I first attamed enlightenment.

Thus I came to know
what is experienced as a result of wrong view, and what is experienced as a result of suppressing wrong view,
and what is experienced as a result of right view and what is experienced as a result of suppressing right view,
what is experienced as a result of wrong aim,
and what is experienced as a result of suppressing wrong aim,
and what is experienced as a result of right aim and what is experienced as a result of suppressing right aim,
what is experienced as a result of wrong speech, and what is experienced as a result of suppressing wrong speech,
and what is experienced as a result of right speech and what is experienced as a result of suppressing right speech,
what is experienced as a result of wrong action,
and what is experienced as a result of suppressing wrong action,
and what is experienced as a result of right action and what is experienced as a result of suppressing right action,

what is experienced as a result of wrong living, and what is experienced as a result of suppressing wrong living,
and what is experienced as a result of right living and what is experienced as a result of suppressing right living,
what is experienced as a result of wrong effort, and what is experienced as a result of suppressing wrong effort,
and what is experienced as a result of right effort and what is experienced as a result of suppressing right effort,
what is experienced as a result of wrong mindfulness, and what is experienced as a result of suppressing wrong mindfulness,
and what is experienced as a result of right mindfulness and what is experienced as a result of suppressing right mindfulness,
what is experienced as a result of wrong concentration, and what is experienced as a result of suppressing wrong concentration,
and what is experienced as a result of right concentration:
and what is experienced as a result of suppressing right concentration.

Likewise I came to know what is experienced as a result of desire, and what is experienced as a result of suppressing desire,
what is experienced as a result of directed thought,
and what is experienced as a result of suppressing directed thought,
what is experienced as a result of perception.
and what is experienced as a result of suppressing perception.

When desire is not suppressed,
directed thought is not suppressed,
perception is not suppressed.

Owing to these
there is experience.

(When desire is suppressed,
but directed thought
and perception
are not suppressed,

owing to these
there is experience.

When desire
and directed thought
are suppressed,
but not perception,
then there is experience.)[2]

When desire
and directed thought
and perception,
are suppressed,
owing to that there is experience.

For one who has not attained
there is the effort to do so.

When that state is attained,
owing to that there is experience."

---

[1] Cf. Expos. loc, cit. supra: Padesena, as above.

[2] Text brackets parts not found in Burmese MSS. 1-2.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 13

Sekha Suttaṃ

Learner[1]

---

[13]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a certain monk came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side he said to the Exalted One: -

"'A learner, a learner!' lord, is the saying.

Pray, lord, how far is one a learner?

"Herein, monk, a monk is imperfectly[2] possessed of right view, imperfectly possessed of right aim, imperfectly possessed of right speech, imperfectly possessed of right action, imperfectly possessed of right living, imperfectly possessed of right effort, imperfectly possessed of right mindfulness, imperfectly possessed of right concentration.

Thus far, monk, he is a learner."

---

[1] Cf. Nid. i, 493, etc.; sikkhatī ti sekho

[2] Sekhāya.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 14

Paṭhama Uppāda Suttaṃ

By the Uprising (a)[1]

---

[13]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These eight conditions, monks,
not having yet arisen,
when cultivated and made much of,
come into being,
but only on the arising of the Tathāgata,
an arahant,
a fully enlightened one.

What eight?

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

These are the eight conditions, monks,
not having yet arisen,
when cultivated and made much of,
come into being,
but only on the arising of the Tathāgata,
an arahant,
a fully enlightened one."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iii, 34 n. 3.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 15

Dutiya Uppāda Suttaṃ

By the Uprising (b)

---

[13]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These eight conditions, monks,
not having yet arisen,
when cultivated and made much of,
come into being,
but only under the rule of the Happy One.

What eight?

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

These, monks, are the eight conditions which, not having yet arisen, come not into being save under the rule of the Happy One."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 16

Paṭhama Parisuddha Suttaṃ

Utterly Pure (a)

---

[13]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These eight conditions, monks,
utterly pure,
stainless,
void of sin,
not having yet arisen,
come into being
only on the [14] appearance of a Tathāgata,
an arahant,
a fully enlightened one.

What eight?

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

These, monks, are the eight conditions
utterly pure,
stainless,
void of sin,
not having yet arisen,
come into being
only on the appearance of a Tathāgata,
an arahant,
a fully enlightened one."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 17

Dutiya Parisuddha Suttaṃ

Utterly Pure (b)

---

[14]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These eight conditions, monks,
utterly pure,
stainless,
void of sin,
not having yet arisen,
come not into being
save under the rule of the Happy One.

What eight?

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness,
right concentration.

These, monks, are the eight conditions
utterly pure,
stainless,
void of sin,
not having yet arisen,
come not into being
save under the rule of the Happy One."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 18

Kukkuṭ'Ārāma Suttaṃ

Cock's Pleasaunce (a)

---

[14]

THUS have I heard:

Once the venerable Ānanda
and the venerable Bhadda[1]
were staying at Cock's Pleasaunce
at Pāṭaliputta.[2]

Then the venerable Bhadda,
rising from his solitude at eventide,
came to see the venerable Ānanda,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,

and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Bhadda said this
to the venerable Ānanda:

"'The unrighteous life!
The unrighteous life!'
friend Ānanda,
is the saying.

Pray, friend, what is the unrighteous life?"

"Well said, well said, friend Bhadda![3]

Welcome is your penetration,[4]
welcome your ready wit,
and goodly is your [15] question.

You ask me the meaning of the unrighteous life, do you not?"

"I do, friend."

"Well, friend, it is just that wrong eightfold way,
to wit:

Wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
and wrong concentration."

---

[1] The same couple converse at the same place, infra text 171.

[2] Capital of Magadha. Cf. Rhys Davids's Buddhist India, pp. 203, 262; UdA. 416-9.

[3] At Brethren, 231 n. Mrs. Rhys Davids calls him Faustus ('lucky'). He puns on the name, as below loc. cit. and A. ii, 177. For Bhaddako cf. Vin. v, 144, bhaddako te ummango (sic.), yoniso paripucchasi At K.S. iv, 178, the same reply is given to another questioner, not Bhadda. So the fact of the pun is doubtful, or, as seems more probable, the facts are muddled in recording. For in a collection of this size (7,762 suttas?) learned by heart, some confusion is inevitable.

[4] Ummagga (lit. a tunnel, an underground way, a boring into). In bad sense, i.e. when contrasted as vāma-maggo (left-hand path) with dakkhiṇa-maggo it means 'wrong path,' as at Thig. 94, 1174; JA. v, 260, etc. Comy. defines as pāñña-ummagga, paññā-vimaṇsatta, paññā-gavesanaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 19

Dutiya Kukkuṭ'Ārāma Suttaṃ

Cock's Pleasaunce (b)

---

[15]

THUS have I heard:

Once the venerable Ānanda
and the venerable Bhadda
were staying at Cock's Pleasaunce
at Pāṭaliputta.

Then the venerable Bhadda,
rising from his solitude at eventide,
came to see the venerable Ānanda,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,

and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Bhadda said this
to the venerable Ānanda:

"'The righteous life!
The righteous life!'
friend Ānanda,
is the saying.

Pray, friend, what is the righteous life and in what does the righteous life end?"

"Well said, well said, friend Bhadda!

Welcome is your penetration,
welcome your ready wit,
and goodly is your question.

You ask me the meaning of the righteous life
and in what does the righteous life end,
do you not?"

"I do, friend."

"Well, friend, it is just that Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness
and right concentration."

The destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion, friend, — that is what this righteous life ends in."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
2. Vihāra Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

2. Dwelling

Sutta 20

Tatiya Kukkuṭ'Ārāma Suttaṃ

Cock's Pleasaunce (c)

---

ed1 Woodward omits.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 21

Micchatta Suttaṃ

Perversion

---

[16]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
both perversion
and perfection.[1]

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is perversion?

It is as follows:

Wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
wrong concentration.

This, monks, is perversion.

§

And what, monks, is perfection?

It is as follows:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,

right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is called 'perfection'".

---

[1] Micchattaṇ and sammattaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 22

Akusala-Dhamma Suttaṃ

Unprofitable States

---

[16]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
both unprofitable states and profitable states.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, are unprofitable states?

It is as follows:

Wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
wrong concentration.

These, monks, are called 'unprofitable states'.

§

And what are profitable states?

It is as follows:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,

right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

These, monks, are called 'profitable states'".

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 23

Paṭhama Paṭipadā Suttaṃ

Practice (a)[1]

---

[16]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks, both wrong practice and right practice.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is wrong practice?

It is as follows:

Wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
[17] wrong concentration.

This, monks, is called 'wrong practice'.

§

And what, monks, is right practice?

It is as follows:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is called 'right practice'".

---

[1] Paṭipadā, progress, approach, practice, etc.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 24

Dutiya Paṭipadā Suttaṃ

Practice (b)

---

[17]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, whether in householder or recluse,
I praise no wrong practice.

If a householder or recluse practise perversity, then in consequence of
and because of
his practice of perversity
he is no winner[1] of the Method,
the Norm
and the good.[2]

And what, monks, is wrong practice?

It is as follows:

Wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
wrong concentration.

This, monks, is called 'wrong practice'.

Whether in householder or recluse, monks,
I praise not wrong practice.

For if a householder or recluse practise perversity, then in consequence of
and because of
his practice of perversity
he is no winner of the Method,

the Norm
and the good.

§

But, monks, I do praise right practice, whether in householder or recluse.

If a householder or recluse be given to right practice, then in consequence of
and because of his right practice
he is a winner of the Method,
the Norm
and the good.

And what, monks, is right practice?

It is as follows:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is called 'right practice'.

Whether in householder or recluse, monks, I praise right practice.

For, monks, whether a man be householder or recluse, if be given to right practice,
then in consequence of
and because of his right practice
he is a winner of the Method,
the Norm
and the good.

---

[1] Ārādako.

[2] Ñāyaṇ, dhammaṇ, kusalaṇ. Comy. defines as ariya-magga, dhammaṇ. This passage is quoted by the rājah Milinda to Nāgasena, M.P. 243. At Dialog. ii, 327 n. 'Practical Buddhism is summed up (M. i, 181, 197) as exertion in ñāya, dhamma and kusala, the Method, the Norm and the good. Ñāya is defined at S. v, 388 as what comes pretty much to our "method" in philosophy.' Cf. Mrs. Rhys Davids's Buddhism (1912), p. 90.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 25

A-Sappurisa Suttaṃ

The Unworthy (a)[1]

---

[18]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
both the unworthy man and the worthy man.

Do ye listen to it.

And who, monks, is the unworthy man?

Herein, monks, a certain one has
wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
wrong concentration.

This one, monks, is called 'unworthy.'

§

And who, monks, is the worthy?

Herein, monks, a certain one has
right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness
right concentration.

This one, monks, is called 'the worthy.'"

---

[1] Asappurisa (= asant + purisa).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 26

Dutiya A-Sappurisa Suttaṃ

The Unworthy (b)

---

[18]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks, both the unworthy and the still more unworthy than he.

I will teach you, monks,
both the worthy
and the still more worthy than he.

Do ye listen to it.

§

And who, monks, is the unworthy?

Herein, monks, a certain one has
wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
wrong concentration.

This one, monks, is called 'unworthy.'

■

And who, monks, is the still more unworthy than he?

Herein, monks, a certain one has
wrong view,
wrong aim,

wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
wrong concentration:
but he has also wrong knowledge and wrong liberation.

This one, monks, is called
'one who is still more unworthy than the unworthy.'

§

And who, monks, is the worthy?

Herein, monks, a certain one has
right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This one, monks, is called 'the worthy.'

■

And who, monks, is the still more worthy than he?

Herein, monks, a certain one has
right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration;
but he has also right knowledge and right liberation.

This one, monks, is called
'he who is still more worthy than the worthy.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 27

Kumbha Suttaṃ

The Pot

---

[19]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, a pot without support[1]
is easily upset,[2]
and one with support is hard to upset,
even so, monks, the mind that is without support
is easily upset,
the mind that has support is hard to upset.

And what, monks, is the support of mind?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This is the mind's support.

"Just as, monks, a pot without support
is easily upset,
and one with support is hard to upset,
even so, monks, the mind that is without support
is easily upset,
the mind that has support is hard to upset.

---

[1] Anādhāro.

[2] Suppavattiyo. Comy. reads suppavattanīyo, 'rolls at random.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 28

Samādhi Suttaṃ

Concentration

---

[19]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
the Ariyan right concentration which is associated and equipped.[1]

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is the Ariyan right concentration which is associated and equipped?

It is (associated with) right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness.[ed1]

Now, monks, the one-pointedness[2] of mind which is equipped with these seven limbs is called
'the Ariyan right concentration one which is associated, likewise which is equipped.'"

---

[1] 8a-upanisaṇ sa-parikkhāraṇ. Cf. K.S. ii, 25 n. Comy. paraphrases thus: sappacayaṇ saparivāraṇ.

[2] Cf. A. i, 198 (of puggala).

[ed1] Woodward includes 'right concentration' in this list in error.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 29

Vedanā Suttaṃ

Feeling

---

[19]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"There are these three feelings, monks.[1]

What three?

Feeling that is pleasant,
feeling that is painful, feeling [20] that is neither pleasant nor painful.

These are the three feelings.

By the comprehension, monks, of these three feelings
the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

That which is right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

By the comprehension
of these three feelings
the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iv, 136, etc.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
3. Micchatta Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

3. Perversion

Sutta 30

Uttiya (or Uttika) Suttaṃ

Feeling

---

[20]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Now the venerable Uttiya[1] came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
the venerable Uttiya said this to the Exalted One:

"Here, lord, when I was secluded in solitude, this discursive thought came to me:

'Five sensual elements[2] were spoken of by the Exalted One.

I wonder what are those five sensual elements so spoken of by the Exalted One.'"

"Well said, well said, Uttiya!

Five indeed are the sensual elements spoken of by me.

What five?

There are objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are scents cognizable by the nose
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,

passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are savours cognizable by the tongue
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful
and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These, Uttiya, are the five sensual elements of which I spoke.

Now, Uttiya, it is by abandoning these five sensual elements that the Ariyan eightfold way is to be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

It is right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

By abandoning these five sensual elements, Uttiya, this Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated."

---

[1] Cf. infra, [Text] 166; A. v, 193; Brethren, 34 n, Doubtless the same as there. Text v.l. Uttika. Comy. does not notice this sutta (see note on next section).

[2] Cf. K.S. iv, 56 ff., etc.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct[1]

Sutta 31

Paṭipatti Suttaṃ

Conduct

---

[21]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, I will teach you wrong conduct and right conduct.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is wrong conduct?

It is as follows:

Wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
wrong concentration.

This, monks, is called 'wrong conduct.'

§

And what, monks, is right conduct?

It is as follows:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,

right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is called 'right conduct.'"

---

[1] Comy. does not number the following suttas till p. 45 of text, which is unusual. Léon Feer (Introduction, p. vi vol. v) discusses the matter at length, and concludes that the next two chapters were 'inserted, apparently, as a lengthening of the fourth chapter.' I have therefore, numbered them as sub-sections of cap. 4. Text calls them Nos. 31-148. [Ed note: we follow the PTS Pali text numbering but insert the Sub-headings.]

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 32

Paṭipanna Suttaṃ

Conducted

---

[21]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, I will teach you both the wrongly conducted and the rightly conducted.

Do ye listen to it.

And who, monks, is the wrongly conducted?

Herein, monks, a certain one has wrong view,
wrong aim,
wrong speech,
wrong action,
wrong living,
wrong effort,
wrong mindfulness
wrong concentration.

This one is called 'wrongly conducted.'

§

And who, monks, is rightly conducted?

Herein, monks, a certain one has right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This one is called 'rightly conducted.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 33

Viraddha Suttaṃ

Neglected and Undertaken

---

[21]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"By whomsoever, monks, the Ariyan eightfold way is neglected,[1]
by them is neglected the Ariyan eightfold way that leads to the utter destruction of ill.

By whomsoever the Ajiyan eightfold way is undertaken, by them is undertaken the Ariyan eightfold way
that leads to the utter destruction of ill.

And what, monks, is the Aiiyan eightfold way?

It is as follows:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

"By whomsoever, monks, the Ariyan eightfold way is neglected,
by them is neglected the Ariyan eightfold way
that leads to the utter destruction of ill.

By whomsoever the Ajiyan eightfold way is undertaken,
by them is undertaken the Ariyan eightfold way
that leads to the utter destruction of ill."

---

[1] Viraddho (virajjhati) as opposed to araddho. Cf. infra, pp. 82, 179, 254, 294 of text.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 34

Pāraṇgama Suttaṃ

Crossing Over[1]

---

[22]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These eight conditions, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduce to that state in which no further shore and no hither shore exist.[2]

What eight?

They are as follows:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

These, monks, are the eight conditions."

Thus spake the Exalted One.

So saying the Happy One added this further as Teacher:[3]

Few are they of mortal men
Who have reached the further shore:[4]
But the crowd of other folk
On this side fare up and down.
They who follow in the teaching
Of the Norm expounded well,

They shall reach the shore and pass
The realm of Death so hard to cross.[5]

Giving up the state of darkness[6]
Let the wise pursue the light:[7]
Giving up home for the homeless,
In solitude where joys are rare,[8]
[23] Let him long for bliss unbounded.
Leaving lusts and owning naught
Let the wise man cleanse himself
From the passions of the heart.

They whose mind is rightly cultured
In the wisdom's (seven) limbs,[9] -
Glad to have surrendered clinging,[10]
Glad to be from bondage loosed,[11]
Canker-cured,[12] they, all-resplendent, E'en in this world are at peace.[13]

---

[1] Pārangamo. Cf. text, pp. 81, 180.

[2] A-pāra-apāra-Nibbāna.

[3] Dhp. v, 85-9; A. v, 232.

[4] Tīraṇ. At A. v, 233 the Buddha says the two shores are breaking and keeping the precepts. At A. v, 232 (as here) it is the right and wrong eightfold way.

[5] Cf. Itiv. 57; S. iv, 157.

[6] Kaṇha-dhammaṇ. Cf. Sn. v, 526. Comy. akusala-dhammaṇ.

[7] Read sukkaṇ for kaṇhaṇ of text.

[8] Cf. Dhp. 99, yathā na ramati jano. (Fausböll seclusione difficili delectatu).

[9] Satta-bojjhangesu.

[10] Cf. S. i, 236, anādānā.

[11] Anupādāya ratā (the substrate).

[12] Khīṇāsavā.

[13] Parinibbutā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 35

Paṭhama Sāmaññā Suttaṃ

The Life of the Recluse (a)

---

[23]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
both the life of the recluse[1] and the fruits of the life of the recluse.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is the life of the recluse?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This is called
'the life of the recluse.'

§

And what, monks, are
the fruits of the life of the recluse?

They are the fruit of stream-winning,
the fruit of once returning,
the fruit of not returning
and the fruit of arahantship.

These, monks, are called
'the fruits of the life of the recluse.'"

---

[1] Cf. Pts. of Controv., p. 208.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 36

Dutiya Sāmaññā Suttaṃ

The Life of the Recluse (b)

---

[23]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks, both the life of the recluse and the aim of the life of the recluse.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is the life of the recluse?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This is called
'the life of the recluse.'

§

And what, monks, is
the aim of the life of the recluse?

The destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion.

These, monks, are called
'the aim of the life of the recluse.'"[1]

[1] Cf. Pts. of Controv., p. 208.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 37

Paṭhama Brahmañña Suttaṃ

The Highest Life (a)

---

[24]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
both the highest life[1]
and the fruits of the highest life.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is the highest life?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This is called
'the highest life.'

§

And what, monks, are
the fruits of the highest life?

They are the fruit of stream-winning,
the fruit of once returning,
the fruit of not returning
and the fruit of arahantship.

These, monks, are called
'the fruits of the highest life.'"

---

[1] Brahmaññaṇ

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 38

Dutiya Brahmaññā Suttaṃ

The Highest Life (b)

---

[24]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks, both the highest life and the aim of the highest life.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is the highest life?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This is called
'the highest life.'

§

And what, monks, is
the aim of the highest life?

The destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion.

These, monks, are called
'the aim of the highest life.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 39

Paṭhama Brahma-Cariya Suttaṃ

The Best Practice (a)

---

[24]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks, both the best practice[1]
and the fruits of the best practice.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is the best practice?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This is called
'the best practice.'

§

And what, monks, are
the fruits of the best practice?

They are the fruit of stream-winning,
the fruit of once returning,
the fruit of not returning
and the fruit of arahantship.

These, monks, are called
'the fruits of the best practice.'"

---

[1] Brahmicariya. Cf. n. supra, and on cap. vi, i, I also translate elsewhere as 'the holy life.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct

Sutta 40

Dutiya Brahma-Cariya Suttaṃ

The Best Practice (b)

---

[24]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks, both the best practice and the aim of the best practice.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is the best practice?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This is called
'the best practice.'

§

[25] And what, monks, is
the aim of the best practice?

The destruction of lust,
the destruction of hatred,
the destruction of illusion.

These, monks, are called
'the aim of the best practice.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
Añña-Titthiya-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

Of Other Views — Repetition

Sutta 41

Virāga Suttaṃ

Dispassion

---

[25]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a great number of monks came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the Exalted One said to them: -

"Monks, if the wanderers holding other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friends, for which the holy life is lived
under (the rule of) Gotama the recluse?'[1]

Thus questioned, monks,
ye should reply thus
to those wanderers of other views:

'With dispassion for its aim, friends,[2]
the holy life is lived
under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

■

But if, monks, the wanderers of other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there a way,[3]
is there a practice
leading to dispassion?' -

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a way,
there is indeed a practice
leading to dispassion.'

And what, monks, is the way,
what the practice
leading to dispassion?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,

right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is the way,
this is the practice
leading to dispassion.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

---

[1] Cf. supra, I, 1, v (kimattha).

[2] Rāga-virāg'atthaṇ.

[3] Text omits maggo.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
Añña-Titthiya-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

Of Other Views — Repetition

Sutta 42

Saṇyojana Suttaṃ

Fetter

---

[25]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a great number of monks came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the Exalted One said to them: -

"Monks, if the wanderers holding other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friends, for which the holy life is lived
under (the rule of) Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, monks,
ye should reply thus
to those wanderers of other views:

'With the aim of destroying the fetters, friends,
the holy life is lived
under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

But if, monks, the wanderers of other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there a way,
is there a practice
leading to destroying the fetters?' -

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a way,
there is indeed a practice
leading to destroying the fetters.'

And what, monks, is the way,
what the practice
leading to destroying the fetters?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,
right action,

right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is the way,
this is the practice
leading to destroying the fetters.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
Añña-Titthiya-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

Of Other Views — Repetition

Sutta 43

Anusaya Suttaṃ

Tendency

---

[26]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a great number of monks came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the Exalted One said to them: -

"Monks, if the wanderers holding other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friends, for which the holy life is lived
under (the rule of) Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, monks,
ye should reply thus
to those wanderers of other views:

'With the aim of uprooting of tendency,[1] friends, the holy life is lived
under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

■

But if, monks, the wanderers of other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there a way,
is there a practice
leading to the uprooting of tendency?' -

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a way,
there is indeed a practice
leading to the uprooting of tendency.'

And what, monks, is the way,
what the practice
leading to the uprooting of tendency?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,
right speech,

right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is the way,
this is the practice
leading to the uprooting of tendency.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

---

[1] Cf. S. ii, 252; Compend. 20, Anusayaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
Añña-Titthiya-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

Of Other Views — Repetition

Sutta 44

Addhāna Suttaṃ

The Way Out

---

[26]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a great number of monks came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the Exalted One said to them: -

"Monks, if the wanderers holding other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friends, for which the holy life is lived
under (the rule of) Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, monks,
ye should reply thus
to those wanderers of other views:

'With the aim of thorough comprehension of the way out,[1] friends,
the holy life is lived
under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

■

But if, monks, the wanderers of other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there a way,
is there a practice
leading to the thorough comprehension of the way out?' -

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a way,
there is indeed a practice
leading to the thorough comprehension of the way out.'

And what, monks, is the way,
what the practice
leading to the thorough comprehension of the way out?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,

right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is the way,
this is the practice
leading to the thorough comprehension of the way out.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

---

[1] Addhāna; text, infra, p. 236. Comy. saṇsār'addhānaṇ = nibbānaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
Añña-Titthiya-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

Of Other Views — Repetition

Sutta 45

Āsavānaṃ Khaya Suttaṃ

Destruction of the Āsavas

---

[26]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a great number of monks came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the Exalted One said to them: -

"Monks, if the wanderers holding other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friends, for which the holy life is lived
under (the rule of) Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, monks,
ye should reply thus
to those wanderers of other views:

'With the aim of destruction of the āsavas, friends,
the holy life is lived
under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

■

But if, monks, the wanderers of other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there a way,
is there a practice
leading to the destruction of the āsavas?' -

thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a way,
there is indeed a practice
leading to the destruction of the āsavas.'

And what, monks, is the way,
what the practice
leading to the destruction of the āsavas?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,

right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is the way,
this is the practice
leading to the destruction of the āsavas.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
Añña-Titthiya-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

Of Other Views — Repetition

Sutta 46

Vijjā-Vimutti Suttaṃ

Release by Knowledge

---

[26]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a great number of monks came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the Exalted One said to them: -

"Monks, if the wanderers holding other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friends, for which the holy life is lived
under (the rule of) Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, monks,
ye should reply thus
to those wanderers of other views:

'With the realization of the fruits of knowledge for its aim, friends,
the holy life is lived
under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

■

But if, monks, the wanderers of other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there a way,
is there a practice
leading to the realization of the fruits of knowledge?' -

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a way,
there is indeed a practice
leading to the realization of the fruits of knowledge.'

And what, monks, is the way,
what the practice
leading to the realization of the fruits of knowledge?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,

right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is the way,
this is the practice
leading to the realization of the fruits of knowledge.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
Aññа-Titthiya-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

Of Other Views — Repetition

Sutta 47

Ñāṇa Suttaṃ

Knowing

---

[26]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a great number of monks came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the Exalted One said to them: -

"Monks, if the wanderers holding other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friends, for which the holy life is lived
under (the rule of) Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, monks,
ye should reply thus
to those wanderers of other views:

'With knowing and seeing[1] for its aim, friends,
the holy life is lived
under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

■

But if, monks, the wanderers of other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there a way,
is there a practice
leading to knowing and seeing?' -

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a way,
there is indeed a practice
leading to knowing and seeing.'

And what, monks, is the way,
what the practice
leading to knowing and seeing?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,

right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is the way,
this is the practice
leading to knowing and seeing.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

---

[1] Ñāṇa-dassanā

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
Añña-Titthiya-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

Of Other Views — Repetition

Sutta 48

Anupādā Suttaṃ

Without Grasping

---

[26]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then a great number of monks came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side the Exalted One said to them: -

"Monks, if the wanderers holding other views should thus question you:

'What is it, friends, for which the holy life is lived
under (the rule of) Gotama the recluse?'

Thus questioned, monks,
ye should reply thus
to those wanderers of other views:

'With final emancipation without grasping[1] for its aim, friends,
the holy life is lived
under the rule of Gotama the recluse.'

■

But if, monks, the wanderers of other views
should thus question you:

'But, friends, is there a way,
is there a practice
leading to final emancipation without grasping?' -

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers of other views:

'Friends, there is indeed a way,
there is indeed a practice
leading to final emancipation without grasping.'

And what, monks, is the way,
what the practice
leading to final emancipation without grasping?

It is just this Ariyan eightfold way,
to wit:

Right view,
right aim,

right speech,
right action,
right living,
right effort,
right mindfulness
right concentration.

This, monks, is the way,
this is the practice
leading to final emancipation without grasping.

Thus questioned, monks,
thus should ye make reply
to those wanderers holding other views."

---

[1] Anupādā-parinibbāna. Cf. K.S. iv, 25.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Sutta 49

Kalyāṇa-Mittatā Suttaṃ

Friendship with the Lovely

---

[27]

Just as, monks, the dawn is the forerunner,
the harbinger,[1]
of the arising of the sun, even so friendship with the lovely
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who possesses friendship with the lovely, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way, that he will make much
of the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk who possesses earnestness
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.[2]

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That, Ānanda, is how a monk who possesses earnestness
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] Pubba-nimittaṇ

[2] Vossagga

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Sutta 50

Sīlaṃ Suttaṃ

Virtue

---

[27]

Just as, monks, the dawn is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so possession of virtue[1]
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is possessed of virtue, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.|| ||

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That, Ānanda, is how a monk
who is possessed of virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] Sīla-sampadā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Sutta 51

Chandaṃ Suttaṃ

Desire

---

[28]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so possession of desire[1]
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is possessed of desire, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That, Ānanda, is how a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] Chando. 'Desire to do good' (kuslaṇ). Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Sutta 52

Attaṃ Suttaṃ

Self-possession

---

[28]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so self-possession[1]
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising
of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is self-possessed, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is self-possessed
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That, Ānanda, is how a monk
who is self-possessed
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] Atta-sampada = sampanna-cittatā. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Sutta 53

Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

Insight

---

[28]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so insight[1] is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who has insight, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk who has insight
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That, Ānanda, is how a monk who has insight
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] Diṭṭhi-sampadā = ñāṇa-sampatti. Comy.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Sutta 54

Appamāda Sutta

Earnestness

---

[28]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so possession of earnestness
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who possesses earnestness, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk who possesses earnestness
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That, Ānanda, is how a monk who possesses earnestness
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Sutta 55

Yoniso Suttaṃ

Insight

---

[28]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so possession of systematic[1] thought
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is possessed of systematic thought, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.|| ||

And how, monks, does a monk who is possessed of systematic thought
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That, Ānanda, is how a monk who is possessed of systematic thought
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] Yoniso.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Sutta 56

Kalyāṇa-Mittatā Suttaṃ

Friendship with the Lovely

---

[29]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
so friendship with the lovely
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is a friend of the lovely, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.|| ||

And how, monks, does a monk
who is a friend of the lovely
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That, monks, is how a monk who is a friend,
an associate,
an intimate of what is lovely,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Sutta 57

Sīla Suttaṃ

Virtue

---

[29]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so possession of virtue
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is possessed of virtue, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That, monks, is how a monk who is possessed of virtue
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Sutta 58

Chandaṃ Suttaṃ

Desire

---

[29]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so possession of desire
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is possessed of desire, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That, monks, is how a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Sutta 59

Attaṃ Suttaṃ

Self-possession

---

[29]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so self-possession
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is self-possessed, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is self-possessed
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That, monks, is how a monk
who is self-possessed
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Sutta 60

Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

Insight

---

[29]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so insight
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who has insight, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.|| ||

And how, monks, does a monk who has insight
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That, monks, is how a monk who has insight
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Sutta 61

Appamāda Sutta

Earnestness

---

[29]

Just as, monks, the dawn is the forerunner, the harbinger, of the arising of the sun, even so possession of earnestness is the forerunner, the harbinger, of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who possesses earnestness, monks, it may be expected that he will cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way, that he will make much of the Ariyan eightfold way. And how, monks, does a monk who possesses earnestness cultivate and make much of the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That, monks, is how a monk who possesses earnestness
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Suriyassa Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: The Sun — Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Sutta 62

Yoniso Suttaṃ

Insight

---

[29]

Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the sun,
even so possession of systematic[1] thought
is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

Of a monk who is possessed of systematic thought, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
the Ariyan eightfold way,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk who is possessed of systematic thought
cultivate and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That, monks, is how a monk who is possessed of systematic thought
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] Yoniso.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Paṭhama Eka-Dhamma Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: 1. The One Condition Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Suttas 63-69

---

[30]

Sutta 63

Kalyāṇa-Mmitta Suttaṃ

Friendship with the Lovely

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is friendship with the lovely.

Of the monk who is a friend of the lovely, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is a friend of the lovely
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is a friend of the lovely
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 64

Sīla Suttaṃ

Virtue

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of virtue.

Of the monk who is possessed of virtue, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 65

Chanda Suttaṃ

Desire

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of desire.

Of the monk who is possessed of desire, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 66

Atta Suttaṃ

Self-possession

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is self-possession.

Of the monk who is self-possessed, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is self-possessed
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk who is self-possess
cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 67

Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

Insight

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of insight.

Of the monk who possesses insight, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk who possesses insight
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses insight
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 68

Appamāda Suttaṃ

Earnestness

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of earnestness.

Of the monk who possesses earnestness, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk who possesses earnestness
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses earnestness
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 69

Yoniso Suttaṃ

Systematic Thought

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of systematic thought.

Of the monk who possesses systematic thought, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk who possesses systematic thought
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses systematic thought
cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Paṭhama Eka-Dhamma Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: 1. The One Condition Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Suttas 70-76

---

[30]

Sutta 70

Kalyāṇa-Mitta Suttaṃ

Friendship with the Lovely

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful
for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is friendship with the lovely.

Of the monk who is a friend of the lovely, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is a friend of the lovely
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 71

Sīla Suttaṃ

Virtue

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of virtue.

Of the monk who is possessed of virtue, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 72

Chanda Suttaṃ

Desire

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of desire.

Of the monk who is possessed of desire, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 73

Atta Suttaṃ

Self-possession

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is self-possession.

Of the monk who is self-possessed, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is self-possessed
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is self-possess
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 74

Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

Insight

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of insight.

Of the monk who possesses insight, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses insight
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses insight
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 75

Appamāda Suttaṃ

Earnestness

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of earnestness.

Of the monk who possesses earnestness, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses earnestness
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses earnestness
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 76

Yoniso Suttaṃ

Systematic Thought

There is one condition, monks, that is most useful for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of systematic thought.

Of the monk who possesses systematic thought, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses systematic thought
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses systematic thought
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Dutiya Eka-Dhamma Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: 2. The One Condition Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Suttas 77-83

---

[31]

Sutta 77

Kalyāṇa-Mitta Suttaṃ

Friendship with the Lovely

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I perceive, monks, no other single condition
by which the Ariyan eightfold way,
if not yet arisen, can arise,
or by which, if arisen,
the Axiyan eightfold way
can reach perfection of culture, save (the condition of) friendship with the lovely.

Of the monk who is a friend of the lovely, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is a friend of the lovely
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is a friend of the lovely
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 78

Sīla Suttaṃ

Virtue

"I perceive, monks, no other single condition
by which the Ariyan eightfold way,
if not yet arisen, can arise,
or by which, if arisen,
the Axiyan eightfold way
can reach perfection of culture, save possession of virtue.

Of the monk who is possessed of virtue, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 79

Chanda Suttaṃ

Desire

"I perceive, monks, no other single condition
by which the Ariyan eightfold way,
if not yet arisen, can arise,
or by which, if arisen,
the Axiyan eightfold way
can reach perfection of culture, save possession of desire.

Of the monk who is possessed of desire, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 80

Atta Suttaṃ

Self-possession

"I perceive, monks, no other single condition
by which the Ariyan eightfold way,
if not yet arisen, can arise,
or by which, if arisen,
the Axiyan eightfold way
can reach perfection of culture, save self-possession.

Of the monk who is self-possessed, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is self-possessed
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is self-possess
cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 81

Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

Insight

"I perceive, monks, no other single condition
by which the Ariyan eightfold way,
if not yet arisen, can arise,
or by which, if arisen,
the Axiyan eightfold way
can reach perfection of culture, save possession of insight.

Of the monk who possesses insight, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses insight
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses insight
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 82

Appamāda Suttaṃ

Earnestness

"I perceive, monks, no other single condition
by which the Ariyan eightfold way,
if not yet arisen, can arise,
or by which, if arisen,
the Axiyan eightfold way
can reach perfection of culture, save possession of earnestness.

Of the monk who possesses earnestness, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses earnestness
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses earnestness
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 83

Yoniso Suttaṃ

Systematic Thought

"I perceive, monks, no other single condition
by which the Ariyan eightfold way,
if not yet arisen, can arise,
or by which, if arisen,
the Axiyan eightfold way
can reach perfection of culture, save possession of systematic thought.

Of the monk who possesses systematic thought, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses systematic thought
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses systematic thought
cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Dutiya Eka-Dhamma Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: 2. The One Condition Repetition

2. Restraint of Passion

Suttas 84-90

---

[31]

Sutta 84

Kalyāṇa-Mitta Suttaṃ

Friendship with the Lovely

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful
for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is friendship with the lovely.

Of the monk who is a friend of the lovely, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is a friend of the lovely
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is a friend of the lovely
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 85

Sīla Suttaṃ

Virtue

There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful
for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of virtue.

Of the monk who is possessed of virtue, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of virtue
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 86

Chanda Suttaṃ

Desire

There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful
for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of desire.

Of the monk who is possessed of desire, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of desire
cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 87

Atta Suttaṃ

Self-possession

There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful
for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is self-possession.

Of the monk who is self-possessed, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is self-possessed
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who is self-possess
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 88

Diṭṭhi Suttaṃ

Insight

There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful
for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of insight.

Of the monk who possesses insight, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses insight
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses insight
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 89

Appamāda Suttaṃ

Earnestness

There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful
for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of earnestness.

Of the monk who possesses earnestness, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses earnestness
cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses earnestness
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 90

Yoniso Suttaṃ

Systematic Thought

There is one condition, monks,
that is most useful
for the arising of the Ariyan eightfold way.

What is that condition?

It is possession of systematic thought.

Of the monk who possesses systematic thought, monks,
it may be expected that he will cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks, does a monk
who possesses systematic thought
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, does a monk
who possesses systematic thought
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Gaṇgā Peyyāla
1. Viveka-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: Gaṇgā Repetition

1. Based on Seclusion

Suttas 91-102

---

[32]

Sutta 91

Paṭhama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 92

Dutiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates

and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 93

Tatiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 94

Catuttha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 95

Pañcama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates

and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 96

Chaṭṭha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges, Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 97

Paṭhama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 98

Dutiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 99

Tatiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 100

Catuttha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 101

Pañcama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 102

Chaṭṭha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way

flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Gaṇgā Peyyāla
2. Rāga-Vinaya-Nissitaṃ

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: Gaṇgā Repetition

2. Restaint of Passion

Suttas 103-114

---

[32]

Sutta 103

Paṭhama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 104

Dutiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,

slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 105

Tatiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 106

Catuttha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 107

Pañcama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,

slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 108

Chaṭṭha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,

slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 109

Paṭhama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 110

Dutiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 111

Tatiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,

slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 112

Catuttha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of

the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 113

Pañcama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way

flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 114

Chaṭṭha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of

the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Gaṇgā Peyyāla
3. Amat'Ogadha

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: Gaṇgā Repetition

3. Plunging into the Deathless

Suttas 115-126

---

[33]

Sutta 115

Paṭhama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,

has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 116

Dutiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,

slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 117

Tatiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,

has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of

the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 118

Catuttha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way

flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 119

Pañcama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,

has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 120

Chaṭṭha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

§

Sutta 121

Paṭhama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,

even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,

has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 122

Dutiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,

has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 123

Tatiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,

slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 124

Catuttha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,

slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,

has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 125

Pañcama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of

the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Sutta 126

Chaṭṭha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to the deathless.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to the deathless?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,

has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
has its goal in the deathless,
ends in the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of

the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to the deathless.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
4. Paṭipatti Vagga: Gaṇgā Peyyāla
4. Nibbāna-Ninna

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

4. On Conduct: Gaṇgā Repetition

4. Flowing to Nibbāna

Suttas 127-138

---

[33]

Sutta 127

Paṭhama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,

slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 128

Dutiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,

slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 129

Tatiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,

slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of

the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 130

Catuttha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way

flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 131

Pañcama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,

slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 132

Chaṭṭha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 133

Paṭhama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,

even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,

slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 134

Dutiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,

slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 135

Tatiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,

slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 136

Catuttha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,

slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,

slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 137

Pañcama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of

the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 138

Chaṭṭha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into Nibbāna,
has its goal in Nibbāna,
ends in Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows into Nibbāna,

slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows into Nibbāna,
slides into Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of

the Ariyan eightfold way
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
5. Appamāda Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

5. Earnestness

Suttas 139-148

---

[33]

Sutta 139

Tathāgata

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, of all creatures, whether footless or having two,
four,
or many feet;
whether having forms or formless;
whether conscious or unconscious,
or neither conscious nor unconscious, —
of these the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the fully Enlightened One,
is reckoned chief; —
even so, monks,
of all profitable conditions which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together[1] in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And [34] how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.[2]

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all creatures, whether footless or having two,
four,
or many feet;
whether having forms or formless;
whether conscious or unconscious,
or neither conscious nor unconscious, —
of these the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the fully Enlightened One,
is reckoned chief; —
even so, monks,
of all profitable conditions which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all creatures, whether footless or having two,
four,
or many feet;
whether having forms or formless;
whether conscious or unconscious,
or neither conscious nor unconscious, —
of these the Tathāgata,

the Arahant,
the fully Enlightened One,
is reckoned chief; —
even so, monks,
of all profitable conditions which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all creatures, whether footless or having two,
four,
or many feet;
whether having forms or formless;
whether conscious or unconscious,
or neither conscious nor unconscious, —
of these the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the fully Enlightened One,
is reckoned chief; —
even so, monks,
of all profitable conditions which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 140

The Foot[3]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all the foot-characteristics
of such creatures as roam about[4]
are joined together in the foot of the elephant, and as the elephant's foot
in size
is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all the foot-characteristics
of such creatures as roam about
are joined together in the foot of the elephant,
and as the elephant's foot
in size
is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all the foot-characteristics
of such creatures as roam about
are joined together in the foot of the elephant,
and as the elephant's foot
in size
is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all the foot-characteristics
of such creatures as roam about
are joined together in the foot of the elephant,
and as the elephant's foot
in size
is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates

and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[35]

Sutta 141

The Roof-peak[5]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, in a peaked house
all the rafters whatsoever
go together to the roof-peak,
slope to the roof-peak,
are joined together in the roof-peak,
and of them
the peak is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,

which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, in a peaked house
all the rafters whatsoever
go together to the roof-peak,
slope to the roof-peak,
are joined together in the roof-peak,
and of them
the peak is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, in a peaked house
all the rafters whatsoever
go together to the roof-peak,
slope to the roof-peak,
are joined together in the roof-peak,
and of them
the peak is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates

and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, in a peaked house
all the rafters whatsoever
go together to the roof-peak,
slope to the roof-peak,
are joined together in the roof-peak,
and of them
the peak is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 142

Wood

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all scented woods whatsoever
the dark sandal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,

which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all scented woods whatsoever
the dark sandal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all scented woods whatsoever
the dark sandal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all scented woods whatsoever
the dark sandal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 143

Heart-wood

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all scented heart-woods whatsoever
the red saldal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all scented heart-woods whatsoever
the red saldal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all scented heart-woods whatsoever
the red saldal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all scented heart-woods whatsoever
the red saldal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 144

Jasmine

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all scented flowers whatsoever
the jasmine[6] is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates

and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all scented flowers whatsoever
the jasmine is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates

and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all scented flowers whatsoever
the jasmine is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates

and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all scented flowers whatsoever
the jasmine is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates

and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 145

Prince

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, all petty princes[7] whatsoever
follow in the train[8] of the universal monarch,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, all petty princes whatsoever
follow in the train of the universal monarch,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, all petty princes whatsoever
follow in the train of the universal monarch,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, all petty princes whatsoever
follow in the train of the universal monarch,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 146

Moon

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all starry bodies whatsoever
the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part
of the radiance of the moon;
just as the moon is reckoned chief of them,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all starry bodies whatsoever
the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part
of the radiance of the moon;
just as the moon is reckoned chief of them,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all starry bodies whatsoever
the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part
of the radiance of the moon;
just as the moon is reckoned chief of them,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —

of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all starry bodies whatsoever
the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part
of the radiance of the moon;
just as the moon is reckoned chief of them,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,

which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[36]

Sutta 147

Sun[9]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, in the autumn season,
when the sky is opened up
and cleared of clouds,
the sun,
leaping up into the firmament,
drives away all darkness,
and shines
and burns
and flashes forth,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate

and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, in the autumn season,
when the sky is opened up
and cleared of clouds,
the sun,
leaping up into the firmament,
drives away all darkness,
and shines
and burns

and flashes forth,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, in the autumn season,
when the sky is opened up
and cleared of clouds,
the sun,
leaping up into the firmament,
drives away all darkness,
and shines
and burns
and flashes forth,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, in the autumn season,
when the sky is opened up
and cleared of clouds,
the sun,
leaping up into the firmament,
drives away all darkness,
and shines
and burns
and flashes forth,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

Sutta 148

Cloth[10]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all woven cloths whatsoever
the cloth of Benares[11] is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all woven cloths whatsoever
the cloth of Benares is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all woven cloths whatsoever
the cloth of Benares is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all woven cloths whatsoever
the cloth of Benares is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] Samosaranā. For similaar sections see below and K.S. iii, 132 ff.

[2] Ed.: Woodward abbreviates and notes: 'So text.'

[3] No. 140 of text.

[4] Jangamānaṇ. Cf. M. i, 184; S. i, 86; K.S. i, 3. In both places S. Comy. reads jangalānaṇ (as at S. v, 231). P. Dict. omits; but Childers s.v. jaṇgamati.

[5] Cf. S. ii, 262; K.S. ii, 75; S. iii, 156; K.S. iii, 132.

[6] Comy. sumana-puppha-gandho.

[7] Text, kuṭṭa-rājāno; Comy. kuḍḍa-, but refers to a reading khudda, which seems preferable. Cf. JA. v, 102, where it is taken as equal to pāpa-rājā.

[8] v.l. anuyuttā ('subject to').

[9] Cf. Itv. 20; K.S. i, 89; K.S. iii, 133 n.

[10] Cf. J.P.T.S., 1906, p. 132.

[11] Kāsika-vatthaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
6. Bala-Karaṇīya Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

6. Deeds Requiring Strength

Suttas 149-160

---

[36]

Sutta 149

Strength[1]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, whatsoever deeds requiring strength
are done,
all of them are done
in dependence on the earth,
with the earth for their support,
even so a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,[2] cultivates the Ariyan eightfold [37] way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way,

makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way."[ed1]

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as, monks, whatsoever deeds requiring strength
are done,
all of them are done
in dependence on the earth,
with the earth for their support,
even so a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,

supported by virtue,
cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way."

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as, monks, whatsoever deeds requiring strength
are done,
all of them are done
in dependence on the earth,
with the earth for their support,
even so a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,

supported by virtue,
cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way."

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as, monks, whatsoever deeds requiring strength
are done,
all of them are done
in dependence on the earth,
with the earth for their support,
even so a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way.

And how does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,

supported by virtue,
cultivate the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much,
of the Ariyan eightfold way."

Sutta 150

Seed[3]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, whatsoever species
of seed and vegetation
come to growth,
increase
and maturity,
all of them depend on the earth,
are supported by the earth;

even so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how does a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,

increase
and maturity of conditions.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as, monks, whatsoever species
of seed and vegetation
come to growth,
increase
and maturity,
all of them depend on the earth,
are supported by the earth;
even so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how does a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as, monks, whatsoever species
of seed and vegetation
come to growth,
increase
and maturity,
all of them depend on the earth,
are supported by the earth;
even so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how does a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as, monks, whatsoever species
of seed and vegetation
come to growth,
increase
and maturity,
all of them depend on the earth,

are supported by the earth;
even so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how does a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

Sutta 151

The Snake[4]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Supported, monks, by Himalaya,
lord of mountains,
snakes grow a body
and get strength.

When they have grown a body
and got strength there,
they go down to the tarns.[5]

From the tarns
they go down to the lakes,

From the lakes
they go down to the small rivers,

From the small rivers
they go down to the great rivers,

From the great rivers
they go down to the sea,
the mighty ocean.

There they get great size and growth of[6] body.

[38] Just so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how, monks, does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions."[7]

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Supported, monks, by Himalaya,
lord of mountains,
snakes grow a body
and get strength.

When they have grown a body
and got strength there,
they go down to the tarns.

From the tarns
they go down to the lakes,

From the lakes
they go down to the small rivers,

From the small rivers
they go down to the great rivers,

From the great rivers
they go down to the sea,

the mighty ocean.

There they get great size and growth of body.

Just so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how, monks, does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions."

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Supported, monks, by Himalaya,
lord of mountains,
snakes grow a body
and get strength.

When they have grown a body
and got strength there,
they go down to the tarns.

From the tarns
they go down to the lakes,

From the lakes
they go down to the small rivers,

From the small rivers
they go down to the great rivers,

From the great rivers
they go down to the sea,
the mighty ocean.

There they get great size and growth of body.

Just so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how, monks, does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions."

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Supported, monks, by Himalaya,
lord of mountains,
snakes grow a body
and get strength.

When they have grown a body
and got strength there,
they go down to the tarns.

From the tarns
they go down to the lakes,

From the lakes
they go down to the small rivers,

From the small rivers
they go down to the great rivers,

From the great rivers
they go down to the sea,
the mighty ocean.

There they get great size and growth of body.

Just so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how, monks, does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions."

Sutta 152

The Tree

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Suppose a tree, monks,
that inclines to the east,
slopes to the east,
tends to the east.

When cut down at the root,
in what direction would it fall?"

"As it slopes,
as it inclines,
as it tends, lord."

"Well, monks, even so
a monk, cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
inclines to Nibbāna,
slopes to Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna,.

And how does a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
incline to Nibbāna,
slope to Nibbāna,
tend to Nibbāna,?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
inclines to Nibbāna,
slopes to Nibbāna,
tends[8] to Nibbāna,.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Suppose a tree, monks,
that inclines to the east,
slopes to the east,
tends to the east.

When cut down at the root,
in what direction would it fall?"

"As it slopes,
as it inclines,
as it tends, lord."

"Well, monks, even so
a monk, cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
inclines to Nibbāna,
slopes to Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna,.

And how does a monk,
cultivating and makng much of

the Ariyan eightfold way,
incline to Nibbāna,
slope to Nibbāna,
tend to Nibbāna,?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
inclines to Nibbāna,
slopes to Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna,.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Suppose a tree, monks,
that inclines to the east,
slopes to the east,
tends to the east.

When cut down at the root,
in what direction would it fall?"

"As it slopes,
as it inclines,
as it tends, lord."

"Well, monks, even so
a monk, cultivating and makng much of

the Ariyan eightfold way,
inclines to Nibbāna,
slopes to Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna,.

And how does a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
incline to Nibbāna,
slope to Nibbāna,
tend to Nibbāna,?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
inclines to Nibbāna,
slopes to Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna,.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Suppose a tree, monks,
that inclines to the east,
slopes to the east,
tends to the east.

When cut down at the root,
in what direction would it fall?"

"As it slopes,
as it inclines,
as it tends, lord."

"Well, monks, even so
a monk, cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
inclines to Nibbāna,
slopes to Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna,.

And how does a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
incline to Nibbāna,
slope to Nibbāna,
tend to Nibbāna,?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
inclines to Nibbāna,
slopes to Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna,.

Sutta 153

The Pot

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as a pot,
if overset,
empties out its water,
and cannot take it in[9] again,
even so a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
empties out ill, unprofitable states
and cannot take them in again.[10]

And how, monks, can a monk,
by cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
empty out ill, unprofitable states
and not take them in again?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
[39] that ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
empties out ill, unprofitable states
and not take them in again.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as a pot,
if overset,
empties out its water,
and cannot take it in again,
even so a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
empties out ill, unprofitable states
and cannot take them in again.

And how, monks, can a monk,
by cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
empty out ill, unprofitable states
and not take them in again?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
empties out ill, unprofitable states
and not take them in again.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as a pot,
if overset,
empties out its water,
and cannot take it in again,
even so a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
empties out ill, unprofitable states
and cannot take them in again.

And how, monks, can a monk,
by cultivating and makng much of

the Ariyan eightfold way,
empty out ill, unprofitable states
and not take them in again?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
empties out ill, unprofitable states
and not take them in again.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as a pot,
if overset,
empties out its water,
and cannot take it in again,
even so a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,
empties out ill, unprofitable states
and cannot take them in again.

And how, monks, can a monk,
by cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way,

empty out ill, unprofitable states
and not take them in again?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how a monk,
cultivating and makng much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
empties out ill, unprofitable states
and not take them in again.

Sutta 154

Bearded Wheat[11]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Suppose monks, the spike of bearded wheat
or bearded barley
be well aimed.

When pressed by hand or foot,
it is possible
that it will pierce hand or foot
and draw blood.

Why so?

Because, monks,
the spike is well aimed.

Even so, monks,
owing to the right aim of way-culture
it is possible
that a monk will pierce ignorance,
will draw knowledge,
will realize Nibbāna,.

Why so?

Because, monks,
his view is well aimed.

And how, monks, does a monk
by view well aimed,
by well aimed way-culture
so pierce[12] ignorance,
draw knowledge
and realize Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk,
by view well aimed,
by well aimed way-culture
pierces ignorance,
draws knowledge
and realizes Nibbāna.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Suppose monks, the spike of bearded wheat
or bearded barley
be well aimed.

When pressed by hand or foot,
it is possible
that it will pierce hand or foot
and draw blood.

Why so?

Because, monks,
the spike is well aimed.

Even so, monks,
owing to the right aim of way-culture
it is possible
that a monk will pierce ignorance,
will draw knowledge,
will realize Nibbāna,.

Why so?

Because, monks,
his view is well aimed.

And how, monks, does a monk
by view well aimed,
by well aimed way-culture
so pierce ignorance,
draw knowledge
and realize Nibbāna?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how a monk,
by view well aimed,
by well aimed way-culture
pierces ignorance,
draws knowledge
and realizes Nibbāna.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Suppose monks, the spike of bearded wheat
or bearded barley
be well aimed.

When pressed by hand or foot,
it is possible
that it will pierce hand or foot
and draw blood.

Why so?

Because, monks,
the spike is well aimed.

Even so, monks,
owing to the right aim of way-culture
it is possible
that a monk will pierce ignorance,
will draw knowledge,
will realize Nibbāna,.

Why so?

Because, monks,
his view is well aimed.

And how, monks, does a monk
by view well aimed,
by well aimed way-culture
so pierce ignorance,
draw knowledge
and realize Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how a monk,
by view well aimed,

by well aimed way-culture
pierces ignorance,
draws knowledge
and realizes Nibbāna.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Suppose monks, the spike of bearded wheat
or bearded barley
be well aimed.

When pressed by hand or foot,
it is possible
that it will pierce hand or foot
and draw blood.

Why so?

Because, monks,
the spike is well aimed.

Even so, monks,
owing to the right aim of way-culture
it is possible
that a monk will pierce ignorance,
will draw knowledge,
will realize Nibbāna,.

Why so?

Because, monks,
his view is well aimed.

And how, monks, does a monk
by view well aimed,
by well aimed way-culture
so pierce ignorance,
draw knowledge
and realize Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how a monk,
by view well aimed,
by well aimed way-culture
pierces ignorance,
draws knowledge
and realizes Nibbāna.

Sutta 155

The Sky[13]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, divers winds blow in the sky, -
some winds blow from the east,
some winds blow from the west,
some winds blow from the north,
some winds blow from the south,
some winds are dusty,
some winds are dustless,
some winds are cool
some winds are hot
some winds are soft
some winds are boisterous.

Even so, monks,
when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
then in him
the four stations of mindfulness[14]
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture

reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment.

And how, monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
do the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment in him.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as, monks, divers winds blow in the sky, -
some winds blow from the east,
some winds blow from the west,
some winds blow from the north,
some winds blow from the south,
some winds are dusty,
some winds are dustless,
some winds are cool
some winds are hot
some winds are soft
some winds are boisterous.

Even so, monks,
when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
then in him
the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment.

And how, monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
do the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,

the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment in him.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as, monks, divers winds blow in the sky, -
some winds blow from the east,
some winds blow from the west,
some winds blow from the north,
some winds blow from the south,
some winds are dusty,
some winds are dustless,
some winds are cool
some winds are hot
some winds are soft
some winds are boisterous.

Even so, monks,
when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
then in him
the four stations of mindfulness
by culture

reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment.

And how, monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
do the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom

by culture
reach fulfilment?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment in him.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as, monks, divers winds blow in the sky, -
some winds blow from the east,

some winds blow from the west,
some winds blow from the north,
some winds blow from the south,
some winds are dusty,
some winds are dustless,
some winds are cool
some winds are hot
some winds are soft
some winds are boisterous.

Even so, monks,
when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
then in him
the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment.

And how, monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
do the four stations of mindfulness

by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
the four stations of mindfulness
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four best efforts,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the four bases of psychic power,
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the five faculties,
by culture

reach fulfilment,
the five powers
by culture
reach fulfilment,
the seven limbs of wisdom
by culture
reach fulfilment in him.

---

[40]

Sutta 156

The Rain-Cloud (a)

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, in the last month of the hot season[15]
the dust and dirt fly up,[16]
and then out of due season
a great rain-cloud in a moment[17]

lays and makes them vanish, -
even so does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way lay and cause to vanish
the ill
unprofitable states
that rise from time to time.

And how does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
lay and cause to vanish
the ill
unprofitable states
that rise from time to time?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
a monk lays and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states

that rise
and rise again.[18]

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as, monks, in the last month of the hot season
the dust and dirt fly up,
and then out of due season
a great rain-cloud in a moment
lays and makes them vanish, -
even so does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
lay and cause to vanish
the ill
unprofitable states
that rise from time to time.

And how does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
lay and cause to vanish
the ill
unprofitable states
that rise from time to time?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,

a monk lays and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as, monks, in the last month of the hot season
the dust and dirt fly up,
and then out of due season
a great rain-cloud in a moment
lays and makes them vanish, -
even so does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
lay and cause to vanish
the ill
unprofitable states
that rise from time to time.

And how does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
lay and cause to vanish
the ill
unprofitable states
that rise from time to time?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
a monk lays and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as, monks, in the last month of the hot season
the dust and dirt fly up,
and then out of due season
a great rain-cloud in a moment
lays and makes them vanish, -
even so does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
lay and cause to vanish
the ill
unprofitable states
that rise from time to time.

And how does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
lay and cause to vanish

the ill
unprofitable states
that rise from time to time?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
a monk lays and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

Sutta 157

The Rain-Cloud (b)

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, from time to time
a strong wind scatters
and causes to vanish
a great mass of clouds
that has arisen,
even so a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way from time to time
scatters and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

And how does a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
from time to time
scatter and cause to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
from time to time
scatters and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as, monks, from time to time
a strong wind scatters
and causes to vanish
a great mass of clouds
that has arisen,
even so a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
from time to time
scatters and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

And how does a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way

from time to time
scatter and cause to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
from time to time
scatters and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as, monks, from time to time
a strong wind scatters
and causes to vanish
a great mass of clouds
that has arisen,
even so a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
from time to time
scatters and causes to vanish

the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

And how does a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
from time to time
scatter and cause to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
from time to time
scatters and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as, monks, from time to time
a strong wind scatters
and causes to vanish
a great mass of clouds
that has arisen,
even so a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
from time to time
scatters and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

And how does a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
from time to time
scatter and cause to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how monks, when a monk cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
from time to time
scatters and causes to vanish
the ill,
unprofitable states
that rise
and rise again.

Sutta 158

The Ship[19]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, in the case of a sea-faring vessel rigged with masts and stays
and stranded on the bank, for six months it is worn by the water,[20]
while in the dry season
its rigging is [41] spoiled by wind and sun:
then, overstrung[21] by a shower
in the rainy season,
it is easily weakened
and rots away, -
just so, in a monk who cultivates and makes much of

the Ariyan eightfold way right easily the fetters are weakened
and rot away.

And how, monks, in one so cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
are the fetters weakened
and rot away?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how monks, in one so cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
the fetters are weakened
and rot away.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as, monks, in the case of a sea-faring vessel rigged with masts and stays

and stranded on the bank,
for six months it is worn by the water,
while in the dry season
its rigging is spoiled by wind and sun:
then, overstrung by a shower
in the rainy season,
it is easily weakened
and rots away, -
just so, in a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
right easily the fetters are weakened
and rot away.

And how, monks, in one so cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
are the fetters weakened
and rot away?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how monks, in one so cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
the fetters are weakened
and rot away.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as, monks, in the case of a sea-faring vessel rigged with masts and stays
and stranded on the bank,
for six months it is worn by the water,
while in the dry season
its rigging is spoiled by wind and sun:
then, overstrung by a shower
in the rainy season,
it is easily weakened
and rots away, -
just so, in a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
right easily the fetters are weakened
and rot away.

And how, monks, in one so cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
are the fetters weakened
and rot away?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how monks, in one so cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
the fetters are weakened
and rot away.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as, monks, in the case of a sea-faring vessel rigged with masts and stays
and stranded on the bank,
for six months it is worn by the water,
while in the dry season
its rigging is spoiled by wind and sun:
then, overstrung by a shower
in the rainy season,
it is easily weakened
and rots away, -
just so, in a monk who cultivates and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
right easily the fetters are weakened
and rot away.

And how, monks, in one so cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
are the fetters weakened
and rot away?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how monks, in one so cultivating and making much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
the fetters are weakened
and rot away.

Sutta 159

For All Comers[22]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Suppose, monks, a guest-house.

Thither come folk from the eastern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the western quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the northern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the southern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Noblemen and brahmins,
commoners and serfs.[23]

Even so, monks, a monk who cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
who makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,

by full comprehension
realizes those states
which are by full comprehension
to be fully understood.[24]

Those states that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he abandons;

those states that are to be realized
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he realizes;

those states that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he cultivates.

What, monks, are the states to be realized
by full comprehension?

To that question you must reply:

'It is the five factors that have to do with grasping.'[25]

What five?

They are these:

The body-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the factor of feeling
that has to do with grasping,
the perception-factor

that has to do with grasping,
the activities-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the consciousness-factor
that has to do with grasping.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be abandoned
[42] by full comprehension?

They are ignorance,
and lust of becoming.

These are the states to be abandoned
by full comprehension.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be realized
by full comprehension?

They are knowledge and release.

These are the states
to be realized by full comprehension.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension?

They are calm and insight.

These are the states
to be cultivated by full comprehension.

And how does a monk, cultivating and making much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
realize,

abandon,
fully comprehend
and cultivate (these states)?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how monks, a monk who cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
who makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
by full comprehension
realizes those states
which are by full comprehension
to be fully understood;

those states that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he abandons;

those states that are to be realized
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he realizes;

those states that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he cultivates.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Suppose, monks, a guest-house.

Thither come folk from the eastern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the western quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the northern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the southern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Noblemen and brahmins,
commoners and serfs.

Even so, monks, a monk who cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
who makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
by full comprehension
realizes those states
which are by full comprehension
to be fully understood.

Those states that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he abandons;

those states that are to be realized
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he realizes;

those states that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he cultivates.

What, monks, are the states to be realized
by full comprehension?

To that question you must reply:

'It is the five factors
that have to do with grasping.'

What five?

They are these:

The body-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the factor of feeling
that has to do with grasping,
the perception-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the activities-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the consciousness-factor
that has to do with grasping.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension?

They are ignorance,
and lust of becoming.

These are the states to be abandoned
by full comprehension.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be realized
by full comprehension?

They are knowledge and release.

These are the states
to be realized by full comprehension.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension?

They are calm and insight.

These are the states
to be cultivated by full comprehension.

And how does a monk, cultivating and making much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
realize,
abandon,
fully comprehend
and cultivate (these states)?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how monks, a monk who cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
who makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,

by full comprehension
realizes those states
which are by full comprehension
to be fully understood;

those states that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he abandons;

those states that are to be realized
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he realizes;

those states that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he cultivates.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Suppose, monks, a guest-house.

Thither come folk from the eastern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the western quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the northern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the southern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Noblemen and brahmins,
commoners and serfs.

Even so, monks, a monk who cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
who makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
by full comprehension
realizes those states
which are by full comprehension
to be fully understood.

Those states that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he abandons;

those states that are to be realized
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he realizes;

those states that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he cultivates.

What, monks, are the states to be realized
by full comprehension?

To that question you must reply:

'It is the five factors
that have to do with grasping.'

What five?

They are these:

The body-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the factor of feeling
that has to do with grasping,
the perception-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the activities-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the consciousness-factor
that has to do with grasping.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension?

They are ignorance,
and lust of becoming.

These are the states to be abandoned
by full comprehension.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be realized
by full comprehension?

They are knowledge and release.

These are the states
to be realized by full comprehension.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension?

They are calm and insight.

These are the states
to be cultivated by full comprehension.

And how does a monk, cultivating and making much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
realize,
abandon,
fully comprehend
and cultivate (these states)?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how monks, a monk who cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
who makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
by full comprehension
realizes those states
which are by full comprehension
to be fully understood;

those states that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he abandons;

those states that are to be realized
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he realizes;

those states that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he cultivates.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Suppose, monks, a guest-house.

Thither come folk from the eastern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the western quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the northern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Thither come folk from the southern quarter,
who take up residence therein.

Noblemen and brahmins,
commoners and serfs.

Even so, monks, a monk who cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
who makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
by full comprehension
realizes those states
which are by full comprehension
to be fully understood.

Those states that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he abandons;

those states that are to be realized
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he realizes;

those states that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he cultivates.

What, monks, are the states to be realized
by full comprehension?

To that question you must reply:

'It is the five factors
that have to do with grasping.'

What five?

They are these:

The body-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the factor of feeling
that has to do with grasping,
the perception-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the activities-factor
that has to do with grasping,
the consciousness-factor
that has to do with grasping.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension?

They are ignorance,
and lust of becoming.

These are the states to be abandoned
by full comprehension.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be realized
by full comprehension?

They are knowledge and release.

These are the states
to be realized by full comprehension.

And what, monks, are the states
that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension?

They are calm and insight.

These are the states
to be cultivated by full comprehension.

And how does a monk, cultivating and making much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
realize,
abandon,
fully comprehend
and cultivate (these states)?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how monks, a monk who cultivates the Ariyan eightfold way,
who makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way,
by full comprehension
realizes those states
which are by full comprehension
to be fully understood;

those states that are to be abandoned
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he abandons;

those states that are to be realized
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he realizes;

those states that are to be cultivated
by full comprehension,
by full comprehension
he cultivates.

Sutta 160

The River[26]

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Suppose, monks, the river Ganges,
that flows,
slides
and tends towards the east,
and there comes a great crowd of folk,
armed with pick and basket, saying:

'We will make this river Ganges flow,
slide
and tend towards the west.'

What think ye, monks?

Would that great crowd of folk make the river Ganges
flow,
slide
and tend towards the west?"

"Surely not, lord."

"And why not?"

"Because, lord, the river Ganges
flows,

slides
and tends towards the east, it were no easy thing
to make it flow,
slide
and tend towards the west;
insomuch that fatigue and vexation
would be the lot
of that great crowd of folk."

"Just so, monks, if the rajah's royal ministers or his friends
or boon companions
or kinsmen
or blood relatives
were to come to a monk
who is cultivating and making much of the Axiyan eightfold way,
and were to seek to entice him with wealth, saying:

'Come, good man!

Why should these yellow robes torment you?

Why parade about with shaven crown [43] and bowl?

Come!

Return to the lower life
and enjoy possessions
and do deeds of merit,' -

for that monk
so cultivating and making much of the Ariyan eightfold way return to the lower life is impossible.

Why so?

Because, monks, that monk's heart
has for many a long day
been bent on detachment,
inclined to detachment,
turned towards detachment,
so that there is no possibility
for him to return to the lower life.

And how, monks, does a monk cultivate and make much of the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
that is based on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

That is how monks, a monk cultivates and makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Suppose, monks, the river Ganges,
that flows,
slides

and tends towards the east,
and there comes a great crowd of folk,
armed with pick and basket, saying:

'We will make this river Ganges flow,
slide
and tend towards the west.'

What think ye, monks?

Would that great crowd of folk make the river Ganges
flow,
slide
and tend towards the west?"

"Surely not, lord."

"And why not?"

"Because, lord, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends towards the east,
it were no easy thing
to make it flow,
slide
and tend towards the west;
insomuch that fatigue and vexation
would be the lot
of that great crowd of folk."

"Just so, monks, if the rajah's royal ministers
or his friends
or boon companions
or kinsmen

or blood relatives
were to come to a monk
who is cultivating and making much of the Axiyan eightfold way,
and were to seek to entice him with wealth, saying:

'Come, good man!

Why should these yellow robes torment you?

Why parade about with shaven crown and bowl?

Come!

Return to the lower life
and enjoy possessions
and do deeds of merit,' -

for that monk
so cultivating and making much of the Ariyan eightfold way return to the lower life is impossible.

Why so?

Because, monks, that monk's heart
has for many a long day
been bent on detachment,
inclined to detachment,
turned towards detachment,
so that there is no possibility
for him to return to the lower life.

And how, monks, does a monk
cultivate and make much of the Ariyan eightfold way?

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how monks, a monk cultivates and makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Suppose, monks, the river Ganges,
that flows,
slides
and tends towards the east,
and there comes a great crowd of folk,
armed with pick and basket, saying:

'We will make this river Ganges flow,
slide
and tend towards the west.'

What think ye, monks?

Would that great crowd of folk make the river Ganges
flow,
slide
and tend towards the west?"

"Surely not, lord."

"And why not?"

"Because, lord, the river Ganges
flows,

slides
and tends towards the east,
it were no easy thing
to make it flow,
slide
and tend towards the west;
insomuch that fatigue and vexation
would be the lot
of that great crowd of folk."

"Just so, monks, if the rajah's royal ministers
or his friends
or boon companions
or kinsmen
or blood relatives
were to come to a monk
who is cultivating and making much of the Axiyan eightfold way,
and were to seek to entice him with wealth, saying:

'Come, good man!

Why should these yellow robes torment you?

Why parade about with shaven crown and bowl?

Come!

Return to the lower life
and enjoy possessions
and do deeds of merit,' -

for that monk
so cultivating and making much of the Ariyan eightfold way return to the lower life is impossible.

Why so?

Because, monks, that monk's heart
has for many a long day
been bent on detachment,
inclined to detachment,
turned towards detachment,
so that there is no possibility
for him to return to the lower life.

And how, monks, does a monk
cultivate and make much of the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right action,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how monks, a monk cultivates and makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Suppose, monks, the river Ganges,
that flows,
slides
and tends towards the east,
and there comes a great crowd of folk,
armed with pick and basket, saying:

'We will make this river Ganges
flow,

slide
and tend towards the west.'

What think ye, monks?

Would that great crowd of folk make the river Ganges
flow,
slide
and tend towards the west?"

"Surely not, lord."

"And why not?"

"Because, lord, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends towards the east,
it were no easy thing
to make it flow,
slide
and tend towards the west;
insomuch that fatigue and vexation
would be the lot
of that great crowd of folk."

"Just so, monks, if the rajah's royal ministers
or his friends
or boon companions
or kinsmen
or blood relatives
were to come to a monk
who is cultivating and making much of the Axiyan eightfold way,
and were to seek to entice him with wealth, saying:

'Come, good man!

Why should these yellow robes torment you?

Why parade about with shaven crown and bowl?

Come!

Return to the lower life
and enjoy possessions
and do deeds of merit,' -

for that monk
so cultivating and making much of the Ariyan eightfold way return to the lower life is impossible.

Why so?

Because, monks, that monk's heart
has for many a long day
been bent on detachment,
inclined to detachment,
turned towards detachment,
so that there is no possibility
for him to return to the lower life.

And how, monks, does a monk
cultivate and make much of the Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how monks, a monk cultivates and makes much of the Ariyan eightfold way.

---

[1] No. 149 of text (repeated at text 135, 246). Cf. M. i, 230 for these two sections.

[2] Cf. Mrs. Rhys Davids's Buddhism, p. 154,

[3] Comy. 'Here the five sorts of seed are called bīja-gāmā. When they have attained greenness they are called bhūta-gāmā.'

[4] (Or eel?) Infra, Bk. II, i. Cf. Buddh. India, p. 220 ff.; Indian Serpent Lore (Vogel), 1927. Comy. describes the journey of the mothers from the ocean up to the Himālaya, by way of the five great rivers, to bring' forth their young, safe from the attacks of boys, the violence of the sea-waves and garuṭas or garuḷas (? eagles, albatross, or rocs).

[5] Cf. S. ii, 30. Kussubbhe (Sn. 720, kussobbha), ku-s-sobbha; ku-n-nadi; the prefix implies inferiority; hence kupuriso, a rogue; ku-diṭṭhi - micchā-diṭṭhi.

[6] Comy. 'A size of a hundred or a thousand fathoms!'

[7] Comy. interprets thus: 'The Himālaya is the fourfold perfect purity of virtue. The young snakes are the earnest students (yogāvacarā) The tarns, etc., are the Ariyan path. The Ocean is Nibbāna. Growth, maturity, etc., are the abhiññā.

[8] Pabbāro hoti ('gravitates').

[9] Nikkujjo vamateva udakaṇ, no paccāvamati. But cf. A. v, 337, where text reads nikkujjo'va tam eva [udakaṇ] no vantaṇ pacc.

[10] Comy. na antopavesati.

[11] Cf. supra. I, 9.

[12] Text bhindati here.

[13] As at S. iv, 218; K.S. iv, 146

[14] Cf. K.S. iv, 259 ff.

[15] Cf. text 321 (gimhānaṇ pacchime māse) =Āsāḷḷhi-māse (our June-July). Comy.

[16] Text uggataṇ. Comy. ūhataṇ, explained as uddhaṇ gataṇ.

[17] Ṭhānaso (lit. there and then, on the spot); VM. i, 268, khaṇen'eva

[18] Cf. Expos., p. 90.

[19] Cf. S. iii, 155; K.S. iii, 131, where I would correct as here; A. iv, 127.

[20] Text pariyenāya (? pariyāyena, whirling round and round); v.l, pariyādāya (S. iii; A. iv). Comy. refers to previous comment on S. iii, where it has mahāsamudde pariyādānaṇ (the wasting away in the ocean) and mahāsamudd'odakena khajjamānānaṇ khandhānaṇ (the timbers - being eaten away by the water.

[21] Text abhipavuṭṭhāni; at A. and S. iii; -pavaṭṭāni.

[22] Āgantukā. Cf. S. iv, 219; K.S. iv, 147 (where it represents the body). Comy. 'built in the midst of a merit-desiring town.'

[23] Vessā, suddā.

[24] Cf. S. iv, 29. Abhiññā-pariññeyyā.

[25] K.S. iii, 41; Compend., p. 185.

[26] Cf. S. iv. 191; v. 300; K.S. iv, 124

ed1 Woodward omits the development into four sub-sections of this group of suttas, but the pattern was established in §139. The PTS Pali indicates after this first sutta that the pattern should be followed. The BJT has each sub-division as a separate sutta. The Bhk. Bodhi translation is organized as here (suttas with 4 sub-sections), but is abridged.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
7. Esana Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

7. On Longing

Suttas 161-170

[6] Dukkhatā. Cf. S. iv, 259; K.S. iv, 175; Pts. of Contr., 316.

[7] Khilā, fallow or unploughed land. At Vibh. 377 five ceto-khilā, viz.: Doubt and wavering in the Teacher, Norm, Order and training; peevishness, etc., to co-disciples. Not to be confused with khīlā (bar or post).

[8] Nighā Comy. explains thus: 'A term for pains which destroy, in whomsoever they arise' (taṇ purisaṇ nihanti).

[9] Vibhava (sometimes 'excessive wealth' = 'accentuated existence'). Cf. Dialog. iii, 208 and compare with § 1, where its parallel is brahmacariya. Thus it would here mean an annihilationist in view.

[10] Tasinā (= taṇhā), cf. Dhp. 342. This is not in Sinh. MSS.

[ed1] Woodward here has 'than' which would make this the same as #3.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
45. Magga Saṃyutta
8. Ogha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

45. Kindred Sayings on the Way

8. The Flood

Suttas 171-180

---

[47]

Sutta 171

The Flood[1]

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these four floods.

What four?

The flood of sensual desire,[2]
the flood of becoming,
the flood of view,[3]
the flood of nescience.[4]

These are the four floods.

It is for the full [48] comprehension of these four floods, monks, that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

b. Realization

"Monks, there are these four floods.

What four?

The flood of sensual desire,
the flood of becoming,
the flood of view,
the flood of nescience.

These are the four floods.

It is for the realization of (the meaning of) these four floods, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there are these four floods.

What four?

The flood of sensual desire,
the flood of becoming,
the flood of view,
the flood of nescience.

These are the four floods.

It is for the wearing out of these four floods, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there are these four floods.

What four?

The flood of sensual desire,
the flood of becoming,
the flood of view,
the flood of nescience.

These are the four floods.

It is for the abandoning of these four floods, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 172

Bond

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these four bonds.

What four?

The bond of sensual desire,
the bond of becoming,

the bond of view,
the bond of nescience.

These are the four bonds.

It is for the full comprehension of these four bonds, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

b. Realization

"Monks, there are these four bonds.

What four?

The bond of sensual desire,
the bond of becoming,
the bond of view,
the bond of nescience.

These are the four bonds.

It is for the realization of (the meaning of) these four bonds, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there are these four bonds.

What four?

The bond of sensual desire,
the bond of becoming,
the bond of view,
the bond of nescience.

These are the four bonds.

It is for the wearing out of these four bonds, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there are these four bonds.

What four?

The bond of sensual desire,
the bond of becoming,
the bond of view,
the bond of nescience.

These are the four bonds.

It is for the abandoning these four bonds, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 173

Grasping[5]

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these four graspings.

What four?

The grasping of[6] sensual desire,
the grasping of view,
the grasping of rite and ritual,
the grasping of the self-heresy.

These are the four graspings.

It is for the full comprehension of these four graspings, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

b. Realization

"Monks, there are these four graspings.

What four?

The grasping of sensual desire,
the grasping of view,
the grasping of rite and ritual,
the grasping of the self-heresy.

These are the four graspings.

It is for the realization (of the meaning) of these four graspings, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there are these four graspings.

What four?

The grasping of sensual desire,
the grasping of view,
the grasping of rite and ritual,
the grasping of the self-heresy.

These are the four graspings.

It is for the wearing out of these four graspings, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there are these four graspings.

What four?

The grasping of sensual desire,
the grasping of view,
the grasping of rite and ritual,
the grasping of the self-heresy.

These are the four graspings.

It is for the abandoning of these four graspings, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 174

(Bodily) Ties

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these four (bodily) ties.[7]

What four?

The bodily tie of covetousness,
the bodily tie of malevolence,
the bodily tie of contagion of rite and ritual,
the bodily tie of tendency to dogmatic view.[8]

These are the four bodily ties.

It is for the full comprehension of these four bodily ties, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

b. Realization

"Monks, there are these four (bodily) ties.

What four?

The bodily tie of covetousness,
the bodily tie of malevolence,
the bodily tie of contagion of rite and ritual,
the bodily tie of tendency to dogmatic view.

These are the four bodily ties.

It is for the realization (of the meaning) of these four bodily ties, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there are these four (bodily) ties.

What four?

The bodily tie of covetousness,
the bodily tie of malevolence,
the bodily tie of contagion of rite and ritual,
the bodily tie of tendency to dogmatic view.

These are the four bodily ties.

It is for the wearing out of these four bodily ties, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there are these four (bodily) ties.

What four?

The bodily tie of covetousness,
the bodily tie of malevolence,
the bodily tie of contagion of rite and ritual,
the bodily tie of tendency to dogmatic view.

These are the four bodily ties.

It is for the abandoning of these four bodily ties, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 175

Tendency

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these seven tendencies.

What seven?

The tendency to sensual lust,
the tendency to resentment,
the tendency to view,
the tendency to doubt and wavering,
the tendency to conceit,
the tendency to nescience.

These are the seven tendencies.

It is for the full comprehension of these seven tendencies, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

b. Realization

"Monks, there are these seven tendencies.

What seven?

The tendency to sensual lust,
the tendency to resentment,
the tendency to view,
the tendency to doubt and wavering,
the tendency to conceit,
the tendency to nescience.

These are the seven tendencies.

It is for the realization (of the meaning) of these seven tendencies, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there are these seven tendencies.

What seven?

The tendency to sensual lust,
the tendency to resentment,
the tendency to view,
the tendency to doubt and wavering,
the tendency to conceit,
the tendency to nescience.

These are the seven tendencies.

It is for the wearing out of these seven tendencies, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there are these seven tendencies.

What seven?

The tendency to sensual lust,
the tendency to resentment,
the tendency to view,
the tendency to doubt and wavering,
the tendency to conceit,
the tendency to nescience.

These are the seven tendencies.

It is for the abandoning of these seven tendencies, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,

that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 176

The Sense-Pleasures

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these five pleasures of sense.[9]

What five?

There are objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are [49] scents cognizable by the nose,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are the five pleasures of sense.

It is for the full comprehension of these five pleasures of sense, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

b. Realization

"Monks, there are these five pleasures of sense.

What five?

There are objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are scents cognizable by the nose,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are the five pleasures of sense.

It is for the realization (of the meaning) of these five pleasures of sense, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there are these five pleasures of sense.

What five?

There are objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are scents cognizable by the nose,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are the five pleasures of sense.

It is for the wearing out of these five pleasures of sense, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there are these five pleasures of sense.

What five?

There are objects cognizable by the eye,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are sounds cognizable by the ear,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are scents cognizable by the nose,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are savours cognizable by the tongue,
objects desirable,
pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

There are tangibles cognizable by the body,
objects desirable,

pleasant,
delightful and dear,
passion-fraught,
inciting to lust.

These are the five pleasures of sense.

It is for the abandoning of these five pleasures of sense, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 177

Hindrances

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these five hindrances.[10]

What five?

The hindrance of sensual desire,
the hindrance of malevolence,
the hindrance of sloth and torpor,

the hindrance of excitement and flurry,[11]
the hindrance of doubt and wavering.[12]

These are the five hindrances.

It is for the full comprehension of these five pleasures of sense, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

b. Realization

"Monks, there are these five hindrances.

What five?

The hindrance of sensual desire,
the hindrance of malevolence,
the hindrance of sloth and torpor,
the hindrance of excitement and flurry,
the hindrance of doubt and wavering.

These are the five hindrances.

It is for the realization (of the meaning) of these five hindrances, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there are these five hindrances.

What five?

The hindrance of sensual desire,
the hindrance of malevolence,
the hindrance of sloth and torpor,
the hindrance of excitement and flurry,
the hindrance of doubt and wavering.

These are the five hindrances.

It is for the wearing out of these five hindrances, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there are these five hindrances.

What five?

The hindrance of sensual desire,
the hindrance of malevolence,
the hindrance of sloth and torpor,
the hindrance of excitement and flurry,
the hindrance of doubt and wavering.

These are the five hindrances.

It is for the abandoning of these five hindrances, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 178

Factors

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these five factors of grasping.[13]

What five?

The factor of grasping of[14] body,
the factor of grasping of feeling,
the factor of grasping of perception,

the factor of grasping of the activities,
the factor of grasping of consciousness.

These are the five factors of grasping.

It is for the full comprehension of these five factors of grasping, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

b. Realization

"Monks, there are these five factors of grasping.

What five?

The factor of grasping of body,
the factor of grasping of feeling,
the factor of grasping of perception,
the factor of grasping of the activities,
the factor of grasping of consciousness.

These are the five factors of grasping.

It is for the realization (of the meaning) of these five factors of grasping, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there are these five factors of grasping.

What five?

The factor of grasping of body,
the factor of grasping of feeling,
the factor of grasping of perception,
the factor of grasping of the activities,
the factor of grasping of consciousness.

These are the five factors of grasping.

It is for the wearing out of these five factors of grasping, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there are these five factors of grasping.

What five?

The factor of grasping of body,
the factor of grasping of feeling,
the factor of grasping of perception,
the factor of grasping of the activities,
the factor of grasping of consciousness.

These are the five factors of grasping.

It is for the abandoning of these five factors of grasping, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 179

The Lower Set (of Fetters)

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there is this set of five lower fetters.[15]

What five?

The individual-group-view,[16]
doubt and wavering,
contagion of rite and ritual,

desire and lust,
malevolence.

These are the five lower fetters.

It is for the full comprehension of these five lower fetters, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

b. Realization

"Monks, there is this set of five lower fetters.

What five?

The individual-group-view,
doubt and wavering,
contagion of rite and ritual,
desire and lust,
malevolence.

These are the five lower fetters.

It is for the realization (of the meaning) of these five lower fetters, monks, that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there is this set of five lower fetters.

What five?

The individual-group-view,
doubt and wavering,
contagion of rite and ritual,
desire and lust,
malevolence.

These are the five lower fetters.

It is for the wearing out of these five lower fetters, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there is this set of five lower fetters.

What five?

The individual-group-view,
doubt and wavering,
contagion of rite and ritual,
desire and lust,
malevolence.

These are the five lower fetters.

It is for the abandoning of these five lower fetters, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 180

The Higher Set (of Fetters)

a. Full Comprehension

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there is this set of five higher fetters.[17]

What five?

Lust of form,
lust of the formless,
conceit,

excitement,
nescience.

These are the five higher fetters.

It is for the full comprehension of these [50] five higher fetters, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

b. Realization

"Monks, there is this set of five higher fetters.

What five?

Lust of form,
lust of the formless,
conceit,
excitement,
nescience.

These are the five higher fetters.

It is for the realization (of the meaning) of these five higher fetters, monks, that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

c. Weariing Out

"Monks, there is this set of five higher fetters.

What five?

Lust of form,
lust of the formless,
conceit,
excitement,
nescience.

These are the five higher fetters.

It is for the wearing out of these five higher fetters, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,

on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

---

d. Abandoning

"Monks, there is this set of five higher fetters.

What five?

Lust of form,
lust of the formless,
conceit,
excitement,
nescience.

These are the five higher fetters.

It is for the abandoning of these five higher fetters, monks,
that the Ariyan eightfold way must be cultivated.

What Ariyan eightfold way?

Herein a monk cultivates right view,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right aim,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right speech,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right action,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right living,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right effort,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates right concentration,
that is based on seclusion,
that is based on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates right view,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right aim,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right effort,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

■

He cultivates right view,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right aim,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right speech,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right action,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates right living,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right effort,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

He cultivates right concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

■

He cultivates right view,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right aim,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right speech,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right action,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right living,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right effort,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

He cultivates right concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

[The Burmese MSS B[1-2] only has as sequal the following:]

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the Ariyan eightfold way
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

[Followed by a repetition of the 4 previous sections.]

---

[1] Ogha, cf. S. iv, 175; K.S. iv, 110. Five at S. i, 126. Cf. Buddh. Psych. Eth., p. 308 n.

[2] Comy. chanda-rāga.

[3] Comy. The sixty-two heretical views.

[4] Comy. 'Of the four truths.'

[5] Yoga.

[6] I.e. arising from.

[7] Gantha. Cf. Buddh. Psych. Eth., § 1139; Asl. 377.

[8] Saccābhiniveso. To say 'this is the truth.' Comy.

[9] K.S. iv, 56.

[10] Nīvaraṇāni. D. iii, 49; Buddh. Psych. Eth., 310.

[11] Do. 119-20, lit. 'fidgeting and nerves.'

[12] Do. 121.

[13] Cf. K.S. iii, 16, 18, 41-42.

[14] I.e. dealing with.

[15] Orambhāgiya, those concerned with the lower stages of life.

[16] Cf. K.S. iii, 86 n.

[17] Uddhambhāgiya the second five, by abandoning which the goal is reached.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom[1]

1. The Mountain

Sutta 1

Himavanta Suttaṃ

Himālaya[2]

---

[51]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Supported, monks, by Himalaya,
lord of mountains,
snakes grow a body
and get strength.

When they have grown a body
and got strength there,
they go down to the tarns.

From the tarns
they go down to the lakes,

From the lakes
they go down to the small rivers,

From the small rivers
they go down to the great rivers,

From the great rivers
they go down to the sea,
they go down to the mighty ocean.

There they get great size and growth of body.

■

Just so, monks, a monk supported by virtue,
fixed in virtue,
cultivating the seven limbs of wisdom
and making much of them,
wins to greatness and growth in conditions.[3]

And how does a monk supported by virtue,
fixed in virtue,
cultivating the seven limbs of wisdom
and making much of them,
wins to greatness and growth in conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is zest,[ed1]
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk supported by virtue,
fixed in virtue,
by [52] cultivating the seven limbs of wisdom
and making much of them,
wins to greatness and growth in conditions."

---

[1] Text, pp. 63-140.

[2] Cf. supra, I, 6, in. Are nāgā here eels?

[3] Comy. refers to Kosala-Saṃyutta; S. i, 68-102; K.S. i, 93 ff.

[ed1] Woodward omits.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 2

Kāya Suttaṃ

Body

---

[52]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as this[1] body, monks,
is supported by material food
and stands in dependence on it, stands not without it, -
even so, monks, the five hindrances
are supported by (their own) material food,
stand in dependence on it,
stand not without food.

And what, monks, is food for the arising of sensual lust
not yet arisen,
or for the increase and growth of sensual lust
that has arisen?

It is the alluring feature[2] of things.

Unsystematic attention to that is the food for the arising of sensual lust
not yet arisen,
and for the increase and growth of sensual lust that has already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food for the arising of malevolence
not yet arisen,
or food for the increase and growth of malevolence
that has already arisen?

It is the repulsive feature[3] of things.

Unsystematic attention to that is this food for the arising of malevolence
not yet arisen,

and for the increase and growth of malevolence
that has already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food for the arising of sloth and torpor
not yet arisen,
or for the increase and growth of sloth and torpor
that has already arisen?

It is regret,
drowsiness,
languor,
surfeit after meals,
torpidity of mind.[4]

Unsystematic attention to that is this food for the arising of sloth and torpor
not yet arisen,
or for the increase and growth of sloth and torpor
that has already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food for the arising of excitement and flurry
not yet arisen,
or for the increase and growth of excitement and flurry
that have already arisen?

It is non-tran- [53] quillity of mind.

Unsystematic attention to that is thr food for the arising of excitement and flurry
not yet arisen,

or for the increase and growth of excitement and flurry
that have already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food for the arising of doubt and wavering
not yet arisen,
or for the increase and growth of doubt and wavering
that have already arisen?

It is things which are based on[5] doubt and wavering.

Unsystematic attention to that, monks, is this food for the arising of doubt and wavering
not yet arisen,
or for the increase and growth of doubt and wavering
that have already arisen.

Just as this body, monks,
is supported by material food
and stands in dependence on it,
stands not without it, -
even so, monks, the five hindrances
are supported by (their own) material food,
stand in dependence on it,
stand not without food.

§

Just as this body, monks,
is supported by material food,
and stands in dependence on it,

stands not without it, - even so, monks, the seven limbs of wisdom
are supported by (their own) material food,
stand in dependence on it,
stand not without food.

And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is mindfulness
that has already arisen?

There are, monks, things that are based on the limb of wisdom which is mindfulness.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is mindfulness
that has already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food
for the arising of the limb of wisdom which is searching of the Norm
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is searching of the Norm
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things good and bad,
things blameworthy and things not blameworthy,
things mean and things exalted,
things resembling darkness and things resembling light.[6]

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is searching of the Norm
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is searching of the Norm
if already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food for the arising of the limb of [54] wisdom which is energy
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is energy
if already arisen?

There is, monks, the element of putting forth effort,[7]
the element of exertion,[8]
the element of striving.[9]

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising of the limb of wisdom which is energy
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is energy
if already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is zest
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is zest
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things based on the limb of wisdom that is zest.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is zest
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is zest
if already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is tranquillity
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is tranquillity
if already arisen?

There are, monks, tranquillity of body and tranquillity of mind.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,

is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is tranquillity
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is tranquillity
if already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is concentration
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is concentration
if already arisen?

There are, monks, sights that calm,
that bewilder not.[10]

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is concentration
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is concentration
if already arisen.

■

And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is equanimity

if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is equanimity
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things based on the limb of wisdom[11] that is equanimity.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
[55] for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is equanimity
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom which is equanimity
if already arisen."

---

[1] Cf. Expos., 204.

[2] Subha-nimittaṇ; infra, text 103. Cf. Pts. of Contr., App. 387, 'The alluring feature (which to one who does not practise systematic thought (ayoniso manasikarontassa) is a snare and danger)'; K.S. i, 239. The threefold sign is the deceptive appearance of permanence, happiness and soul, to be abolished by the cultivation of the signless (animittaṇ).

[3] Paṭigha-nimittaṇ (at A. i, 3, asubha-nimittaṇ).

[4] Arati, tandi, vijambhitā, bhatta-sammado, cetaso līnattaṇ. See Vibh. 352; Vibh. 272, 478; SA. on S. i, 7; JA. vi, 57, etc.

[5] Ṭhāniyā.

[6] Cf. Dialog. 1, 225; D. ii, 215. Comy. sadisa-vipāka-koṭṭhāsā

[7] Ārambha-dhatu. Cf. Expos., 192. Comy.paṭhama-viriya (dhātu = source, seed).

[8] Nikkama. Cf. S. i, 194; VM. i, 132 + Comy. kosajjato nikkhantattā tato balavataraṇ.

[9] Parakkama. VM. + Comy. paraṇ ṭhānaṇ akkamanato pi balavataraṇ.

[10] Samatha- and avyagga-nimittaṇ (lit. the mark of calm and nondistraction). Cf. S. i, 96, abyagga-manaso naro. The latter, according to Comy., a synonym of the former. For details cf. VM. 1, 134.

[11] Comy. 'Things of middle state, indifference.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 3

Sīla Suttaṃ

Virtue[1]

---

[55]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, whatsoever monks are possessed of virtue, possessed of concentration, possessed of insight,
of release,
of release by knowledge and insight - the very sight of such brings much profit, I declare.

The very hearing about[2] such monks brings much profit, I declare.

To visit such,
to sit beside[3] them,
to remember such,[4]
to follow such in giving up the world[5] brings great profit, I declare.

What is the cause of that?

On hearing the teaching of such monks one dwells aloof in two forms of aloofness, to wit:
of body and of mind.

Such an one, so dwelling aloof, remembers that Norm-teaching and turns it over in his mind.

When a monk, so dwelling aloof, remembers and turns over in his mind the teaching of the Norm, it is then that the limb of wisdom which is mindfulness is established[6] in that monk.

When he cultivates the limb of wisdom which is mindfulness, then it is that the monk's culture of it comes to perfection.

Thus he, dwelling mindful, with full recognition[7]

investigates and applies insight[8] to that teaching of the Norm and comes to close scrutiny of it.

Now, monks, at such time as a monk, dwelling thus mindful,
with full recognition
investigates and applies insight to that [56] teaching of the Norm, then it is that the limb of wisdom which is Norm-investigation is established in that monk.

It is when he cultivates the limb of wisdom which is Norm-in-vestigation that,
as he comes to close scrutiny of it,
by his culture of it,
it comes to perfection.

As with full recognition he investigates and applies insight to that Norm-teaching,
then unshaken energy[9] is established in him.

Now, monks, at such time as unshaken energy is established in a monk who with full recognition is investigating, applying insight
and coming to close scrutiny of that Norm-teaching, then it is that the limb of wisdom which is energy is established in him.

When he cultivates this limb of wisdom,
at such time,
by culture of it,
does it come to perfection in that monk.

In him who has energy established there arises zest,
which is free from carnal taint.[10]

Now, monks, when zest free from carnal taint arises in a monk who has energy established, then it is that the limb of wisdom which is zest
is established in him.

When he cultivates this limb of wisdom,
at such time,
by culture of it,
does it come to perfection in him.

Of one who is zestful body is tranquil
and mind is tranquil.

Now, monks, when a monk who is zestful has body and mind tranquillized, then it is that the limb of wisdom which is tranquillity is established in him.

When he cultivates this,
at such time,
by his culture of it,
it comes to perfection in him.

Happy is he whose body is tranquillized.

Of him that is happy
the mind is concentrated.

Now, monks, when the mind is concentrated in a monk whose body is tranquillized, at such time the limb of wisdom which is concentration is established in that monk.

When he cultivates this limb of wisdom,
by his culture of it
does it come to perfection.

He is now thorough overseer of his mind thus calmed.

Now, monks, when he becomes a careful looker-on
of his mind thus calmed, then it is that the limb of wisdom which is [57] equanimity is established in a monk.

When he cultivates it,
at such time
by his culture of it
does it come to perfection.

Now, monks, when the seven limbs of wisdom are thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
seven fruits,
seven advantages[11] may be looked for.

What seven?

In this very life, beforehand, he establishes realization[12]:
and if he do not so beforehand,[13]
in this very life,
at any rate he establishes realization at the time of his death.

And if in this very life, beforehand, he do not establish realization, nor do so at the time of death, then, through having worn down the five fetters of the lower sort, he wins release midway.[14]

But if he do not establish perfect insight, beforehand,
in this very life,
nor yet at the time of death,
and if he, by wearing down the five fetters of the lower sort,
win not release midway, -
then at any rate,
after having worn down the five fetters of the lower sort, he wins release by reduction of his (allotted) time.[15]

But if he do not establish perfect insight, beforehand,
in this very life,
nor yet at the time of death,
and if he, by wearing down the five fetters of the lower sort,
win not release midway, -
nor wins release by reduction of his (allotted) time,
at any rate, by having worn down the five fetters of the lower sort, he wins release without much trouble.[16]

Again, if he do not establish perfect insight, beforehand,
in this very life,
nor yet at the time of death,
and if he, by wearing down the five fetters of the lower sort,
win not release midway, -
nor wins release by reduction of his (allotted) time, nor wins release without much trouble,
at any rate, by having [58] worn down the five fetters of the lower sort, then he wins release with some trouble.[17]

Again, if he do not establish perfect insight, beforehand,
in this very life,
nor yet at the time of death,
and if he, by wearing down the five fetters of the lower sort,
win not release midway, -
nor wins release by reduction of his (allotted) time,
nor wins release without much trouble,
nor wins release with some trouble,

at any rate, by having worn down the five fetters of the lower sort, then he is 'one who goes upstream,'[18] and he goes to the Pure Abodes.[19]

Thus, monks, when the seven limbs of wisdom are thus cultivated, these seven fruits,
these seven advantages
may be looked for.

---

[1] For this section see Vibh. 227; Vibh.A. 310.

[2] According to Comy. 'not listening to, but having good report of such and such.'

[3] Comy. 'questioning them about the Norm.'

[4] Cf. Pugg. iii, 13, iv, 23; Itiv., p. 106, anussaraṇaṃ.

[5] Anupabbajjaṃ. Comy. mentions the Elders MahāKassapa, Chandagutta, Suriyagutta, Assagutta, Yonakadhammarakkhita, Tissa (younger brother of Dharmasoka) and Mahinda.

[6] Āraddho.

[7] Paññāya is to be taken as gerund, not as a noun.

[8] Pavicarati. Comy. tattha ñāṇaṃ carāpeti.

[9] Asallīnaṃ. Cf. D. ii, 157; S. iv, 125.

[10] Cf. S. iv, 219; K.S. iv, 147. Nirāmisa pīti.

[11] Text infra, 237.

[12] Aññaṃ = gnosis, realization of arahantship.

[13] Text paṭihacca; probably influenced by upahacca following. This should be (as v.ll.) paṭikacca which is equal to pubbe yeva or paṭhamaṃ yeva. Cf. UdA. 347. Comy reads paṭigacca, explaining 'before his time of death has reached him' he knows for certain. Again at text 204-5. (Paṭihacca would mean 'knocking against'[?]).

[14] Antarā-parinibbāyī (infra, text 201). He is a non-returner and completes his course of existence in Brahma-loka, where time is beyond our conception or computation, before half his life there is finished.

[15] Upahācca-parinibbāyī. Cf. Pts. of Contr., p. 158. Comy. 'He spends another five hundred kalpas(!) and so attains arahantship.'

[16] Cf. PuggA. (p. 199 of J.P.T.S., 1914); Expos. 207. Asaṅkhāra, lit. without sankhārā, activities or aggregates (? without a residue of karma); but according to Comy. appayogena, without effort (cf. Dialog. iii, 227); but it would seem to be more like an-upādi-sesa-nibbāna. So also with regard to the following term.

[17] Sa-sankhārā (where Comy. takes it to be sappayogena).

[18] Uddhaṃ-soto.

[19] Akaniṭṭha-(bralmalokaṃ)gāmī. Cf. Pts. of Contr. 78, n. 2. 'Stream' is 'natural desire' or 'the round of rebirth' or 'path-stream.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 4

Vatta Suttaṃ

Practice

THUS have I heard:

On a certain occasion the venerable Sāriputta was staying near Sāvatthī, at Jeta Grove, in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the venerable Sāriputta addressed the monks, saying:

"Brother monks!"

"Yes, friend," replied those monks to the venerable Sāriputta.

The venerable Sāriputta said this:

"Friends, there are these seven limbs of wisdom.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

These are the seven.

Of these seven limbs of wisdom, friends, in whichsoever I desire to abide during the early part of the day, in that limb of wisdom
I abide.

In whichsoever limb of wisdom
I desire to abide
in the middle of the day,
in that I abide.

In whichsoever limb of wisdom
I desire to abide
in the evening,
in that I abide.

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or [59] that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is energy,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is zest,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

It is just like the wardrobe of a rajah or great nobleman,
full of garments of various hues.

Whatsoever suit he desires to don in the forenoon, that he dons in the forenoon.

Whatsoever suit he desires to don at midday, that he dons at midday.

Whatsoever suit he desires to don at eventide,
that he dons at eventide.

Even so, friends, in whichsoever of these seven limbs of wisdom, friends,
in whichsoever I desire to abide
during the early part of the day,
in that limb of wisdom
I abide.

In whichsoever limb of wisdom
I desire to abide
in the middle of the day,
in that I abide.

In whichsoever limb of wisdom
I desire to abide
in the evening,
in that I abide.

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,

when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is energy,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is zest,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.

■

If, friends, it is the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
in such case I fully know that it is boundless in me,
or that it is well begun in me, or,
when it is established in me,
I fully know that it is so.

Again, if it fails me,
I fully know that it is owing to this or that cause.[1]

[1] Cf. M. 1, 215 (of Sāriputta), where the passage aims at showing that a monk rules his own mind, is not ruled by it. Cf. Mln. 254.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 5

Bhikkhu Suttaṃ

The Monk

---

[59]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

"Then a certain monk came to visit the Exalted One,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated that monk said this to the Exalted One:

"'Wisdom limb! Wisdom limb!' is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, how far is this name applicable?"

"They conduce to wisdom, monk.

That is why they are so called.

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

As he cultivates these seven limbs of wisdom he frees his heart from the āsava of sensuality, from the āsava of becoming,
from the āsava of nescience.

The knowledge comes to him:

'Freed am I by being freed' so that he fully knows:

'Cut off is rebirth,
lived is the holy life,
done is the task,
there is no more of being here for me.'

They conduce to wisdom, monk.

That is why they are so called."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 6

Kuṇḍali Suttaṃ

Kuṇḍali[1]

---

[60]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying at Sāketa,[2] in Anjana Grove, in Antelope Park.

Now on that occasion Kuṇḍaliya the wanderer came to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
he greeted him courteously and, after the exchange of the compliments of friendship and courtesy,

sat down at one side.

So seated,
Kuṇḍaliya the wanderer
said this to the Exalted One:

"Master Gotama, I live near the Park and am a frequenter of companies.[3]

Well, Master Gotama, this is my practice when I have had my morning meal.

I roam and wander from park to park, from garden to garden.

There I behold certain recluses and brahmins debating on the profit of freedom from controversy[4] and the profit of wrangling.

But what profit is there in the worthy Gotama's way of living?"

§

"A Tathāgata, Kuṇḍaliya, lives enjoying the profits of the fruit
of release by knowledge."

■

"Pray, Master Gotama,
what are the conditions which,
when cultivated and made much of,
complete the release by knowledge?"

"There are seven limbs of wisdom, Kuṇḍaliya, which, when cultivated and made much of,
complete the release by knowledge."

■

"What conditions, Master Gotama, are these which,
cultivated and made much of,
complete the seven limbs of wisdom?"

"Four stations of mindfulness, Kuṇḍaliya,
if cultivated and made much of,
complete the seven limbs of wisdom."

■

"But, Master Gotama, what conditions,
if cultivated and made much of,
complete the four stations of mindfulness?"

[61] The three virtuous habits,[5] Kuṇḍaliya
if cultivated and made much of,
complete the four stations of mindfulness."

■

"But, Master Gotama, what are the conditions
if cultivated and made much of,
complete the three virtuous habits?"

"Control of the sense faculties, Kuṇḍaliya,
if cultivated and made much of,
completes the three virtuous habits.

But how cultivated and how made much of, Kuṇḍaliya, do they complete the three virtuous habits?

Herein, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk,
seeing a delightful object with the eye,
does not hanker for it,
does not thrill[6] thereat,
does not develop lust for it.

His body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

If with the eye
he behold an object repulsive,
he is not shocked[7] thereat,
his mind is not unsettled[8]
or depressed[9]
or resentful
because of that,
but his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

■

Again, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk, hearing a delightful sound with the ear[10],
does not hanker for it,

does not thrill thereat,
does not develop lust for it.

His body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

If with the ear
he hear a repulsive sound,
he is not shocked thereat,
his mind is not unsettled
or depressed
or resentful
because of that,
but his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

■

Again, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk, smelling a delightful scent with the nose,
does not hanker for it,
does not thrill thereat,
does not develop lust for it.

His body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

If with the nose
he smell a repulsive scent,
he is not shocked thereat,
his mind is not unsettled

or depressed
or resentful
because of that,
but his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

■

Again, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk, tasting a delightful savour with the tongue,
does not hanker for it,
does not thrill thereat,
does not develop lust for it.

His body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

If with the tongue
he taste a repulsive savour,
he is not shocked thereat,
his mind is not unsettled
or depressed
or resentful
because of that,
but his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

■

Again, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk, contacting with body a delightful touch,

does not hanker for it,
does not thrill thereat,
does not develop lust for it.

His body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

If with the body
he contact a repulsive touch,
he is not shocked thereat,
his mind is not unsettled
or depressed
or resentful
because of that,
but his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

■

Again, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk,
with mind cognizing a delightful state,
does not hanker for it,
does not thrill thereat,
does not develop lust for it.

His body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

If with the mind
he be conscious of a repulsive state,
he is not shocked thereat,

his mind is not unsettled
or depressed
or resentful
because of that,
but his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
inwardly well established
and released.

§

Now, Kuṇḍaliya,
since on seeing an object with the eye, whether objects are delightful or repulsive,
his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
but inwardly well established
[62] and released;

since on hearing a sound with, the ear, whether sounds are delightful or repulsive,
his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
but inwardly well established
and released;

since on smelling a scent with the nose, whether scents are delightful or repulsive,
his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
but inwardly well established
and released;

since on tasting a savour with the tongue, whether savours are delightful or repulsive,
his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
but inwardly well established
and released;

since with body contacting a tangible, whether tangibles are delightful or repulsive,
his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
but inwardly well established
and released;

since with mind cognizing a mental state, whether mental states be delightful or repulsive,
his body is unmoved,
his mind is unmoved,
but inwardly well established
and released, -
restraint of faculties thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
completes the three virtuous habits
(of body, speech and mind).

■

And how cultivated, Kuṇḍaliya,
how made much of,
do the three virtuous habits
complete the four stations of mindfulness?

Herein, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk,
by abandoning vicious habit of body, cultivates virtuous habit of body.

Abandoning vicious habit of speech, he cultivates virtuous habit of speech.

Abandoning vicious habit of mind, he cultivates virtuous habit of mind.

Thus cultivated, Kuṇḍaliya,
thus made much of,
the three virtuous habits complete the four stations of mindfulness.

■

And how cultivated, Kuṇḍaliya,
how made much of,
do the four stations of mindfulness
complete the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk abides in body contemplating body[11] (as transient),
ardent,
self-possessed
and mindful,
by restraining the dejection in the world
that arises from coveting.

He abides in feelings contemplating feelings (as transient),
ardent,
self-possessed
and mindful,
by restraining the dejection in the world
that arises from coveting.

He abides in mind-states contemplating mind-states (as transient),

ardent,
self-possessed
and mindful,
by restraining the dejection in the world
that arises from coveting.

Thus cultivated, Kuṇḍaliya,
thus made much of,
the four stations of mindfulness
complete the seven limbs of wisdom.

■

And how cultivated, Kuṇḍaliya,
how made much of,
do the seven limbs of wisdom
complete the release by knowledge?

Herein, Kuṇḍaliya, a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
[63] on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, Kuṇḍaliya
thus made much of,
do the seven limbs of wisdom
complete the release by knowledge."

At these words the wanderer Kuṇḍaliya exclaimed:

"Excellent, lord!

Excellent, lord!

Just as if one should lift up the fallen,
discover the hidden,
point out the way to the bewildered,
show a light in the gloom, saying:|| ||

'Now they that have eyes to see
can see objects,' -|| ||

even so in divers ways
has the Exalted One expounded the truth.

I, even I, lord,
do go for refuge to the Exalted One,
to the Norm
and to the Order of monks.

May the Exalted One accept me as his follower, as one who from this time forth even to life's end hath gone to refuge in him."

---

[1] One who wears ear-rings.

[2] In Oudh, once the capital of Kosala. Cf. infra, text 219; K.S. i, 77 n.; Buddh. India, 39, 103.

[3] Parisāvacaro (A. v, 10). 'One who attended gatherings where views are aired ("debating societies").' Comy.

[4] The 'thus-talk' of views. Iti-vāda-pamolckha. Cf. M. i, 133; A. ii, 26; Dial. i, 13 n.

[5] A. i, 49: Kāya-, vaci-, mano-caritāni.

[6] Text abhihaṇsati (? to bristle or tingle with delight), but Comy. abhihasati.

[7] Mañku = désolé.

[8] Apatiṭṭhita-citto {Comy. atiṭṭha-).

[9] Adīna-mānaso. Comy. Domanassa vasena ādīna-citto (ādīna = not depressed).

[10] Cf. K.S. iv, 63, 69, 71, 105, etc.

[11] K.S. iv, 259.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 7

Kūṭ-Ā-gāra Suttaṃ

Peak[1]

---

[63]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, in a peaked house all rafters whatsoever
go together to the peak, slope to the peak,
join in the peak,
and of them all
the peak is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, the monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
slopes to Nibbāna,
inclines to Nibbāna,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, does a monk
who cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
slope to Nibbāna,
incline to Nibbāna,
tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated and made much of, monks,
the seven limbs of wisdom
slope to Nibbāna,
incline to Nibbāna,
tend to Nibbāna."

---

[1] Cf. supra, text 43; K.S. iii, 132.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 8

Upavāṇa Suttaṃ

Upavāṇa

---

[63]

THUS have I heard:

On a certain occasion the venerable Upavāṇa[1] and the venerable Sāriputta were staying near Kosambī in Ghosita Park.[2]

On that occasion the venerable Sāriputta, rising at eventide from his solitude, went to visit the venerable Upavāṇa,
and [64] on coming to him
greeted him courteously,

and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies,
sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Sāriputta said this to the venerable Upavana: "Pray, friend Upavāṇa, could a monk thus know of himself:[3]

'The seven limbs of wisdom,
by systematic attention to them,[4]
being well established in me, conduce to pleasant living?'"

"He could thus know of himself, friend Sāriputta:

'The seven limbs of wisdom,
by systematic attention to them,
being well established in me,
conduce to pleasant living.'

By striving to start[5] the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness he knows:

'My heart is well released.

Sloth and torpor in me are well abolished.

Excitement and flurry are well restrained.

Resolute energy is mine.

By making it my object,[6]
I give it my attention.

It is not slack[7] in me.'

■

By striving to start the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation he knows:

'My heart is well released.

Sloth and torpor in me are well abolished.

Excitement and flurry are well restrained.

Resolute energy is mine.

By making it my object,
I give it my attention.

It is not slack in me.'

■

By striving to start the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation he knows:

'My heart is well released.

Sloth and torpor in me are well abolished.

Excitement and flurry are well restrained.

Resolute energy is mine.

By making it my object,
I give it my attention.

It is not slack in me.'

■

By striving to start the limb of wisdom that is zest he knows:

'My heart is well released.

Sloth and torpor in me are well abolished.

Excitement and flurry are well restrained.

Resolute energy is mine.

By making it my object,
I give it my attention.

It is not slack in me.'

■

By striving to start the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity he knows:

'My heart is well released.

Sloth and torpor in me are well abolished.

Excitement and flurry are well restrained.

Resolute energy is mine.

By making it my object,
I give it my attention.

It is not slack in me.'

■

By striving to start the limb of wisdom that is concentration he knows:

'My heart is well released.

Sloth and torpor in me are well abolished.

Excitement and flurry are well restrained.

Resolute energy is mine.

By making it my object,
I give it my attention.

It is not slack in me.'

■

By striving to start the limb of wisdom that is equanimity he knows:

'My heart is well released.

Sloth and torpor in me are well abolished.

Excitement and flurry are well restrained.

Resolute energy is mine.

By making it my object,
I give it my attention.

It is not slack in me.'

Thus, friend Sāriputta, a monk could know of himself:

'By systematic attention to them,
thus well established in me,
the seven limbs of wisdom
conduce to pleasant living.'"

---

[1] K.S. i, 220, ii, 32, iv, 21. He was personal attendant on the Buddha before Ānanda.

[2] Cf. K.S. iv, 62, [? §127?] 102.

[3] Paccattaṇ. [PED: [paṭi+attan] separate, individual; usually acc. -ṃ adv. separately, individually, singly, by himself, in his own heart.

[4] Text manasikārā, but MSS. and Comy. -kāro.

[5] Text ārambhamāno. Comy. ārabbhamāno = kurumāno.

[6] Cf. S. ii, 220; K.S. ii, 149 (aṭṭhikatvā, manasikatvā); infra, text 95.

[7] Līnaṇ. Cf. text 64 (līnatta); infra, text 112 (līnaṇ cittaṇ hoti); lit. 'stuck fast.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 9

Paṭhama Upannā or Uppāda Suttaṃ

Arisen (or Arising) (a)

---

[64]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, these seven limbs of wisdom,
not having yet arisen,
if cultivated and made much of,
do arise,
but not without the manifestation of a Tathāgata,
an Arahant,
a fully enlightened one.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

These seven limbs of wisdom, monks
not having yet arisen,
if cultivated and made much of,
do arise,
but not without the manifestation of a Tathāgata,
an Arahant,
a fully enlightened one.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
1. Pabbata Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

1. The Mountain

Sutta 10

Dutiya Upannā or Uppāda Suttaṃ

Arisen (or Arising) (b)

---

[64]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, these seven limbs of wisdom,
not having yet arisen,
if cultivated and made much of,
do arise,
but not without [65] the rule of the Happy One.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

These seven limbs of wisdom, monks
not having yet arisen,
if cultivated and made much of,
do arise,
but not without the manifestation of a Tathāgata,
an Arahant,
a fully enlightened one.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 11

Pāṇā Suttaṃ

Creatures

---

[65]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, whatsoever creatures adopt the four postures, now going,
now standing still,
now sitting,
now lying,
all do so in dependence on the earth;
even so, monks,
dependent on virtue,
supported by virtue,
does a monk cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom, make much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk,
dependent on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, monks, is how a monk,
dependent on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 12

Paṭhama Suriyassa Upamā Suttaṃ

The Simile of the Sun (a)

---

[65]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, the dawn is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the sun's arising,
even so friendship with what is lovely
is the forerunner,
the harbinger
of the arising
of the seven limbs of wisdom in a monk.

Of a monk who is a friend of what is lovely
this may be expected:
that he will cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom,
that he will make much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk
who is a friend of what is lovely
cultivate and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, monks, is how a monk,
who is a friend of what is lovely
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 13

Dutiya Suriyassa Upamā Suttaṃ

The Simile of the Sun (b)

---

[66]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, the dawn is the forerunner,
the harbinger,
of the sun's arising,
even so systematic attention
is the forerunner,
the harbinger
of the arising
of the seven limbs of wisdom in a monk.

Of a monk who is possessed of systematic attention
this may be expected:
that he will cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom,
that he will make much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk
who is is possessed of systematic attention
cultivate and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, monks, is how a monk,
who is is possessed of systematic attention
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 14

Paṭhama Gilanā Suttaṃ

Sick (a)

---

[66]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
in Bamboo Grove
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Now at that time the venerable Kassapa the Great was staying in Pepper Tree Grotto,[1]
and was sick,
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

Then the Exalted One,
rising from his solitude at eventide,
went to visit the venerable Kassapa the Great,
and on coming to him
sat down on a seat made ready.

So the Exalted One as he sat said to the venerable Kassapa the Great:

"Well, Kassapa, I hope you are bearing up.

I hope you are enduring.

Do your pains abate
and not increase?

Are there signs of their abating and not increasing?"[2]

"No, lord.

I am not bearing up.

I am not enduring.

Strong pains come upon me.

There is no sign of their abating,
but of their increasing."[3]

[67] "Kassapa, these seven limbs of wisdom fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom, Kassapa, that is mindfulness,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is energy,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is concentration,
fully expounded by myself,

when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

These seven limbs of wisdom, Kassapa,
fully expounded by myself,
if cultivated,
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna."

"Verily, lord, they are limbs of wisdom!

Verily, O Happy One, they are limbs of wisdom!"

Thus spake the Exalted One,
and the venerable Kassapa the Great was delighted thereat, and took pleasure in what was said by the Exalted One.

And the venerable Kassapa the Great rose up from that sickness.

There and then that sickness of the venerable Kassapa the Great was abandoned.

---

[1] Cf. Ud. i, 4; UdA. 59; DhpA. 427.

[2] K.S. iii, 102 n. (sānaṇ-etesaṇ. Comy.).

[3] A good example of the reduction to formulae. Cf. S. iii, 119; iv, 46 = K.S. iv, 23, 30. It seems unlikely that on such an occasion the Master would thus expound to this old follower teachings which he must have known by heart. In this Collection the sick man is generally introduced to serve as an occasion for emphasizing a fresh doctrine. Comy. adds: 'He had (it is said) carefully listened to this teaching about the seven limbs of wisdom, and seven days from his taking the robes he penetrated the truth about them, and they were manifested to him. Now, as he pondered on the profit of the Master's teaching, his blood was calmed, his system purified, and the sickness fell away like a drop of water from a lotus leaf.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 15

Dutiya Gilanā Suttaṃ

Sick (b)

---

[67]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
in Bamboo Grove
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Now on that occasion
the venerable Moggallāna the Great was staying on the hill Vulture's Peak,
and was sick,
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

Then the Exalted One,
rising from his solitude at eventide,
went to visit the venerable Moggallāna the Great,
and on coming to him
sat down on a seat made ready.

So the Exalted One as he sat
said to the venerable Moggallāna the Great:

"Well, Moggallāna, I hope you are bearing up.

I hope you are enduring.

Do your pains abate
and not increase?

Are there signs of their abating
and not increasing?"

"No, lord.

I am not bearing up.

I am not enduring.

Strong pains come upon me.

There is no sign of their abating,
but of their increasing."

Moggallāna, these seven limbs of wisdom
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom, Moggallāna, that is mindfulness,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is energy,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is concentration,
fully expounded by myself,

when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
fully expounded by myself,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

These seven limbs of wisdom, Moggallāna,
fully expounded by myself,
if cultivated,
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna."

"Verily, lord, they are limbs of wisdom!

Verily, O Happy One, they are limbs of wisdom!"

Thus spake the Exalted One, and the venerable Moggallāna the Great was delighted thereat,
and took pleasure in what was said by the Exalted One.

And the venerable Moggallāna the Great rose up from that sickness.

There and then that sickness of the venerable Moggallāna the Great was abandoned.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 16

Tatiya Gilanā Suttaṃ

Sick (c)

---

[68]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha
in Bamboo Grove
at the Squirrels' Feeding-ground.

Now on that occasion
the Exalted One
and was sick,
afflicted,
stricken with a sore disease.

Cunda the Great[1]
came to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

As he thus sat
the Exalted One said to the venerable Cunda the Great:

"Cunda, call to mind[2] the limbs of wisdom."

"These seven limbs of wisdom, lord,
fully expounded by the Exalted One,
if cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

What are the seven?

The limb of wisdom, lord, that is mindfulness,
fully expounded by the Exalted One,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
fully expounded by the Exalted One,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is energy,
fully expounded by the Exalted One,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
fully expounded by the Exalted One,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is concentration,
fully expounded by the Exalted One,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
fully expounded by the Exalted One,
when cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

These seven limbs of wisdom, lord,
fully expounded by the Exalted One,
if cultivated,
and made much of,

conduce to full comprehension,
to wisdom,
to Nibbāna."

"Verily, Cunda, they are limbs of wisdom!

Verily, Cunda, they are limbs of wisdom!"

Thus spake Cunda the Great, and the Master was approving of it.

Then the Exalted One rose up from that sickness.

There and then that sickness of the Exalted One was abandoned.

---

[1] Younger brother of Sāriputta, and one of the chief Elders. Cf. Brethren, 119; K.S. iv, 30.

[2] Paṭibhantu taṇ, lit. 'let them occur to you' (cf. vol., i., 241, 243, 245; Ud., p 39: paṭibhati maṇ = upaṭṭhāti maṇ. Comy.).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 17

Pāraṇgāmi or Apara Suttaṃ

Crossing Over or No More

---

[68]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduce to no more going to the hither
or the further shore.[1]

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduce to no more going to the hither
or the further shore."

Thus spake the Exalted One.

So saying, the Happy One added this further as Teacher:

---

[69]

Few are they of mortal men
Who have reached the further shore:
But the crowd of other folk
On this side fare up and down.
They who follow in the teaching
Of the Norm expounded well,
They shall reach the shore and pass
The realm of Death so hard to cross.

Giving up the state of darkness
Let the wise pursue the light:
Giving up home for the homeless,
In solitude where joys are rare,
Let him long for bliss unbounded.
Leaving lusts and owning naught
Let the wise man cleanse himself
From the passions of the heart.

They whose mind is rightly cultured
In the wisdom's (seven) limbs, -
Glad to have surrendered clinging,
Glad to be from bondage loosed,
Canker-cured, they, all-resplendent,
E'en in this world are at peace.

---

[1] Supra, text 24 (Nibbāna).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 18

Viraddha or Āraddha Suttaṃ

Neglected and Undertaken

---

[69]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"By whomsoever, monks,
the seven limbs of wisdom are neglected,

by them is neglected
this Ariyan eightfold way
for the utter destruction of ill.

By whomsoever, monks,
the seven limbs of wisdom are undertaken,
by them is undertaken
this Ariyan eightfold way
for the utter destruction of ill.

What are the seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity."

"By whomsoever, monks,
the seven limbs of wisdom are neglected,
by them is neglected
this Ariyan eightfold way
for the utter destruction of ill.

By whomsoever, monks,
the seven limbs of wisdom are undertaken,
by them is undertaken
this Ariyan eightfold way
for the utter destruction of ill.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 19

Ariya Suttaṃ

Ariyan

---

[69]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,

are the Ariyan profitable things.[1]

For him that acts in accordance therewith they conduce to the utter destruction of ill.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,
are the Ariyan profitable things.

For him that acts in accordance therewith
they conduce to the utter destruction of ill."

---

[1] Niyyānikā (leading to salvation); cf. infra, text 255 (of the Four Bases of Psychic Poweṃ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
2. Gilāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

2. The Sick Man

Sutta 20

Nibbidā Suttaṃ

Revulsion

---

[69]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduce to downright revulsion,
to dispassion,
to cessation,
to calm,
to full comprehension,
to the wisdom,
to Nibbāna.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

"These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduce to downright revulsion,
to dispassion,
to cessation,
to calm,
to full comprehension,
to the wisdom,
to Nibbāna."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 21

Bodhanā Suttaṃ

Knowing[1]

---

[70]

THUS have I heard:

Now a certain monk came to see the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
that monk said this to the Exalted One:

"They say 'Limb of wisdom! Limb of wisdom,' lord.

Pray, lord, how far is this name applicable?"[2]

"They conduce to wisdom, monk.

That is why they are called
'limbs of wisdom.'

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

They conduce to wisdom, monk.

That is why they are called
'limbs of wisdom.'"

---

[1] Bodhanā.

[2] As at I, § 5 of this part.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 22

Desanā Suttaṃ

Instruction

---

[70]

THUS have I heard:

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, are the seven limbs of wisdom?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

These, monks, are the seven limbs of wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 23

Ṭhānā Suttaṃ

Conditions

---

[70]

THUS have I heard:

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Sensual desire,[1] monks, that has not yet arisen, arises owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon lust and passion:
and, when it has already arisen,
sensual desire conduces
to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

■

Malevolence, monks,
that has not yet arisen, arises
owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon malevolence:
and, when it has already arisen,
malevolence conduces
to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

■

Sloth and torpor, monks,
that has not yet arisen, arises
owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon sloth and torpor:
and, when it has already arisen,
sloth and torpor conduces
to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

■

Excitement and flurry, monks,
that has not yet arisen, arises
owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon excitement and flurry:

and, when it has already arisen,
excitement and flurry conduces
to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

■

Doubt and wavering, monks,
that has not yet arisen, arises
owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon doubt and wavering:
and, when it has already arisen,
doubt and wavering conduces
to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

§

[71] The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness, monks,
which, has not yet arisen,
arises owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon mindfulness,
and, when it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
by the cultivation thereof,
goes to fulfilment.

■

The limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation, monks,
which, has not yet arisen,
arises owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon Norm investigation,

and, when it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
by the cultivation thereof,
goes to fulfilment.

■

The limb of wisdom that is energy, monks,
which, has not yet arisen,
arises owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon energy,
and, when it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
by the cultivation thereof,
goes to fulfilment.

■

The limb of wisdom that is zest, monks,
which, has not yet arisen,
arises owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon zest,
and, when it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
by the cultivation thereof,
goes to fulfilment.

■

The limb of wisdom that is tranquillity, monks,
which, has not yet arisen,
arises owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon tranquillity,
and, when it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,

by the cultivation thereof,
goes to fulfilment.

■

The limb of wisdom that is concentration, monks,
which, has not yet arisen,
arises owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon concentration,
and, when it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
by the cultivation thereof,
goes to fulfilment.

■

The limb of wisdom that is equinimity, monks,
which, has not yet arisen,
arises owing to much attention being given to conditions based upon equinimity,
and, when it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity,
by the cultivation thereof,
goes to fulfilment."

---

[1] Kāma-c-chando. Cf. Buddh. Psychology, p. 123.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 24

Ayoniso Suttaṃ

Unsystematic[1]

---

[71]

THUS have I heard:

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"In one who gives unsystematic attention, monks, sensual desire which has not yet arisen,
arises;
and, when arisen,
sensual desire conduces to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention, malevolence which has not yet arisen,
arises;
and, when arisen,
malevolence conduces to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
sloth and torpor,
arises;
and, when arisen,
sloth and torpor conduces to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention, excitement and flurry,
arises;
and, when arisen,
excitement and flurry conduces to the still more-becoming and growth thereof.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
doubt and wavering,
arises;
and, when arisen,
doubt and wavering conduces to the still more-becoming
and growth thereof.

§

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
not having arisen;
does not arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness fades away.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
not having arisen;
does not arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation fades away.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
not having arisen;
does not arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is energy fades away.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
not having arisen;
does not arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is zest fades away.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquility,
not having arisen;
does not arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquility fades away.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
not having arisen;
does not arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration fades away.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives unsystematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity,
not having arisen;
does not arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity fades away.

§

"But monks, in one who gives systematic attention, sensual desire which has not yet arisen,
does not arise;
and, if it has arisen,
it is abandoned.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
malevolence which has not yet arisen,
does not arise;
and, if it has arisen,
it is abandoned.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
sloth and torpor,
does not arise;
and, if it has arisen,
it is abandoned.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
excitement and flurry,
does not arise;
and, if it has arisen,
it is abandoned.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
doubt and wavering,
does not arise;
and, if it has arisen,
it is abandoned.

§

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
not having yet arisen;
does arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
by cultivation,
the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness goes to fulfilment.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
not having yet arisen;
does arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
by cultivation,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation goes to fulfilment.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
not having yet arisen;
does arise,
and, if it has already arisen,

by cultivation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy goes to fulfilment.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
not having yet arisen;
does arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
by cultivation,
the limb of wisdom that is zest goes to fulfilment.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquility,
not having yet arisen;
does arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
by cultivation,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquility goes to fulfilment.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
not having yet arisen;
does arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
by cultivation,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration goes to fulfilment.

■

Likewise, monks, in one who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity,

not having yet arisen;
does arise,
and, if it has already arisen,
by cultivation,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity goes to fulfilment."

---

[1] Ayoniso (a slack thinker; cf. Dialog. iii, 251 n.: 'disorderly thinking.' Also supra 52, n. 2.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 25

Aparihāni Suttaṃ

Undeclining[1]

---

[72]

THUS have I heard:

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
seven conditions that lead to non-decline.[ed1]

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, are those seven conditions that lead to non-decline?

They are the seven limbs of wisdom.

Which seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

These, monks, are the seven conditions that lead to non-decline.

---

[1] Aparihāni; cf. K.S. ii, 139.

[ed1] Woodward reads the 'aparihāni' (his 'undeclining') of the title for the body of the text's 'aparihāniya' that is, here, 'that lead to non-decline' to which I have changed it. Left as it was ("seven conditions that decline not") it would refer to the non-declining of the seven, but what is being spoken of is the non-decline of states in the practitioner.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 26

Khaya Suttaṃ

Destruction

---

[72]

THUS have I heard:

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The way, monks,
and the practice leading thereto

which conduces to the destruction of craving, - do ye cultivate that way and practice.

And what is the way, monks,
what the practice
that so conduces?

It is the seven limbs of wisdom.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

§

At these words the venerable Udāyī[1] said to the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, how are the seven limbs of wisdom cultivated?

How, if made much of,
do they conduce to the destruction of craving?"

"Herein, Udayi, a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,

which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

As he cultivates the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence
craving is abandoned.

By the abandoning of craving
action (that is rooted in craving) is abandoned.

By the abandoning
of action (rooted in craving)
Ill is abandoned.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

As he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence
craving is abandoned.

By the abandoning of craving
action (that is rooted in craving) is abandoned.

By the abandoning
of action (rooted in craving)
Ill is abandoned.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

As he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence
craving is abandoned.

By the abandoning of craving
action (that is rooted in craving) is abandoned.

By the abandoning
of action (rooted in craving)
Ill is abandoned.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

As he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,

boundless,
free of malevolence
craving is abandoned.

By the abandoning of craving
action (that is rooted in craving) is abandoned.

By the abandoning
of action (rooted in craving)
Ill is abandoned.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

As he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence
craving is abandoned.

By the abandoning of craving
action (that is rooted in craving) is abandoned.

By the abandoning
of action (rooted in craving)
Ill is abandoned.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

As he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence
craving is abandoned.

By the abandoning of craving
action (that is rooted in craving) is abandoned.

By the abandoning
of action (rooted in craving)

Ill is abandoned.

■

[73] He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

As he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence
craving is abandoned.

By the abandoning of craving action (that is rooted in craving) is abandoned.

By the abandoning
of action (rooted in craving)
Ill is abandoned.

Thus, Udāyī, by the destruction of craving (comes) destruction of action (rooted in craving).[2] By destruction of action comes destruction of ill."

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iv, 77 f. and n. Comy. imagines the Buddha to think: This Udāyī, is good at drawing conclusions (anusandhi-kusalo).

[2] Words in brackets expess Comy.'s def. of kamma. To say that action as such should be abandoned would be contrary to the Buddha's 'doctrine of the deed.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 27

Nirodha Suttaṃ

Cessation

---

[73]

THUS have I heard:

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"The way, monks,
and the practice leading thereto

which conduces to the cessation of craving, -
do ye cultivate that way and practice.

And what is the way, monks,
what the practice
that so conduces?

It is the seven limbs of wisdom.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

And how cultivated,
how made much of,
do the seven limbs of wisdom
conduce to the cessation[ed1] of craving?

Herein, monks, a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, cultivated,
thus made much of,
do the seven limbs of wisdom
conduce to the cessation of craving"

[ed1] Here and below Woodward retains 'destruction' from the previous sutta.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 28

Nibbedha Suttaṃ

Penetration

---

[73]

THUS have I heard:

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks,
the way concerned with penetration.[1]

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is that way concerned with penetration?

It is the seven limbs of wisdom.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity."

§

At these words the venerable Udāyī said to the Exalted One:

"Pray, lord, how cultivated,
how made much of,
do these seven limbs of wisdom conduce to penetration?"

"Herein, Udayi, a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that [74] is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

He, with mind that has cultivated the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness, pierces through,
breaks down
the great mass of lust
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.[2]

In like manner he pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of hatred
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

He pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of illusion
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,

boundless,
free of malevolence.

He, with mind that has cultivated
the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
pierces through,
breaks down
the great mass of lust
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

In like manner he pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of hatred
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

He pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of illusion
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

He, with mind that has cultivated
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
pierces through,
breaks down
the great mass of lust
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

In like manner he pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of hatred
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

He pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of illusion
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

He, with mind that has cultivated
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
pierces through,

breaks down
the great mass of lust
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

In like manner he pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of hatred
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

He pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of illusion
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

He, with mind that has cultivated
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
pierces through,
breaks down
the great mass of lust

that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

In like manner he pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of hatred
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

He pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of illusion
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

He, with mind that has cultivated
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
pierces through,
breaks down
the great mass of lust
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

In like manner he pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of hatred
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

He pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of illusion
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender;
which is far-spreading,
lofty,
boundless,
free of malevolence.

He, with mind that has cultivated
the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
pierces through,
breaks down
the great mass of lust
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

In like manner he pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of hatred

that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down.

He pierces through,
breaks down,
the great mass of illusion
that hitherto had not been pierced through
or broken down."

---

[1] Nibbedha-bhāgiyaṇ = nibbijjana-koṭṭhāsikaṇ; cf. VM. 15.

[2] Cf. Pts. ii, 201.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 29

Eka-Dhamma Suttaṃ

The One Condition

---

[74]

THUS have I heard:

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I behold not, monks, any other single condition which,
thus cultivated and made much of,

is so conducive to abandonment of the conditions that bind as the seven limbs of wisdom.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

And how cultivated, monks,
how made much of
do the seven limbs of wisdom conduce to the abandonment of conditions that bind?

Herein, monks, a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom that mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

§

And what, monks, are the conditions that bind?

The eye, monks, is a condition that binds.

Herein spring up attachments
that bind and cleave to one.

The ear, monks, is a condition that binds.

Herein spring up attachments
that bind and cleave to one.

The nose, monks, is a condition that binds.

Herein spring up attachments
that bind and cleave to one.

The tongue, monks, is a condition that binds.

Herein spring up attachments
that bind and cleave to one.

The body, monks, is a condition that binds.

Herein spring up attachments
that bind and cleave to one.

The mind, monks, is a condition that binds.

Herein spring up attachments
that bind and cleave to one.

These, monks, are called
'conditions that bind.'"[1]

---

[1] Cf. K.S. iv, passim.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
3. Udāyi Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

3. Udāyi

Sutta 30

Udāyī Suttaṃ

Udāyī

---

[74]

THUS have I heard:

On a certain occasion the Exalted One was staying among the Sumbha, at Desaka,[1] a district of the Sumbha.

[75] Now the venerable Udāyī came to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
the venerable Udāyī said this to the Exalted One:

"Strange it is, lord!

A wonder it is, lord!
how strongly the affection and respect for the Exalted One,
the modesty and delicacy of feeling for him, have worked[2] in me.

Formerly, lord, when I was living the life of a householder,
I was not much concerned about the Norm, not much concerned about[3] the Order.

But, lord, when I beheld the affection, the respect,
the modesty
and delicacy of feeling for the Exalted One,
I went forth from home to the homeless.

To me it was that the Exalted One taught the Norm,
to wit:

'Thus is body,
thus the arising of body,
thus the perishing of body.

Thus is feeling,
thus the arising of feeling,
thus the perishing of feeling.

Thus is perception,
thus the arising of perception, thus the perishing of perception.

Thus are the activities
thus the arising of the activities, thus the perishing of the activities.

Thus is consciousness,
thus the arising of consciousness, thus the perishing of consciousness.'

§

Now, lord, when I had gone into solitude, while pondering over the rise and fall[4] of these five factors of existence, I fully realized,
as in truth it is,
the meaning of

'This is ill;
this is the arising of ill;
this is the ceasing of ill.'

I fully realized,
as in truth it is,
the meaning of

'This is the practice
that leads to the ceasing of ill.'

■

Then, lord, I fully grasped the Norm.

I laid hold of[5] the way, which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me,

thus and thus abiding,
to the attainment of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

■

Then, lord, I laid hold of
the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

■

[76] I laid hold of
the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:

done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

■

I laid hold of
the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

■

I laid hold of
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

■

I laid hold of
the limb of wisdom that is zest,

which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

■

I laid hold of
the limb of wisdom that is tranquility,
which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

■

I laid hold of
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

■

I laid hold of
the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'

§

Indeed, lord, I have laid hold of this path,
which, cultivated and made much of,
will lead me on,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such[6]:
so that I shall come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more life in these conditions.'"

"Well said! Well said, Udāyī!

Indeed you have laid hold of this way, which, cultivated and made much of by you, will lead you,
thus and thus abiding,
to the state of being such:
so that you will come to know:

'Cut off is rebirth:
lived is the holy life:
done is the task:
there is no more of being here for me.'"

---

[1] At JA. i, 393 (the only place where I find it mentioned) Desaka (text here Setaka? v.l. Sedaka) is a district of Sumbha-raṭṭha, the scene of §§ infra, (text), 168-70."

[2] Bahukato.

[3] Abahukato = akata-bahumāno. Comy.

[4] Ukkujj'āvakujjaṇ, lit. 'topsy-turvy.' Comy. udayo and vayo (udayabbaya).

[5] Text Abhisamito. Perhaps the v.l. abhisameto of text, which Comy. follows, is the better reading. Comy. = vipassanā dhammo abhisamāgato. Thus he was now sotāpanno according to Comy.

[6] Tathāttāya = tathābhāvāya. Comy. Cf. infra, text 213; K.S. iv, 202; M. 1, 301. A term for Nibbāna commonly used in Sanskrit Buddhism, 'thusness.' Cf. itthattaṇ, 'hereness,' the present state, this world or life, of the next phrase.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Sutta 31

Paṭhama Kusalā Suttaṃ

The Good (a)

---

[76]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One once addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Whatsoever conditions, monks,
are the constituent parts of good and bad,[1]
but are on the side of[2] goodness, all of them have their root in earnestness, converge in earnestness;
earnestness is reckoned the chief of those conditions.

Of the monk who is earnest we may expect that he will cultivate
the seven limbs of wisdom,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does the earnest monk
cultivate and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, monks, is how a monk who is earnest cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom, makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom."

---

[1] For the kusalākusalā cf. M. i, 489.

[2] Pakkhikā or pakkhiyā (infra, text 97); lit, 'the wings or sides.' Cf. Compendium, 179 n.; Dialog. iii, 93.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Sutta 32

Dutiya Kusalā Suttaṃ

The Good (b)

---

[77]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One once addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Whatsoever conditions, monks,
are the constituent parts of good and bad,

but are on the side of goodness,
all of them have their root in systematic attention, converge in systematic attention.

Of those conditions
systematic attention is reckoned chief.

Of a monk who possesses systematic attention
we may expect that he will cultivate
the seven limbs of wisdom,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks, does a monk
who is possessed of systematic attention
cultivate and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, monks, is how a monk
who is possessed of systematic attention
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Sutta 33

Paṭhama Kilesa Suttaṃ

Corruptions (a)[1]

---

[77]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One once addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these five corruptions of gold,[2] tainted by which corruptions
gold is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor fit for perfect workmanship.

What are the five?

Iron, monks, is a corruption of gold,
tainted by which corruptions
gold is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor fit for perfect workmanship.

Copper,[3] monks, is a corruption of gold,
tainted by which corruptions
gold is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor fit for perfect workmanship.

Tin, monks, is a corruption of gold,
tainted by which corruptions
gold is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor fit for perfect workmanship.

Lead, monks, is a corruption of gold,
tainted by which corruptions

gold is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor fit for perfect workmanship.

Silver,[4] monks, is a corruption of gold,
tainted by which corruptions
gold is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor fit for perfect workmanship.

These, monks, are the five corruptions of gold, tainted by which corruptions
gold is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor fit for perfect workmanship.

§

In like manner, monks, there are these five corruptions of the heart,[5]
tainted by which corruptions
the heart is neither [78] soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor perfectly composed
for the destruction of the āsavas.

What are the five?

Sensual desire, monks, is a corruption of the heart, tainted by which corruption
the heart is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor perfectly composed
for the destruction of the āsavas.

Malevolence, monks, is a corruption of the heart, tainted by which corruption
the heart is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor perfectly composed
for the destruction of the āsavas.

Sloth and torpor, monks, is a corruption of the heart,
tainted by which corruption
the heart is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor perfectly composed
for the destruction of the āsavas.

Excitement and flurry, monks, is a corruption of the heart, tainted by which corruption
the heart is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,

nor perfectly composed
for the destruction of the āsavas.

Doubt and wavering, monks, is a corruption of the heart, tainted by which corruption
the heart is neither soft,
nor pliable,
nor gleaming,
nor easily broken up,
nor perfectly composed
for the destruction of the āsavas.

---

[1] Cf. Buddh. Psych. Eth, 251, 281. We may call them 'depravities.' Upakkilesā here means the other metals which are mixed with gold as alloy. See the talk to Visākhā, A. i., 205-15, esp. 210.

[2] Jātarūpa is unworked gold, as opposed to suvaṇṇa.

[3] Lit. 'red metal,' iron being kāla-loha.

[4] Sajjhu = rajataṇ.

[5] Citta; cf. Expos. ii, 488. The word khilā (supra, text 57) expresses the hard crust of individuality which has to be broken through.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Sutta 34

Dutiya Kilesa Suttaṃ

Corruptions (b)

---

[78]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One once addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, these seven limbs of wisdom,
which are without check and hindrance,

if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

What are the seven?

The limb of wisdom which is mindfulness,
if unrestrained by check and hindrance,
if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

The limb of wisdom which is investigation of the Norm,
if unrestrained by check and hindrance,
if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

The limb of wisdom which is energy,
if unrestrained by check and hindrance,
if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

The limb of wisdom which is zest,
if unrestrained by check and hindrance,
if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

The limb of wisdom which is tranquility,
if unrestrained by check and hindrance,

if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

The limb of wisdom which is concentration,
if unrestrained by check and hindrance,
if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

The limb of wisdom which is equanimity,
if unrestrained by check and hindrance,
if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

These are the seven limbs of wisdom, which if unrestrained by check and hindrance,
if cultivated and made much of
with uncorrupted heart,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Suttas 35-36

Yoniso

Systimatic

---

[78]

Sutta 35

Yoniso Suttaṃ (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One once addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, in him,
who practises unsystematic attention,[1] sensual desire,
if not already risen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
sensual desire conduces
to the more-becoming and growth thereof.

So also in him,
who practises unsystematic attention,
malevolence,
if not already risen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
malevolence conduces
to the more-becoming and growth thereof.

So also in him,
who practises unsystematic attention,
sloth and torpor,
if not already risen,
do arise:
and, if arisen,
sloth and torpor conduces
to the more-becoming and growth thereof.

So also in him,
who practises unsystematic attention,
excitement and flurry,
if not already risen,
do arise:
and, if already arisen,

excitement and flurry conduces
to the more-becoming and growth thereof.

So also in him,
who practises unsystematic attention,
doubt and wavering,
if not already risen,
do arise:
and, if already arisen,
doubt and wavering conduces
to the more-becoming and growth thereof.

Sutta 36

Yoniso Suttaṃ (b)

But, monks, in him who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom which is mindfulness,
if not yet arisen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
by cultivation
it goes to fulfilment.

So also in him who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom which is investigation of the Norm,
if not yet arisen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
by cultivation
it goes to fulfilment.

So also in him who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom which is energy,
if not yet arisen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
by cultivation
it goes to fulfilment.

So also in him who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom which is zest,
if not yet arisen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
by cultivation
it goes to fulfilment.

So also in him who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom which is tranquility,
if not yet arisen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
by cultivation
it goes to fulfilment.

So also in him who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom which is concentration,
if not yet arisen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
by cultivation
it goes to fulfilment.

So also in him who gives systematic attention,
the limb of wisdom which is equanimity,

if not yet arisen,
arises:
and, if already arisen,
by cultivation
it goes to fulfilment.

---

[1] Cf. Expos. ii, 490; supra, 71, n.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Sutta 37

Vuddhi (or Aparihāni?) Suttaṃ

Increase or Not Decrease

---

[79]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One once addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduce to increase
and not to decrease.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduce to increase
and not to decrease."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Sutta 38

Āvaraṇa-Nīvaraṇa (or Nīvaraṇ'Āvaraṇa) Suttaṃ

Restraint and Hindrance

---

[79]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One once addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, there are these five checks,
hindrances

and corruptions of the heart, which weaken insight.[1]

What five?

Sensual desire, monks, is a check,
hindrance
and corruption of the heart,
that weakens insight.

Malevolence, is a check,
hindrance
and corruption of the heart,
that weakens insight.

Sloth and torpor, is a check,
hindrance
and corruption of the heart,
that weakens insight.

Excitement and flurry, is a check,
hindrance
and corruption of the heart,
that weakens insight.

Doubt and wavering, is a check,
hindrance
and corruption of the heart,
that weakens insight.

These five are checks,
hindrances
and corruptions of the heart,
which weaken insight.

§

The seven limbs of wisdom, monks, if unrestrained,
unhindered,
if cultivated
and made much of
with uncorrupted heart, conduce to realizing the fruits of liberation by knowledge.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

■

Now, monks, at the time when the Ariyan disciple makes the Norm his object,[2] gives attention to it,
with all his mind considers it,
with ready ear listens to the Norm, -
at such time
these five hindrances exist not in him:
at such time
the seven limbs of wisdom
by cultivation
go to fulfilment.

■

What five hindrances at such time exist not?

The hindrance that is sensual desire,
at such time,
exists not.

The hindrance which is malevolence,
at such time,
exists not.

The hindrance which is sloth and torpor,
at such time,
exists not.

The hindrance which is excitement and flurry,
at such time,
exists not.

The hindrance which is doubt and wavering,
at such time,
exists not.

In that man
the five hindrances
at such time
exist not.

■

And what seven limbs of wisdom
by cultivation
at such time go to fulfilment?

[80]

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
by cultivation,

at such time goes to fulfilment.

The limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
by cultivation,
at such time goes to fulfilment.

The limb of wisdom that is energy,
by cultivation,
at such time goes to fulfilment.

The limb of wisdom that is zest,
by cultivation,
at such time goes to fulfilment.

The limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
by cultivation,
at such time goes to fulfilment.

The limb of wisdom that is concentration,
by cultivation,
at such time goes to fulfilment.

The limb of wisdom that is equinimity,
by cultivation,
at such time goes to fulfilment.

These seven limbs of wisdom
by cultivation
at such time go to fulfilment?

■

At the time, monks, when the Ariyan disciple
makes the Norm his object,
gives attention to it,
with all his mind considers it,
with ready ear listens to the Norm, -

at such time
the five hindrances exist not in him,
at such time
these seven limbs of wisdom by cultivation go to fulfilment."

---

[1] Cf. infra, text 160; Buddh. Psych. Eth., p. 310 n.

[2] Aṭṭhi-katvā {supra, text 76); quoted KhpA. 148. Cf. S. 1, 112, ii, 220; J.P.T.S., 1886, p. 107; A. iii, 162, 402 (where the context implies 'giving close attention to') reads sabbaṇ cetasā for sabbacetaso of our text. (Read samann- for sammannāharitvā.)

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Sutta 39

Rukkha Suttaṃ

The Tree

---

[80]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One once addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"There are mighty trees, monks,
grown from tiny seeds,

of mighty bulk,
which overspread[1] (other) trees.

The trees thus overspread[2] break up,
break down,
fall to the ground
and so lie.

What mighty trees, monks,
grown from tiny seeds,
of mighty bulk,
which overspread other trees
by which being overspread,
break up,
break down,
fall to the ground
and so lie?

Trees such as the bo-tree,
the banyan,
the wave-leafed fig,
the bunched fig,
the cedar,[3]
the wood-apple tree.[4]

These are the mighty trees, monks,
grown from tiny seeds,
of mighty bulk,
which overspread other trees:
by which being overspread,
break up,
break down,
fall to the ground
and so lie.

§

Just in the same way, monks, here maybe is such and such a clansman, who, whatsoever lusts he abandons and goes forth from home to the homeless, just by such lusts,
or by lusts still worse than these,
is broken up,
broken down:
down he falls
and so lies.

Monks, there are these five checks,
hindrances
which overspread the heart, which weaken insight.

What five?

Sensual desire, monks, is a check,
a hindrance
which overspreads the heart
and weakens insight.

Malevolence, monks, is a check,
a hindrance
which overspreads the heart
and weakens insight.

Sloth and torpor, monks, is a check,
a hindrance

which overspreads the heart
and weakens insight.

Excitement and flurry, monks, is a check,
a hindrance
which overspreads the heart
and weakens insight.

Doubt and wavering, monks, is a check,
a hindrance
which overspreads the heart
and weakens insight.

Each of these, monks, is a check,
a hindrance
which overspreads the heart
and weakens insight.

§

[81] These seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
which are without check and hindrance,
which overspread not the heart,
if cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

What are the seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
which is without check and hindrance,
which overspreads not the heart,

which, if cultivated
and made much of,
conduces to the realization
of the fruits of liberation by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
which is without check and hindrance,
which overspreads not the heart,
which, if cultivated
and made much of,
conduces to the realization
of the fruits of liberation by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is energy,
which is without check and hindrance,
which overspreads not the heart,
which, if cultivated
and made much of,
conduces to the realization
of the fruits of liberation by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is zest,
which is without check and hindrance,
which overspreads not the heart,
which, if cultivated
and made much of,
conduces to the realization
of the fruits of liberation by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
which is without check and hindrance,
which overspreads not the heart,
which, if cultivated
and made much of,
conduces to the realization
of the fruits of liberation by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
which is without check and hindrance,
which overspreads not the heart,
which, if cultivated
and made much of,
conduces to the realization
of the fruits of liberation by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom which is equanimity,
which is without check and hindrance,
which overspreads not the heart,
which, if cultivated
and made much of,
conduces to the realization
of the fruits of liberation by knowledge.

These are the seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
which are without check and hindrance,
which overspread not the heart,
if cultivated
and made much of,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of liberation by knowledge.

---

[1] Ajjhārūhā or -rūḷhā. Comy. -abhirūhakā (parasitic growths).

[2] Ye hi of text should read yehi.

[3] Kacchiko (Comy. = aṭṭhi-gacchako;? 'of bone-like growth.') ? Cedar. These trees appear in several lists, e.g. at Vin. iv, 35.

[4] Text kapitthako. Comy. kaputhano; Vin. kapiṭhano, DA. i, 81 kapitthano; VM. 183, kapitthako (v.l.-no), given as examples of khandha-bījī. But whether it is of the fig-tree family or a wood-apple I cannot say. Comy. says it produces pilakkhā. Dictionaries call it Feronia elephantum. Cf. Brethren, p. 333 n.; Mil. 189 (kapittho) = Trans vol. 1. 262; also JA. v, 132, v.l. kaviṭṭhaṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
4. Nīvaraṇa Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

4. On Hindrances

Sutta 40

Nīvaraṇa Suttaṃ

Hindrance

---

[81]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Monks, there are these five hindrances which cause blindness,
loss of sight
and ignorance;
which obstruct insight,
consort with pain[1]
and conduce not to Nibbāna.

Which five?

The hindrance of sensual desire, monks, causes blindness,
loss of sight
and ignorance;
which obstruct insight,
consort with pain
and conduce not to Nibbāna.

The hindrance of malevolence, monks,
causes blindness,
loss of sight
and ignorance;
which obstruct insight,
consort with pain
and conduce not to Nibbāna.

The hindrance of sloth and torpor, monks,
causes blindness,
loss of sight
and ignorance;
which obstruct insight,
consort with pain
and conduce not to Nibbāna.

The hindrance of excitement and flurry, monks,
causes blindness,
loss of sight
and ignorance;
which obstruct insight,
consort with pain
and conduce not to Nibbāna.

The hindrance of doubt and wavering, monks,
causes blindness,
loss of sight
and ignorance;
which obstruct insight,
consort with pain
and conduce not to Nibbāna.

§

These seven limbs of wisdom, monks, which cause sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna.

What are the seven?

They are the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness, monks,
which causes sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm, monks,
which causes sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is energy, monks,
which causes sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is zest, monks,
which causes sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is tranquillity, monks,
which causes sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is concentration, monks,
which causes sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna.

The limb of wisdom that is equanimity, monks,
which causes sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna.

These are the seven limbs of wisdom, monks,
which causes sight,
knowledge,
growth of insight:
they consort not with pain,
and conduce to Nibbāna."

---

[1] M. i, 115, vighāta-pakkhikā (cf. supra, text iv, 1); Itiv. 81. Comy. - dukkha-pakkhika.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 41

Vidhā Suttaṃ

Conceits

---

[81]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, whatsoever recluses or brahmins
in past times
have abandoned the three conceits,[1]
all of them [82] did so by the fact of cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins
in future times
shall abandon the three conceits,
all of them will do so
by the fact of cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.|| ||

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins, monks,
do now
abandon the three conceits,
all of them do so
by the fact of cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

■

What seven limbs of wisdom?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

■

"Monks, whatsoever recluses or brahmins
in past times
have abandoned the three conceits,
all of them did so
by the fact of cultivating and making much of these seven limbs of wisdom.

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins
in future times
shall abandon the three conceits,
all of them will do so
by the fact of cultivating and making much of
these seven limbs of wisdom.|| ||

Whatsoever recluses or brahmins, monks,
do now
abandon the three conceits,
all of them do so
by the fact of cultivating and making much of thees seven limbs of wisdom."

---

[1] Tisso vidhā. Cf. supra, text 56. Comy. Tāyo māna-koṭṭhāsā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 42

Cakka-Vatti Suttaṃ

Roller of the Wheel

---

[82]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, together with the appearance of a monarch who rolls the wheel[1] there is the appearance of the seven treasures.

What seven treasures?

The treasure of the Wheel, the treasure of the Elephant,
the treasure of the Horse,
the treasure of the Jewel,
the treasure of the Woman,
the treasure of the Housefather, the treasure of the Heir Apparent.

These, monks, are the seven treasures that appear along with the appearance of a monarch who rolls the wheel.

Likewise, monks, together with the appearance of a Tathāgata who is Arahant,
a fully Enlightened One,
there is the appearance of these seven treasures.

What seven?

There is the appearance of the seven treasures of wisdom:

The treasure of wisdom that is mindfulness, the treasure of wisdom that is searching the Norm, the treasure of wisdom that is energy, the treasure of wisdom that is zest, the treasure of wisdom that is tranquillity, the treasure of wisdom that is concentration, the treasure of wisdom that is equanimity.

Monks, together with the appearance of a Tathāgata who is Arahant,
a fully Enlightened One,
there is the appearance of these seven treasures of wisdom.

---

[1] Cakka-vatti, a term for the ideal monarch. Cf. Dialog. ii, 327; M. i, 55; Pts. of Contr., 107. Comy. refers to Maha Sudassana Sutta, D. ii, 169.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 43

Māra Suttaṃ

Māra

---

[83]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"I will teach you, monks, a way for crushing Māra's host.

Do ye listen to it.

And what, monks, is that way for crushing Māra's host?

It is the seven limbs of wisdom.

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

This, monks, is the way for crushing Māra's host."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 44

Duppañño Suttaṃ

Witless

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 45

Paññavā Suttaṃ

Intelligent[1]

---

[83]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

"Now a certain brother came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
he said to the Exalted One: -

"'Intelligent, no imbecile!'

Intelligent, no imbecile!'
is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, how far is this name applicable?"

"By the fact, monk, of cultivating,
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
one is called 'Intelligent, no imbecile.'

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

By the fact, monk, of cultivating,
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
one is called 'Intelligent, no imbecile.'"

---

[1] Paññavā.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 46

Dalidda Suttaṃ

Wretched

---

[83]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

"Now a certain brother came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
he said to the Exalted One: -

"'A poor wretch!'

A poor wretch!'
is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, how far is this name applicable?"

[84] "By the fact, monk, of not cultivating, not making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
one is called 'A poor wretch.'

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

By the fact, monk, of not cultivating,
not making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
one is called 'A poor wretch.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 47

Adalidda Suttaṃ

Well-to-do

---

[84]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

"Now a certain brother came to see the Exalted One
on coming to him greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of greetings and compliments
sat down at one side.

Seated at one side
he said to the Exalted One: -

"'Well-to-do!'

Well-to-do!'
is the saying, lord.

Pray, lord, how far is this name applicable?"

"By the fact, monk, of cultivating,
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
one is called 'Well-to-do.'

What seven?

The limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
the limb of wisdom that is energy,
the limb of wisdom that is zest,
the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

By the fact, monk, of cultivating,
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
one is called 'Well-to-do.'"

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 48

Ādicca Suttaṃ

The Sun[1]

---

[84]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, the dawn
is the forerunner,
the harbinger
of the arising of the sun,
even so friendship with what is lovely
is the forerunner,
the harbinger
of the arising of the seven limbs of wisdom in a monk.

Of a monk who is a friend of what is lovely
we may expect that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk,
who is a friend of what is lovely,
cultivate and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, monks, is how a monk, who is a friend of what is lovely,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom."

[1] Supra, text 29.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 49

Paṭhama Aṇga Suttaṃ

Factor (a)

---

[84]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"As a matter concerning one's own self,[1] monks, I see no other single factor so potent for the arising of the seven limbs of wisdom as systematic attention.

[85] Of a monk who is possessed of systematic attention
we may expect that he will cultivate, that be will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk
who is possessed of systematic attention,
cultivate and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, monks, is how a monk,
who is possessed of systematic attention,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom."

[1] Ajjhattikaṇ angan ti karitva, (the personal factor, as opposed to bahiraṇ angaṇ of next §. B. does not comment here, but at A. i, 16 he says: Idaṇ vuttaṇ hoti: Bhikkhave, ajjhattaṇ paccattaṇ attano santāne samuṭṭhitaṇ kāraṇan ti katva na aññaṇ ekaṇ kāraṇan pi passām' ti. Cf. infra, text 110.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
5. Cakka-Vatti Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

5. Roller of the Wheel

Sutta 50

Dutiya Aṇga Suttaṃ

Factor (b)

---

[85]

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī,
at Jeta Grove,
in Anāthapiṇḍika's Park.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"As a matter concerning the outside,[1] monks, I see no other single factor so potent for the arismg of the seven limbs of wisdom as friendship with what is lovely.

Of a monk who is a friend what is lovely
we may expect that he will cultivate
the seven limbs of wisdom,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk
who is a friend of what is lovely
cultivate and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That, monks, is how a monk,
who is a friend of what is lovely
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom."

[1] Comy. seems to regard the difference thus: Your own person, hair, nails, or cleanliness is ajjhattikaṇ; your robe, lodging, etc., is bahiraṇ.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
6. Bojj'Anga-Sākacca Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

6. Perseverance in the Limbs of Wisdom

Sutta 51

Āhāra Suttaṃ

Food

---

[85]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was dwelling near Sāvatthī.

There the Exalted One addressed the monks, saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," they replied, and the Exalted One said:

2. "I will teach you, monks, what is food

and what is no food for the five hindrances and for the seven limbs of wisdom.

Do ye listen to it.

I. The Food of the Hindrances

3. And what, monks, is food for the arising of sensual lust
that has not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of sensual lust already arisen?

It is, monks, the alluring feature of things.[1]

Unsystematic attention to that
is this [86] food
for the arising of sensual lust
that has not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of sensual lust, if arisen.

■

4. And what, monks, is food for the arising of malevolence
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of malevolence,
if already arisen?

It is, monks, the repulsive feature of things.

Unsystematic attention to that
is this food
for the arising of malevolence

that has not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of malevolence,
if arisen.

■

5. And what, monks, is food for the arising of sloth and torpor
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of sloth and torpor,
if already arisen?

It is, monks,
regret,
drowsiness,
languor,
surfeit after meals,
torpidity of mind.[2]

Unsystematic attention to that, monks, is this food for the arising of sloth and torpor
that has not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of sloth and torpor,
if arisen.

■

6. And what, monks, is food for the arising of excitement and flurry
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of excitement and flurry,
if already arisen?

It is non-tranquillity of mind.

Unsystematic attention to that, monks,
is this food for the arising of excitement and flurry

that has not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of excitement and flurry,
if arisen.

■

7. And what, monks, is food for the arising of doubt and wavering
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of doubt and wavering,
if already arisen?

It is things which are based on doubt and wavering.

Unsystematic attention to that, monks,
is this food for the arising of doubt and wavering
that has not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth of doubt and wavering,
if arisen.

II. The Food of the Limbs of Wisdom

8. And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things based on the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising

of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
if already arisen.

■

9. And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
if already arisen?

[87] There are, monks, things good and bad, things blameworthy
and things not blameworthy,
things mean and things exalted,
things that are constituent parts
of darkness and light.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom which is Norm-investigation
if not yet arisen,
(or for the more-becoming and growth thereof),
for the cultivation and fulfilment, of the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation if already arisen.[3]

■

10. And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is energy
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is energy,
if already arisen?

There is, monks, the element of putting forth effort,
the element of exertion,
the element of striving.[4]

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is energy
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is energy,
if already arisen.

■

11. And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is zest
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is zest,
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things based on the limb of wisdom that is zest.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,

is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is zest
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is zest,
if already arisen

■

12. And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
if already arisen?

There is, monks, tranquillity of body and there is tranquillity of mind.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity
which has not yet arisen,
(or for the more-becoming and growth thereof),
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
if already arisen.[5]

■

13. And what, monks, is food
for the arising

of the limb of wisdom that is concentration
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
if already arisen?

[88] There are, monks, sights that calm,
that bewilder not.

Systematic attention thereto
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is concentration
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
if already arisen.

■

14. And what, monks, is food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,
of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things based on the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is this food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment,

of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
if already arisen.

III. No Food for the Hindrances

15. And what, monks, is no food for the arising of sensual lust,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of sensual lust,
if already arisen?

There is, monks, the repulsive feature of things.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food for the arising of sensual lust,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of sensual lust,
if already arisen.

■

16. And what, monks, is no food for the arising of malevolence,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of malevolence,
if already arisen?

It is a heart released by goodwill.[6]

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food for the arising of malevolence,

not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of malevolence,
if already arisen.

■

17. And what, monks, is no food for the arising of sloth and torpor,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of sloth and torpor,
if already arisen?

It is the element of putting forth effort,
the element of exertion,
the element of striving.

Systematic attention thereto
if made much of,
is no food for the arismg of sloth and torpor,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of sloth and torpor,
if already arisen.

■

[89] 18. And what, monks, is no food for the arising of excitement and flurry,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of excitement and flurry,
if already arisen?

It is tranquillity of mind.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food for the arising of excitement and flurry,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of excitement and flurry,
if already arisen.

■

19. And what, monks, is no food for the arising of doubt and wavering,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of doubt and wavering,
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things good and things bad,
things blameworthy and things not blameworthy,
things mean and things exalted,
things that are constituent parts
of darkness and light.

Systematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food
for the arising of doubt and wavering,
not yet arisen,
or for the more-becoming and growth
of doubt and wavering,
if already arisen.

IV. No Food for the Limbs of Wisdom

20. And what, monks, is no food
for the arising

of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness that is already arisen

There are, monks, things based on the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness.

Unsystematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness
not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
if already arisen.

■

21. And what, monks, is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things good and things bad,
things blameworthy and things not blameworthy,
things mean and things exalted,
things that are constituent parts
of darkness and light.

Unsystematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food

for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
if already arisen.

■

22. And what, monks, is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is energy,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is energy,
if already arisen?

[90] There is, monks, the element of putting forth effort,
the element of exertion,
the element of striving.

Unsystematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is energy,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is energy,
if already arisen.

■

23. And what, monks, is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is zest,
if not yet arisen,

or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is zest,
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things based on the limb of wisdom that is zest.

Unsystematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is zest,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is zest,
if already arisen.

■

24. And what, monks, is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
if already arisen?

There is, monks, a tranquillity of body and a tranquillity of mind.

Unsystematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment

of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
if already arisen.

■

25. And what, monks, is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
if already arisen?

There are, monks, things based on the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

Unsystematic attention thereto,
if made much of,
is no food
for the arising
of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
if not yet arisen,
or for the cultivation and fulfilment
of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
if already arisen."

---

[1] Cf. II, 1, i, [? SN2.12.11] for a similar section on Food.

[2] Cf. A. i, 3; supra, text 64 n.

[3] Quoted VM. i, 131, where the words in brackets are added.

[4] Ārambha-dhātu. Cf. Expos. i, 192. The initial effort of striving. Cf. MA. 284. Nikkama-dhātu, the same, grown stronger by casting off sloth.

Parakkama-dhātu, the same, still stronger as it draws nearer and nearer to the goal.

[5] VM. i, 133, brackets as above.

[6] Mettā-ceto-vimutti.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
6. Bojj'Anga-Sākacca Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

6. Perseverance in the Limbs of Wisdom

Sutta 52

Pariyāya Suttaṃ

The Method

---

[90]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was dwelling near Sāvatthī.

Now a number[1] of monks,
robing themselves in the forenoon,
and taking bowl and outer robe,
set off for Sāvatthī to beg for food.

And it occurred to those monks:

"It is full early to go to Sāvatthī to beg.

Suppose we pay a visit to the Park of the Wanderers[2] who hold other views."

[91] So those monks went there
and on coming to them
courteously greeted the Wanderers of other views,
and after the exchange of greetings and civilities,
sat down at one side.

As they thus sat
the Wanderers of other views said this
to those monks:

"Friends, Gotama the recluse teaches his disciples doctrine
thus:

'Come ye, monks!

Abandoning the five hindrances,
the corruptions of the heart,
which cause weakening of insight,
do ye cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom.'

Now, friends, we also thus teach doctrine
to our disciples, saying:

'Come ye, friends!

Abandoning the five hindrances,
the corruptions of the heart
which cause weakening of insight,
do ye cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom.'"[3]

Now herein, friends,
what is the distinction,[4] what the peculiarity[5] of,

what is the difference between Gotama the recluse's teaching of doctrine
and our teaching,
between his instruction
and our instruction?"

Thereupon those monks made no reply, either of approval or of disapproval
to those Wanderers holding other views;
but, without expressing either approval or disapproval, they rose up and went away,
saying:

"We will learn the meaning of this saying from the Exalted One."

§

So those monks, after wandering through Sāvatthī for alms, on returning from their alms-round
and eating their meal,
went to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated those monks said this to the Exalted One:

"Lord, here in the forenoon we robed,
and taking bowl and [92] outer robe
we set off for Sāvatthī to gather alms.

Then, lord, it occurred to us thus:

'It is full early to go to Sāvatthī to beg.

Suppose we pay a visit
to the Park of the Wanderers who hold other views.'

So we went there
and on coming to them
courteously greeted the Wanderers of other views,
and after the exchange of greetings and civilities,
sat down at one side.

As we sat
the Wanderers of other views said this
to us:

'Friends, Gotama the recluse teaches his disciples doctrine thus:

"Come ye, monks!

Abandoning the five hindrances,
the corruptions of the heart,
which cause weakening of insight,
do ye cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom."

Now, friends, we also thus teach doctrine
to our disciples, saying:

"Come ye, friends!

Abandoning the five hindrances,
the corruptions of the heart
which cause weakening of insight,
do ye cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom."

Now herein, friends,
what is the distinction,

what the peculiarity of,
what is the difference between Gotama the recluse's teaching of doctrine
and our teaching,
between his instruction
and our instruction?'

So, lord, we made no reply
to those Wanderers holding other views,
either of approval or of disapproval,
but without expressing approval or disapproval,
we rose up and came away, saying:

'We will learn the meaning of this saying from the Exalted One.'"

§

"Monks, when the Wanderers of other views say this,
they should be answered thus:

'But there is a method, friends, following which the five hindrances are ten in number, and the seven limbs of wisdom fourteen.'

When questioned as to this, monks, the Wanderers of other views
will be unable to explain themselves, and further will come to an ill pass.[6]

Why so?

Because, monks, it is beyond their scope.

For I behold not, monks,
anyone in the world,
with its devas and its Māras, its Brahmās,
with its host of recluses and brahmins,
with its devas and mankind,
who could satisfy the mind[7]
with an answer to these questions, save only a Tathāgata
or a Tathāgata's disciples, or at any rate after hearing it of them.[8]

I. The Five are Ten

And what, monks, is the method of explanation according to which the five hindrances are ten?

■

Sensual lust of the personal,[9] monks, -
that is a hindrance.

Sensual lust of the external, monks, -
that is a hindrance.

So when we speak of the hindrance of personal lust,
that is what is meant.[10]

Therefore, according to this method it is twofold.

■

[93] One's own personal malevolence, monks, -
that is a hindrance.

The malevolence of others, -
that is a hindrance.

When we speak of the hindrance of malevolence,
that is what is meant.

Therefore, according to this method it is twofold.

■

Sloth, monks, is a hindrance.

Torpor is a hindrance.

So when we speak of the hindrance
of sloth and torpor,
that is what is meant.

By this method it is twofold.

■

Excitement,[11] monks,
is a hindrance.

Flurry is a hindrance.

So when we speak of the hindrance
of excitement and flurry
that is what is meant.

By this method it is twofold.

■

Doubt and wavering
in one's own conditions,[12] monks,
is a hindrance.

Doubt and wavering
as to externals[13]

is a hindrance.

Thus when we speak of the hindrance
of doubt and wavering,
that is what is meant.

By this method it is twofold.

■

This, monks, is the method of explanation according to which the five hindrances are ten.

II. The Seven are Fourteen

"And what, monks, is the method of explanation
according to which the seven limbs of wisdom are fourteen?

■

Mindfulness, monks, as to one's own personal conditions - that is the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness.

Mindfulness, monks, as to external conditions, -
that is the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness.

So in speaking of the limb of wisdom which is mindfulness,
that is what is meant.

So by this method it is twofold.

■

The limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,[14]
in the sense of searching,

investigation,
scrutinizing,
for insight into one's own personal conditions,
that is the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation.

The limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
in the sense of searching,
investigation,
scrutinizing,
for insight into externals conditions,
that is the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation.

So when we speak of the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
that is what is meant.

Thus by this method it is twofold.

■

[94] Now, monks, that which is bodily[15] energy, is energy as a limb of wisdom.

That which is mental[16] energy, that also is energy as a limb of wisdom.

So when we speak of the limb of wisdom which is energy,
that is what is meant.

So by this method it is twofold.[17]

■

Now, monks, zest
that is accompanied by thought directed and sustained,[18] - that is zest as a limb of wisdom.

Zest unaccompanied by thought directed and sustained, - that also is zest as a limb of wisdom.

So when we speak of the limb of wisdom that is zest,
that is what is meant.

Thus by this method it is twofold.

■

Now, monks, tranquillity of body, - that is a limb of wisdom that is tranquillity.

Tranquillity of mind, - that also is a limb of wisdom that is tranquillity.

So when we speak of the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
that is what is meant.

Thus by this method it is twofold.[19]

■

Again, monks, concentration accompanied by thought directed and sustained, - that is concentration as a limb of wisdom.

Concentration
unaccompanied by thought directed and sustained, - that also is a limb of wisdom that is concentration.

Thus when we speak of the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
that is what is meant.

Thus by this method it is twofold.

■

Now, monks, equanimity
as to one's own personal conditions, - that is equanimity as a limb of wisdom.

Equanimity
as to external conditions, - that also is equanimity as a limb of wisdom.

So when we speak of the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
that is what is meant.

Thus by this method it is twofold.

■

So, monks, this is the method of explanation according to which the seven limbs of wisdom are fourteen."

---

[1] Sambahulā. Comy. as at VinA. i, 1 says: According to the Vinaya method three folk are called 'a number'; more than that is a company. According to the Suttanta method three is just 'three'; above that, 'a number.' Here we are to understand it according to the latter.

[2] Not far from Jeta Grove. Comy.

[3] Comy. thinks these Wanderers hung about gatherings when the Buddha was teaching and, while pretending to be otherwise engaged, picked up these doctrines and put them into practice in their own teachings. I am of opinion, however, that similar doctrines prevailed among other teachers than the Buddha. For this subject see Mrs. Rhys Davids's article in J.R.A.S., April, 1927, entitled The Unknown Co-founders of Buddhism, and Indian Hist. Quarterly, December, 1927, Dhyana in Early Buddhism.

[4] Cf. K.S. ii, 19, iii, 58, iv, 141. Viseso = moreness.

[5] Adhippāyo = extra practice.

[6] They would fail miserably. Cf. K.S. iv, 8, 39. Comy. as at DA. l, 117, sampādetvā kathetuṃ na sakkhissanti ... asampāyanato uttarim pi dukkhaṃ āpajjanti. DA. adds (of vighātaṃ) 'trouble of dryness of lip, palate, tongue and throat.'

[7] Cf. D. l, 118, veyyākaraṇena cittam ārādheyya. (Comy. = parito-seyya).

[8] Ito vā pana sutvā.

[9] As usual, Comy. explains 'personal' as one's own pañca-kkhandhā; 'external' as that of others.

[10] Cf. Asl. 145; Expos. i, 192, uddesaṃ (= gaṇanaṃ) āgacchati.

[11] Cf. Buddh. Psych. Eth., 120 n.

[12] Ajjhatta-dhammesu vicikicchā = attano khandhesu vimati. Comy.

[13] Bahiddhā dhammesu vicikiccā = bahiddhā aṭṭhasu ṭhānesu mahāv. Cf. VM. ii, 431 (aṭṭhasu ārammanesu); Expos. ii, 457.

[14] Cf. Expos. 195; vicaya = search; pavicaya = research.

[15] Comy. kāyikaṃ = bodily energy which comes to one who practises walking up and down. Tranquillity of the kāya (the three aggregates of feeling, perception and activities) is the calming of the three groups of mental factors.

[16] Cetasikaṃ. Comy. 'I will not abandon this sitting posture till my mind be absolved from the āsavas without grasping.' Tranquillity of consciousness (citta) is the calming of mind.

[17] Expos. 192.

[18] Savitakka-savicāra pitī.

[19] Expos. 171-2.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
6. Bojj'Anga-Sākacca Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

6. Perseverance in the Limbs of Wisdom

Sutta 53

Aggi Suttaṃ

Fire

---

[95]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was dwelling near Sāvatthī.

Now a number of monks,
robing themselves in the forenoon,
and taking bowl and outer robe,
set off for Sāvatthī to beg for food.

And it occurred to those monks:

"It is full early to go to Sāvatthī to beg.

Suppose we pay a visit to the Park of the Wanderers who hold other views."

So those monks went there
and on coming to them
courteously greeted the Wanderers of other views,
and after the exchange of greetings and civilities,
sat down at one side.

As they thus sat
the Wanderers of other views said this
to those monks:

"Friends, Gotama the recluse teaches his disciples doctrine
thus:

'Come ye, monks,
Abandoning the five hindrances,
the corruptions of the heart,
which cause weakening of insight,
do ye cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom.'

Now, friends, we also thus teach doctrine
to our disciples, saying:

'Come ye, friends!

Abandoning the five hindrances,
the corruptions of the heart
which cause weakening of insight,
do ye cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom.'

Now herein, friends,
what is the distinction,
what the peculiarity of,
what is the difference between

Gotama the recluse's teaching of doctrine
and our teaching,
between his instruction
and our instruction?"

Thereupon those monks made no reply,
either of approval or of disapproval
to those wanderers holding other views;
but, without expressing either approval or disapproval,
they rose up and went away,
saying:

"We will learn the meaning of this saying from the Exalted One."

§

So those monks, after wandering through Sāvatthī for alms,
on returning from their alms-round
and eating their meal,
went to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
those monks said this to the Exalted One:

"Lord, here in the forenoon we robed,
and taking bowl and outer robe
we set off for Sāvatthī to gather alms.

Then, lord, it occurred to us thus.

'It is full early to go to Sāvatthī to beg.

Suppose we pay a visit
to the Park of the Wanderers who hold other views.'

So we went there
and on coming to them
courteously greeted the Wanderers of other views,
and after the exchange of greetings and civilities,
sat down at one side.

As they we sat
the Wanderers of other views said this
to us:

'Friends, Gotama the recluse teaches his disciples doctrine
thus:

"Come ye, monks,
Abandoning the five hindrances,
the corruptions of the heart,
which cause weakening of insight,
do ye cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom."

Now, friends, we also thus teach doctrine
to our disciples, saying:

"Come ye, friends!

Abandoning the five hindrances,
the corruptions of the heart
which cause weakening of insight,
do ye cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom."

Now herein, friends,
what is the distinction,

what the peculiarity of,
what is the difference between Gotama the recluse's teaching of doctrine
and our teaching,
between his instruction
and our instruction?'

So, lord, we made no reply
to those Wanderers holding other views,
either of approval or of disapproval,
but without expressing approval or disapproval,
we rose up and came away, saying:

'We will learn the meaning of this saying from the Exalted One.'"

§

"When the Wanderers of other views thus speak, monks, thus should they be answered:

'Whenever, friends, the mind is sluggish,[1]
at such time
which of the limbs of wisdom
is it unreasonable to cultivate?

To cultivate which limb of wisdom is it reasonable?

Again, friends, when the mind is elated,[2]
at such time
which of the limbs of wisdom
is it unreasonable to cultivate?

To cultivate which is reasonable?'

Thus questioned, monks, the Wanderers of other views will be unable to explain themselves, and further
will come to an ill pass.

Why so?

Because, monks, it is beyond their scope.

For I behold not, monks,
anyone in the world,
with its devas and Maras,
its Brahmas,
with its host of recluses and brahmins,
with its devas and mankind,
who could satisfy the mind
with an answer to these questions,
save only a Tathāgata
or a Tathāgata's disciples,
or at any rate
only after hearing it of them.

§

I. Wrong Season

"At such time, monks,
as the mind is sluggish,[3]
then is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
then is the wrong season

for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
then is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

Why so?

When the mind is sluggish, monks, it is hard to raise it up[4] by these conditions.

■

[96] Suppose, monks, a man wants to make a little fire blaze up.

If be heap thereon
wet grass,
wet cowdung
and wet sticks;
if he expose it to rain and wind and[5] sprinkle it with dust,[6] pray would that man be able to make a little fire blaze up?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Just so, monks, at such time
as the mind is sluggish,
that is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity
that is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
that is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

Why so?

Because, monks, when the mind is sluggish it is hard to raise it up by these conditions.

§

II. Season

But at such time, monks,
as the mind is sluggish,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is energy,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is zest.

Why so?

Because, monks, the sluggish mind is easily raised by up such conditions.

■

Suppose, monks, a man wants to make a little fire blaze up.

If he heap thereon
dry grass,
dry cowdung
and dry sticks;
if he blow it up with his mouth,[7] if he sprinkle it not with dust, pray, would that man be able to make a little fire blaze up?"

"Surely, lord."

■

"Just so, monks, at such time as the mind is sluggish,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is energy,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is zest.

Why so?

Because, monks, the sluggish mind is easily raised up by such conditions.

[97]

§

III. Wrong Season

At such time, monks, as the mind is elated,
then is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
then is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is energy,
then is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is zest.

Why so?

Because, monks, the elated mind is hard to be calmed by such conditions.

■

Suppose, monks, a man should want to quench a great fire.

If he heap thereon
dry grass,
dry cowdung,
dry sticks;
if he blow it with his mouth if he sprinkle no dust thereon, would that man be able to quench a great fire?"

"Surely not, lord."

■

"Just so, monks, at such time as the mind is elated,
then is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is Norm-investigation,
then is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is energy,
then is the wrong season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is zest.

Why so?

Because, monks, the elated mind
is hard to be calmed by such conditions.

§

IV. Season

At such time, monks, as the mind is elated,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

Why so?

Because, monks, the elated mind is easily calmed up by such conditions.

■

Suppose, monks, a man should want to quench a great fire.

If he heap on it
wet grass,
wet cowdung,
wet sticks,
and expose it to rain and wind;
if he sprinkle dust thereon,
would that man be able to quench a great fire?"

"Surely, lord."

■

"Just so, monks, at such time as the mind is elated,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is concentration,

then is the season
for cultivating the limb of wisdom that is equanimity.

Why so?

Because, monks, the elated mind
is easily calmed up by such conditions.

■

[98] But as to mindfulness, monks, that is profitable on all occasions,[8] I declare."

---

[1] Līna, 'stuck fast,' adhering. Cf. infra, text 263.

[2] Uddhata, 'puffed up, inflated.'

[3] I.e. atisithila-viriyādīhi līnaṇ.

[4] Dussamutthāpayaṇ.

[5] Udaka-vātaṇ (? read udaka-cāṭiṇ);? wet wind as opposed to sukkha-vāta. Cf. infra; VM. i, 130, 248.

[6] Text paṇsukāna (?). VM. paṇsukena; but correct in next §.

[7] Mukha-vāta ('mouth wind'). VM. has v.l. sukka-v. (a bright, clear, not rainy wind), or should it be sukkha, dry? The balance of the two phrases suggests that one of these two is the right reading.

[8] Sabbatthikaṇ. Comy. 'like salt seasoning, is desirable on all occasions, just as an "all-round" royal minister can also fight or counsel or do special service equally well.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
6. Bojj'Anga-Sākacca Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

6. Perseverance in the Limbs of Wisdom

Sutta 54

Metta Suttaṃ

Goodwill[1]

---

[98]

Thus have I heard:

On a certain occasion the Exalted One was staying among the Koliyans,[2] at Haliddavasana,[3] a township of the Koliyans.

Now a great number of monks, robing themselves in the forenoon
and taking bowl and outer robe, entered Haliddavasana for alms.

And it occurred to those monks thus:

"It is yet full early to quest for alms in Haliddavasana.

How if we paid a visit to the Park of the Wanderers of other viws?"

So those monks did so,
and on reaching them
courteously greeted those Wanderers of other views,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies they sat down at one side.

So seated
the Wanderers of other views said this
to those monks:

"Friends, Gotama the recluse thus teaches doctrine
to his disciples:

'Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of goodwill:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of goodwill
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,

free from enmity
and untroubled.[4]

[99] Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of compassion:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of compassion
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of sympathy:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,

for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of equanimity:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.'

■

Now, friends, we also thus teach doctrine to our disciples:

'Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,

that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of goodwill:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of goodwill
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of compassion:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of compassion
that is widespread,
grown great

and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of sympathy:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of equanimity:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,

everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.'

■

Herein, friends,
what is the distinction,
what is the peculiarity of,
what is the difference between Gotama the recluse's teaching of doctrine
and this of ours,
between his instruction
and our instruction?"

■

Thereupon those monks could make no reply, either of approval
or of disapproval,
but without expressing either approval or disapproval
they rose up and went away,
saying:

"We will learn the meaning of this saying from the Exalted One."

§

So those monks,
after going their begging-round in Haliddavasana and returning
and eating their meal,
went to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him,
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated
those monks said this to the Exalted One:

"Here, lord, robing ourselves in the forenoon we took bowl and outer robe and set out for Haliddavasana to beg for alms.

And it occurred to us:

'It is yet full early to quest for alms in Haliddavasana.

How if we paid a visit to the Park of the Wanderers of other viws?'

So we did so,
and on reaching them
courteously greeted those Wanderers of other views,
and after the exchange of greetings and courtesies
they sat down at one side.

So seated
the Wanderers of other views said this
to us:

■

'Friends, Gotama the recluse thus teaches doctrine
to his disciples:

"Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of goodwill:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of goodwill
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of compassion:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,

for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of compassion
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of sympathy:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of equanimity:
so also as to the second,

third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled."

■

Now, friends, we also thus teach doctrine to our disciples:

"Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of goodwill:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of goodwill
that is widespread,
grown great

and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of compassion:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of compassion
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of sympathy:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,

everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of sympathy
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled.

Come ye, monks,
abandoning the hindrances that are corruptions of the heart,
that weaken insight,
do ye abide suffusing one quarter of the world
with a heart possessed of equanimity:
so also as to the second,
third
and fourth quarters: -
and in like manner above,
below,
across,
everywhere,
for all sorts and conditions, -
do ye abide suffusing the whole world
with a heart possessed of equanimity
that is widespread,
grown great
and boundless,
free from enmity
and untroubled."

■

Herein, friends,
what is the distinction,
what is the peculiarity of,

what is the difference between Gotama the recluse's teaching of doctrine
and this of ours,
between his instruction
and our instruction?'

Thereupon we could make no reply, either of approval
or of disapproval,
but without expressing either approval or disapproval
we rose up and went away,
saying:

'We will learn the meaning of this saying
from the Exalted One.'"

§

The Exalted One replied:

"Monks, when the Wanderers of other views say this
they should be answered thus:

'But, friends, how is the heart's release by goodwill cultivated?

What is its goal,[5]
wherein is its excellence?

What is its fruit and its ending?

■

Likewise how is the heart's release by compassion cultivated?

What is its goal,
wherein is its excellence?

What is its fruit and its ending?

■

How is the heart's release by sympathy cultivated?

What is its goal,
wherein is its excellence?

What is its fruit and its ending?

■

How is the heart's release by equanimity cultivated?

What is its goal,
wherein is its excellence?

What is its fruit and its ending?'

■

Thus questioned, monks,
the Wanderers of other views
will be unable to explain themselves,
and further will come to an ill pass.

Why so?

[100] Because, monks, it is beyond their scope.

For I behold not anyone in the world, with its devas,
its Maras,
its Brahmas,

with its host of recluses and brahmins,
with its devas and mankind,
who could satisfy the mind
with an answer to those questions,
save only a Tathāgata
or a Tathāgata's disciples,
or at any rate
after hearing it of them.

§

And how, monks, does one cultivate the heart's release by goodwill?

What is its goal,
wherein its excellence,
what is its fruit
and its ending?[6]

Herein, monks, a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness, accompanied by goodwill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by goodwill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is energy,
accompanied by goodwill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
accompanied by goodwill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
accompanied by goodwill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
accompanied by goodwill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide conscious of repugnance[7]
in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
conscious of repugnance
in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide unconscious of repugnance
in what is repugnant;
he so abides
unconscious of repugnance
in what is repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide conscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
conscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide unconscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant;

he so abides
unconscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Avoiding[8] both the repugnant
and the non-repugnant,
let me abide indifferent,
mindful
and self-possessed;
he so abides
avoiding both the repugnant
and the non-repugnant
indifferent,
mindful
and self-possessed.'

■

Or, attaining the release called 'beautiful'
he abides therein.

■

Monks, the heart's release by goodwill has the beautiful for its excellence,
I declare.

Herein comes insight
for the monk who has not penetrated to a still higher release.[9]

§

And how, monks, does one cultivate the heart's release by compassion?

What is its goal,
wherein its excellence,
what is its fruit
and ending?

■

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom that is mind- [101] fullness accompanied by compassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by compassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is energy,
accompanied by compassion
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
accompanied by compassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
accompanied by compassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
accompanied by compassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide conscious of repugnance
in what is not repugnant;

he so abides
conscious of repugnance
in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide unconscious of repugnance
in what is repugnant;
he so abides
unconscious of repugnance
in what is repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide conscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
conscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide unconscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
unconscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Avoiding both the repugnant
and the non-repugnant,
let me abide indifferent,
mindful
and self-possessed;
he so abides
avoiding both the repugnant
and the non-repugnant
indifferent,
mindful
and self-possessed.'

■

Or, by passing utterly beyond all consciousness of object, by putting an end to consciousness of reaction,[10] by disregarding consciousness of diversity, thinking:

'Infinite is space'

he attains and abides in the sphere of infinite space.

■

Monks, the heart's release by compassion has the infinity of space for its excellence,
I declare.

Herein comes insight
to a monk who has not penetrated to a higher release.

§

And how, monks, does one cultivate the heart's release by sympathy?

What is its goal,
wherein its excellence,
what is its fruit
and ending?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness
accompanied by sympathy
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by sympathy
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is energy,
accompanied by compassion
which is based on sympathy,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
accompanied by sympathy
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
accompanied by sympathy
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
accompanied by sympathy
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide conscious of repugnance
in what is not repugnant;

he so abides
conscious of repugnance
in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide unconscious of repugnance
in what is repugnant;
he so abides
unconscious of repugnance
in what is repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide conscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
conscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide unconscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
unconscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Avoiding both the repugnant
and the non-repugnant,
let me abide indifferent,
mindful
and self-possessed;
he so abides
avoiding both the repugnant
and the non-repugnant
indifferent,
mindful
and self-possessed.'

■

Or, by passing utterly beyond the sphere of infinite space, with the idea of:

'consciousness is infinite,'

he attains and abides in the sphere of infinite consciousness.

■

Monks, the heart's release by sympathy has the sphere of infinite consciousness for its excellence,
I declare.

§

And how, monks, does one cultivate the heart's release by equanimity?

What is its goal,
wherein its excellence,
what is its fruit
and ending?

■

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness
accompanied by equanimity
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by equanimity
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is energy,
accompanied by compassion
which is based on equanimity,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
accompanied by equanimity
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
accompanied by equanimity
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
accompanied by equanimity
which is based on [102] seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide conscious of repugnance
in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
conscious of repugnance
in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide unconscious of repugnance
in what is repugnant;
he so abides
unconscious of repugnance
in what is repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide conscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
conscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Let me abide unconscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant;
he so abides
unconscious of repugnance
both in what is repugnant
and in what is not repugnant.'

■

If he desires:

'Avoiding both the repugnant
and the non-repugnant,
let me abide indifferent,
mindful
and self-possessed;
he so abides
avoiding both the repugnant
and the non-repugnant
indifferent,
mindful
and self-possessed.'

■

Or, passing utterly beyond the sphere of infinite consciousness, he attains and abides in the sphere wherein he is conscious of the existence of nothing.

Monks, the heart's release by equanimity has for its excellence the sphere wherein nought exists.

■

Herein there is insight for the monk who has not penetrated to a further release."[11]

---

[1] Cf. Buddh. Psych. 104; VM. i, 293, 308 (to which Comy. here refers).

[2] Cf. K.S. iv, 244.

[3] This name does not occur elsewhere, so far as I know. It would mean 'turmeric-clothing,' or 'turmeric-place,' and may refer to the occupation of the inhabitants as dyers, for the similes here given are those of dyeing (infra).

[4] The brahma-vihāras or 'best modes of life,' or? 'dwelling with Brahma.' Cf. K.S. iv, 204 n,; Mrs. Rhys Davids's article in J.R.A.S., Part II, 1928, entitled The Unhnown Co-founders of Buddhism: a Sequel, where she discusses this passage and similar ones m the Canon, and thinks, as I do, that we have here an example of a doctrine added to his own by the Buddha. Cf. supra, n. on text 109. This passage seems worked up and put mto the mouths of the Wanderers to fit this particular section. Maybe some of the Wanderers were ex-bhikkhus.

[5] Text misprints kingātikā. Comy. -kiṃ nibbatti hoti.

[6] Cf. K.S. ii, 176.

[7] Paṭikūla-saññī. Cf. Pts. ii, 212 (ref. to by Comy.).

[8] Abhinivajjetvā. Cf. J.P.T.S., 1886, p. 137; A. iii, 1, 2; Itiv. 81.

[9] VM. i, 324. It is still lokiya (mundane). Transcendental is lokuttam.

[10] Cf. M. ii, 13; Dialog. ii, 119, Paṭgha.

[11] There are still two more stages before Nibbāna.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
6. Bojj'Anga-Sākacca Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

6. Perseverance in the Limbs of Wisdom

Sutta 55

Saṇgārava Suttaṃ

Saṇgārava

---

[102]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Now the brahmin Saṇgārava[1] came to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
greeted him courteously,
and after the exchange of civil courtesies,
sat down at one side.

So seated
the brahmin Sangarava said this to the Exalted One:

"What is the reason, Master Gotama,
what is the cause
why the chants which I once learned by heart for many days do not recur to me, not to speak of those I have not learned by heart.

And again, Master Gotama, what is the reason,
what is the cause
why the chants I once did not learn by heart, do recur to me,
not to speak of those I did learn by heart?"

I

"Well, brahmin, when one dwells with heart possessed by sensual lust, overwhelmed by sensual lust,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from sensual lust that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
his own [103] profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time
recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

Suppose, brahmin, a bowl of water[2] mixed with lac or turmeric
or blue
or yellow dye,
and suppose a man with good sight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of his own face.

He would not know it,
would not see it
as it really is.

■

Just so, brahmin, when one dwells with his heart possessed by sensual lust, overwhelmed by sensual lust,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge[3] from sensual lust that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
his own profit;[4]
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time

recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

"Then again, brahmin,
when one dwells with heart possessed by malevolence,
overwhelmed by malevolence,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from malevolence that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time
recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

Suppose, brahmin, a bowl of water heated on the fire, boiling up and bubbling over:
and suppose a man with good eyesight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of his own face.

He would not know it,
would not see it

as it really is.

■

Just so, brahmin,
when one dwells with heart possessed by malevolence,
overwhelmed by malevolence,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from malevolence that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time
recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

Then again, brahmin,
when one dwells with heart possessed by sloth and torpor,
overwhelmed by sloth and torpor,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from sloth and torpor that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth

his own profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time
recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

Suppose, brahmm, a bowl of water overspread with mossy [104] water-plants,[5]
and suppose a man with good eyesight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of bis own face.

He would not know it,
would not see it
as it really is.

■

Just so, brahmin,
when one dwells with heart possessed by sloth and torpor,
overwhelmed by sloth and torpor,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from sloth and torpor that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth

his own profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time
recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

Again, brahmin,
when one dwells with heart possessed by excitement and flurry,
overwhelmed by excitement and flurry,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from excitement and flurry that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time

recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

Suppose, brahmin, a bowl of water ruffled by the wind,
stirred up,
whirlmg round
and rippling with waves:
and suppose a man with good eyesight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of his own face.

He would not know it,
would not see it
as it really is.

■

Just so, brahmin,
when one dwells with heart possessed by excitement and flurry,
overwhelmed by excitement and flurry,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from excitement and flurry that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time
recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

Once more, brahmin,
when one dwells with heart possessed by doubt and wavering,
overwhelmed by doubt and wavering,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from doubt and wavering that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time
recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

Suppose, brahmin, a bowl of water
stirred up,
troubled
and muddied,
set in the dark:

and suppose a man with good eyesight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of his own face.

He would not know it,
would not see it
as it really is.

■

Even so, brahmin,
when one dwells with heart possessed by doubt and wavering,
overwhelmed by doubt and wavering,
and knows not in very truth
any refuge from doubt and wavering that has arisen, -
at such time
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he neither knows nor sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows not,
he sees not
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants learned by heart
even for a long time
recur not,
not to speak of those not so learned.

■

[105] This, brahmin, is the reason,
this is the cause
why chants even learned by heart for many a day

do not recur,
not to speak of chants not so learned.

§

II[6]

"But, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by sensual lust, not overwhelmed by sensual lust,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from sensual lust that has arisen, -
at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

Suppose, brahmin, a bowl of water unmixed with lac
or turmeric
or blue

or yellow dye,
and suppose a man with good sight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of his own face.

He would know it,
would see it
as it really is.

■

Just so, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by sensual lust, not overwhelmed by sensual lust,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from sensual lust that has arisen, -
at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

"Then again, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by malevolence, not overwhelmed by malevolence,
and knows in very truth

the refuge from malevolence that has arisen, -
at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

Suppose, brahmin, a bowl of water not heated on the fire, not boiling up,
not bubbling over:
and suppose a man with good eyesight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of his own face.

He would know it,
would see it
as it really is.

■

Just so, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by
malevolence,
not overwhelmed by malevolence,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from malevolence that has arisen, -

at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

Then again, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by sloth and torpor, not overwhelmed by sloth and torpor,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from sloth and torpor that has arisen, -
at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

Suppose, brahmm, a bowl of water
not overspread with mossy water-plants,
and suppose a man with good eyesight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of bis own face.

He would know it,
would see it
as it really is.

■

Just so, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by sloth and torpor, [106] not overwhelmed by sloth and torpor,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from sloth and torpor that has arisen, -
at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,

not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

Again, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by excitement and flurry, not overwhelmed by excitement and flurry,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from excitement and flurry that has arisen, -
at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

Suppose, brahmin, a bowl of water
not ruffled by the wind, not stirred up,
not whirlmg round
not rippling with waves:
and suppose a man with good eyesight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of his own face.

He would know it,
would see it
as it really is.

■

Just so, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by excitement and flurry,
not overwhelmed by excitement and flurry,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from excitement and flurry that has arisen, -
at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

Once more, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by doubt and wavering, not overwhelmed by doubt and wavering,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from doubt and wavering that has arisen, -
at such time
he knows and sees

in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

■

Suppose, brahmin, a bowl of water translucent,
and untroubled
not muddied,
but set forth in the light:
and suppose a man with good eyesight
should look closely therein
for the reflection of his own face.

He would know it,
would see it
as it really is.[7]

■

Even so, brahmin, when one dwells with heart not possessed by doubt and wavering,
not overwhelmed by doubt and wavering,
and knows in very truth
the refuge from doubt and wavering that has arisen, -

at such time
he knows and sees
in very truth
his own profit;
he knows and sees
in very truth
the profit of others:
at such time he knows,
he sees
in very truth
the profit both of himself and of others.

Then it is that chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

This, brahmin, is the reason,
this is the cause
why even [107] chants not long learned by heart
do recur,
not to speak of those long learned by heart.

§

Brahmin, there are these seven limbs of wisdom, which are without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge.

What seven?

They are, brahmin, the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness, which is without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is Norm investigation,
which is without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is energy,
which is without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is zest,
which is without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is tranquillity,
which is without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
which is without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge;

the limb of wisdom that is equinimity,
which is without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge."

These seven limbs of wisdom,
which are without let or hindrance,
without corruption of the heart,
which, if cultivated and made much of,
conduce to realizing the fruits
of release by knowledge."

At these words Saṇgārava the brahmin said to the Exalted One:

"Wonderful, Master Gotama!

Marvellous, Master Gotama!

Just as if one should lift up the fallen,
discover the hidden,
point out the way to the bewildered,
show a light in the gloom, saying:

'Now they that have eyes to see
can see objects,' -

even so in divers ways
has the Exalted One expounded the truth.

I, even I, lord,
do go for refuge to the Exalted One,
to the Norm
and to the Order of monks.

Let the worthy Gotama accept me as a disciple, as one who from this day forth, so long as life shall last, has gone to him for refuge."

---

[1] Cf. S. i, 182; K.S. i, 231. He was a 'Purity-by-water' man, had a large following, and was converted by the Master at S. i loc. cit.

[2] The same occurs at A. iii, 230 ff.

[3] Nissaraṇaṇ, i.e. 'shaking up and rooting out.' Comy.

[4] Attatthaṇ. For parables of a mirror cf. D. i, 80; M. i, 100; A. v, 92, etc.

[5] Cf. VM. i, 261.

[6] The editor of text, Leon Feer, remarks that this section occurs in full only in Burmese MSS.

[7] At Milinda 35 saddā is called 'the water-clearing gem.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
6. Bojj'Anga-Sākacca Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

6. Perseverance in the Limbs of Wisdom

Sutta 56

Abhaya Suttaṃ

Abhaya

---

[107]

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Rājagaha, on the hill Vulture's Peak.

Then Prince Abhaya[1] came to visit the Exalted One,
and on coming to him
saluted him
and sat down at one side.

So seated, Prince Abhava said this to the Exalted One:

"Lord, Pūraṇa Kassapa[2] says this:

"There is no condition,
there is no cause
of not knowing and not seeing.

Not knowing
and not seeing
are without condition,
without cause.

There is no condition,
there is no cause
of knowing and seeing.

Knowing and seeing
are without condition,
without cause."

Herein what says the Exalted One?"

■

"There is condition, prince, there is cause
of not knowing,
of not seeing.

Not knowing
and not seeing
have a condition,
have a cause.

There is indeed a condition, prince, there is indeed a cause of knowing of seeing.

Knowing and seeing
have a condition,
have a cause."

§

[108] "But, lord, what is the condition, what the cause
of not knowing
and not seeing?

How do not knowing
and not seeing have a condition and cause?"

■

"At such time, prince,
as one dwells with heart
possessed and overwhelmed by sensual lust,
and knows not,
sees not
in very truth
any refuge from sensual lust that has arisen, -
this, prince, is the cause
of not knowing,
of not seeing.

Thus not knowing,
not seeing
have a condition,
a cause.

■

Then again, prince, at such time,
as one dwells with heart
possessed and overwhelmed by malevolence,
and knows not,
sees not
in very truth
any refuge from malevolence that has arisen, -
this, prince, is the cause
of not knowing,
of not seeing.

Thus not knowing,
not seeing
have a condition,
a cause.

■

Then again, prince, at such time,
as one dwells with heart
possessed and overwhelmed by sloth and torpor,
and knows not,
sees not
in very truth
any refuge from sloth and torpor that has arisen, -
this, prince, is the cause
of not knowing,
of not seeing.

Thus not knowing,
not seeing

have a condition,
a cause.

■

Then again, prince, at such time,
as one dwells with heart
possessed and overwhelmed by excitement and flurry,
and knows not,
sees not
in very truth
any refuge from excitement and flurry that has arisen, -
this, prince, is the cause
of not knowing,
of not seeing.

Thus not knowing,
not seeing
have a condition,
a cause.

■

Then again, prince, at such time,
as one dwells with heart
possessed and overwhelmed by doubt and wavering,
and knows not,
sees not
in very truth
any refuge from doubt and wavering that has arisen, -
this, prince, is the cause
of not knowing,
of not seeing.

Thus not knowing,
not seeing
have a condition,
a cause."

■

"What, lord, is this method of teaching called"

"These, prince, are called 'the hindrances.'"

"Verily are they hindrances, Exalted One!

Verily are they hindrances, O Happy One!

Why, lord, if overpowered even by one single hindrance, one could not know,
one could not see
in very truth, -
not to speak of being overpowered by five hindrances."

§

II

"But, lord, what is the condition,
what the cause
of knowing and seeing?

How do knowing and seeing have condition
and cause?"

"Herein, prince, a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness,
that is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

With mind that is cultivated
he knows,
he sees
as it really is
the limb of wisdom that is mindfulness.

This, prince, is the condition,
this is the cause
of knowing and seeing.

Thus, knowing and seeing
have a condition,
have a cause.

■

"He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm,
that is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

With mind that is cultivated
he knows,
he sees
as it really is
the limb of wisdom that is investigation of the Norm.

This, prince, is the condition,
this is the cause
of knowing and seeing.

Thus, knowing and seeing
have a condition,
have a cause.

■

"He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is energy,
that is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

With mind that is cultivated
he knows,
he sees
as it really is
the limb of wisdom that is energy.

This, prince, is the condition,
this is the cause
of knowing and seeing.

Thus, knowing and seeing
have a condition,
have a cause.

■

"He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is zest,
that is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

With mind that is cultivated
he knows,
he sees

as it really is
the limb of wisdom that is zest.

This, prince, is the condition,
this is the cause
of knowing and seeing.

Thus, knowing and seeing
have a condition,
have a cause.

■

"He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is tranquility,
that is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

With mind that is cultivated
he knows,
he sees
as it really is
the limb of wisdom that is tranquility.

This, prince, is the condition,
this is the cause
of knowing and seeing.

Thus, knowing and seeing
have a condition,
have a cause.

■

"He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is concentration,
that is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends in self-surrender.

With mind that is cultivated
he knows,
he sees
as it really is
the limb of wisdom that is concentration.

This, prince, is the condition,
this is the cause
of knowing and seeing.

Thus, knowing and seeing
have a condition,
have a cause.

■

"He cultivates the limb of wisdom that is equanimity,
that is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
that ends [109] in self-surrender.

With mind that is cultivated
he knows,
he sees
as it really is
the limb of wisdom that is equinimity.

This, prince, is the condition,
this is the cause
of knowing and seeing.

Thus, knowing and seeing
have a condition,
have a cause.

This, prince, is the condition,
this is the cause
of knowing and seeing.

Thus knowing and seeing
have condition,
have cause."

"What, lord, is this method of teaching called?"

"These, prince, are called 'the limbs of wisdom.'"

"Verily, lord, they are limbs of wisdom!

Verily are they limbs of wisdom, O Happy One!

Why, lord, possessed only of one limb of wisdom, one might both know and see, - not to speak of being possessed of all seven limbs of wisdom.

Lord, the fatigue of body and mind that I had in climbing up the hill Vulture's Peak is all allayed,
and I have fully grasped the Norm."[3]

---

[1] A i, 220, ii, 200. One of the Licchavi. At M. 1, 392 he is sent by Nāta's son, the Unclothed, to confute the Buddha.

[2] He taught that deeds have no result. Cf. K.S. i, 90 n., iii, 61 iv, 279. He is ahetu-vado.

[3] Dhammo ca me abhisameto.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 57

Aṭṭhika Suttaṃ

The Skeleton[1]

---

[109]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of the skeleton,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

■

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the skeleton
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
that is based [110] on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the skeleton
is of great fruit and great profit."

§

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of the skeleton, of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,[2]
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

■

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

If the idea of the skeleton
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

§

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of the skeleton,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of the skeleton,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

■

How should the idea of the skeleton,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

■

If the idea of the skeleton
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

§

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of the skeleton,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.[3]

■

And how cultivated and made much of does the idea of the skeleton
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the skeleton
conduces to great peace from bondage."

§

[111]

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of the skeleton,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to a great thrill.

■

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the skeleton
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the skeleton
conduces to a great thrill."

§

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of the skeleton,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

■

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the skeleton
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the skeleton,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the skeleton
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] For these methods of concentration see Manual of a Mystic, p. 70, etc.; A. i, 42; VM. i, 112; Warren, Buddhism in Translations, 353; Buddh. Psych. Eth. 69-70 (the jhāna of foul things). This procedure was 'prescribed for such as were proved to be passionately affected by the beauty of the body' ... 'the essential procedure lay in gettmg a clear and courageous grasp of the transience of any living organism.' Comy. refers to Vis. Magg., loc. cit., quoted at Expos. i, 92. 'Here sahagata should be understood as "dependence." The meaning is: "depending on the notion of the skeleton and developing the idea of mindfulness as a factor of wisdom has been obtained."'

[2] Aññā, sati vā upādisese anāgāmitā (aññā =arahantship).

[3] Yoga-kkhema.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 58

Puḷavaka Suttaṃ

Worm-Eaten

---

[111]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
is of great fruit and great profit."

§

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

§

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,

or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

§

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
conduces to great peace from bondage."

§

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
conduces to a great thrill."

§

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the worm-eaten corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the worm-eaten corpse
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 59

Vinīḷaka Suttaṃ

Discoloured

---

[111]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of the discoloured[1] corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the discoloured corpse
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,

accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the discoloured corpse
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of the discoloured corpse,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the discoloured corpse
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of the discoloured corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of the discoloured corpse,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of the discoloured corpse,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the discoloured corpse
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of the discoloured corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the discoloured corpse
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the discoloured corpse
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of the discoloured corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the discoloured corpse
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the discoloured corpse
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of the discoloured corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the discoloured corpse
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the discoloured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the discoloured corpse
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] Vinīḷaka, 'turned bluish.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 60

Vicchiddaka Suttaṃ

The Fissured

---

[111]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of the fissured[1] corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the fissured corpse
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,

accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the fissured corpse
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of the fissured corpse,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the fissured corpse
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of the fissured corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of the fissured corpse,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of the fissured corpse,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the fissured corpse
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of the fissured corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the fissured corpse
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the fissured corpse
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of the fissured corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the fissured corpse
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the fissured corpse
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of the fissured corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the fissured corpse
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the fissured corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the fissured corpse
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] Vicchiddaka.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 61

Uddhumātaka Suttaṃ

The Inflated

---

[111]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of the inflated[1] corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the inflated corpse
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,

accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the inflated corpse
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of the inflated corpse,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the inflated corpse
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of the inflated corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of the inflated corpse,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of the inflated corpse,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the inflated corpse
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of the inflated corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the inflated corpse
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the inflated corpse
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of the inflated corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the inflated corpse
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the inflated corpse
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of the inflated corpse,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the inflated corpse
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of the inflated corpse,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the inflated corpse
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] Uddhumātaka. Cf. uddhumāyiko, M. i, 23 (like 'a bladder'). The usual number of these asubhas, 'foul things,' contemplated is ten.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 62

Mettā Suttaṃ

Goodwill

---

[112]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of goodwill,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of goodwill
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of goodwill
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of goodwill,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of goodwill
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of goodwill,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of goodwill,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of goodwill,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of goodwill
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of goodwill,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of goodwill
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of goodwill
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of goodwill,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of goodwill
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of goodwill
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of goodwill,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of goodwill
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of goodwill,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of goodwill
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 63

Karuṇā Suttaṃ

Compassion

---

[112]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of compassion,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of compassion
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of compassion
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of compassion,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of compassion
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of compassion,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of compassion,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of compassion,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of compassion
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of compassion,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of compassion
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of compassion
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of compassion,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of compassion
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of compassion
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of compassion,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of compassion
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of compassion,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of compassion
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 64

Muditā Suttaṃ

Sympathy

---

[112]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of sympathy,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of sympathy
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of sympathy
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of sympathy,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of sympathy
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of sympathy,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of sympathy,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of sympathy,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of sympathy
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of sympathy,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of sympathy
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of sympathy
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of sympathy,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of sympathy
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of sympathy
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of sympathy,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of sympathy
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of sympathy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of sympathy
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 65

Upekhā Suttaṃ

Equanimity

---

[112]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of equanimity,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of equanimity
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of equanimity
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of equanimity,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of equanimity
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of equanimity,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of equanimity,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of equanimity,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of equanimity
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of equanimity,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of equanimity
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of equanimity
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of equanimity,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of equanimity
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of equanimity
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of equanimity,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of equanimity
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
accompanied by the idea of equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of equanimity
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
7. Ānāpāna Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

7. In-Breathing and Out-Breathing

Sutta 66

Ānāpāna Suttaṃ

Inbreathing and Outbreathing

---

[112]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is inbreathing and outbreathing,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is inbreathing and outbreathing,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is inbreathing and outbreathing,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is inbreathing and outbreathing,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is inbreathing and outbreathing,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is inbreathing and outbreathing,
accompanied by the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of inbreathing and outbreathing
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation[1]

Sutta 67

Asubha Suttaṃ

The Foul

---

[112]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of the foul,
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the foul
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the foul,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the foul
is of great fruit and great profit."

§

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of the foul,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the foul,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the foul
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

§

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of the foul,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of the foul,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,

or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of the foul,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the foul,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the foul
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

§

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of the foul,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the foul
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the foul,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the foul
conduces to great peace from bondage."

§

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of the foul,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the foul
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the foul,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the foul
conduces to a great thrill."

§

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of the foul,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the foul
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the foul,
accompanied by the idea of the foul,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the foul
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] Lit. stopping, making to cease (nirodha).

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 68

Maraṇa Suttaṃ

Death

---

[112]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of death,[1]
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of death
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,

accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is death,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of death
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of death,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is death,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of death
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of death,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of death,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of death,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is death,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of death
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of death,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of death
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is death,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of death
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of death,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of death
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is death,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of death
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of death,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of death
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is death,
accompanied by the idea of death,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of death
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] Comy. 'By thinking: Surely my life must end, my life is bound to death.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 69

Patikkūla Suttaṃ

The Repulsive

---

[113]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of the repulsiveness of food,[1]
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the repulsiveness of food
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,

accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the repulsiveness of food,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the repulsiveness of food
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the repulsiveness of food,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the repulsiveness of food
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of
the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the repulsiveness of food,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the repulsiveness of food
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the repulsiveness of food
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the repulsiveness of food,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the repulsiveness of food
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the repulsiveness of food
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the repulsiveness of food,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the repulsiveness of food
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the repulsiveness of food
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is the repulsiveness of food,
accompanied by the idea of the repulsiveness of food,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the repulsiveness of food
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] Comy. 'the absorption of rice and gruel, etc.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 70

Anabhirati (or Sabba-Loke) Suttaṃ

Distaste or All the World

---

[113]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of distaste for all the world[1]
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of distaste for all the world
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,

accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is distaste for all the world
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of distaste for all the world
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of distaste for all the world
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is distaste for all the world
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of distaste for all the world
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of distaste for all the world
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of the idea of distaste for all the world
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of distaste for all the world
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is distaste for all the world
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of distaste for all the world
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of distaste for all the world
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of distaste for all the world
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is distaste for all the world
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of distaste for all the world
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of distaste for all the world
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of distaste for all the world
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is distaste for all the world
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of distaste for all the world
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of distaste for all the world
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of distaste for all the world
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is distaste for all the world
accompanied by the idea of distaste for all the world
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of distaste for all the world
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] Comy. 'The idea that arises in one who conceives distaste for all the world.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 71

Anicca Suttaṃ

Impermanent

---

[113]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of impermanence
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the idea of impermanence
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is impermanence
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of impermanence
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of impermanence
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is impermanence
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of impermanence
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of impermanence
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of the idea of impermanence
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of impermanence
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is impermanence
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of impermanence
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of impermanence
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of impermanence
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is impermanence
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of impermanence
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of impermanence
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of impermanence
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is impermanence
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of impermanence
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of impermanence
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of impermanence
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is impermanence
accompanied by the idea of impermanence
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of impermanence
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 72

Dukkha Suttaṃ

Ill

---

[113]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of Ill
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the idea of Ill
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of Ill

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is Ill
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of Ill
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of Ill
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is Ill
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of Ill
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of Ill
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of the idea of Ill
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of Ill
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is Ill
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of Ill
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of Ill
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of Ill
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is Ill
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of Ill
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of Ill
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of Ill
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is Ill
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of Ill
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of Ill
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of Ill
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is Ill
accompanied by the idea of Ill
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of Ill
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 73

Anatta Suttaṃ

Not Self

---

[113]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of not self
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the idea of not self
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of not self

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is not self
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of not self
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of not self
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is not self
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of not self
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of not self
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of the idea of not self
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of not self
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is not self
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of not self
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of not self
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of does the idea of the idea of not self
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is not self
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of not self
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of not self
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of not self
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is not self
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of not self
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of not self
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of not self
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is not self
accompanied by the idea of not self
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of not self
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 74

Pahāna Suttaṃ

Abandoning

---

[113]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of abandoning
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the idea of abandoning
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is abandoning
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of abandoning
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of abandoning
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is abandoning
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of abandoning
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of abandoning
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of the idea of abandoning
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of abandoning
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is abandoning
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of abandoning
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of abandoning
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of abandoning
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is abandoning
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of abandoning
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of abandoning
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of abandoning
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is abandoning
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of abandoning
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of abandoning
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of abandoning
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is abandoning
accompanied by the idea of abandoning
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of abandoning
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 75

Virāga Suttaṃ

Dispassion

---

[113]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of dispassion
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the idea of dispassion
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is dispassion
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of dispassion
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of dispassion
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is dispassion
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of dispassion
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of dispassion
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of the idea of dispassion
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of dispassion
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is dispassion
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of dispassion
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of dispassion
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of dispassion
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is dispassion
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of dispassion
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of dispassion
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of dispassion
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is dispassion
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of dispassion
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of dispassion
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of dispassion
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is dispassion
accompanied by the idea of dispassion
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of dispassion
conduces great pleasantness of living."

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
8. Nirodha Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

8. Cessation

Sutta 76

Nirodha Suttaṃ

Cessation

---

[113]

I. Great the Fruit and Great the Profit

Thus have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Monks, the idea of cessation[1]
if cultivated and made much of,
is of great fruit and great profit.

And how cultivated and made much of
is the idea of the idea of cessation
of great fruit and great profit?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,

accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is cessation
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of cessation
is of great fruit and great profit."

II. Realization or No Return

Monks, from the cultivation and making much of the idea of cessation
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should it be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is cessation
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,

on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of cessation
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

III. Great Benefit

Monks, the idea of cessation
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great benefit.

From the cultivation and making much of the idea of cessation
of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return.

How should the idea of cessation
be cultivated, monks,
how should it be made much of
that of two fruits
one may be looked for
even in this very life,

to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
the state of non-return?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is cessation
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

If the idea of the idea of cessation
be thus cultivated,
thus made much of,
one may look for one of two fruits
even in this very life,
to wit:
realization,
or, if there be any substrate left,
at any rate the state of non-return.

IV. Great Peace from Bondage

"Monks, the idea of cessation
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great peace from bondage.

And how cultivated and made much of does the idea of the idea of cessation
conduce to great peace from bondage?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,

on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is cessation
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of cessation
conduces to great peace from bondage."

V. A Great Thrill

Monks, the idea of cessation
if cultivated and made much of,

conduces to a great thrill.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of cessation
conduce to a great thrill?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is cessation
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of cessation
conduces to a great thrill."

VI. Great Pleasantness of Living

Monks, the idea of cessation
if cultivated and made much of,
conduces to great pleasantness of living.

And how cultivated and made much of
does the idea of the idea of cessation
conduce to great pleasantness of living?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is cessation
accompanied by the idea of cessation
which is based on seclusion,
on cessation,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivated, monks,
thus made much of,
the idea of the idea of cessation
conduces great pleasantness of living."

---

[1] In the sense of 'stopping, making to cease.'

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
9. Gaṇgā-Peyyāla

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

9. Gaṇgā Repetition[1]

Suttas 77-88

---

[114]

Sutta 77

Paṭhama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
[115] which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom

a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 78

Dutiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,

slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 79

Tatiya Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 80

Catuttha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 81

Pañcama Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,

slides
and tends to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 82

Chaṭṭha Pācīna Suttaṃ

Eastward (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,

slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

§

Sutta 83

Paṭhama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (a)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Ganges
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 84

Dutiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.1)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Yamunā
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,

on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 85

Tatiya Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.2)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Acīravatī
flows,

slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 86

Catuttha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.3)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Sarabhū
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom

does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 87

Pañcama Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (b.4)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, the river Mahī
flows,
slides
and tends to the ocean,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

Sutta 88

Chaṭṭha Samudda Suttaṃ

Ocean (c)

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, whatsoever great rivers there be,
such as the Ganges,
Yamunā,
Acīravatī,
Sarabhū
and Mahī,
all of them flow,
slide
and tend to the East,
even so a monk who cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
flows,
slides,
tends to Nibbāna.

And how, monks, by cultivating
and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
does a monk flow,
slide
and tend to Nibbāna?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus cultivating,
thus making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom
a monk flows,
slides
and tends to Nibbāna.

---

[1] Cf. text, p. 38

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
10. Appamāda Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

10. Earnestness

Suttas 89-98

---

[115]

Sutta 89

Tathāgata

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, of all creatures, whether footless or having two,
four,
or many feet;
whether having forms or formless;
whether conscious or unconscious,
or neither conscious nor unconscious, —
of these the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the fully Enlightened One,
is reckoned chief; —
even so, monks,
of all profitable conditions which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all creatures, whether footless or having two,
four,
or many feet;
whether having forms or formless;
whether conscious or unconscious,
or neither conscious nor unconscious, —
of these the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the fully Enlightened One,
is reckoned chief; —
even so, monks,
of all profitable conditions which are rooted in earnestness,

which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all creatures, whether footless or having two,

four,
or many feet;
whether having forms or formless;
whether conscious or unconscious,
or neither conscious nor unconscious, —
of these the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the fully Enlightened One,
is reckoned chief; —
even so, monks,
of all profitable conditions which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all creatures, whether footless or having two,
four,
or many feet;
whether having forms or formless;
whether conscious or unconscious,
or neither conscious nor unconscious, —
of these the Tathāgata,
the Arahant,
the fully Enlightened One,
is reckoned chief; —
even so, monks,
of all profitable conditions which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 90

The Foot

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all the foot-characteristics
of such creatures as roam about
are joined together in the foot of the elephant,
and as the elephant's foot
in size
is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all the foot-characteristics
of such creatures as roam about
are joined together in the foot of the elephant,
and as the elephant's foot
in size
is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest

cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion;

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion;

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all the foot-characteristics
of such creatures as roam about
are joined together in the foot of the elephant,
and as the elephant's foot
in size
is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected

that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all the foot-characteristics
of such creatures as roam about
are joined together in the foot of the elephant,
and as the elephant's foot
in size

is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 91

The Roof-peak

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, in a peaked house
all the rafters whatsoever
go together to the roof-peak,
slope to the roof-peak,
are joined together in the roof-peak,
and of them
the peak is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, in a peaked house
all the rafters whatsoever
go together to the roof-peak,
slope to the roof-peak,

are joined together in the roof-peak,
and of them
the peak is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, in a peaked house
all the rafters whatsoever
go together to the roof-peak,
slope to the roof-peak,
are joined together in the roof-peak,
and of them
the peak is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, in a peaked house
all the rafters whatsoever
go together to the roof-peak,
slope to the roof-peak,
are joined together in the roof-peak,
and of them
the peak is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 92

Wood

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all scented woods whatsoever
the dark sandal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates

and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all scented woods whatsoever
the dark sandal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all scented woods whatsoever
the dark sandal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all scented woods whatsoever
the dark sandal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate

and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 93

Heart-wood

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all scented heart-woods whatsoever
the red saldal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all scented heart-woods whatsoever
the red saldal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all scented heart-woods whatsoever
the red saldal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all scented heart-woods whatsoever
the red saldal-wood is reckoned chief, —
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 94

Jasmine

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all scented flowers whatsoever
the jasmine is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all scented flowers whatsoever
the jasmine is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all scented flowers whatsoever
the jasmine is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all scented flowers whatsoever
the jasmine is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 95

Prince

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, all petty princes whatsoever
follow in the train of the universal monarch,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, all petty princes whatsoever
follow in the train of the universal monarch,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, all petty princes whatsoever
follow in the train of the universal monarch,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, all petty princes whatsoever
follow in the train of the universal monarch,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 96

Moon

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all starry bodies whatsoever
the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part
of the radiance of the moon;
just as the moon is reckoned chief of them,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,

on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all starry bodies whatsoever
the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part
of the radiance of the moon;
just as the moon is reckoned chief of them,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate

and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all starry bodies whatsoever
the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part
of the radiance of the moon;
just as the moon is reckoned chief of them,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,

that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all starry bodies whatsoever
the radiance does not equal one-sixteenth part
of the radiance of the moon;
just as the moon is reckoned chief of them,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,

which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,

which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 97

Sun

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, in the autumn season,
when the sky is opened up
and cleared of clouds,
the sun,
leaping up into the firmament,
drives away all darkness,
and shines
and burns
and flashes forth,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,

which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, in the autumn season,
when the sky is opened up
and cleared of clouds,
the sun,

leaping up into the firmament,
drives away all darkness,
and shines
and burns
and flashes forth,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, in the autumn season,
when the sky is opened up
and cleared of clouds,
the sun,
leaping up into the firmament,
drives away all darkness,
and shines
and burns
and flashes forth,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,

which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, in the autumn season,
when the sky is opened up
and cleared of clouds,
the sun,
leaping up into the firmament,
drives away all darkness,
and shines
and burns
and flashes forth,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected

that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Sutta 98

Cloth

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

Just as, monks, of all woven cloths whatsoever
the cloth of Benares is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

Just as, monks, of all woven cloths whatsoever
the cloth of Benares is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest

cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

Just as, monks, of all woven cloths whatsoever
the cloth of Benares is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest cultivates and makes much of the seven limbs of wisdom.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

Just as, monks, of all woven cloths whatsoever
the cloth of Benares is reckoned chief,
even so, monks, of all profitable conditions,
which are rooted in earnestness,
which join together in earnestness, —
of those conditions
earnestness is reckoned chief.

Of the earnest monk
it may be expected
that he will cultivate,
that he will make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how, monks,
does a monk who is earnest
cultivate
and make much of
the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

Thus, monks, a monk who is earnest
cultivates
and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom.

Saṃyutta Nikāya
5. Mahā-Vagga
46. Bojjhanga Saṃyutta
11. Bala-Karaṇīya Vagga

5. The Great Chapter

46. Kindred Sayings on the Limbs of Wisdom

11. Deeds Requiring Strength

Suttas 99-110

---

[115]

Sutta 99

Strength

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, whatsoever deeds requiring strength
are done,
all of them are done
in dependence on the earth,
with the earth for their support,
even so a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom,
make much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom."

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as, monks, whatsoever deeds requiring strength
are done,
all of them are done
in dependence on the earth,
with the earth for their support,
even so a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom,
make much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,

which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,

which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom."

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as, monks, whatsoever deeds requiring strength
are done,
all of them are done
in dependence on the earth,
with the earth for their support,
even so a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom,
make much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom."

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as, monks, whatsoever deeds requiring strength
are done,
all of them are done
in dependence on the earth,
with the earth for their support,
even so a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom.

And how does a monk,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,

cultivate the seven limbs of wisdom,
make much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,

which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates the seven limbs of wisdom,
makes much,
of the seven limbs of wisdom."

Sutta 100

Seed

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Just as, monks, whatsoever species
of seed and vegetation
come to growth,
increase
and maturity,
all of them depend on the earth,
are supported by the earth;
even so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how does a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Just as, monks, whatsoever species
of seed and vegetation
come to growth,
increase
and maturity,
all of them depend on the earth,
are supported by the earth;
even so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,

attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how does a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

§

iii. Ending in the Deathless

"Just as, monks, whatsoever species
of seed and vegetation
come to growth,
increase
and maturity,
all of them depend on the earth,
are supported by the earth;
even so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how does a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which plunges into the deathless,
which has the deathless for its aim,
which has the deathless for its end.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,

increase
and maturity of conditions.

§

iv. Ending in Nibbāna

"Just as, monks, whatsoever species
of seed and vegetation
come to growth,
increase
and maturity,
all of them depend on the earth,
are supported by the earth;
even so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how does a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna;

he cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which flows to Nibbāna,
which slides to Nibbāna,
which tends to Nibbāna.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

Sutta 101

The Snake

i. Seclusion

THUS have I heard:

Once the Exalted One was staying near Sāvatthī.

Then the Exalted One addressed the monks,
saying:

"Monks."

"Yes, lord," replied those monks to the Exalted One.

The Exalted One said:

"Supported, monks, by Himalaya,
lord of mountains,
snakes grow a body
and get strength.

When they have grown a body
and got strength there,
they go down to the tarns.

From the tarns
they go down to the lakes,

From the lakes
they go down to the small rivers,

From the small rivers
they go down to the great rivers,

From the great rivers
they go down to the sea,
the mighty ocean.

There they get great size and growth of body.

Just so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how, monks, does a monk,
depending on virtue,

supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is tranquillity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is concentration,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is equanimity,
which is based on seclusion,
on dispassion,
on cessation,
which ends in self-surrender.

That is how a monk
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivating and making much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions."

§

ii. Ending in Restraint of Passion

"Supported, monks, by Himalaya,
lord of mountains,
snakes grow a body
and get strength.

When they have grown a body
and got strength there,
they go down to the tarns.

From the tarns
they go down to the lakes,

From the lakes
they go down to the small rivers,

From the small rivers
they go down to the great rivers,

From the great rivers
they go down to the sea,
the mighty ocean.

There they get great size and growth of body.

Just so, monks, a monk who,
depending on virtue,
supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attains growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions.

And how, monks, does a monk,
depending on virtue,

supported by virtue,
cultivates and makes much of
the seven limbs of wisdom,
attain growth,
increase
and maturity of conditions?

Herein a monk cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is mindfulness,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivatesthe limb of wisdom
that is investigation of the Norm
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is energy,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

He cultivates the limb of wisdom
that is zest,
which ends in the restraint of passion,
which ends in the restraint of hatred,
which ends in the restraint of illusion.

